Quincy Students Winners At Art, Writing Competition

Poles is a senior, MacDonald a sophomore and Sullivan an eighth grader at the school.

The competition, this year presented by the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, is the regional division of a prestigious national program that recognizes the creative talents of students in grades 7 through 12.

There are three types of awards: Gold Key (highest award), Silver Key and Honorable Mention. Poles won a Gold Key in Studio Art 2D Design, MacDonald an Honorable Mention in Digital Photography, Sullivan an Honorable Mention in Studio Art . Their works were three of 13,000+ art works submitted in 28 different categories by more than 8,000 students.

Their prize works, Poles' submitted by his art teacher, Eleanor Chmiel, MacDonald's by Patrick McAllister, Sullivan's by Kay Myers, were three of the nineteen awards BC High students won this year. The talented students received 4 Gold Keys, 3 Silver Keys and 12 Honorable Mentions.

'Rising Stars' Broadway Summer Workshop

"Rising Stars" Broadway Summer Workshop for children in Grades 3 through 9 will be held June 30th through July 4th and July 7th through July 11th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

There will be a live public performance on Friday, July 11th at 7:30 pm. "Rising Stars" programs hire Broadway dancers, actors and singers and college theatre and dance majors to teach the summer classes.

For the last six years the program has had over 500 students take part in this unique experience. Many students from last years program plan on returning again this summer. Applications are being accepted immediately.

During the academic school year "Rising Stars" continues the tradition of teaching the three disciplines of theatre including dance, drama and voice. Additionally, students are invited to take part in a partnership with Broadway Across America in Boston. Students receive reduced tickets, attend meet and greet events with touring cast members of Broadway shows and take part in master classes taught by Broadway cast members of national touring companies who are in the Boston area.

Executive Director John F. McDonald, Jr. has Broadway and off Broadway credits. McDonald has worked for Super Model & Film actress Isabella Rossellini; Academy Award actresses, Faye Dunaway, Cher and Marisa Tomei; Legendary Film Icon Lauren Bacall, Author Elaine May and actor/director Alan Arkin as well as Parker Posey, Matthew Broderick, Charles Durning & Julie Harris.

McDonald is the Founder and President and Executive Producer of "Rising Stars" & JM Productions.

Students can enroll for one or both weeks however joining the two-week program is recommended as there will be a live public performance Friday, July 11th at 7:30 p.m. Students who have July 4th plans can miss the Friday class if necessary. Partial scholarships are available and sibling's discounts are offered sponsored in part by TLC & The Quincy Cultural Center, Inc.

"Rising Stars" Broadway Summer enrollment forms are located on line at www.jmproductionspresents.com. For more information email jfm@jmproductionspresents.com.

Bread Stuffed Red Peppers

Remember the days when some of us weren't allowed to eat meat on Fridays? And during the Lenten season, it was also Wednesdays.

Some people are still abstaining from meat on Fridays during Lent. Anyway, today's recipe is for stuffed peppers with a bread stuffing, a delicious flavor and a family favorite.

Peppers can be stuffed with just about anything from meats to rice, but in this recipe, I have used a bread stuffing with red peppers. Green peppers may also be used or some of both.

STUFFED PEPPERS

4-5 red bell peppers
7 slices of bread (cut in cubes)
Salt and pepper to taste
3-4 tablespoons tomato sauce
1- teaspoon basil
½ teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon parsley
3-4 tablespoons Romano or Parmesan grated cheese
1- teaspoon garlic powder

When you are making stuffed peppers, they can either be cut in halves and then stuffed, or stuffed whole, which can be cut either in half after baking, or in slices to serve.

Soak the bread in the tomato sauce and add all the rest of the ingredients until the mixture is moist and ready to fill the peppers. If too dry, add a bit of water.

Place in a deep slightly greased baking dish and sprinkle the top with bit of olive oil. Add a bit of water just to coat the pan, and bake covered in a 350-degree oven for 30 minuses of until peppers are tender. Red peppers don't take as long to cook as the green ones do.

Creamed Cauliflower Casserole

Here is a tasty recipe for cauliflower casserole and one that I am planning to make to go with the Easter ham.

I can prepare it the day ahead and then just bake it when I'm ready to serve on Easter Sunday.

CAULIFLOWER CASSEROLE

1 large head cauliflower (cut in florets) or package of florets)
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup half and half
1- cup milk
Salt and pepper to taste

Par-boil the florets, drain and set aside.

In a skillet, melt the butter, add the flour and mix for the roux. Add the half and half and the milk and cook until bubbly and thickened.

In a buttered casserole dish, place some of the florets, and then pour over some of the milk mixture. Then another layer of the florets, then the rest of the milk mixture. Sprinkle the top with the cheddar cheese.

Bake in a 350- degree oven for 30 minutes uncovered until top is lightly browned.

Morocco Topic At Crane Library Tonight

Barry Pell recently returned from one year teaching English in Casablanca and traveling throughout Morocco.

Tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, Pell will share his journey through the country's walled cities and their ancient markets, across the rugged Atlas Mountains with traditional Berber villages, and into the desolate and dune-covered Sahara Desert. The presentation, accompanied by Pell's photography, will highlight Morocco's exquisite historic architecture and the lives, traditions, and ceremonies of its Arab and Berber people.

Pell is a world traveler and photojournalist. He has traveled widely over the past 40 years, visiting and documenting landscapes and cultures in 159 countries.

Pell has also lived and traveled in China, eastern Europe, and north africa. He currently lectures on international cultures at schools, universities and institutions in the Boston area.

The presentation is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Deep Cover Black Ops: An Inside Look April 22

The public is invited to the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, on Tuesday, April 22 at 7 p.m. to get an inside look at the life of a deep cover Black Operative.

Massachusetts native Leo J. Maloney was a deep cover Black Ops contractor for a clandestine government agency. While working in the secretive world of black ops, Maloney operated several "cover" businesses, primarily working a classic car broker, as well as owning a promotions company, and a detective agency. After leaving his career in black ops, he continued several of his cover businesses, and also pursued an acting career.

Maloney has 10 movies to his credit both as an actor and behind the camera as a producer, technical advisor, and assistant director. He incorporated many of his experiences into his first novel, Termination Orders, released in September 2012. The second book in the Dan Morgan thriller series, Silent Assassin, was released in August 2013. Copies of both books will be available for purchase at the event.

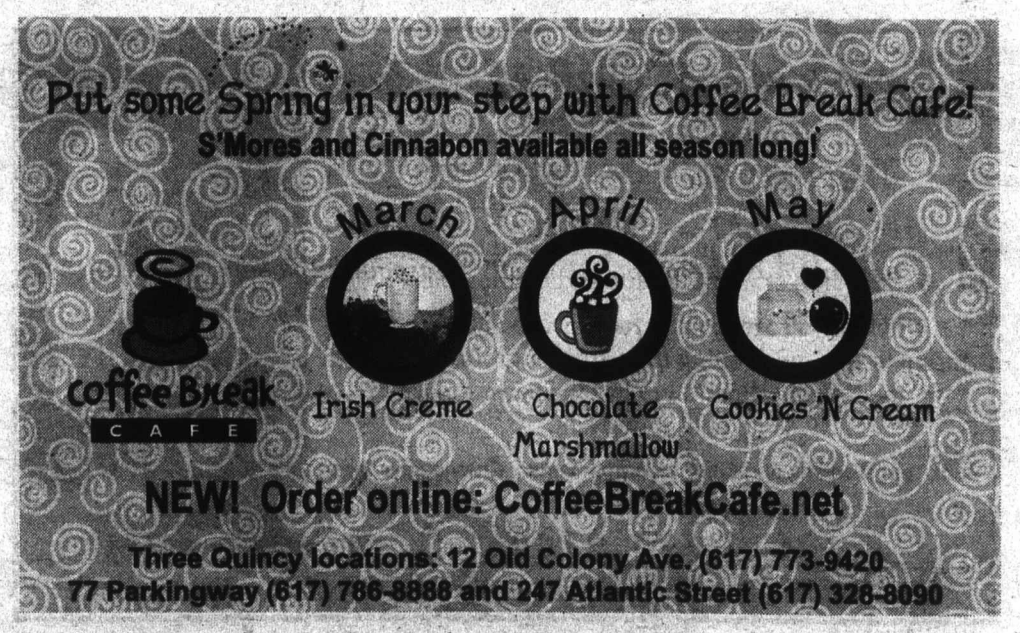
For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

Finance For Women Topic Kennedy Center

Quincy resident Neil McCole will present a program on Finance for Women Thursday, April 24 at 2 p.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy.

McCole will discuss why women must plan differently than men for retirement. This workshop will address challenges female retirees face, including saving for retirement, spending in retirement, healthcare, inflation, and estate planning.

Registration is required for this presentation as space is limited. To register call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.



Three Memorial Square Dedications Next Week

By SCOTT JACKSON

Squares memorializing three Marines from Quincy killed in action during the Vietnam War will be dedicated next Thursday, April 24.

The day starts at 11 a.m. 33 Ellis St. with the dedication of a memorial square for Marine Corps Private First Class James P. Hickey. Hickey attended Quincy High School before joining the Marines.

Hickey started his tour of duty in Vietnam in January 1969. On May 27, 1969, he was killed in Quang Nam, South Vietnam, as a result of artillery fire. He was 19 years old. Hickey was assigned to A Battery, 1st Battalion, 13th Marines, 1st Marine Division.

Sen. John Keenan and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the vice chairman of the council's veterans services committee, will speak at the dedication.

The second ceremony will take place at 11:45 a.m. at 47 Vassell St., where a memorial square for Marine Corporal Lawrence E. Sirois will be dedicated. Sirois was a 1967 graduate of North Quincy High.

Sirois had been in Vietnam for 10 months when he was killed on Nov. 24, 1968, in Quang Nam as a result of small arms fire. He was 20 years old. Sirois was assigned to H Company, 2nd Battalion, 7th Marines, 1st Marine Division.

Rep. Tackey Chan and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, the chairwoman of the council's veterans services committee, will speak at that dedication.

The third ceremony is at 222 Billings Rd. at 12:30 p.m., where a square for Marine Lance Corporal Martin R. Keefe will be dedicated. He was also a 1967 North Quincy High graduate.

Keefe began his tour of duty in Vietnam in May 1968. He was killed on Feb. 23, 1969, in Quang Tri Province, South Vietnam, as a result of friendly fire. Keefe was 20 years old. He had been assigned to 3rd Force Recon Company, 3rd Recon Battalion, 3rd Marine Division, III Marine Amphibious Force.

Speaking at that dedication are Rep. Bruce Ayers and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

Phipps Street and Kendrick Avenue with the rededication of the memorial square for Cavicchi. He was born in Quincy and attended schools in Quincy and Weymouth, playing football for both high school teams. Cavicchi moved back to Quincy in 1965.

The day's events will conclude at 2 p.m. with a ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower, 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay.

The special guest speaker for that event is attorney George C. McMahon, a retired Marine Corps captain and Bronze Star recipient.

A New Britain, Conn., native, McMahon graduated from Providence College in Rhode Island. While attending the school, joined the Marine Corps Platoon Leader Course and spent two summers at boot camp in Quantico, Va.

After graduation, McMahon was commissioned as a second lieutenant and sent to Quantico to attend the Marine Corps Basic School for Officers. After Basic School, he spent two months with the 28th Marines at Camp Pendleton, Calif., and spent 11 months a Language School, where he learned Vietnamese. McMahon remains fluent in the language today.

McMahon began his tour of duty in Vietnam as the infantry platoon commander of the 3rd Platoon, 1st Battalion, 5th Marine Regiment. He then became commander of the battalion's Delta Company 1.5 months later after the previous commander was wounded in a heavy firefight. McMahon would remain commander of Delta Company for the remainder of his tour in Vietnam.

Delta Company operated 25 miles southwest of Da Nang in an area known as the "Arizona Territory," which was the scene of some of the war's most vicious fighting.

Before McMahon took over the 3rd Platoon of Delta Company, it was under the command of Lt. James Webb. Webb would later become secretary of the Navy under President Ronald Reagan and is now a U.S. senator from Virginia.

The third platoon was the subject of Webb's first novel, "Fields of Fire," which recounts battles Webb and McMahon fought. The two remain close to this day.

During McMahon's last two months in Vietnam, was assigned to become the airborne attack company for the 1st Marine Division. This involved responding by helicopter insertion to any enemy attacks or contacts within the division's area of responsibility. Delta Company also rescued numerous surrounded Marine recon teams and downed American pilots.

For his service, McMahon was awarded the Bronze Star with Combat V, the Combat Action Ribbon, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry, and the Distinguished Flying Cross. He is the only Marine infantry officer to receive the Distinguished Flying Cross in the Vietnam War.

McMahon was promoted to captain after leaving Vietnam and was named commanding officer of Echo 3/4 in the 3rd Marine Division stationed on Okinawa. He then finished his service at Camp Lejeune, N.C., with the 2nd Marine Division.

After leaving the Marines, McMahon enrolled in Suffolk University Law School, graduating in May 1971. He then embarked on a lengthy legal career, including stints a federal prosecutor for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Boston; a teacher of criminal trial tactics for the U.S. Department of Justice; and as a State House aide. He has been in private practice since 1985.

McMahon lives in Houghs Neck with his wife, Maria. They have two daughters, one son, and seven grandchildren.

Other speakers at the ceremony include Mayor Thomas Koch, U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch, and Keenan. The Rev. John Carl Swanson, the pastor of Union Congregational Church and a former U.S. Navy lieutenant, will deliver the invocation and benediction. Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, will open the ceremony and introduce the various dignitaries in attendance.

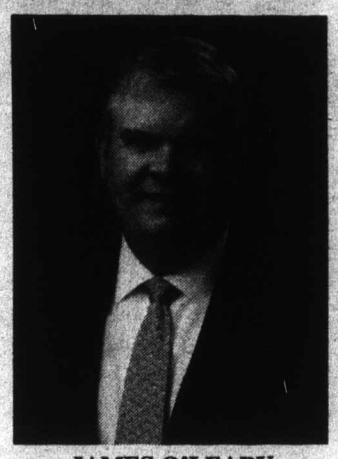
James O'Leary On Colonial Federal Savings Bank Board Of Directors

Michael E. McFarland, President and CEO of Colonial Federal Savings Bank, announces James (Jim) O'Leary has been elected to the Board of Directors of the local, mutual community bank.

A graduate of the Wharton School of Finance/University of Pennsylvania, O'Leary has worked in the group insurance industry for more than 35 years. He joined leading Milton-based employee benefits specialists Milton E.T. Lawrence in 1986 and was named president in 1988.

"Jim O'Leary is smart and he has solid finance experience," McFarland said.



JAMES O'LEARY

"He knows this area very well. And he's committed to the idea of the importance of strong, independent local banks for local communities. We are delighted to have him join the Colonial Federal team."

"I am thrilled to be associated with such a strong and valuable community institution," O'Leary said. A lifelong resident of Milton, O'Leary and his wife, Shauna, are the parents of five children and grandparents of one.

Celebrating its 125th anniversary, Colonial Federal's main office is in Quincy at 15 Beach St. Branches are at 1000 Southern Artery (residents only), in East Weymouth and Holbrook. Online/mobile banking available 24/7 at colonialfed.com. All deposits are insured by the FDIC. Phone number connecting all offices is 617-471-0750.

Salvation Army To Honor 3 At Civic Dinner May 14

Robert Bosworth, Mayor Tom Koch, George Burke

The Quincy Salvation Army will present three awards at its Civic Dinner set for Wednesday, May 14 at 6 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

The dinner will highlight human service programs that are offered by the Quincy Salvation Army and will be presented under the theme, "The Bell for Help Rings All Year Round."

Captain Nicole Ross and the event committee, Board Chairman Don Uvanitte, as well as Board members Amy Huber, James Pasciucco and Maralin Manning, announce this year's Civic Award recipients:

Robert Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun, will be presented the William Booth Award, one of the highest awards that may be conferred upon an individual by the Salvation Army. Recipients are chosen because of their dedication to The Salvation Army's goals of service to man and have given outstanding humanitarian effort and service within the community through the donation of time, expertise and energy.

The William Booth Award is recommended by the officer in charge and must be approved at the highest level of the Salvation Army's Managing Officers.

Bosworth was selected this year in recognition of his support to the Salvation Army and for continuing the work of his late father, Quincy Sun founder Henry Bosworth, who served on the Salvation Army Advisory Board for many years.

Mayor Thomas Koch will be presented the "Others Award." The award is given to an individual or organization that exemplifies an extraordinary spirit of service to others which benefits the Salvation Army and/or the community.

The recipient is recommended by the officers and local Advisory Board and presented to headquarters for endorsement. Koch will be honored for his commitment to "focus on individuals in every community throughout the city," an effort he vocalized in his fourth Inaugural Address in January.

Attorney George Burke will receive the Advisory Board Member Emeritus Award. The honor recognizes a board member who has long served and who has given during his/her years of service identifiable valuable service to Quincy Corps. The candidate is recommended by the Executive Committee of the Advisory Board and approved by the Divisional Commander.

Those interested in attending the May 14th dinner may call the Quincy Corps office at 617-472-2345 for tickets or reservations.

City Sponsoring Rain Barrell Program

Mayor Thomas P. Koch announces the City of Quincy Department of Public Works is partnering with the Great American Rain Barrel Company to offer recycled rain barrels to residents of Quincy as part of its community wide conservation and sustainability program.

"We are bringing Rain Barrels to Quincy to help homeowners bring down water costs and protect aquifers" said DPW Commissioner Daniel Raymondi.

"Rain barrels lower municipal water demands and save energy at water treatment facilities by reducing water pollution and storm water runoff. Using rain barrels to collect water off your downspout will conserve municipal water supply and may cut household water bills up to 40 percent. Rain water is free of chlorine and water treatment chemicals making it an excellent water source for lawns, plants and gardens," Raymondi added.

The Great American Rain Barrel is being offered in three colors; Forest Green, Earth Brown or Nantucket Gray at cost of $69 – 40 percent off the retail price of $119.

Each 60 gallon UV protected polyethylene rain barrel is manufactured in the USA from a recycled shipping drum that stands 39" tall by 24" wide and weighs 20 lbs. empty with a wall thickness of 3/16", resulting in a rigid, heavy duty rain barrel that is made to last. The barrel comes complete with overflow fittings, drain plug, screw on cover, and a threaded spigot with a choice of two ports to use with either a watering can or a garden hose.

To purchase: visit www.greatamericanrainbarrel.com, click on " Shop Local Programs " in the lower left, click on "Quincy".

Barrels will be distributed on Tuesday, May 27 between 5 and 7 p.m. at the DPW Parking Lot, 55 Sea St, Quincy.

Deadline for purchase is May 20th at 5 p.m.

Friends of Blue Hills To Launch 'Peek A Blue Hikes'

On Tuesday, May 6, the Friends of the Blue Hills will launch "Peek a Blue Hikes," a free guided weekday hike for parents and small children.

The new initiative is part of the organization's 35th year celebration and is made possible by a startup grant from the Milton Junior Woman's Club.

Parents will choose between two groups, depending on the age of their children. There will be one hike for parents with babies in backpacks and another for parents with toddlers. The former will be more challenging, while the latter will be tailored to "new walkers" and will focus on nature exploration.

The hikes will be offered every other Tuesday beginning on May 6 (weather permitting) from 11 a.m.-noon and will start at Houghton's Pond, 695 Hillside St., Milton. Healthy snacks, juice and water will be provided. Everyone is invited to bring a picnic lunch to eat at the conclusion of the hike.

Well-known child advocacy expert Richard Louv has written extensively about the staggering divide between children and the outdoors, directly linking the lack of nature in the lives of today's wired generation—he calls it nature-deficit—to some of the most disturbing childhood trends, such as the rises in obesity, attention disorders, and depression. In his book Last Child in the Woods, Louv brings together a new and growing body of research indicating that direct exposure to nature is essential for healthy childhood development and for the physical and emotional health of children and adults.

"Peek a Blue Hikes" are intended to address the nature deficit by exposing young children to the natural wonders of the Blue Hills Reservation.

For more information and a complete schedule of Peek a Blue Hikes, visit www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org/peekablue or email info@FriendsoftheBlueHills.org.

OSTEOPOROSIS AND TOOTH LOSS

Osteoporosis, the bone-thinning disease that makes bones more vulnerable to fracturing, raises concerns about fractures of the hips, wrists, and spine; however, it should also be noted that osteoporosis can lead to tooth loss. The jaw bone that supports and anchors the teeth (the alveolar process) is vulnerable to the bone-thinning effects of osteoporosis, and there is a good deal of research showing that the loss of alveolar bone is linked to an increase in loose teeth (tooth mobility) and tooth loss. Women suffering from osteoporosis are three times more likely to experience tooth loss than those who do not have the disease. Older women may be more likely to have osteoporosis, but men should also be vigilant.

Osteoporosis disease has some significant symptoms which show how harmful this can be for men and women. We urge a routine of periodic professional exams that will help ensure the health and longevity of your teeth. Fillings, extractions, sealants, root canals, cosmetic dentistry, partial or full dentures, crowns and bridges are just some of the services we offer. For exceptional dental care, call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we want to provide your entire family with the best oral health care possible. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Patients with osteoporosis may experience difficulty with loose or ill-fitting dentures as their jaw bones shrink.

Quincy DARE Program 'Keepin' It REAL'

Addressing Trends Towards Marijuana, Opiates

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy police officers John Grazioso and Don Sautter feel that recent changes to the Drug Abuse Resistance Education Program (D.A.R.E.) are better equipped at handling changes in attitudes and trends towards marijuana and opiates among local elementary and middle school children.

"One of the first places that people get a hold of [prescription medication] when they are abusing medication is in someone's home," said Sautter, noting that the percentage of middle school children experimenting with drugs and alcohol is steadily increasing. "Probably the main trend I'm concerned about where we should all be concerned is that the ages of kids getting involved with some of these things has lowered over the past ten years."

He said his lectures focus on safe, appropriate, and necessary use of prescription and over-the-counter medications while warning that long-term abuse can lead to the deterioration of personal, family, school, and work relationships. Proper medicine disposal procedures are also taught.

He's also aware that issues surrounding dispensaries and the use of medical marijuana may confuse elementary school children. "Particularly nowadays we're concerned about the marijuana issue which is out and has been a big discussion in the public with dispensaries being talked about," he said. "It's difficult sometimes to explain to the fifth-graders when we say that it's sort of illegal but not quite."

"This new program called 'keepin' it REAL' came out in the middle school a couple of years ago,' said Grazioso. The "real" aspect stands for refuse, explain, avoid and leave; elements that make up the foundation of the research-based classroom lessons. The program also teaches anti-drug norms and discusses drug use statistics amongst students' peers. "We've found that the kids tend to over guess what's really going on...we want kids to realize that not everybody takes drugs," he said.

Recognized and approved by The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), the program was integrated into D.A.R.E. two years ago and focuses on helping students identify strategies that could help them out of sticky situations in which they feel pressured to do drugs.

D.A.R.E. education began in Quincy in 1989 and focuses heavily on steering children away from experimenting with gateway drugs such as tobacco, alcohol, and marijuana and recently has been refocused to emphasize the dangers of prescription and over-the-counter medication. In all, the program has undergone three major curriculum changes in an effort to keep up with ever evolving substance abuse trends.

Sautter, who has been a D.A.R.E. officer for 13 years and teaches the elementary school program, said educating kids early is the best way to spread his anti-drug message. "I think it's a great place to start this program," he said. In all, he gives fifth-grade students 15 to 17 lessons in an effort to prepare them for middle school and the unique pressures that come along with being in a new environment. As a D.A.R.E. officer, he visits a different elementary school daily, including the Sterling and Point Webster Middle Schools because they both contain fifth-grade classes.

"We talk to them a lot about decision making," he said. "We certainly get into talking about a few of the drugs that are necessary to talk about as they enter middle school. They'll have some issues with peer pressure."

Aided by technology, Sautter is able to go into a classroom with his laptop and show students Power Point presentations and movie clips that depict their peers in difficult situations. Discussion is then focused on problem solving and escape techniques.

Workshops are also available to educate parents on how to talk to their kids about drugs in a thought-provoking and beneficial way. Sautter said the workshops help to inform parents as much as kids about the dangers of drugs and brings them up to date on current substances and their rates of abuse.

Grazioso has been a D.A.R.E. officer for 19 years and teaches the middle school program which includes all of the seventh-grade classes at all five middle schools. The lessons also occasionally reach the high schools in the form of providing security and guidance for the North Quincy and Quincy High Senior Stay Outs where students enjoy the hours following prom in a safe and drug-free environment.

"The kids actually do a lot of the talking," he said. "A lot of times my role is just as a facilitator and we have the kids talking and discussing things."

D.A.R.E. Officers are also on call to address specific concerns and situations on request. Grazioso recalled one such situation involving students consuming a drink which contained small amounts of alcohol.

"Years ago a principal called us and the kids were getting little bottles of [the drink]...so we went down there and gave a special class to them explaining that's not something you should be doing because they had a little bit of alcohol in them."

Mayor Thomas Koch commended the officers for their work in helping kids make the right decisions and while he felt the drug issue in Quincy was "Satan's work," he said efforts to combat it have been largely positive.

"Since we've had the open public discussion on Narcan, drug drop-off days and the substance abuse weeks in our schools has expanded," he said. Narcan is used as an antidote to heroin and opiate overdoses and is carried by local police officers in case of emergency. "We're making good strides in the area of the drug issue and it's a difficult issue and I remember when we came together a few years back as a city...now everybody is working together, sharing information, sharing resources."

Quincy High Hosting Fashion Show Tonight

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy High School will be hosting its annual fashion show this Thursday at 7 p.m. in the school's auditorium. Tickets are $5 when purchased from a student prior to the show and $7 when purchased at the door.

Vanessa Nguyen, a senior at Quincy High School, along with eight other junior and senior girls, were in charge of making posters and brochures, and sending out flyers in addition to creating and sewing garments to go down the runway.

"It's a big responsibility but I think we're doing good," said Nguyen who has been in the program for three years and is responsible for publicizing the event.

Lorraine Walsh teaches all fashion classes for the school including Fashion 1, Fashion 2, and the fashion major. She said the show and classes are a pathway to studying fashion design and fashion merchandising. Many of her students end up studying fashion and related majors in college and she's noticed a steady increase in class enrollment during the program's eight years. "They're going to many fantastic schools...some of the top schools in the country," she said.

The students began designing their garments in October. All of the clothing is made from scratch either using predesigned patterns or are completely original designs created by the students. Fashion majors who have had more experience can drape and design their own garments without the use of patterns.

Nguyen said some students can complete a garment in one month during daily class time. When needed, the designers meet after school to tie up any loose ends.

All materials are paid for by the students but Nguyen said using recycled fabrics helps cut down on cost.

She anticipates a full house on Thursday night. All proceeds from ticket sales help pay for the cost of supplies and resources.

New Green Space Planned Behind Kennedy Center

uled for tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in City Hall. Koch said a meeting on the park's design should take place in the coming weeks.

The Kennedy Center

The city is now working with an engineering firm to plan a new green space at the Kennedy Center in Squantum, which serves more than 4,000 of the city's senior citizens. The new space will include an array of amenities for those seniors to enjoy.

"Weston & Sampson is doing a plan to raise the elevation of the entire site and put additional parking behind the senior center – it doesn't have enough parking now for who we serve," Koch said.

"In addition, there will be a beautiful park setting that will include outdoor activities for the seniors, including a cookout area, pavilion, horseshoes, bocce, a greenhouse for those that are interested in that kind of thing, a peace garden, and walkways around the site itself."

There is no timeline for the project, because of the permitting process involved, and no estimate for its cost. To help fund the project, Koch said he could ask the City Council to authorize the sale of two properties – the Dawes Estate on the corner of Quincy Shore Drive and Channing Street and another property on Chapman Street.

The Dawes Estate was previously used by the Recreation Department for office space and as a senior center. If it is sold off, Koch said a room in the Kennedy Center could be set aside to honor the family and display a collection of sailing trophies they won.

The Chapman Street property had been used in the past as a home for needy residents.

FEMA Flood Maps

When asked about his handling of FEMA's new flood maps, which will add 1,400 new homes to high hazard flood zones when they take effect in June, the mayor said he would have been more political on the issue if he were given a mulligan.

"My view of things and my style has not to jump up and down – [it's] just to get things done. In retrospect I should have been far more political, screamed and hollered and threw it at the feet of the federal government," Koch said.

"This is a federal issue. FEMA comes and dumps it on us and we're supposed to notify residents and we're the bad guy here."

Koch also said the city has done everything it can to notify residents who may be impacted by the new maps and provide them information that could help them save on insurance.

"We're doing everything we can with public meetings, the website. We've done our meetings; FEMA has done their meetings," the mayor said. "Your paper has been reporting. We're on QATV trying to get the message out. I've met with individual groups. I've been doing PTO meetings and questions come up sometimes on the flood maps. We're doing the best we can to get the information out."

While Koch decided not to appeal the maps outright by last year's deadline, the city is working with Woodard & Curran on a letter of map revision to appeal the maps.

"I think what we're doing is the responsible thing," the mayor explained. "We're doing all kinds of surveying in these newly affected areas. We're checking the data and doing analysis. With science, we're going to go back to FEMA and say 'you said this, this is what we have found.'"

City Celebrating Community Development Week

The City of Quincy will join other communities across the nation in celebrating "National Community Development Week" which begins on April 21, announces Mayor Thomas Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington.

The weeklong celebration provides the opportunity for Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) communities across the nation to showcase CDBG-funded projects and programs, and to educate residents, local businesses, and community groups about the block grant programs administered by the city's Department of Planning and Community Development.

The CDBG program is a flexible program, overseen by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD's) Office of Community Planning & Development, that provides communities, such as Quincy, with resources to address a wide range of unique community development needs.

Locally, CDBG funds are used to support activities and services such as community center programs; emergency food centers; housing rehabilitation activities; code inspections; the creation of affordable housing units; and also supports economic activities such as public works projects and assistance to small businesses for jobs creation.

Since 1975, the CDBG program has provided over $80 million to the City of Quincy for community development programs.

Two events will mark Community Development Week.

On Wednesday, April 23 at 11 a.m., there will be a check presentation to Manet Community Health Center, 110 West Squantum St., Quincy.

The event will include a short speaking program highlighting the public and private investment that has been made to renovate and expand the Manet Community Health Center in North Quincy. The city, through HUD CPD, has made substantial investment to this site over the years, and will use this opportunity to present a check in the amount of $230,000 in additional CDBG grant and loan funds to expand the handicapped-accessible vestibule Confirmed speakers include: Cedric Kam (Deputy Director HUD Boston CPD Office), Mayor Koch; Dennis Harrington, Quincy Planning Director; and Henry Tuttle, executive director, Manet Community Health Center.

On Friday, April 25 at 10 a.m. there will be a groundbreaking for new Veterans Housing at 186 East Howard St., Quincy.

The new building will provide twelve (12) new affordable housing units for veterans and their families.

Confirmed speakers include: Cong. Stephen Lynch; Cedric Kam (Deputy Director HUD Boston CPD Office); Mayor Koch; and Dennis Harrington, Quincy Planning Director; as well as a representative from NeighborWorks Southern Mass.

School Committee Notebook - 4/9/14

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Here's a look at some of the items from last Wednesday's Quincy School Committee meeting"

• Executive Director of Career Education and Instructional Technology Keith Segalla recognized students excelling in the career and technical education programs. Daniel Cunningham, Junbong Jang, Jessica Siders, James Hagborg, Jonathan Ng, Elizabeth Le, Brianna McCombs, Thanh-Quang Hoang, AR Alhazmy, Emily Hatfield, Wei Feng He, Cedric Germain, Christian Peguro, Liam Fitzmaurice, and Ellis Hampton all received medals for their hard work.

• Amanda Flores was named The Career and Technical Education Student of the Year. She is a senior at Quincy High School majoring in broadcasting technology. She is enrolled in all advanced and honors classes and has a 4.3 GPA. Currently she interns at Quincy Access Television Studios and will attend Emerson College in the fall.

• Six Broad Meadows Middle School students presented their research on Passanageset Knoll, an unmarked portion of the Broad Meadows Salt Marsh that was the summer residence of sachem Chicatawbut and his tribe in the 1600s. They proposed adding signage to the area for educational purposes.

• School Committee member David McCarthy donated a 2000 Chevrolet Express 3500 Van valued at $8,660 to Quincy Public Schools.

• Grade 11 and 12 Quincy High School students will be traveling to the Rhode Island School of Design Museum in Providence, Rhode Island on May 1.

• Boston Scientific was recognized for their donation of 16 Microsoft Surface II Tablets to the School~Community Partnership. The tablets will be used to integrate up-to-date science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) content into classrooms and the curriculum.

• Mayor Thomas Koch clarified that he had recommended the former site of the Central Middle School be sold because there was no further educational use for the building. The City Council has voted to make the land available for sale. The city will soon be entertaining offers for the property keeping in consideration possible uses of the site and the highest dollar amount offered.

Koch said he supported using the money gained from the sale to augment the construction of campus improvements which will take place behind North Quincy High School.

Bluefin Robot In Hunt For Lost Plane

By SCOTT JACKSON

A robotic submarine manufactured by Quincy-based Bluefin Robotics joined the search for lost Malaysian Airlines Flight 370 in a portion of the Indian Ocean hundreds of miles of the western coast of Australia this week.

The Bluefin-21 autonomous underwater vehicle operates at depths of up to 4,500 meters (approximately 14,700 feet or 2.8 miles). While operating underwater, the 17-foot long AUV uses sonar to create a three-dimensional map of the sea floor, which officials can comb through to find the missing plane.

The Bluefin AUV was first deployed Monday in an area 1,400 miles northwest of the southwestern Australian city of Perth. It was supposed to operate underwater for up to 16 hours, but resurfaced after only six hours because it was operating in depths greater than 4,500 meters. It was redeployed Tuesday in a shallower area of the Indian Ocean.

Flight 370, a Boeing 777 with 239 passengers and crew aboard, disappeared March 7 en route from the Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur to the Chinese capital of Beijing. The search for the lost aircraft initially focused on the Gulf of Thailand before shifting to the southern Indian Ocean after analysis of satellite data.

The Bluefin-21 was sent to the area three weeks ago. Australian officials leading the search deployed it this week after signals said to be consistent with those sent by a downed aircraft's black boxes were detected in the area.

259 Gravestones Being Restored At Historic Hancock Cemetery

Forestry, and Cemetery Departments, said Hancock Cemetery and the grave markers inside it tell a story of what life was like centuries ago.

"It tells us so much about what life was like in Quincy all those years ago," he explained. "If you look when people were born and when they died, many people died very young. It tells a story. You just need to fill in the gaps a little with some our historical knowledge just to see how different life was then."

Planning for the restoration work began a dozen years ago. At the time the city's Board of Cemetery Managers identified a plan to upgrade the cemetery, including work on the gravestones and eventually landscaping the site, city historian and cemetery board chairman Tom Galvin noted.

"I can't believe that here we are, after 12 whole years of working on that, that we're on step one," Galvin said. "Speaking for the cemetery board, we look forward to the enhancement there and we hope this is only the beginning of upgrading our cemeteries."

The project is being undertaken by Historic Gravestone Services of New Salem, Mass. Ta Mara Conde, the company's owner, has previous experience with similar projects in Medford and Malden, among others.

The project will involve removing growths from the stones, creating new bases to set the headstones in, and repairing broken stones using Jahn, a special restoration mortar made in Germany that can match the original color of the grave markers.

Sports & More Programs

The Quincy Recreation Department will offer two Sports & More programs during April school vacation.

The program will be held Wednesday, April 23 and Thursday, April 24 from 5:30 to 8 p.m., in the Quincy High School Gym for boys and girls in Grade Three through Grade Six.

The cost of the program is $5. Use the Huntley Road/ rear parking lot entrance of QHS for drop off and pick up.

Supervised traditional activities include group games and organized play like capture the flag, dodge ball, "Minute to Win It" contest, arts and crafts, sports and more. The program is open to boys and girls entering grades 3-6. Supervision will be provided by members of the Quincy Recreation Department Staff.

Enrollment will be limited, and a minimum number will be needed for each session for proper group activities. Registration is ongoing and can be done online at www.QuincyRec.com or in person at One Merrymount Parkway from 9 a.m to 4 p.m. For additional information, call 617-376-1394 or visit www.QuincyRec.com

AVOID BAGGAGE EXCESSES
Straining a muscle or spraining a ligament while improperly maneuvering baggage is not only painful, it can ruin a vacation before it ever gets started. With this in mind, travelers should be very cautious when choosing, carrying, packing, and lifting their luggage. Avoid strains and sprains by selecting luggage that is sturdy, lightweight, and equipped with wheels and a handle. Then, take care not to over-pack. It is easier to carry or roll two smaller pieces of lighter luggage than one large, heavy piece. As always, when lifting any heavy object, bend at the knees (not the waist) and keep your back straight. Better yet, check your bags, and ask for help placing bags in overhead compartments.
We're a highly regarded chiropractic office. We offer a full range of chiropractic services to those seeking proven healing methods not requiring drugs or surgery. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe that regular chiropractic care should be part of everyone's healthcare routine. Call us at 617.472.4220 and let us help you and your family members feel better, without drugs or surgery, the natural way, the chiropractic way. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, and are currently accepting new patients. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.
P.S. During one recent year, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reported that nearly 54,000 luggage-related injuries occurred in the United States.

Quincy Police Department Teaches Self Defense

By DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Lieutenant

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit, in cooperation with Eastern Nazarene College, recently held a two-night self defense program for women ages 16 and older at the college.

The first night began with Officer Lisa Devine engaging the 25 students in a discussion about awareness of your surroundings and how to avoid becoming a victim of assault. The key points were to know where you are and to be on guard for any potential threats. Sensory obstructions such as using headphones, texting or cell phones increases your chances of being caught off guard.

We all see pedestrians so focused on technology as they walk into other pedestrians or into traffic, only looking up when they have to – and sometimes too late. This is the ideal candidate to be robbed and/or assaulted. The best action is to check you messages or texts prior to leaving the safety of your class, building or business, etc. As you leave a building, you should be re-assessing as you walk, scanning for potential threats. Walking with others is also a deterrent.

The class then participated in warm up drills in preparation for the preliminary training and learning of blocks, kicks and blows to help ward off an offender. Parallel to the physical techniques, the Instructors, all Quincy Police Officers, stressed the importance of voice control. Yelling and screaming serves two purposes. It creates attention from others in the area who may be able to help and secondly, it tells the offender that you are going to resist and not give in to the threat.

The instructors then paired the students off and worked with them on the precision of the techniques taught, focusing on the assailant's vulnerable spots. For many of the females, this was the first time they have ever punched or kicked someone.

The first night concluded with the students being able to recognize threats and also how to use physical actions to get away. The students went home after the first night knowing that the second night would begin with a quick refresher followed by scenarios in which they would test their skills and energy escaping from offenders. All students were encouraged to challenge themselves during the scenarios, to view it as an actual incident, so that each student could assess their own abilities. It should be noted that no student is required to take part in warm up exercises or any of the role plays. Just observing will help students generate ideas on how to handle a volatile situation.

For the scenarios, the students are brought into a separate room, where Officer Kristen Bowes and Detective James Dentremont helped suit them up with protective gear of foam hand/forearm pads and helmet secured by Velcro. Each student is brought into the gym separately so that the element of surprise is maintained. There they see two men, Sergeant Patrick Buonagurio and Officer Matt Miller, dressed fully in the red man suit, which consists of heavily insulated padding and a steel grid face mask. For many of the students, this alone was threatening. Officer Levine asks each student if they have any health or injury concerns. This is important because we do not want to further aggravate their pain. The Officers set up the role play based on this information, avoiding parts of the body that the student is concerned about.

There are many scenarios that the Officers can use. The first scenario had the student walking down a street where she is confronted by two men who are making insulting remarks to the victim. As she walks between the men, she is grabbed by one of them. The student can use any of the strikes taught to defend themselves with the ultimate goal of escaping. During this time, the Officers are yelling out instructions of what type of strike to use to get free. It is a combination of strikes, yelling and running that gets the student free and out of the gym door, where the next student is suited up and waits their turn. The scenario is brief and this is intentional to build the students confidence in preparation for the next scenario. After all the students went through the first scenario, the two red suited Officers, soaked in sweat, took a well deserved ten minute break after being hit with numerous kicks, elbows and punches from victims, who were all pumped up with adrenalin!

The second scenario is based on a recent ATM situation where the female is attacked from behind, completely unaware because she is intentionally distracted. The first one assailant comes up from behind and grabs her around her arms and squeezes tightly. This is totally unexpected since the students do not see this coming. After the initial freeze, the student literally kicks in her learning with a heel strike followed by strong elbow blows to break free. As the student runs away, she encounters the second red suitet blocking her path to escape. The students often opted for a solid kick to the groin, often accompanied by a punch to the assailant's face. It all sounds violent and even though it is only role playing, each student is urged to test themselves to see what they can do.

After each student completed the two challenges, the group then went into one of the college's classrooms, where a video was shown of each student going through the scenarios. Since they had not seen each other go through the threats, it was a valuable learning tool so that they could learn from each other. There were also many laughs and sharing of emotions as the group watched each other in action.

There are many reasons why the females wanted to take the class. For some, it was because of a situation that frightened them. For others, it was an opportunity to learn about themselves. There were high school students in the class who plan on going away to college and wanted the training and experience of what to do in unfamiliar surroundings. There were senior citizens who wanted to see what they were capable of.

There was a mother and daughter who wanted to spend time together with the goal of protecting each other.

Carolyn Schwartz, a North Quincy High School student said, "I'm going to college next year and after this course I feel confident that I can defend myself without worry. I think it would be valuable for everyone."

Another North Quincy High School student, Jane Minton added, "I learned I am stronger than I think I am" (which Sergeant Buonagurio could attest to).

Roberta Black said of the program, "There was such great energy from the Police Officers and their energy inspired us to really get into it."

Jolene Coletta said, "I would highly recommend this program. I learned a lot and it really makes you feel safe."

Julita Bailey of Eastern Nazarene College summed it up, saying, "I like the course because it is free and very beneficial in the world we live in today." Many of the females, including Traci Cox, said that they would take the course over and over as a refresher.

Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan thanked Eastern Nazarene College for their hospitality and openness to run this program. As for the program, Chief Keenan remarked, "This is just another example of the proactive approach this department takes in serving the community. It is the commitment of our Officers that make all the programs we provide so successful."

As for the next self defense program, it is tentatively scheduled for October 2014.

NQ/Q Rugby Runs Over Algonquin, 42-17

By JOE REARDON

Dan Sharp stood on the sidelines as a trainer carefully placed a butterfly bandage over the cut on the side of his head. The wound was trickling blood, but that hardly mattered to Sharp.

The captain of the North Quincy High football team and a starting tackle on both offense and defense, Sharp isn't an athlete who is going to let a little bit of blood keep him from the playing field.

But Sharp's cut didn't come from the rigors of playing football – it came from last Thursday's North Quincy/Quincy rugby game against Algonquin Regional High School at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Sharp was all smiles on the sideline after North Quincy/Quincy thoroughly dismantled Algonquin behind three scores from scrumhalf Karl Prezza. The sophomore transfer from B.C. High paced the squad to a 42-17 romp over the Northboro-based opponent.

"Believe it or not, it's completely different (from football)," said Sharp. "Rugby is way more fun. A lot more technique and cardio go into it. It's a lot better sport all around. We're a very close team. You have to be. You have to trust the guys behind you the whole game."

The game made history of sorts, as it was the first team North Quincy/Quincy has ever played in the stadium. Other historical tidbits from the game, courtesy of Martin J. Dunham, assistant coach:

• 42 points is second most club has scored in a game (record: 50 vs. Quincy May 29, 2012)

• 4 tries from Mac Deegan is new record for most individual tries in a game (previous record: 3 from Kevin Riordan vs. Quincy May 29, 2012)

• 8 team tries second most in club history (record: 10 vs. Quincy May 29, 2012) - other high game is 7 tries vs. Newton South May 14, 2011 and vs. Quincy May 2, 2013 Brian Casey's club made the best of the home field advantage, working the ball to the outside to the speedy Usama Masood of North Quincy and left wing Kyle Lakhan of Quincy. North Quincy/Quincy was also aggressive during the tight scrums and came up with a number of loose balls that were converted to scoring chances.

Casey, now in his sixth year of coaching, was the captain of the rugby team at Syracuse University and is an expert on the sport that is enormously popular in Europe. He was not only happy with the win, but the cohesiveness of the team during the second half.

"Honestly, they all played very well," said Casey. "It's a game where nobody scores without everyone else helping. They really came together as a team. The two schools came together so these guys haven't played together before. We were a little messy at the beginning of the game, but we had a good presence. We got behind and Algonguin has got a little more bigger size and a little more experience overall and they scored a couple of times against us. You could see right before halftime our guys really came together.

"I'm proud of them. I'm proud of how they played and I'm proud of the work they put in. They played a good selfless game."

The team has some major talent and faces a big test when it goes up against a very tough Marshfield High club today at the stadium beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Q If you are planning on attending a game, here are some terms to help familiarize yourself with the sport.

• Banana kick: A medium-range kick performed in general play that goes off to the side of the kicker as to be less predictable than a conventional kick.

• Conversion: If a team scores a try, it has the opportunity to convert it for two more points by kicking the ball between the posts and above the crossbar.

• Crash ball: An attacking tactic where a player receives a pass at pace and runs directly at the opposition's defensive line, attempting to commit two or more opposing players to the tackle.

• Dummy pass: An offensive ruse where the ball carrier moves as if to pass the ball to a teammate, but then continues to run with the ball himself.

• Scrum: Position formed by the players who are designated forwards binding together in three rows. It engages with the opposing team so that the players' heads are interlocked with those of the other side's front row.

• Try: The primary method of scoring. A try is worth four points. It is scored when a player places the ball on the ground with downward pressure in the in-goal area.

Quincy High Students Raise Over $4,000 For Muscular Dystrophy

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL sent three school buses to Gillette Stadium for the 2014 Muscular Dystrophy Walk March 29th. Students walked and raised over $4,000 of which 100 percent goes directly to support the Muscular Dystrophy Association and people in the immediate area who are living with muscle disease. The event included opportunities to learn more about this disease and to celebrate the efforts of local families, organizations, firefighters and school teams to raise both awareness and funds. Students were treated to visits with local sports celebrities, team mascots, and cheerleading squads. Quincy High proudly accepted the High School Team-Challenge Award and also the Most-Spirited Team Award. Photo Courtesy QHS

'Pickleball' Demonstration Site At Senior Olympics

The Quincy Senior Olympics will serve as a demonstration site that will introduce Pickleball, the newest sensation in sports for the senior population.

The game, which is a hybrid of tennis, badminton and table tennis, is played on a court a quarter the size of a tennis court, with hard rackets and a variety of whiffle ball.

Quincy Recreation Director Barry Welch said Peter Sullivan, who is a volunteer Ambassador of the USA Pickleball Association, will demonstrate the game at the Kennedy Center gym on Wednesday, May 21 from 10 a.m. to noon. Sullivan will bring three other volunteers to demonstrate the game, explain rules, game strategy and answer questions.

There will also be ample time for anyone who wishes to try their hand. Equipment will be provided. Those who wish to play are asked to wear sneakers.

"The usual reaction is 'what's Pickleball,'" said Welch but over 150,000 people play the game according to estimates by the USAPA which has members from all areas of the country. It was the newest medal sport at the National Senior Games and can be played indoors or outdoors by men or women.

The game is enjoyed by those with all levels of athletic ability and described by most as very easy to learn.

In playing Pickleball there are usually four players, with two on each side of a net that is just lower than tennis net. Players rackets are about the size of a beach paddleball and a version of a whiffle ball is used.

Teams serve underhanded cross court as if in tennis, and the ball must bounce on each side before being played directly out of the air. Teams only score when serving and when in a 7 foot area close to the net players may not play the ball directly out of the air. The game is played to 11 points, but you must win by 2.

"The most important thing we hear from those who try the game is that it is just plain fun, a perfect paced game for seniors who want to stay active, is much easier on joints and lungs than tennis and easy to learn. We think that the Senior Games will be an ideal demonstration site and our goal is to generate interest in our participants and move the sport into our games," Welch said.

According to USAPA legend, the game is named after Pickles who was the dog of the game's inventor. Pickles would chase after the ball.

This year's Senior Games application has a check off box for registered participants who plan to attend. The demonstration event is open to anyone interested in learning about Pickleball you do not have to be a participant of the Quincy Senior Games to attend.

Others are requested to call the recreation office at (617) 376-1394 to register or for any additional information.

32nd Annual Senior Olympics Applications Available

Faxon Field Track will host the 32nd Annual Quincy Senior Olympics at the place it all began. Applications are now available for the event the senior games which have become the premier athletic activity for men and women age 55 and over will begin on Mon., May 12th and continue until Thurs., May 22nd.

The Olympics sponsored by the City of Quincy Office of the Mayor and administered by the Recreation Department and Department of Elder Services will again have Quincy Medical Center, a Steward Family Hospital, as the primary sponsor.

According to Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, the sponsorship of Steward is a natural fit for our games. The goal of our games is to promote active and healthy lifestyles for our senior community. QMC, through Steward Health Care, shares our goals. We thank them for their commitment and welcome their involvement in our games.

A new event has been added with the completion of the new track. There will be men's and women's discus throw in all age groups. And although not a competive event this year, the games will host representatives of the National Pickle-Ball Association for a hands-on demonstration of the fastest growing senior sport, Pickle-Ball.

Applications are now available at the office of Mayor Thomas P. Koch, The Kennedy Center, and the Recreation Department at One Merrymount Parkway.

Applications will be mailed on request by calling 617-376-1394 or 617-376-1244. Participants do not need to live in Quincy. The Olympic events schedule can also be found on www.QuincyRec.com. All events are conducted at sites in Quincy and are also supported by the River Bay Club. The events include: one mile walk, opening ceremony, celebrity exhibition volleyball game, bowling, swimming, darts, billiards, bocce, three mile walk, horseshoe pitching, basketball free throw, sportsmanship luncheon , track and field events, one mile run, half mile walk, rotation events, softball throw, standing long jump, javelin throw, shot put, discus throw, golf putting competition, golf tournament, and an awards night.

North Quincy Shows Supreme Effort Against Hanover

By BILL GRIFFIN

They are living, playing proof that sports are more than numbers, more than wins and losses. Sports are about character. They are about doing your best, playing for the love of the game, supporting your teammates, and learning that working through the tough times makes for a better person and a better player.

North Quincy's softball team lined up against undefeated Hanover last week with nine players. Just nine. Several were out for varsity for the first time. A few hadn't played since middle school. Hanover defeated North, 11-4, but the Red Raiders did themselves and their school proud with the quality of their effort.

"There are only 11 of us and two are injured," said coach Jim Connor. "I'd take these kids and coach them any day. I think the way they have played is inspirational. We may not win a game, but I could not be prouder of them. It's easy to give up. It's trying to play, trying to compete at all costs that makes coaching and playing fun. That's what these kids have."

And they played well. The Red Raiders had five hits against a quality pitcher and made only two errors. The defense was solid and, at times, it was better than solid. Pitcher Dana Grasselli gave only five hits and struck out five. Sarah Franklin was exceptional behind the plate, and captain Madison Hally played a fine shortstop.

"With our program the way it is, our goal is to be better today than we were yesterday," said Connor. "Some days, it's a minor step. Some days it's a major step. Today was a major step. We played very well against a good team. The chemistry among the kids is great. They care about each other."

Each player had her moment. Franklin had a single, a double, a walk, an RBI and scored a run. She caught a base-stealer at second, held onto a foul tip for a third strike, and pounced out from behind the plate on a bunt and threw a hard strike to first for the out.

"You don't often see the complete package in a high school catcher, someone who can hit and make all the plays behind the plate, Sarah can do that," said Connor.

Graselli pitched well. She never gave in and mixed her speeds effectively. On offense, she walked and hustled home from second on an infield hit. Hally had a hit, a run scored, snared a line drive at short in the first and made an unassisted double play to end a bases-loaded threat in the fourth. Lauren Gambon grabbed a pair of line drives and played a strong third base. She also had an infield hit which resulted in two RBI.

"Dana is getting better each game. She knows her teammates are there to support her," said Connor. "Madison is a returning starter. She is a very smart player which she showed on that double play. Lauren is a good hitter and a team leader. She's a big reason for the unity we have." Perhaps no player better represents the spirit of the team than left-fielder Nancy Aimola. She was hit by a pitch in the second and went to the dirt. If she doesn't get up, the Red Raiders forfeit. If she doesn't get up, they don't have enough players. She dusted herself off, got up and later put down a perfect sacrifice bunt, socked a double and seored a run.

"If she doesn't get up, she never gets to enjoy that double," said Connor.

Rachel Dunphy handled four chances flawlessly at second base, including a hot shot with the bases loaded in the seventh. Tristine Thong hit the ball hard and made a good catch in center on a fly ball in the third. Ciara Murphy drew a walk and made a nice scoop at first for an out in the fifth. Lindsay Delaney worked a walk and advanced into scoring position in the fourth.

"Rachel is concentrating better, and balls that would have been hits or errors are now becoming outs," said Connor. "Tristine is a good athlete who is out for softball for the first time. Ciaira is doing a good job squeezing the ball at first, and Lindsay is smart player who is getting stronger each game."

It is Connor's first year as varsity softball coach. Several years ago, he coached the JVs. Connor coached football at North for 10 years before taking the head job at Norwell last fall. He led Norwell to a winning record in his first season. He had three straight wins over Quincy on Thanksgiving in his time at North. He has had his moments. This spring is one of his best.

"All I've seen is positives. It's a great experience coaching these kids," said Connor.

As North came in for its last at bat, the cry went up: Let's get seven and tie them. The Red Raiders didn't get seven. They didn't win. However, they played a good softball game. They improved, they stuck together, they had fun, they didn't quit. That counts for something. That counts for a lot.

DANA GRASSELLI pitched a complete came against Hanover striking out five batters.

Scores Seven Goals For Quincy

Phelan Powers Presidents Past Red Raiders, 14-8

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was much to appreciate in Quincy's 14-8 win over North Quincy in a girls lacrosse match last week at Veterans Stadium

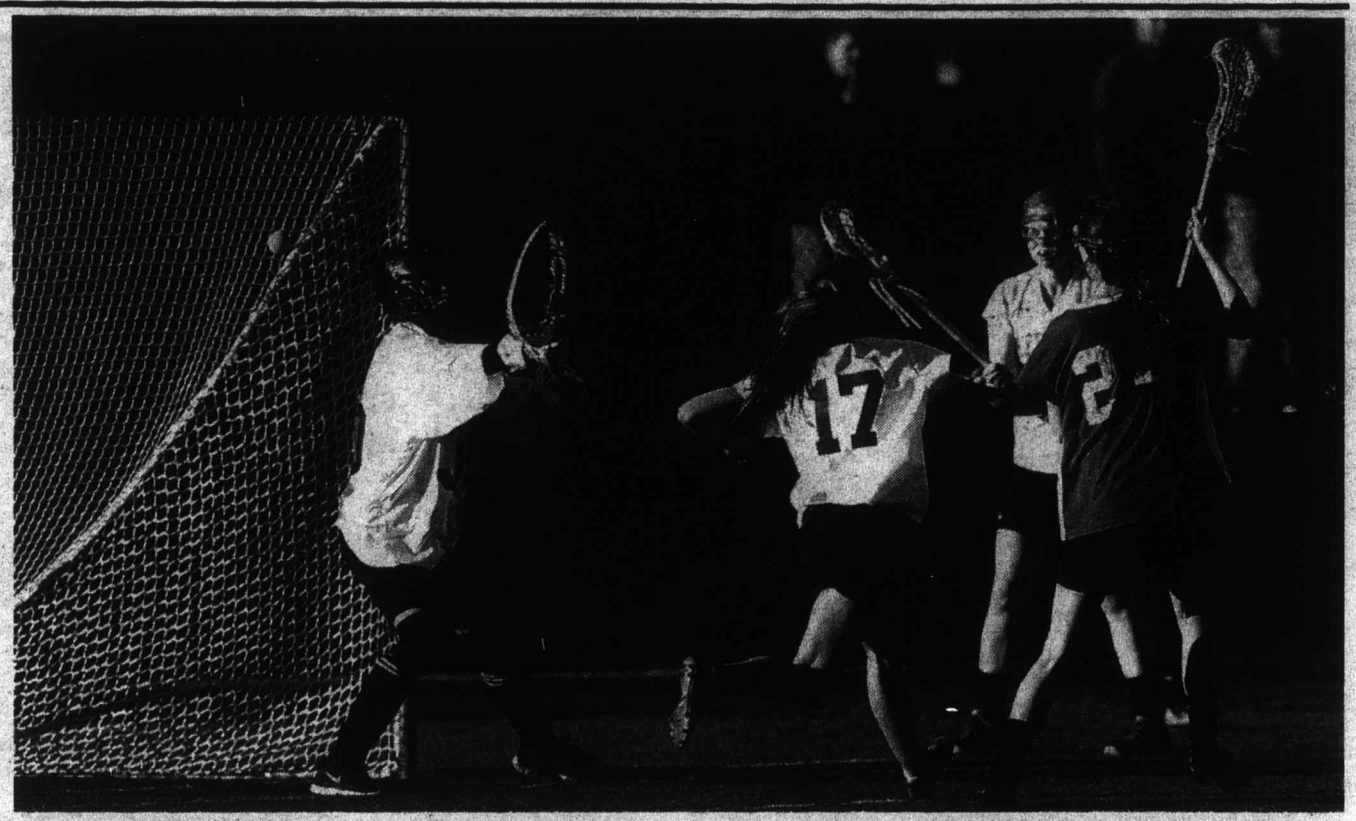
For Quincy, there was the skill, touch and accuracy of junior forward Kerry Phelan who had seven goals and one assist. There was the seamless, checkerboard passing of the Presidents' front line of Phelan, Kayla McArdle, Courtney Ryan, and Noreen Palbutong. There was the tough defensive work of Olivia Wallace and the solid goaltending of Maddie Kamb.

For North, there was another full-throttle, full-game effort in the center and along the wings from junior Molly Minton. There was the terrific play of keeper Marguerite Belcher who turned aside 15 shots, most of which were breakaways or point-blank threats. There were the rushes of Charlotte Chretian along the wing and the work of Ciara Forde who scored twice and won a fistful of 50-50 balls on attack.

But mostly there was the fascinating matchup in the middle of the field between two gifted, skilled athletes: Quincy's senior Gabby Zorkers and North's sophomore Marissa McGue. They match well in speed and size. They each attack and defend. They each move the ball in transition from defense to offense. They each can seize a match in a sudden, single instant.

"I enjoyed playing against her. It's always fun to play against kids you know and compete against in other sports," said Zorkers. "It's always good to play against the best competition. I'd rather play the first seed than the last seed. It makes you a better player."

Zorkers is a fine volleyball player, an excellent all-around athlete, but lacrosse is her sport. It is a family thing. Her brother played for UMass Amherst. She started playing when she was eight. She looks like she was born to play the game. She has an instinct, a feel for the flow of the match which cannot be taught. Against North, she had four goals and an assist. In the second half when her team needed her to defend, she fell back and played defense. She is a lacrosse player.



QUINCY'S KERRY PHELAN (#24), a junior forward for the Presidents' varsity girls lacrosse team, scores one of her seven goals in a 14-8 win over North Quincy last Wednesday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

"Gabby plays lacrosse in season and out of season. Her game shows the time she has put in," said Quincy coach Alisa Arakelian. "She knows the game. One of her best moves is to rush right off the faceoff at midfield and create a chance. She knows the shortest line to the goal is that 50-yard sprint and she takes it."

McGue is An Athlete. She has emerged as a sophomore as a three-sport standout in soccer, basketball and lacrosse. She had four goals against Quincy and could easily have had four more. Her lacrosse skills are not as fully developed as Zorker's, but she is only a sophomore. She has the speed to simply outrun a pack of defenders, she finishes with authority and she is unselfish sharing the ball with her teammates. The next two years with her should be fun to watch.

"Her speed opens up the whole field and she brings all of us with her," said North coach Meg Therrien. "She moves everyone because we have to keep up with her. She creates looks for all of the forwards. She is a smart player. When the defense collapses, she looks for the open player."

Each coach was well aware of Zorkers and McGue.

"Molly (Minton) played another great game," said Therrien. "What she did best was stay with Gabby who is just an incredible player."

"I thought one of the important points of the match was when we tightened up on McHugh in the second half. Olivia Wallace did a good job on her," said Arakelian whose team led, 7-4 at the half and held North to four goals over the final 25 minutes to ensure the win for the Presidents.

Zorkers, McArdle, and Ryan are seniors. Phelan and Palbutong are juniors. They have played together for three and four four years. It shows. The passing along the attack line was brilliant. They threw numerous no-look passes because they just knew where each other was going to be. Zorkers and McArdle started it with rushes up the middle, then Phelan and the passing took over.

"Kayla, Courtney and I have been together since freshman year,. We know each other so well and it shows in our teamwork," said Zorkers.

Phelan was brilliant. She was calm and cool in the scoring area, choosing just the right shot at just the right moment. She scored on rebounds, wraparounds from behind the net, free shots and rockets from the wing and the center off good passes from her teammates.

"This is a rivalry game, our senior year against North and we wanted to go out with a good game. Kerry really stepped us big for us," said Zorkers.

Belcher played a great game in goal for North. She used her stick well, but most of her saves were kick saves. She has excellent vision and quick feet. She has no fear in heavy traffic. She never gave a bit of ground against the Quincy attack . Most of her saves were on blue-chip chances and came from the hard work she has done in practice.

"She is a student of the game. She just wants to learn and learn," said Therrien. "She does have quick feet and we've been working with her on stepping out to the ball. She did that well against Quincy."

Ryan had a goal and two assists for Quincy while Palbutong added a goal and an assist. McArdle chipped in with a goal.

Kiera Clifford and Aislinn Collins scored for North while Evlyn Scuzzarella and Chretian each had an assist.

In other action last week, Plymouth South edged Quincy, 9-8 despite 19 saves from Maddie Kamb who also played an excellent match against North.

Quincy (2-3) hosts Fontbonne today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. at Veterans' Stadium. North (1-5) hosts Hanover April 29 at the stadium at 5:30 p.m.

Passing.

It is always best in any sport when players share the ball. It is especially important in lacrosse. Passing not only creates scoring chances, it controls the pace of the game, works the clock, dominates possession and shuts down opposing offenses by simply not surrendering the ball.

Quincy put on a passing clinic against North Quincy in a boys lacrosse game last week at Veterans Stadium. Beautiful, quick, accurate passing fueled a five-goal burst to start the match and then backboned an impressive defensive effort as the Presidents stopped North, 8-3 in a Patriot League contest.

"From the first practice of the year, everything started with passing for us," said first-year Quincy coach Martin Bowes. "If you can't pass and catch the ball cleanly, you can't do anything. We do drill after drill on passing. We go outside the stadium and play wallball to get sharper. We take a lot of pride in it."

It showed. Seven of Quincy's eight goals came off assists. The Presidents scored three goals in the first five minutes of the match, four in the first period, five in the first 14:33 and each came off a terrific feed, frequently finishing combination passing involving more than two players.

"It's the kind of offense you want. Pass-pass-goal. That was what got us started," said Bowes.

Senior Mitchell McGowan (goal, three assists) took a bullseye feed from Brian O'Callaghan (two asissts), dropped to one knee, and hit the top corner 3:02 into the game. Steve Ross scored the first of his four goals off a fine pass in the middle from McGowan. O'Callaghan sent freshman Thomas Pugsley (two goals) in alone with a through pass down the middle and Pugsley went top corner for a 3-0 lead at 4:36 into the match.

Three goals in 1:34. The common factor in all three. Passing. Passing almost always wins.

"I think our speed and passing caught them before they were able to get set and challenge us on defense," said Bowes.

Sean Brennick put home his own rebound off a McGowan feed and Ross made it 5-0 on a finish from the right wing after Brennick, Aidan Pugsely, Jake Hallisey (one assist) and McGowan had put on a show cycling the ball around the perimeter until Ross found an open crease. Passing controlled the offense. Passing finished the offense.

"Ross is our best scorer," said Bowes. "When he is going well, he makes everybody better. We can create openings with our passing and when Steve is scoring, it makes us an effective offense."

North was down, 5-0 with almost six minutes left in the half. The Red Raiders first had to settle their defense and then use the midfield play of Nolan Greene and crackerjack passing of their own to score three straight goals. They controlled the second and third periods, and made it an exciting match down the stretch.

"It's a rivalry game with extra intensity, so I knew they would come back," said Bowes.

Freshman Tom Koch and Brendan Cox stepped up and solidified the defense in front of keeper Benson Chau who played an excellent match. Cornelius Koch and Pat Janeiro transitioned the ball from defense to offense and the Red Raiders had a chance top set up their attack and pass the ball.

"I thought we set the pace in the second and third periods. We played our game," said Nutley. "Tom Koch did a great job on defense. We were able to control and pass the ball on the attack. We created some great chances. We finished three and just missed on a few more."

Just 31 seconds before the half, Greene blasted free down the middle and made a perfect pass to Mike Finn (two goals). Finn was free at the corner of the net and drove home a high shot to cut the lead to 5-1.

"Nolan played a great game for us. I'm sure there's a couple of more he wished he could have finished, but he was excellent," said Nutley.

The third period belonged to North. Greene ruled the middle. Finn, Rob Hines, Timmy Glynn and Greene passed, cycled and controlled the match in the attack zone. Janiero finished a strong rush up the middle with a high shot to cut it to 5-2 with 1:05 left in the third Janeiro then set up Finn in front with a crisp, clean feed for North's second goal in less than a minute. It made it 5-3 going into the fourth and there were visions of more drama like last year's two overtime classics between the two.

NORTH QUINCY junior Mike Finn scored two goals for the Red Raiders in an 8-3 loss to Quincy last Wednesday at Vetearns' Memorial Stadium.

"Our passing gave us fast breaks and two-on-one chances," said Nutley. "Give our defense credit as well. After the first period, we only gave up four goals."

Quincy had strayed from its passing game in the middle two periods, but the Presidents went back to it in the fourth and produced three picture-perfect goals. Ross finished a corner feed from McGowan to change the momentum of the match and put Quincy up, 6-3 less than a minute into the period.

Ross notched his fourth from a Gavin O'Hare pass into the middle. Pugsley drove home his second off a quicksliver combination pass from Hallisey and McGowan which went from the left wing to the middle to the right corner in an instant to make the final 8-3. Passing, passing, and more passing.

"I thought we got a little impatient in the middle two period. We got back to cycling and passing the ball in the fourth period and I thought we played our best lacrosse of the year," said Bowes.

Quincy's defense and keeper Andy Johnson were excellent. They blanked North in the fourth and gave only three goals to a team with good offensive talent. Aidan Pugsley, Ryan Higgins and O'Callaghan protected the scoring area and transitioned the ball into the middle of the field.

"We've become more and more steady on defense as the season has gone on," said Bowes. "With O'Callaghan and Aidan Puglsey, we not only can defend, we can break out, carry the ball down and score. That makes them a valuable double threat."

Fundamentals Of Mosaics Art Class

The Quincy Art Association recently hosted a demonstration by ceramicist Elaine Evans who presented to the crowd how easy it is to create do-it-yourself mosaic creations using everyday items such as old tiles, broken dishes, colored glass, plywood and grout to make beautiful mosaic pieces of art.

She is a very talented and patient teacher. Her philosophy is to have fun, be patient, leave it and come back to it – no stress. It really is a beautiful, useful and easy art form to learn.

Quincy Art Association, 26 High School Ave., 617-770-2482, will host classes that feature Ms. Evans in the Fundamentals of Mosaics on Monday evenings, Wednesday mornings and children's Saturday classes.

Quincy Red Stockings Girls Softball Win Two

The Quincy Red Stockings U14 Girls Softball Team opened the season with victories over the Worcester Heat and the Worcester Cyclones.

In their 3-1 victory over the Cyclones, the Red Stockings scored three runs in the bottom of the third inning to score all of the runs they would need for pitchers Mia Sapienza and Johanna Douglas. Meghan Davis started the inning with a walk, stole second base and eventually scored on a pass ball. Douglas' clutch two-out double scored Sapienza and Shannon O'Brien who had singled earlier in the inning.

The Cyclones scored an unearned run in the top of the seventh inning. "Throwing strikes is the name of the game and both Johanna and Mia threw strikes" said Red Stockings Manager Mike O'Brien. Sapienza and Douglas combined to give up one hit and two walks, while striking out five.

The Red Stockings' offense exploded in their 18-7 victory over the Worcester Heat. Leadoff hitter Samantha Smith and number two hitter Davis reached based seven out of eight times and scored seven runs. Other players scoring multiple runs were Sarah Ainsley, O'Brien, Douglas and Samantha Striffler. Sapienza (triple, two singles), Smith (two singles), Douglas (two singles), Meghan Green (two singles) and Ainsley (three rbi) powered the offense. Smith and O'Brien shared the pitching duties for the Red Stockings. The team was supported by the strong defensive plays from catcher Jessie Caldwell, Ainsley at first base and outfielders Greene and Sophia Baldino.

The Quincy Red Stockings U14 Girls Softball Team is an ASA sanctioned club softball team for girls in the City of Quincy.

Shoes Donation In Memory Of Marathon Victims

By JOE REARDON

Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden was visiting her mother in western Massachusetts last Patriots' Day when she got news of the horrific bombings near the finish line of the Boston Marathon. She was stunned and numbed by the tragic news at the world's most prestigious running event.

"I couldn't believe it," said Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden thinking back to that terrible day in Boston. "I'm assuming I felt what everyone else did – shock, sadness and horror. How could you feel anything else?"

Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden was so moved to pay tribute to the three individuals who were killed, including MIT Police Officer Sean Collier, and the more than three hundred spectators who were injured as a result of the blasts, that she decided to begin work on a memorial just six days later.

A memorial of running shoes donated by individuals over the past year will be on display on the lawn of the Quincy Community United Methodist Church, located at 40 Beale St., this Patriots' Day, April 21, from 2-5 p.m. The church's bells will be tolled at 2:49 p.m., the time of the explosion at last year's race. People who visit the memorial can also leave messages of encouragement for those who were injured.

So far, about 100 pairs of running shoes have been donated and the feedback from the community has been nothing but positive. "The only thing I have heard is that it was a great idea," said Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden. "I'm hoping lots of people come to honor these people."

After the memorial, the running shoes will be donated to Rerun Shoes, a company that sends shoes to reuse in African markets and around the world. Anyone interested in donating new or gently used running shoes for the memorial should call (617) 773-3319.

Youth Soccer Seeks Volunteers

There are two programs with Quincy Youth Soccer for which volunteers are needed.

Volunteers are needed on Saturday mornings to coach children in the Under 6 age group.

The program requires "coaches" to be at Pond Street soccer fields from 8:45 to 10:15 a.m. every Saturday morning for the 9 to 10 program.

The program lasts for 7-8 weeks, and coaches are given a curriculum to work on skills for a team of about 10-12 players. There are typically two or more coaches assigned to each team.

On Sunday afternoons Quincy Youth Soccer has a program for disabled children called TOPSoccer. It is from 12 noon to 1:15 p.m. at Pond Street Soccer Fields as well. Volunteers will be helping to teach basic soccer skills, along with helping these players during a short scrimmage each week.

These are volunteer positions which count towards most community service requirements. Both programs began last weekend and continue for the Spring 2014 Season.

Those interested in volunteering for any/both of the programs should send an email with 1) your name 2) your address 3) your date of birth and a contact phone number to: quincyyouthsoccer@hotmail.com with what you are interested in doing (U6 Coaching or TOPSoccer or both).

Local Trio Competes In National Hockey Tournament

Three Quincy Youth Hockey players who have played together since they were mites recently competed at the USA hockey Tier 1 National Tournament held in Marlboro.

Local players on the Bay State Breakers Tier U-19 Club team are Chaislyn Burgio, Emily Tabeek and Stephanie DiPietro. The team is comprised of girls from the South Shore.

The Breakers qualified for the tournament by making it to the Mass State Championship Game and were seeded as the #2 team in the State.

Stephanie DiPietro is a senior at the Dexter Southfield School who will be playing her college hockey at Hamilton College.

Chaislyn Burgio is a senior at Thayer Academy and will be playing her college hockey at Merrimack College.

Emily Tabeek is a Junior at the Dexter Southfield school and is interested in playing college hockey, yet undecided where.

The trio have played together in the Quincy Youth Hockey Program since they were mites, having many successful years winning multiple South Shore and greater Boston league championships. They were teammates and State Finalist for the QYH Girls U12 (2008) and U14 (2009) State Tournament Teams.

Red Raiders Baseball Looking To Break Out

By JOE REARDON

Matt Edgerly has no doubt in his mind that his young North Quincy team is going to break out of the 0-6 record it's been mired in since the start of the season. The Red Raiders have been in games early, only to run out of steam and give up leads.

The frustration level has been high for the Red Raiders since opening day. North Quincy started strong against Silver Lake before falling 10-1. The Red Raiders lost a tough game to Hanover 4-1 and saw a 3-0 lead against Melrose going into the fifth inning evaporate in a hurry.

North Quincy had a great opportunity for its first win of the season Monday against Patriot League foe Pembroke at Adams Field. The Titans were still trying the find their way on the season at 2-4 and were looking to get something started.

The Red Raiders had another extremely tough outing in the windy conditions. Leading 3-0 through four innings and playing some of their best baseball of the season, North Quincy saw the lead dissolve with a disastrous two inning stretch where the Titans put up 15 runs on the way to a 16-6 win that was called in the seventh inning.

North Quincy had its bright spots to be sure. Junior pitcher Joe Cochrane struck out seven and allowed seven hits in his four innings of work and sophomore Matt McDonald went 4-for-4 at the plate as the Red Raiders had 11 hits.

Edgerly has been impressed by McDonald, who has been the Red Raiders' best hitter in the first half dozen games. "He's well on his way to an all-star year," said Edgerly. "We've moved him to lead off the past few games and he's really been producing."

Edgerly looks like the perfect coach to have at the helm of the Red Raiders' team. He's young, having graduated from North Quincy in 2007 and has loads of baseball knowledge. His youth is a huge plus when it comes to connecting with the young Red Raider roster.

After a tough 4-16 campaign last year, Edgerly sees only good things in front of the young team, despite its struggles early. "We've got a young team. We're struggling right now, but we'll get there. They're definitely getting better every day. We talk about spirit and being in the game. They've never been a part of a winning baseball program. I'm a young guy with a young team and we're definitely learning together. The first five innings we had a stranglehold on that lead. A few plays go their way and all of a sudden the floodgates open. And then they started hitting."

Cochrane was sharp from the start, getting two batters on strikeouts in the first inning and sitting down three on strikes in Pembroke's fourth with runners on second and third. North Quincy got to Pembroke pitcher Kevin Jones in the third to take the lead.

McDonald led off with a single up the middle and after Robbie Cameron was hit by a pitch, Andrew Currie singled to short center to load the bases. Sean Egan walked to score McDonald to make it 1-0 and Josh Helfrich's deep sacrifice fly to right field scored Cameron easily for a 2-0 advantage.

Pembroke threatened in the fourth, but Cochrane bore down and pitched himself out of the inning. Alec Frizzell reached on a walk and Cochrane struck out the next batter, but Jones singled up the the middle to make it first and second. Cochrane struck out the the second batter of the inning, but a wild pitch put runners at second and third. They were stranded on the bases, though, as Cochrane sat down Cory Brandon on strikeouts.

North Quincy added its third run of the game in the fourth inning. With two outs McDonald singled up the middle again and stole second. Cameron laced a single to right field to score McDonald for the 3-0 advantage.

Pembroke exploded on offense in the fifth and sixth innings to put the game out of reach for the Red Raiders. In the two innings, the Titans slammed 14 hits and scord 15 runs to stun North Quincy.

Before Pembroke's big sixth inning, North Quincy picked up three more runs in their half of the fifth. With one out, Egan reached on an error and Helfrich singled to left field. Evan Feinberg popped out for the second out, but Joe Dwyer singled to knock in Egan to make it a 10-5 contest. A wild pitch put the game at 10-6 when Dwyer scored.

Despite the loss, Edgerly came away with several positives from a team that is maturing with every game played.

"We hit real well," he said. "We scored six runs. My whole thing is to score one run an inning and we were close to that today. We have kids who are committed to baseball, committed to the program and committed to the philosophy the coaches are putting out there. They're right there and hopefully we'll see some results the next couple of weeks."

Presidents Edged By Harbormen, 6-5

By BILL GRIFFIN

They were close.

The story was ready to be written. They were two outs away. Quincy led by a run with one out in the seventh. Kenny Sorensen had pitched six tough innings and would earn the win. Padraig Geaney had rapped out three hits, the last of which drove in the go-ahead run. The Presidents would go to 4-0 and put up an early-season statement win against a defending state champion.

Then it all changed so swiftly. Hingham pushed across two runs on a double which dribbled just fair down the third baseline, a single, two errors and a safety squeeze to edge Quincy, 6-5 in a Patriot League Keenan Division contest Friday afternoon at Adams Field.

"We've gained experience over the last two years, but we are still a young team," said coach Pat Bryan. "We still need to do the little things to put away a game against a good team. But the bottom line is what the kids said after the game: We're playing good baseball. We're playing well as a team. We lost a tough game to a good team team."

There were two key plays to Hingham's rally. The first was a trickler which bounced tantalizingly along the line at third and snuck just inside the bag. It barely reached the left-field grass for a double which tied the game at 5-5. The second was the safety squeeze by winning pitcher Liam Richmond which scored the game-winner. A bunt and a bleeder. String them together and they would not reach 100 feet, but they were enough.

"If the ball rolls foul, the whole inning changes," said Bryan. "We should have expected the squeeze with the pitcher up. Next time, we will."

The bright side to all this was it was the just fourth game in a long season for Quincy (3-1). The goal is still the tournament. This is a game from which the Presidents can learn. Hingham (2-2) is the defending. Division 2 State Champions. The Harbormen were ranked No.1 in the pre-season Globe South poll. They are a favorite to win the league title. Quincy showed well that they can play and play well with the best.

"The important thing is we're playing good baseball," said Bryan. "We swung the bats well and the pitching was good. We need to field a couple of ground balls better, but we played solid defense for most of the game."

Sorensen deserved the win. He fought his way through six innings, giving four runs, three earned, and nine hits. He struck out six and stranded nine baserunners. He is a tough kid who does not give in. He mixed his arm angles and speeds (four of the strikeouts came on the change-up) and whenever Hingham threatened to open up its lead, Sorensen shut down the inning with a clutch pitch.

"He's a gutsy kid and he makes the big pitch. He threw strikes and he had a good pick-off move which worked for him again," said Bryan.

Geaney would have been a fitting hero. He was right on the ball all day, drilling three hits in three trips. He had an RBI and a run scored, and was the central figure in Quincy's two-run fifth which put the Presidents up, 5-4.

"Padraig has hit the ball well all season for us," said Bryan.

Quincy trailed, 4-3 entering the fifth. Johnny Marsinelli (two hits, two walks in four trips) and Matt Davis singled. They moved along on a balk and Robbie Munroe drilled a sacrifice on a frozen rope to center to tie the game at 4-4. After Davis stole third with a perfect slide, Geaney slapped a soft liner through the right side to score Davis for the 5-4 lead which held up until Hingham's late rally.

"We swung the bats well and we got big hits. Marsinelli, Geaney and Tyler Beach all came through with key hits for us," said Bryan.

Quincy had eight hits. Davis and Beach, who was 9-15 through four games, each had a single and a run scored. Greg Paulo had a single and an RBI while Munroe had a sacrifice fly and two RBI.

Mike Carnavale made a couple of fine plays at third on a tapper and a hot smash for Quincy's defense which held firm until the final inning.

After Hingham went up, 2-0, Quincy tied it in the third on hits from Beach and Marsinelli and an RBI ground ball from Munroe. After the Harbormen made it 3-2, Quincy tied it in the fourth when Geaney singled, stole second and scored on Paulo's single Geaney's third hit gave Quincy's its first lead of the game at 5-4 in the fifth and there it stood until it slipped away in the face of Hingham's late rally.

"The good thing is that it is early, and we can learn from it. There's a long way to go and we'll do the little things we have to do to close out games like this," said Bryan.

Earlier last week, Quincy downed Scituate, 12-5. Beach went 3-3 while Munroe and Bobby Salvucci, who had a memorable 12-pitch at bat against Hingham in the bottom of the seventh, each had a pair of hits. Geaney had a hit and a run scored. Marsinelli and Davis each scored twice. Mike Gendreau earned the win on the mound for the Presidents.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, April 9, at 12:45 a.m., Officers Robert Connell and Tara Waters responded to a suspicious incident in the Furnace Brook Parkway/Newport Avenue area. The caller, an 82-year-old female, stated she could hear someone at her back door.

As Officer Connell arrived on scene with his headlights out to avoid detection, he quietly approached the address. He spotted a male walk quickly out from between two homes. At this time, Officer Waters arrived on scene and the two officers then stepped from their cruisers to question the male.

When asked for identification, the male suspect said he did not have anything with him. When asked where he was coming from, the suspect said "Lynn." The suspect appeared to be under the influence of drugs, having difficulty holding himself up and unable to construct coherent sentences.

The suspect reached into his pants pocket and was told to remove the hand. Officer Connell asked the suspect if he had any weapons on him and he stated "no." The suspect then reached for his pocket again. Fearing the suspect could have a weapon and was not obeying directions, Officer Connell then conducted a pat frisk of the suspect.

In the process of checking the bulky contents of the suspect's pants pocket, three white pills fell onto the ground from the pocket. The officer asked the suspect what they were and he stated "I don't know; they were already there," pointing to the ground. Officer Connell then turned out the suspect's pocket and found a fourth pill identical to the three that had fallen to the ground. The suspect could not offer an explanation for why he had the pills in his possession. The suspect was then handcuffed and placed into a cruiser. The pills were determined to be 1mp Alprazolan (Xanax).

LT. DAN MINTON

The officers then interviewed the caller in her home. She appeared to be visually shaken by the incident. She said she was watching TV when she heard a loud bang on the back door. The banging continued so she got up to investigate the noise. At this point, from inside the door, she asked "What's going on? Who is it?" She heard a muffled response, which prompted her to call the police. While she was on the phone with a police dispatcher, the banging continued and did not stop until a few moments before the officers arrived. The victim told the officers she believed the suspect was trying to get inside her home.

Officer Connell then spoke with the suspect after giving him his Miranda rights. (Right to remain silent, etc.) When asked where he was coming from a second time, the suspect responded "Revere." The officer asked the suspect if he was behind any of the homes in the area and the suspect told the officers he was just coming from "Taunton" and then invoked his right to counsel, which ended the interrogation of the suspect.

The suspect, a 32-year-old Quincy resident, who actually lived a few doors away, was charged with attempted breaking and entering and possession of a class C drug. Nice Work!

Scams Prevention: Due to the volume of recent calls, the Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit will be conducting seminars throughout the city to discuss the various types of scams. The initial seminars will be held at senior citizen buildings or for senior groups. I will cover scams initiated via the mail, the Internet, the telephone, as well as those in person.

Anyone interested in scheduling a seminar should contact Lt. Daniel Minton at 617-745-5719 or at dminton@quincyma.gov.

Fake IRS Collectors Are Calling: The Treasury Inspector General for Taxpayer Administration (TIGTA) warns scammers posing as Internal Revenue Service (IRS) officials are contacting people by telephone claiming they owe taxes. The caller demands a prepaid debit card, wire transfer, or credit car for payment. If the person doesn't comply, the caller threatens to arrest or deport them, or take away their driver's license or business. Thousands of victims have lost money to these tax scammers.

Keep this in mind. The IRS contacts people about unpaid takes, but it is done by mail – never on the phone. To protect yourself from imposters who call claiming to be from the IRS, do not provide any account or other personal information. Hang up the phone. Do not wire money to a person or company you do not know. Once you wire money, you cannot get it back. If you owe – or think you owe – federal taxes, call the IRS at 800-829-1040. You can also visit the IRS website at irs.gov.

Community Developer Recognized At Two Regional Conferences

Melissa Horr Pond, an assistant planner in the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development, was recently honored with two awards.

On March 29th, Pond was presented an award at the South Shore Leadership Conference in Brockton recognizing her achievement of "Outstanding Leadership in Strengthening Community" for her work with the "Opportunity Quincy" initiative. Planning Director Dennis Harrington attended the ceremony. With the award came an Official Citation from the Massachusetts State Senate, offered by Sen. Thomas Kennedy.

MELISSA HORR POND, an assistant planner in the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development, was recently honored with two awards. With her is Planning Director Dennis Harrington.

Sixteen months ago, Pond launched the "Opportunity Quincy" initiative – a public services campaign, focused on engaging leaders to impact youth career pathways and educational success through collaboration, capacity building, and communication. Much has been accomplished during that time. By next month, more than 120 leaders from cross-sector organizations will have engaged with the initiative through eleven events, including four service fairs, three focus groups, three capacity building training workshops, and participation in Project Bread's the Walk for Hunger on May 4th.

Additionally, Pond has infused the initiative with a social media strategy engaging an average of 120 followers through three channels with conversing on Twitter; sharing timely event details; grant opportunities; inspiration on Facebook; and collecting resources on a variety of related topics on Pinterest.

Pond's second recognition came in the form of a presentation she gave at the National Community Development Association (NCDA) Region 1 conference on April 2nd in Worcester, alongside Glennon as moderator for the workshop, "Impact Your Community with Social Media: Empower, Motivate, & Activate." Region 1 includes entitlement grant communities from all across New England.

Robert Corley Receives Award

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. Executive Director Robert Corley recently received the "Emerging Leader Award" from the National NeighborWorks® Association (NNA) at the Annual NeighborWorks® Executive Directors Presentation held in Washington, D.C.

Presented annually to outstanding practitioners in the field of housing and community development, the award recognizes a NeighborWorks executive director "whose energy and innovation has improved the value of his or NeighborWorks organization and the network."

"Since becoming executive director, Rob has spearheaded a number of new initiatives," said NeighborWorks Southern Mass. President Normand Grenier, who served as the agency's director from 1986 to 2009 before becoming its board president. "He has also become a leading voice on housing issues at both the state and national level."

Corley joined the agency in 1997, serving as director of real estate before becoming executive director in 2009.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might need to do a bit more investigating before making a career move. You do best when you come armed with the facts. A personal matter still needs tending to.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creativity plus your good business sense once more combine to give you an important advantage in a difficult workplace situation. An ally proves his or her loyalty.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Avoid rushing into something just because it offers a break from your usual routine. Take things a step at a time to be sure you're moving in the right direction.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Bouncing back from a disappointing incident isn't easy, but you should find a welcome turn of events emerging. Spend the weekend with someone special.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) An incomplete project needs your attention before someone else takes it over and uses it to his or her advantage. There'll be lots of time for fun and games once you get it done.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Doubts involving a potential career change need to be resolved quickly so they don't get in the way when you feel you're finally ready to make the big move.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Looking to blame someone for a workplace problem could backfire if it turns out you've got the wrong "culprit." Best to get more facts before acting on your assumptions.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Patience might still be called for until you're sure you finally have the full story that eluded you up till now. A trusted associate could offer valuable guidance.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Look into your recent behavior to see if you could have caused the coolness you might now be sensing from a loved one. If so, apologize and set things straight.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Easing up on your social activities allows you to focus more of your energies on a long-neglected personal matter. You can get back into party mode by the weekend.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A dispute with a colleague can be resolved peacefully once you both agree to be more flexible about the positions you've taken and allow for more open-minded discussions.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Volunteering to take on added responsibilities could be a risky way to impress the powers-that-be. Do it only if you're sure you won't be swept away by the extra workload.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your sense of self-awareness allows you to make bold moves with confidence.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

On Easter Sunday, April 20, the annual Easter Sunrise Worship service will be held on Wollaston Beach between the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs. In case of rain the services will be held inside the Squantum Yacht Club. The service will begin at 6:30 a.m. and will be led by members of the Clergy Association with much from the brass band of the Quincy Corps of the Salvation Army.

All are welcome to attend both of these services.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church Easter Vigil

The Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St. in Wollaston, will celebrate the Easter Vigil Saturday, April 19, at 7:30 p.m.

"With the exception of the Episcopalians, very few Protestants have had the opportunity to experience the Easter Vigil," said the church's pastor, the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden. "I think this is really unfortunate. The vigil is one of the most ancient and certainly one of the most dramatic celebrations of the church year. It's my very favorite worship service."

Dating from the earlier years of the Christian Church, the vigil literally leads the congregation from Lent to Easter. It does so through word, song, and, most importantly, symbols that refer to scripture. Because many people today are unfamiliar with symbolic interpretation, explanatory notes are provided.

"I hope people will take the time to read the explanations," Jarek-Glidden said. "The vigil is a rich, wonderful service on its own, but when a person understands the meaning behind the ritual it becomes even richer."

People planning to attend the vigil should expect the unexpected, because the Easter Vigil is a service unlike any other. Everyone planning to attend the Easter Vigil is asked to please bring a flashlight and to wear comfortable walking shoes, for example.

"I realize that a flashlight sounds like an odd thing to bring to a worship service, but believe me a flashlight is pretty essential – It's simply a modern version of the traditional candles." Jarek-Glidden explained. "Quincy Community United Methodist Church has chosen to use flashlights for safety reasons. There will be some available in case anyone forgets to bring one.

"Comfortable shoes are also important because some walking is involved – a short staircase. People then have the option of continuing with the traditional vigil, which includes more walking, or the non-traditional in which people remain seated in one place. Both groups then join together for the major portion of the service."

The Easter Vigil is very much a participatory worship experience and the more a person puts in to the vigil, the more that person will get out of it.

"I think a friend of mine put it best when he said 'I used to think I "got" Easter here,' and he pointed to his forehead," Jarek-Glidden said. "'But now,' he continued, 'I get Easter here,' and pointed to his heart. That's what the Easter Vigil is all about and everyone is cordially invited to share in this wonderful experience."

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is conveniently located diagonally from the Wollaston T station, and is fully handicapped accessible. A handicapped entrance is located in the front, the door closest to the flagpole. Each week a coffee hour follows worship.

For more information please call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Quincy Prayer Breakfast May 1

MEMBERS OF THE Quincy Prayer Breakfast Committee recently joined at the Mayor's Office for a planning meeting in anticipation of the May 1st event. From left: Rick Doane, executive director, Interfaith Social Services; Rev. Eric Hillegas, St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church and Committee Chairman; Mayor Tom Koch, Captain Nicole Ross, Quincy Salvation Army; Captain Timothy Ross, Quincy Salvation Army; and David Wooster, executive director Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion / Quincy Crisis Center.

Coinciding with the National Day of Prayer, Quincy's Prayer Breakfast is coming up on Thursday May 1st.

The event is sponsored by Mayor Thomas P. Koch and will feature local speakers from a variety of faith traditions.

"Quincy is blessed to have a vibrant and diverse religious culture, and this event is a way to bring those people together in a spirit of unity and charity," said Mayor Koch. "It is also a way to recognize and enhance the work that Interfaith Social Services, the Quincy Crisis Center and the Salvation Army perform each and every day for the citizens of this great City," Koch added.

For the past four years the breakfast has brought together representatives from many houses of worship, government officials, as well as local leaders in business, community and religious life. The event is organized by a steering committee of religious leaders and interested community members.

"The participation in our planning meetings has been stronger than ever, and this year's program will showcase an impressive spectrum of Quincy's faith communities," said committee chairperson Rev. Eric Hillegas of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church. "The Mayor's Prayer Breakfast is a vital demonstration of shared fellowship and service by Quincy's houses of worship. I'm encouraged and excited to see representatives from such diverse faith communities join together to pursue the well-being of our city, and to support the work of our social service agencies."

Proceeds from the event will benefit The Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion/Quincy Crisis Center, Salvation Army and Interfaith Social Services. Rev. David Wooster executive director for the Sanger Center also commended the committee's efforts. "Partnership, community, neighbors – this is what Quincy is about and the Prayer Breakfast is a reminder that these things come from our faith. The Prayer Breakfast is a welcome antidote to the flood of bad news that sometimes distracts us from the good that is happening in our community every day."

"The Prayer Breakfast is very special," said Rick Doane Interfaith Social Services' executive director. "It highlights the important role that faith plays in our community. It is always so uplifting to have such a large gathering of people representing a variety of faiths all under one roof. To top it all off, everyone is there to also help raise money for our neighbors in need. What a perfect recipe for a joyous event."

Captain Timothy Ross, Corps Commanding Officer of The Salvation Army stated, "The Prayer Breakfast is a wonderful opportunity that brings the citizens of Quincy, who are the fabric of our community, together under the umbrella of many faiths to share together in prayer as well as provide funds that help support our neighbors in their hour of need."

Everyone is invited to attend The Prayer Breakfast; it is not limited to Quincy residents.

The breakfast is Thursday May 1 at The Sons of Italy in Quincy. The menu will feature a full breakfast buffet with vegetarian option.

The program and breakfast run from 7 to 8:30 a.m. Tickets are $35 for an individual ticket and $250 for a table of 10.

To order tickets online go to: www.InterfaithSocialServices.org. For additional information, or to order tickets over the phone, call 617-847-6967.

Interfaith Social Services 40th Annual South Shore Walk/Run April 26

Interfaith Social Services' 40th Annual South Shore Walk/Run will take place, rain or shine, on Saturday April 26th at The Kennedy Center on East Squantum Street in North Quincy.

All Walkers and Runners must pre-register at: southshorewalkrun2014.eventbrite.com.

The Walk has become an annual tradition for many families on the South Shore. For the past 40 years Interfaith has hosted the fundraiser to benefit thousands of South Shore families in need of food, counseling and emergency assistance. This year they have added a professionally timed 5K run to the festivities which already include: food, music, raffles, kids' games, a photo booth and face painting.

The Walk has grown substantially over the past four decades. Originally called Protestant Social Service Bureau (PSSB), Interfaith was founded in 1947 by Quincy's religious leaders. The organization's mission focused on mental health counseling and serving at-risk children. In 1975 the agency branched out and established programs to alleviate the significant challenges that their clients faced. That year they opened the Pantry Shelf food program, which has grown to become one of the largest emergency food pantries in Greater Boston today; serving over 18,000 South Shore residents every year.

When The Pantry Shelf opened in 1975 local churches offered to host an annual fundraising Walkathon to support the fledgling food pantry. Each year a different church hosted the event. This caused The Walk's route to transition between various communities including: Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Hingham. In the 1990's PSSB changed their name to Interfaith Social Services to reflect that the organization was not affiliated with a religion and that its focus was on providing emergency assistance to those in need. In that same time period the Walk found its permanent home in Quincy. For almost two decades the event has been held in Quincy's Wollaston Beach, Squantum and Marina Bay neighborhoods.

What started as a ten mile route is now only three miles. "This change was made a few years ago to make the Walk more accessible to families with children," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "This is a very family oriented event with activities like kids games and bouncy houses. Those parents who had to push a stroller for ten miles welcomed the change to a three mile route."

"For one day every year our walkers fill up the sidewalks in Quincy," said Doane. "That visual of hundreds

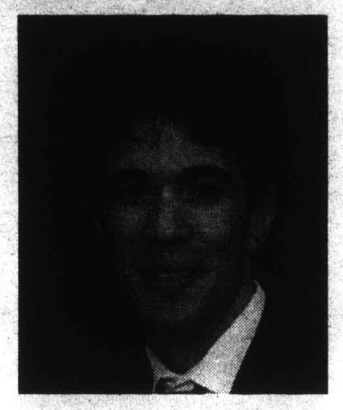
OBITUARIES

William L. McGuinness

A funeral service for William L. "Billy" McGuinness of Boston and formerly South Weymouth will be held today (Thursday) at 10:30 a.m. in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mr. McGuinness died April 12.

He was fun loving and always the life of the party. He loved to travel and enjoyed many family vacations. He graduated from South Weymouth High School and was in management for D'Angelo's Sandwich Shops at various greater Boston locations. He also worked in the office for Campbell-McCabe, Inc.



WILLIAM L. McGUINNESS

Besides the love he had for his family, Mr. McGuinness also cherished his dog, "Happy."

Beloved son of the late James McGuinness and Dorothy (Smith). Loving brother of Jay McGuinness and his wife Theresa of Quincy and Jack McGuinness and his fiancé Christine Reardon of Weymouth. Uncle of Kelli, Andrew and Matthew McGuinness. Soul mate to Charlie McCabe of Boston.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at the funeral home.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Office of Development, 330 Brookline Ave., Boston MA 02215.

Gertrude C. Lowe

Funeral services for Gertrude C. (Bridges) Lowe of Quincy will be privately held.

Mrs. Lowe died Sunday.

She worked for more than 30 years in the Quincy Public School system as a lunch matron and retired at the age of 83. She loved spending time with her family and playing the piano.

Beloved wife of 60 years of Robert I. Lowe of Hingham. Loving mother of Deborah S. O'Neill and her husband Michael of Weymouth, Craig P. Lowe and Leslie Blevins of Norwood, and Susan L. Shea and her husband John of Bridgewater. Dear sister of Barbara Potter and her husband Harry of Hampden and the late Gladys North, Marjorie Moore, Paul Bridges and Benjamin Bridges. Cherished "Grandma" of Sarah.

Funeral arrangements were made by McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, Weymouth.

Memorial donations may be made to South Shore Elder Services, 1515 Washington St., Braintree, MA 02184.

Angela L. Mosesso

A funeral Mass for Angela L. (Baldassini) Mosesso, a lifelong Quincy resident, was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Mosesso died Monday from breast cancer.

She was a kind, selfless, giving, generous person who always put her family first. She believed that motherhood was the greatest gift in this life and thoroughly enjoyed her nine grandchildren. Mrs. Mosesso was a homebody who loved to cook, enjoyed entertaining family and friends, TV game shows, daily newspapers, the Jumble, Hollywood gossip magazines, books, yard sales, talk radio, people watching and all genres of music. Now she is everyone's angel.

Devoted daughter of the late Angelina and Joseph Baldassini. Beloved wife of Albert N. Mosesso, her husband of 63 years. Loving mother of Jacqueline T. Grohoski and her husband Ed, Angela M. Mosesso, Lauren J. Sharp, Albert, Michael, and Joseph Mosesso and his wife Margarida. Also survived by her sisters Rosalie and Genevieve and brothers Joseph and Philip. Preceded in death by her beloved daughter Sheryl, daughter-in-law Beverly, son-in-law Steven E. Sharp, sisters Lucy, Yolande, Terry, and Rita and brother Frank.

The Mosesso family would like to thank the caring and wonderful staff at Hope-McCarthy Care Hospice in Sandwich, South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, and Quincy Heights.

Funeral arrangements were made by Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St., Quincy.

Private interment.

Memorial donations may be made to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute or a hospice or food bank of your choice.

Mariellen P. Murphy

A celebration of life for Mariellen P. Murphy of Squantum will be held Saturday from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. at Granite Links in Quincy.

Ms. Murphy died peacefully Monday evening.

She loved being near the water; she enjoyed boating and spending time with her family. She was a member of the North Quincy High, Class of 1976, and a graduate of Stonehill College.

Cherished wife of Paul Bimmler of Quincy and devoted mother of Kristen Bimmler of Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Francis J. Long

A memorial Mass for Francis J. "Frank" Long of Bethlehem, PA and formerly Quincy was celebrated Monday at the Church of Notre Dame of Bethlehem.

Mr. Long died April 8 in the comfort of his home.

A native of Quincy, he was the son of the late Michael and Mary Norah (Joyce) Long. After graduation from Boston College High School, he began his career with Bethlehem Steel in 1948 as an apprentice marine pipefitter and plumber in the company's former Fore River Shipyard. Following graduation from the apprenticeship program in 1952, he attended Northeastern University, and graduated in 1955 with a BA degree in economics.

His position in the marine construction group brought with it membership in the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, where he became the founder and first chairman of a research panel of the society's ship production committee, studying human resource innovation in private and public marine construction and repair environments. In 1986 he retired from Bethlehem Steel as general manager of human resources for the corporation's marine construction group.

Upon retirement from Bethlehem Steel, he continued as the panel's chairman, as well as its program manager in his role of principle consultant to the Bethlehem, PA firm of Win/Win Strategies.

A lifelong woodworking hobbyist, his fascination with woodturning led him to the founding in 1998 of the Lehigh Valley Woodturners, a local chapter of the American Association of Woodturners. He served as the chapter's president until 2002. Mr. Long was also a member of the Church of Notre Dame of Bethlehem.

LEGAL NOTICE

CITY OF QUINCY
IN COUNCIL

ORDER NO. 2014-094

ORDERED:

BE IT ORDAINED, that the City of Quincy Zoning Ordinance be amended to include the following: Add Section 6.9A MEDICAL MARIJUANNA HOME CULTIVATION and amend Section 10 to include definition of MEDICAL MARIJUANA HOME CULTIVATION, as detailed below respectively.

6.9 A MEDICAL MARIJUANA HOME CULTIVATION

6.9 A.1 Purpose. It is the purpose of this section titled Medical Marijuana Home Cultivation to address and mitigate the secondary effects of Medical Marijuana

Home Cultivation that are referenced and defined herein. Secondary effects have been shown to include increased crime, adverse impacts on public health, adverse impacts on business climate of the City, adverse impacts on the property values of residential and commercial properties, adverse impacts on the quality of life in the City. All of said secondary impacts are adverse to the health, safety and general welfare of the City and its inhabitants. It is the purpose of this ordinance to establish specific standards and procedures for local licensing of medical marijuana cultivation sites, cultivation operations.

The provisions of this Ordinance have neither the purpose nor intent of imposing a limitation on the content of any communicative matter or materials. Similarly, it is not the purpose or intent of this Ordinance to restrict or deny access by adults to Medical Marijuana or to other related matter or materials that are protected by the Constitution of the United States of America or of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, not to restrict or deny rights that distributors of such materials may have to sell or distribute such materials. Neither is it the purpose or intent of this Ordinance to legalize the sale, rental, or distribution of illicit or other illegal matter or materials. It is not the intent of this Ordinance to in any way interfere with bona fide doctor-patient relationship or require unnecessary or arbitrary disclosure of protected health care information.

6.9A.2 General. Medical Marijuana Home Cultivation may be authorized by special permit to be issued by the City of Quincy's Commissioner of Public Health upon proof of hardship requiring such cultivation. The following regulations shall apply to Medical Marijuana Home Cultivation as defined on this Ordinance.

6.9A.3 Hardship. A hardship under this Ordinance shall be defined using the criteria set forth in 105 CMR 725.035 Sections (A) and (B). Incorporated herein by reference.

6.9A.4 Privacy Rights. The Commissioner of Public Health shall not share any information obtained during the Permitting process outlined herein with any other agency in local, state or federal government, nor with the public. The privacy rights of bona fide patients shall be protected at all times, and the Commissioner of Public Health shall be charged with implanting appropriated procedures and safeguards to ensure said privacy.

6.9.A.5 Law Enforcement Access. Upon the showing of probable cause that a crime has been committed, as determined by the Commissioner of Public Health in written findings, the address of a home cultivation site may be shared with the Quincy Police Chief. The only crimes for which disclosure of said address is permissible are the distribution or manufacturing of a controlled substance. Upon said showing, the only information which may be shared with the Quincy Police Chief under this Ordinance is the physical address of the cultivation site. No other information relative the name of the patient or medical condition of the patient, or the name of the physician, or any other protected medical information which may be in the possession of the Commissioner of Public Health shall be disseminated for any purpose.

6.9A.6 Filing Fee. A non-refundable registration fee of $500 (Five Hundred Dollars) is due and payable to the City of Quincy upon application for a Home Cultivation Permit, unless waived by the Commissioner of Public Health pursuant financial hardship criteria to be promulgated in writing by the Commissioner within 30 (Thirty) days of passing the Ordinance.

6.9A.7 Term of License. Any local Permit issued pursuant to this Ordinance shall be valid for a period of two years from the date of issuance. Any renewal of the license shall be governed by the standards and procedures set forth in this Ordinance and any regulations adopted pursuant thereto by the Commissioner of Public Health.

6.9A.8 Conflict of Laws. In the event of any conflict between the provisions of this Ordinance and any other applicable state or local law, the stricter provision, as deemed by the Zoning Administrator, shall control.

6.9A.9 Violation. In the event that a Medical Marijuana Home Cultivation Site is discovered to be operating in the City of Quincy without Special Permit, the property owner shall be liable for a fine up to $10,000, to be levied at the discretion of Commissioner of Public Health.

6.9A.10 Prohibition. No Medical Marijuana Home Cultivation Site special permit shall be issued to any person convicted of violating the provisions of G.L. c. 199, s. 63, or G.L. c. 94c, or similar laws in other jurisdictions. Any applicant for licensure under this Ordinance must allow for a criminal background check which includes jurisdictions beyond Massachusetts.

6.9.A.11 Separation. No Medical Marijuana Home Cultivation Site shall be located within 1,500 (Fifteen Hundred) linear feet of any school or child care establishment.

10 DEFINITIONS

Medical Marijuana Home Cultivation Site: Shall include and be defined as follows:

Any property, commercial, industrial, residential, or other having as any portion of its uses, indoor or outdoor, the growth and/or cultivation of medical marijuana, or the manufacturing or sale of marijuana infused products, that is not a registered and licensed Medical Marijuana Dispensary with the Department of Public Health.

105 CMR: Department of Public Health

(3) A copy of the dispensary agent's driver license, government-issued identification card, or other verifiable identity document acceptable to the Department;
(4) An attestation that the individual will not engage in the diversion marijuana;
(5) A non-refundable application fee; and
(6) Any other information required by the Department.

LEGAL NOTICE

(C) A RMD executive registered with the Department of Criminal Justice Information Systems pursuant to 105 CMR 725.100 (A)(7) must submit to the Department of Criminal Offender Record Information (CORI) report for each individual for whom the RMD seeks a dispensary agent registration, obtained within 30 calendar days prior to submission.

(D) A RMD must notify the Department no more than one business day after a dispensary agent ceases to be associated with the RMD. The Dispensary agent's registration shall be immediately void when he or she is no longer associated with the RMD.

(E) A registration card will be valid for one year from the date of issue, and may be renewed, in a form and manner determined by the Department, on a annual basis by meeting the requirements in 105 CMR 725.030 (A)-(C).

(F) After obtaining a registration card for a dispensary agent, a RMD is responsible for notifying the Department, in a form and manner by the Department, as soon as possible, but in any event, within five business days after any changes to the information that the RMD was previously required to submit to the Department, or after discovery that a registration card has been lost or stolen.

(G) A dispensary agent must carry his or her registration card at all times while in possession of marijuana, including at all times while at a RMD or while transporting marijuana.

(H) A dispensary agent affiliated with multiple RMDs must be registered as a dispensary agent by each RMD.

725.035: Hardship Cultivation Registration

(A) A qualifying patient registered with the Department pursuant 105 CMR 728.015 may apply for a hardship cultivation registration if such patient can demonstrate that his or her access to a RMD is limited by:

1. Verified financial hardship or;
2. Physical incapacity to access reasonable transportation, as demonstrated by an inability to use public transportation or drive oneself, lack of personal caregiver with a reliable source of transportation, and lack of a RMD that will deliver marijuana to the patient's or personal caregiver's primary address; or
3. Lack of a RMD within reasonable distance of the patient's residence and lack of a RMD that will deliver marijuana to the patient's or personal caregiver's primary address.

105 CMR: Department of Public Health

(B) To obtain a hardship cultivation registration, a registered qualifying patient shall, in a form and manner determined by the Department, submit the following;

1. A non-refundable registration fee, unless waived pursuant to 105 CMR 725.015(A)(7);
2. Information supporting a claim that access is limited due to one or more of the circumstances listed on 105 CMR 725.035 (A);
3. An explanation including lack of feasible alternatives to mitigate the limitation claimed under 105 CMR 725.035(A);
4. A description and address of the single location that shall be used for the cultivation of marijuana, which shall be either the registered qualifying patient's or one personal caregiver's primary residence;
5. Written explanation of how the qualifying patient will cultivate marijuana in accordance with the requirements of 105 CMR 725.035;
6. A description of the device or system that will be used to ensure security and prevent diversion of the marijuana plants being cultivated;
7. Written acknowledgement of the limitations on his or her authorization to cultivate, posses, and use marijuana for medical purposes in the Commonwealth; and
8. Any other information required by the Department.

(C) The Department shall review and approve or deny an application for hardship cultivation registration within 30 calendar days of receipt of a completed application.

(D) A registered qualifying patient with a hardship cultivation registration, or his or her personal caregiver(s), may cultivate only at the location specified in the application approved by the Department.

(E) At any given location, cultivation may occur pursuant to only one hardship cultivation registration, absent proof that more than one registered qualifying patient resides at the location.

(F) A hardship cultivation registration will be valid for one year fro the date of issue, and may be renewed, in a form and manner determined by the Department, on an annual basis by meeting the requirements in 105 CMR 725.035(B).

(G) A hardship cultivation registration shall allow the registered qualifying patient or his or her personal caregiver(s) to cultivate a limited number of plants sufficient to maintain a 60-day supply of marijuana solely for that patient's use, or as further specified by the Department.

(H) Cultivation and storage of marijuana shall be in an enclosed, locked area accessible only to the registered qualifying patient or hi or her personal caregiver(s), subject to 105 CMR 725.650. Marijuana shall not be visible from the street or other public areas.

105 CMR Department of Public Health

(I) A registered qualifying patient or his or her personal caregiver(s) Cultivating marijuana pursuant to a hardship cultivation registration shall adhere to industry best practices in the cultivation of marijuana plants and storage of finished product, and any standards specified by the Department.

(J) A registered qualifying patient and his or her personal caregiver(s) is prohibited from selling, bartering, giving away or distributing in any manner marijuana or paraphernalia.

(L) A registered qualifying patient who received written certification of a debilitating medical condition from a physician prior to enactment of 105-CMR 725.000, prior to the Department accepting applications for hardship cultivation registration, and who used that written certification as a limited cultivation registration, must apply for a hardship cultivation registration according to the procedures set out in 105 CMR 725.035(B) no later than January 1, 2014, if he or she intends to continue to cultivate marijuana; however the initial limited cultivation registration will remain valid until the application for the hardship cultivation registration card is approved or denied by the Department.

(M) After obtaining a hardship cultivation registration, a registered qualifying patient is responsible for notifying the Department, in a form and manner determined by the Department, within five business days after any changes to the information that he or she or his or her personal caregiver(s) was previously required to submit to the Department.

(N) A registered qualifying patient with a hardship cultivation registration, or his or her personal caregiver(s) if applicable, must have the registration available at the site of cultivation. Such registration must be made available upon request of the Department or other government agency acting within their lawful authority.

(O) A registered qualifying patient with a hardship cultivation registration, or his or her personal caregiver(s) if applicable, is prohibited from purchasing marijuana from a RMD, provided however that such individuals may purchase seeds.

725.100: Registration of Registered Marijuana Dispensaries

(A) General Requirements

(1) A RMD is required to incorporate pursuant to M.G.L. c. 180 and to maintain the corporation in good standing with the Secretary of the Commonwealth. A RMD must operate on a non-profit basis for the benefit of registered qualifying patients. Such corporation must ensure that revenue of the RMD is used solely in furtherance of its non-profit purpose.

Lynch Event At Port 305 Restaurant

The Quincy Friends of Cong. Stephen Lynch will host an event in his honor Wednesday, April 23 from 6 to 8 p.m. at Port 305 Restaurant, 305 Victory Rd., Quincy.

Suggested contribution: $125, $250 or $500.

Walk To Cure Diabetes May 31

The Quincy Public Schools, along with students, family and friends, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), will be participating in the third annual "JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes" on Saturday May 31 (rain or shine) at 10 a.m.

Walkers will begin gathering at 9:30 a.m. at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School. The 2.5-mile walk will proceed down Fenno Street (towards Hancock), a right on Wollaston, a right onto Elm Avenue, straight up Elm to East Elm towards the Beach, right on Quincy Shore Drive, right onto Rice Road and ending at Beechwood Knoll School.

This is the third year Quincy Public Schools has worked with JDRF to raise funds to help find a cure for a disease that affects millions of children and their families who struggle with this disease. Walk participants have raised more than $97,000.

JDRF is the largest organization that funds Type 1 diabetes research in the world and 80 percent of the funds they raise go directly to research.

More than 18 million Americans are affected by Type 1 diabetes and there are 15,000 children who are diagnosed with Type 1 (insulin dependent) and that number continues to grow.

With this walk, "Kids Helping Kids," kids and their families will be learning about diabetes, nutrition education and good physical fitness activities. They will also learn what it means to help fellow classmates with diabetes by becoming an advocate for a cure.

To Honor Three Quincy Marines Killed In Action During Vietnam War

Square Dedications Today

By SCOTT JACKSON

Squares memorializing three Marines from Quincy killed in action during the Vietnam War will be dedicated today (Thursday).

The day starts at 11 a.m. at 33 Ellis St. with the dedication of a memorial square for Marine Corps Private First Class James P. Hickey. Sen. John Keenan and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the vice chairman of the council's veterans services committee, will speak at the dedication.

The second ceremony will take place at 11:45 a.m. at 47 Vassell St., where a memorial square for Marine Corporal Lawrence E. Sirois will be dedicated. Rep. Tackey Chan and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, the chairwoman of the council's veterans services committee, will speak at that dedication.

The third ceremony is at 222 Billings Rd. at 12:30 p.m., where a square for Marine Lance Corporal Martin R. Keefe will be dedicated. Speaking at that dedication are Rep. Bruce Ayers and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

The day's events will conclude at 2 p.m. with a ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower, 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay. The special guest speaker for that event is attorney George C. McMahon, a retired Marine Corps captain and Bronze Star recipient.

Other speakers at the ceremony include Mayor Thomas Koch, U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch, and Keenan. The Rev. John Carl Swanson, the pastor of Union Congregational Church and a former U.S. Navy lieutenant, will deliver the invocation and benediction. Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, will open the ceremony and introduce the various dignitaries in attendance.

Ted DeCristofaro Park Cleanup Saturday

The Ward 2 Civic Association invites all residents to the cleaning of the Ted DeCristofaro Park on Saturday, April 26 at 12 noon.

Acting President Noel DiBona and Ward 2 City Councillor Brad Croall will be there with work gloves and landscaping supplies for all volunteers. Cleaning of the park will include flower planting, shrub pruning, and mulching beds.

The Ted DeCristofaro Park is located at the Southern Artery and Washington Street intersection.

Continues Through Next October

Adams Green Project Begins In Quincy Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

The 18-month long, $8 million Adams Green road and sidewalk improvement project began Tuesday and will continue on through next October.

On Tuesday, crews began to demolish one of the three traffic islands near the United First Parish Church; all three will be removed as part of the initial work. Temporary signage will also be installed as part of the initial phase of road and sidewalk work. Following that, sidewalks throughout the area will be torn up and replaced in phases.

The first phase of sidewalk work, scheduled for this spring and early summer, will take place on Washington Street adjacent to the United First Parish. During the second phase, set for this summer, the sidewalks on Coddington Street and Temple Street adjacent to the church will be replaced. The third phase, beginning this fall and continue into next spring, will see work along the odd-numbered side of Hancock Street (the City Hall side) from Dimmock to Granite Street, and on the even-numbered side of Hancock north of the church.

The fourth phase of the project, which will happen next summer, will see construction near the Granite Trust Building and in front of the Quincy Savings Bank and Adams Buildings, all on Hancock Street, and on Temple Street opposite the church. The final phase of the project, concluding in October 2015, will take place on Granite Street and Washington Street near the Thomas Crane Library and post office building.

Once completed the area will feature widened sidewalks, primarily paved with bricks on Hancock, Temple and Granite Streets, and concrete along Coddington Street. Trees will be planted and new streetlights, benches, and trash receptacles installed. The roads will all be repaved, with bicycle lanes and elevated crosswalks for pedestrians added. The project will be fully compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Traffic signals throughout the area will be resignalized, and a new signal will be added at the entrance to the busway leading into the Quincy Center MBTA station. That light will be synchronized with the light at the intersection of Hancock, Dimmock, and Adams Streets.

While no sidewalk work will take place on Maple Street, it is slated for repaving. Maple Street will also be reversed to make it a one-way road leading from Washington Street to Hancock Street.

The biggest change of the roadway and sidewalk improvement project is the closure of Hancock Street between City Hall and the United First Parish Church. The portion of the road will be closed next spring, though utility work may take place there this year. The closure of that portion of the will allow for the creation of the new Adams Green, a park that will connect City Hall to the church. When that portion of Hancock Street closes, Temple Street and Washington Street adjacent to the church will be converted from one-way to two-way roads.

A $7 million federal earmark is paying the bulk of the road and sidewalk work, with the city paying the remainder. The state Department of Transportation (MassDOT) is overseeing the project, which will be undertaken by Newton-based contractor A.R. Belli.

Quincy's Planning Department provided an update on the project last week at City Hall. A standing-room-only crowd than 50 residents, business owners, and elected officials attended the meeting. At the meeting, Planning Director Dennis Harrington said his department would work with the contractor and MassDOT to ensure the project has as minimal an impact as possible.

"We are obliged to do as much public outreach as we possibly can," Harrington said. "We do not want people to be unaware, uninformed, or misinformed. And we certainly don't want anyone to be inconvenienced. There will be inconvenience in an $8 million construction project, no doubt about that, but we don't want to create inconvenience for people."

"It's not going to rip up the downtown all in one day," he added. "It's going to be done in pieces and done in a very organized way."

Kristina Johnson, the city's director of transportation planning, noted that officials from the Planning Department met with scores of business owners leading up to the meeting.

"We made it the mission in our department to canvass over 100 businesses in Quincy Center," Johnson explained. "Folks got a personalized visit from a city official, whether it was me or somebody who worked for me, with a brief explanation of the project and ways to interact with the project."

Howard/Stein-Hudson Associates designed the roadway improvements. Robbie Burgess, an engineer with the firm, said the changes in roadways and traffic flow would encourage drivers who currently drive down Hancock Street through Quincy to access I-93 to instead use Burgin Parkway.

"We're trying to energize the center – make it better for bicyclists, pedestrians, and businesses," Burgess said.

At the meeting, a number of residents and business

To Alleviate Overcrowding At Lincoln-Hancock

New Sterling School May House Grades 4-8

By SCOTT JACKSON

Because of rising enrollment, the new Sterling Middle School could be built to house students in grades 4-8.

The School Committee, which is in the midst of submitting projected enrollment figures for the school to the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA), has considered moving fourth graders from the nearby Lincoln-Hancock Community School to the new middle school once it opens. (Sterling, along with Point Webster Middle School, already house fifth grade students.) Moving fourth graders to the new Sterling would relieve overcrowding at Lincoln-Hancock, Mayor Thomas Koch explained in a recent interview.

"What we are talking about right now, and it's been talked about in School Committee, is do we reconfigure that area of our city and make that building a [grade] 4 to 8 rather than a typical middle school?" Koch said.

"Lincoln-Hancock is busting at the seams. Clifford Marshall is busting at the seams. Point Webster has taken the fifth grade from Clifford Marshall and Sterling has the fifth grade from Lincoln-Hancock now because of the issues.

"As part of our paperwork the next step with the state we've got to provide enrollment projections, numbers, what configuration we think makes sense. Then we enter the discussion with the state, 'this is what we're thinking about doing.' They weigh in, make determinations."

The mayor added that the idea of putting fourth graders in the new school is only in the discussion phase currently.

"It's just in the discussion phase. The superintendent and his team raised it to the School Committee in subcommittee and subsequently talked about it at the last School Committee meeting," Koch said.

"This will be looked at along with redistricting going forward, because of the pockets of increase in families and the number of kindergartners coming in we've got to deal with. It's early but it's all on the table to talk about."

He explained that, if the School Committee and MSBA agree to put fourth graders in the new school, it could be designed to better accommodate them.

"If you're building, as we are, building a building new you can segregate areas and make this work well instead of trying to jam this in an old building later," Koch said.

The mayor said the enrollment information and other documents requested by the MSBA should be ready for submission next month. By the fall, the city should have a better idea of which configuration the new Sterling will have and work can begin in two years.

"I think once this paper-

Medicine Disposal At Police Station Saturday

In conjunction with the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), Impact Quincy and the Quincy Police Department will host a free medicine disposal day in the parking lot next to Quincy Police headquarters on Saturday, April 26 between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Studies show that youth can begin a lifetime of drug addiction by simply opening the home medicine cabinet. Plus, proper disposal of substances are vital to protect the water supply and the environment.

All residents are invited to bring unused or expired prescription and/or over-the-counter medications to the disposal event. The process is anonymous; you can blacken out your name or put everything into a plastic bag. Community members simply drive up to the event and give their substances to a police officer.

Needles (sharps) and aerosols cannot be disposed of at this event. However, Manet Community Health Center sponsors a sharps disposal kiosk at their 110 West Squantum St. location during regular business hours. In addition, the Quincy Police Department hosts a permanent drug disposal kiosk, available free, 24/7 for anonymous drop-off.

ON THE WATCH

Wristwatches are jewelry accessories that never go out of style, but their style constantly changes. Perhaps the biggest new favorites in women's watches are those designed as bracelets. Whether their bands consist of elegant retro bracelets or are large-link, leather, metal, plastic, or wood, there is a design to fit just about any taste. As far as the latest trend in watch dials, saturated and bright colors are definitely "in," especially emerald green, shades of blue, burgundy, red, and pink. Watch dials are also incorporating eye-catching, interesting designs, from floral motifs to complex kaleidoscope patterns. Finally, oversized watches still reign, but they're embellished with decidedly feminine touches, such as diamonds, that leave little doubt about whose wrist they rest upon.

History states that strapping little clocks to soldier's wrists probably was conceived during the Boer War or perhaps in the German navy during World War I making the wristwatch's place, both in military history and the top of men's jewelry. Watches were worn by women before the 20th century and as decoration rather than anything as practical as punctuality. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find an amazing selection of unique watches. Contact us at 617-773-3636 and get ready to do some shopping!

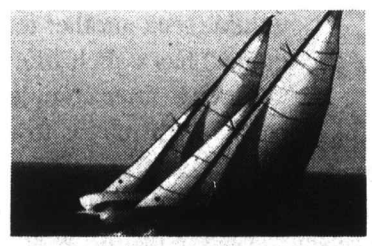
Finally ... you get to do what you want to do



The question now – what's the best way to pay for it? Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk to – someone you like, whose judgment you trust and respect – to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, we specialize in working with people like you. Here you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Including sometimes being able to make customized loans. Sound interesting? Like to talk? Call Angela Blanchard, Vice-President/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On May 10, 1749, the 10th and final volume of Henry Fielding's novel "Tom Jones" is printed. The serialized novel told the humorous story of the attempts of the illegitimate but charming Tom Jones to win his neighbor's daughter.

• On May 5, 1904, Boston Red Sox pitcher Cy Young (born Denton True Young) throws a perfect game against the Detroit Tigers. It was the first perfect game of the modern era; the last had been thrown by John Montgomery Ward in 1880. It was the second of three no-hitters that Young would throw, and the only perfect game.

• On May 9, 1926, according to their claims, polar explorer Richard E. Byrd and co-pilot Floyd Bennett fly over the North Pole in a triple-engine Fokker monoplane, the Josephine Ford. However, the discovery in 1996 of the diary that Byrd kept seemed to suggest that he and Bennett may have turned back 150 miles short of the pole because of an oil leak.

• On May 6, 1940, John Steinbeck is awarded the Pulitzer Prize for his novel "The Grapes of Wrath." The book traces the fictional Joad family of Oklahoma as they lose their family farm and move to California in search of a better life.

• On May 7, 1965, in a Clearwater, Fla., motel room, a bleary-eyed Keith Richards awoke, grabbed a tape recorder and laid down one of the greatest pop hooks of all time: The opening riff of "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction." He then promptly fell back to sleep.

• On May 8, 1984, claiming that its athletes will not be safe from protests and possible physical attacks, the Soviet Union announces that it will not compete in the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles. The boycott was a response to the decision of the United States to boycott the 1980 games held in Moscow.

• On May 11, 1997, IBM's supercomputer Deep Blue makes chess history by defeating chess champion Gary Kasparov. The Russian master conceded defeat after 19 moves in the sixth game of the tournament. It was the first defeat of a reigning world champion by a machine in tournament play.

Koch Undecided On 5th Term

Will he or won't he?

And will there be others?

Those questions are about Mayor Thomas Koch's political future and whether anyone else will seek the mayor's seat in 2015.

KOCH

Too early for political speculation?

Perhaps.

But you know how time goes . . . quick . . . especially in the political arena.

Just look at all the speculation surrounding race for the White House in 2016. So much discussion already about potential candidates for the Republican and Democratic nominations and Election Day 2016 is more than 31 months away.

So, in that context, Quincy's municipal election day next November is much closer than you might think.

Which brings us to Mayor Koch, who is four months into his fourth two-year term.

Will "hizzoner" make a bid for a fifth term next year?

"I haven't made a decision," he told us during a recent editorial board meeting. He also said he'll decide after the first of the new year.

"I take (mayoral terms) one at a time. I just started my fourth term," Koch said. "I still have the fire in my belly and we have a great team. We're making great progress, I think. We'll make that assessment (about running for another term) next year."

Asked what factors he'll consider in making a decision, Koch replied:

"If I feel there is more to do, that we're in a good place to continue to do some things or do some additional things and had the fire in the belly, I probably would (seek another term). But you know, (serving as mayor) has a shelf life. Those jobs aren't forever."

Koch – after completing this current term – would be the fifth mayor to serve at least eight years. The others: Jim Sheets, Charles Ross, Amelio Della Chiesa and Frank McCauley.

Recent history would suggest that being the incumbent is no shoe-in for re-election.

Of the last seven mayors before Koch, four lost bids for re-election while another three opted against running for another term. Those who stepped away from the mayor's office (and the number of terms served) are Jim McIntyre (3), Arthur Tobin (2) and Frank McCauley (4). The four who did not win re-election (and number of terms served) are Walter Hannon (2), Joe LaRaia (1), Jim Sheets (6) and Bill Phelan (3).

Some mayors have decided against seeking another term because they receive political appointments. McIntyre, for instance, was appointed counsel of the Massachusetts State Senate. He resigned his senate seat and finished out his third mayoral term but did not seek re-election.

There's already speculation surrounding next year's mayoral contest. And what's fueling talk is the four-year term. Last fall, voters approved a citizens' initiative petition doubling the current two-year term to four years. So, the winner of the 2015 mayor's race will serve the first four-year term in Quincy history.

That means those eying the mayor's seat will have to decide whether to make a run for it next year or wait until 2019. Four years can be a political eternity for office hopefuls.

Those who have been mentioned as potential mayoral candidates next year include former Mayor William Phelan, School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney and City Councillor Doug Gutro. Phelan was unseated by Koch in 2007 and lost a rematch in 2009. Mahoney challenged Koch in 2011 and was re-elected to the school committee in 2013. She would be at the half-way mark of her current term and would not risk losing her seat if she ran again for mayor in 2015.

Gutro may have mayoral aspirations as well and topped the at-large council race in 2013 in a quiet election without any opposition to the incumbents.

Of course, if Koch decides that eight is enough and does not seek re-election next fall it would set off a political scramble not seen in the city for a quarter century.

You have to go back to 1989 for the last city election with an open mayor's seat. That's when former Mayor Frank McCauley opted not to seek a fifth term.

Four well-known candidates entered that year's race: Sheets, who was a Ward 4 councillor; Councillor Stephen McGrath, former Mayor Joseph LaRaia and Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell. Sheets and O'Connell were nominated in the preliminary election and Sheets won the final election and went on to serve 12 years as mayor.

On open seat next year - if there is one - could signal a significant shift in the city's political landscape with multiple candidates for mayor. And if they include councillors, then those seats would open up as well.

But that scenario hinges on Koch and his future. The mayor is proud of his record and enjoys campaigning - that alone would suggest he'll be running for a fifth term next year.

"I think we have a great record," he says. "I'm biased of course, but I think what we're getting done is remarkable in the course of one of the worst recessions since the Depression. All we've got accomplished is pretty amazing. Though we've had a little hiccup in the downtown, it's going to be back on track in no time."

The downtown - anyone with a political pulse knows this could be the driving issue of the 2015 mayor's race. If there are shovels in the ground and building frames rising in the city's central business district, that could deter some would-be candidates from running against Koch.

But, if the redevelopment stalls, that could ignite a spirited mayoral campaign with multiple candidates.

Koch continues to work at the downtown while addressing other needs in the city.

"We didn't put all our eggs as a city in one basket that we pay attention to the downtown and ignore everything else. We've been doing infrastructure – whether it's schools or seawalls, whether it's a senior center or track. We're getting a lot done.

"We've brought businesses here. We've done a number of TIFs (Tax Increment Financing agreements). Economically we continue to work at it."

At this point in time, it sounds as if Koch will run again next year. He remains upbeat and not worn down by the daily grind of serving as the city's chief executive.

"I'm still excited. It's a great city. We've got a lot done working with colleagues in government. Working with department heads, employees - everybody is pulling their share."

But he's also philosophical about the nature of job itself.

"I'm not going to make everybody happy. Everyday I'm making decisions and not everybody is happy with the decisions you make. Some days I wonder if there is anybody happy in that day.

"The reality is in the job you're making decisions and you're saying 'no' sometimes and people don't like that.

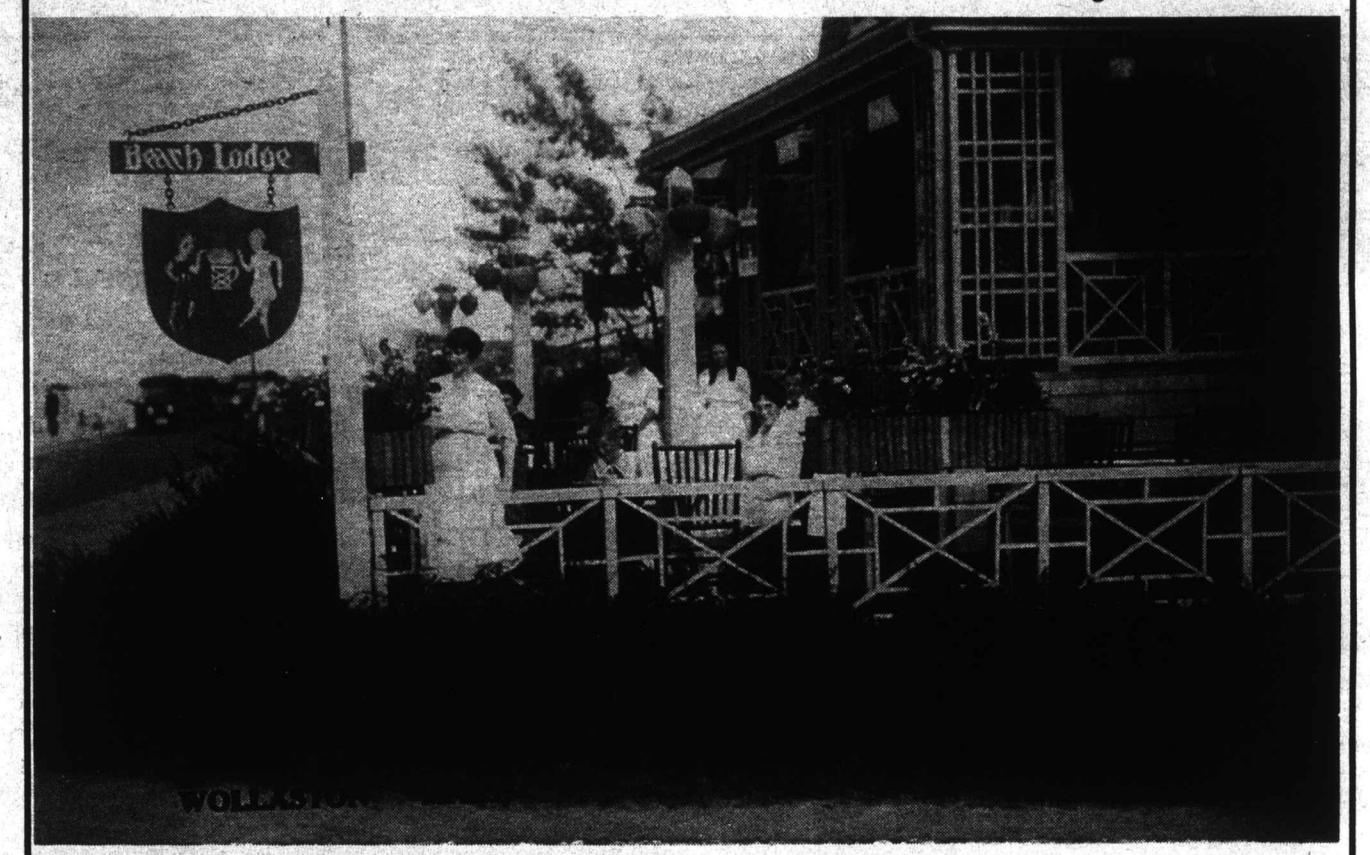
"There were people there before me. There will be people there after me and life goes on."

Any re-election decision appears to be on Koch's back-burner right now.

"I love what we're doing now. We're full boar this term for getting more accomplished. We'll look at it next January."

It's a decision that will get a lot attention.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS 1920 real photo postcard is a view of the Beach Lodge Team Room, a seasonal boutique restaurant and inn that was on the corner of East Elm Avenue and the Boulevard across from Wollaston Beach. The restaurant specialized in "dainty" luncheons and chicken and waffle dinners. They also offered a wide selection of temperance drinks to be enjoyed with the "refreshing seaside breezes." The Beach Lodge closed in 1926 and the next summer this building became the first Howard Johnson's road-side ice cream shop. It was a huge success. He had opened his first store in 1925 less than a mile from here at the Wollaston railroad depot and he soon found that his rich and cream 28-flavors of ice cream was his best selling item. Howard Johnson's stayed at this location for 10 years before moving a block away into a new larger building that had been built as a SIMCO ice cream shop on the corner of Sachem Street. By then there were 100 Howard Johnson's stores. This East Elm Avenue corner site is now home to the Wollaston Beach Playground. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

City Budget Looks Like $117.8 Million

If this week's City Council Finance Committee meeting is a sign, it appears that the city's $117.8 million dollar budget for fiscal year 1990 will be approved with little or no changes.

The committee reviewed a number of departmental budgets and passed most of them. Only a handful did not receive committee support, but it appears there will be another budget review meeting.

Finance Committee Chairman Stephen McGrath said another committee meeting would be held May 8. At that time other departmental budgets including fire, police and schools will be analyzed.

$275,000 ANIMAL SHELTER TO BE DEDICATED

Quincy's new animal shelter will be dedicated at its Broad Street location May 2, by Mayor Francis X. McCauley. Other officials expected to attend the dedication of the $275,000 shelter include, Althea Griffin, president of the South Shore Humane Society; John McDuff, president of the Quincy Animal League; Thomas White, director of the Animal Rescue League, as well as Phyllis Berlucchi, Animal Control Officer.

According to David Colton, deputy commissioner of Public Works, the structure will have 15 to 20 cages for dogs, plus a separate room for cats and puppies.

SIX CITY EMPLOYEES TO BE HONORED

Six city employees will be recognized at the seventh annual Mayor's Employee Appreciation Award Ceremony May 11.

The 1989 recipients include: Valerie Palmer, a registered nurse at Quincy Hospital; Ann McLaughlin, assistant director of The Thomas Crane Library; Patricia Ryan, assistant dean at Quincy Junior College; Duncan Blight, building custodian at City Hall; Mary (Fee Curtin) Pace, a teacher at Atherton Hough School and Janet Ellis, Equal Opportunity Administrator for the City of Quincy.

Friends Of The Blue Hills Seeks New Members

The Friends of the Blue Hills was founded in 1979 with a mission to protect and preserve the Blue Hills Reservation. The Reservation has 22 hilltops and is over 7,000 acres, with roughly half of it in Quincy. Some of the outdoor activities in the Reservation include hiking, mountain biking, skiing (downhill and cross country), fishing, swimming, horseback riding, rock climbing, and snowshoeing.

Although the Blue Hills Reservation is free, maintaining it is not. Thanks to the generosity and efforts of its members and volunteers, the Friends of the Blue Hills maintains over 100 miles of trails for tens of thousands of visitors each year, protects the forests by removing invasive weeds, works with legislators and local officials to prevent unwise development in the Blue Hills, and sponsors free opportunities to explore the Blue Hills in all four seasons.

Although we are a small organization (three part-time staff), we are extremely fortunate to have the support of a wide network of people.

Last year alone, more than 500 people volunteered over 1,700 hours in stewardship activities (weeding, trail maintenance, etc.). While the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation is responsible for managing the Blue Hills Reservation, years of budget cuts have reduced their ability to keep up with the maintenance of the park. For example, they no longer have a trail engineer or a forest engineer. The Friends of the Blue Hills has assumed much of the work previously done by these public employees.

VOLUNTEERS ON THE Trail Maintenance Committee of Friends of the Blue Hills maintain over 125 miles of trails, removing debris, trimming branches, removing boulders, and diverting water in order to make the trails accessible to all.

We engage an additional 1,700 people in our festivals and educational programs each year. Some of our most popular events include the recent Winter Fest Chili Cook-off at Blue Hills Ski Area, Summer Fest at Houghton's Pond in July, and the Sunset Foliage Hike in October.

We also sponsor our annual Green Up- A Day of Stewardship and Fun which this year will be Sunday, June 8, at the AMC cabins at Ponkapoag Pond.

In recognition of our 35th year, we have introduced two additional free activities in 2014: our Strive for 35 Challenge which invites everyone to see and do 35 different things in the Blue Hills this year; and Peek a Blue Hikes, a weekday, guided hike for parents and tots which will kick off Tuesday, May 6, at Houghton's Pond. Information on all of our activities can be found on our website www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org.

The goal of Friends of the Blue Hills is to inspire people to care for, enjoy, and explore the stunning natural beauty of the Blue Hills and its many recreational opportunities. And we are best able to achieve that goal by building our membership!

If you have ever visited the Blue Hills Reservation and been awed by its beauty and resources-- or if you are just grateful that the Blue Hills are a stone's throw from where you live – join the Friends of the Blue Hills today. Membership is just $30/year, and all new members receive a welcome packet which includes a trail map, information on cross country skiing, mountain biking, and horseback riding, as well as a newsletter and other helpful information.

Membership not only provides critical funding to maintain the Reservation's trails and protect its forests, but it strengthens our influence when we try to advocate for the Blue Hills with legislators and town officials.

We can say "We represent a large constituency of people who care deeply about protecting this Reservation."

Please join the Friends of the Blue Hills, so that your voice will be heard, and everyone can enjoy the Blue Hills today and for generations to come.

Emma Will Stars In B.C. High Drama Production

Emma Will of Quincy and a student at The Woodward School gave an outstanding performance in the role of Betsy in BC High's one act play "Clybourne Park."

B.C. High entered a 40-minute cutting of Bruce Norris' play into the preliminary round of the 2014 Massachusett Drama Festival, a competition, sponsored by the Massachusetts Educational Theater Guild, that began with 3,000 students from 112 schools competing across the state on March 1 at 14 different sites.

The Massachusetts High School Festival is the METG's premier event. The competition is organized on three levels – preliminary, semi-final and state. Student excellence in acting and technical design is recognized at each level, including the selection of an All-Star Company at the finals. Two schools chosen at the State Festival represent Massachusetts in the New England Drama Festival, the regional showcase of secondary school theatre.

Will and the cast and crew of nine travelled to Brookline High to compete in the Preliminary round of the Festival. Clybourne Park is a prequel to the well know play "A Raisin In The Sun." Act One takes place in 1959, as nervous community leaders anxiously try to stop the sale of a home to a black family. Act Two is set in the same house in the present day, as the now predominantly African-American neighborhood battles to hold its ground in the face of gentrification.

BC High had four of the seven members of the cast named All-stars, Will was one of them, and along with Pope John and Brookline High were the three of the eight competing schools at Brookline selected to advance to the semis.

At the semi-finals on March 15, 46 of the original 112 schools competed at 7 different sites, BC High performing at Weston High School. Will again and one other member of the BC High cast made the All-star company, but the play was not selected to go on to the finals.

Ed Churchill, the director of the play and a 2009 BC High graduate, was thrilled at how well Emma and the cast had advanced through the competition. All are looking forward to next year.

Meet The Author Night At Library April 29

Quincy College and the Thomas Crane Public Library will present 'Meet the Author Night' featuring Neil Swidey, author of Trapped Under the Sea: One Engineering Marvel, Five Men, and a Disaster Ten Miles Into the Darkness, on Tuesday, April 29 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Infamous for being "the dirtiest harbor in America," the Boston Harbor was an open sewer that became a major issue in the presidential campaign of 1988 nearly a quarter-century ago. Today, Boston has the nation's cleanest urban harbor. The key to that undisputed environmental triumph is a state-of-the-art wastewater treatment plant sitting on tiny Deer Island north of Boston, and an engineering marvel of an outfall tunnel.

The nearly 10-mile-long Deer Island Tunnel, built hundreds of feet below the ocean floor, carries up to 1 billion gallons of wastewater from the plant out into the deep Atlantic waters of Massachusetts Bay, every day. It's the longest single-entrance (or dead-end) tunnel in the world, and is the largely unknown workhorse behind the multi-billion dollar court-ordered cleanup that has transformed the harbor. Handled by some of the country's top designers and contractors, the massive tunnel would not work until someone figured out how to tackle one final and extremely hazardous task.

Swidey will lead a discussion about the harrowing story of five men who were sent into a dark, airless, miles-long tunnel, hundreds of feet below the ocean to do a nearly impossible job-with deadly results.

A question and answer session will follow the discussion. This event is free and is open to the public. To RSVP, visit http://author-night.eventbrite.com.

'Memphis To Motown' Cabaret Concert June 7

JM Productions and The Common Market Restaurant of Quincy announces a new "One Night Only" Cabaret Concert Production starring The Boston Soul Revue musical production "Memphis To Motown.... A musical history of Soul Music in America" will take place June 7 at 7 and 9 p.m.

"We want to bring the very best entertainment - at affordable prices - to the area so our guests can enjoy dinner at The Common Market, sip a glass of wine at the shows while listening to some great live music," said Greg McDonald, owner & general manager of The Common Market in Quincy.

The concert production will feature the early music of Ray Charles, the Doo Wop beginnings of the James Brown and the origins of Funk as well as classics by Aretha Franklin, Wilson Pickett, Otis Redding, and Sam and Dave.

Also spotlighted is a tribute to the music of Motown featuring hits from the Temptations, Marvin Gaye, Al Green, and Stevie Wonder.

Each song is put in context with a brief introduction by veteran front man, Ronnie "Mr. Motion" Valentine. Winding up in the 1970's with a "Philly Sound" set, a Harold Melvin classic features the original Bluenotes' saxophonist Reginald Gaylord Grant performing live on stage. The concert concludes with the music of Tina Turner.

All Seats are $20 in advance and $30 at the door on the evening of the shows. Seating is general admission, first come, first served.

Doors open one half hour before each show. Purchase tickets in advance call Brown Paper Tickets directly 24/7 at 1.800.838.3006 or www.brownpapertickets.com/event/596084

Seating is limited. For dinner reservations call The Common Market Restaurant at 617-773-9532.

Karmen Lee Receives Emerging Leader Award

Karman Lee, operations manager at Manet Community Health Center, has received a prestigious 2014 Emerging Leader Award from the Geiger Gibson Program in Community Health Policy of the George Washington University School of Public Health and Health Services in Washington D.C.

Lee accepted the award, along with seven other recipients, at a recent ceremony at the National Association of Community Health Centers Policy and Issues Forum in Washington, D.C.

Emerging Leaders are nominated by community health centers and primary care associations nationwide and selected by a committee of senior health center leadership. The award spotlights the accomplishments of a new generation of community health center leaders.

She was nominated for the award by Henry N. Tuttle, Chief Executive Officer at Manet.

"This well-deserved recognition recognizes Karman's unwavering commitment and initiative to improve the patient experience and unabashedly share best practices with others, along with her devotion to continue her own growth and development," Tuttle said.

"I'm honored to receive the Emerging Leader Award for something I love to do," said Karman, a Quincy resident. "Being part of bringing better health care to our community is tremendously satisfying."

Lee first came to Manet, after she, and her family emigrated from Hong Kong to Quincy. The entire family became Manet patients. Three years later, Lee began working weekdays after school as a medical receptionist at Manet's North Quincy practice site.

Lee graduated with honors and a BS in Accounting Information Systems from Bentley College. She worked as an auditor for PricewaterhouseCoopers and a financial analyst/auditor for the Federal Reserve Banks of Boston and Washington, D.C. before changing careers and launching her own business, Karman Lee Photography, in Quincy.

In 2010, she returned to Manet, this time as a consumer member of its board of directors. Soon after, she left the board and again joined Manet's staff, quickly progressing to Operations Manager. In this role, she has helped implement Manet's Electronic Health Record and Practice Management Systems, including a new Patient Portal that provides online access to appointments and medical records. She also has been responsible for helping to develop more efficient customer service procedures to improve the patient experience, as well as new training modules for staff.

"When you attempt to define 'leadership,' you think of words like 'stewardship,' 'influence' and 'effectiveness," said Tuttle, "all of which describe Karman Lee."

ENC Commencement May 3

Eastern Nazarene College will hold its spring commencement exercises on the college's front lawn on Saturday, May 3 at 2:30 p.m.

Some 285 graduates will receive associate's, bachelor's and master's degrees from the Christian liberal arts college.

Guest speaker at this year's commencement will be Rev. Gabriel Salguero, president of the National Latino Evangelical Coalition.

Pastor of The Lamb's Church in New York, Rev. Salguero has been named one of the most prominent Latino evangelical leaders by the Huffington Post, the Center for American Progress and El Diario.

Earth Day Celebration At Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Library and the Park Department's Environmental Treasures Program are co-sponsoring an Earth Day Celebration Wednesday, April 23 at 7 p.m. at the main library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The evening will feature a short inspiring film, Ocean Frontiers II: A New England Story for Sustaining the Sea, followed by the story of Quincy's efforts to clean up Quincy Bay told by Leo Kelly and Doug Gutro. Current work to improve the local environment will be discussed by representatives from Quincycles, MassEnergy, the Town Brook smelt monitoring team, Quincy Climate Action Committee, the Quincy Environmental Network, the Neponset River Watershed Association and others.

"It's a great way to find out about the exciting work being done in our community and how anyone can become involved," said Sally Owen, Coordinator of the Environmental Treasures program.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Veal Piccata

One of my favorite foods has been a veal cutlet, either with Parmesan, or just plain with a splash of lemon.

Today's recipe is for veal piccata, and served with lemon, butter noodles.

Chicken can be substituted for the veal if preferred.

2-3 slices of veal
Flour for dredging
Olive oil and butter for sautéing
Juice of one lemon
¼ cup white wine
1- tablespoon small capers
Salt and pepper to taste
2 cloves of garlic (minced)

Season the veal with salt and pepper. Dredge the veal in the flour shaking off the excess. Melt the butter and the oil and sauté the veal until brown on both sides. Set aside.

In the same pan, sauté the garlic, and add the lemon and the wine. Heat until mixture is reduced-it will thicken slightly. When ready to serve, pour over the veal.

Noodles with lemon, butter & parsley

½ pound egg noodles (I used medium sized)

3 tablespoons olive oil -1 tablespoon butter

2 tablespoons fresh parsley (cut in small pieces)

Grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

Cook the noodles according to directions. In the meantime, sauté the butter and the oil, and then add the lemon juice. When the noodles are done and drained, place in the same pan and toss with a sprinkle of the parsley on top and the grated cheese. Serve with the veal-a great combo.

'America's Romance With The English Garden' Program At Historical Society May 1

The story behind America's fascination with lush gardens and rich, green lawns will be discussed by author and gardening expert, Thomas Mickey, in a program at Quincy Historical Society, Thursday, May 1, at 7 p.m.

Drawing on his recent book on the subject, Mickey will show how inexpensive printing technologies and the beginning of mass-marketing in the 1890s led to pervasive advertising campaigns that sold the attractions and the status of English-style lawns and gardens to a growing American middle class, through beautiful, elaborate illustrations and inexpensive mail-order seeds and supplies. It is a story of taste-makers, savvy businessmen and an eager public and of the beginning of the multi-billion dollar American home gardening industry.

Mickey will illustrate the talk with the example of the ornate advertisements from the 1890s.

Mickey, a Quincy resident, is professor emeritus of Communications Studies at Bridgewater State University. In addition to America's Romance with the English Garden, he is the author of Best Garden Plants for New England and numerous articles.

The program is free. A book signing will follow the lecture.

The Olde Kids Swing Band

The Olde Kids Swing Band will be at the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging) on Friday May 9 from 1 to 3 p.m.

The Olde Kids is a dance band in the style of the big bands of the 30's and 40's. The big band recreates the glamour and romance of an era that lasted ten years.

Retired and semi-retired musicians are part of a resurgence of interests in live, glamorous and romantic music. The band was formed in 1991 and consists of six saxes, four trombones, four trumpets, four on rhythm and a vocalist.

Tickets are required for this event and can be purchased at the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging.) Suggested donation is $6.

For more information, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

YMCA 'Taste Of The South Shore' Raises Over $240,000

The South Shore YMCA recently hosted its 18th Annual Taste of the South Shore fundraiser bringing together more than 550 supporters to sample dishes from the South Shore's premiere restaurants, wineries and breweries to benefit the Y's Annual Campaign.

The event raises funds and awareness for the Y's Send a Kid to Camp appeal, which directly supports camperships and financial assistance for local children to attend South Shore YMCA summer camp programs. Through the support of the sponsors, committee, volunteers, attendees and participating restaurants, wineries and breweries, the event surpassed its fundraising goal, raising over $240,000, including $106,000 toward the Y's Send a Kid to Camp appeal.

With the support and flexibility of Lombardo's staff, the ballroom was fully transformed into an indoor camp atmosphere. The event décor, program, and even the restaurant samplings were designed to give guests a true summer camp experience and demonstrate the impact camp has on children. Guests were treated to an authentic camp fire ceremony and heard testimonials from past campers about their life-changing experience at South Shore YMCA day and overnight camps.

The camper testimonials helped demonstrate to attendees just how great an impact the positive, accepting environment provided at camp can have on a child. Andrew, a former camper of the Y's Quincy Summer Day Camp, shared his story during the program, "At camp I learned acceptance. At the Quincy day camp, my counselors helped me learn how to express my feelings in a positive way. There is no safer place to be yourself and learn how to accept who you are without being judged. Camp changed my life." These moving testimonials helped inspire Taste of the South Shore guests to give generously during the Send a Kid to Camp appeal, helping to raise over $106,00 in the room to give more local children the opportunity to attend camp this summer.

This year's volunteer event committee was led be co-chairs Paul Wahlberg and Julie Ellis and supported by Kassandra Berry, Hillary Birch, Chris Bodnar, Linda Curran, Jonathan Dunn, Sarah Lalone, David Lombardo, Kellie MacDonald, John Mannion, Laura and Edwin Rivera, Jaime Sullivan and Ken Wisneski.

Taste of the South Shore 2014 participating restaurants, wineries and breweries included Abby Park, Alma Nove, Atlantica, Bia Bistro, Bin Ends, Blue Hills Brewery, Caffe Tosca, The Chef's Table, Clown Shoes Brewery, Dalat Restaurant, Fratelli's Pastry Shop, Fruit Center Marketplace, Fuji 1546, Galley Kitchen & Bar, Good Life Kitchen, The Greenside Grille Restaurant, Hancock's, Hingham Beer Works, Honey Dew Donuts, Hint Water, Island Creek Oysters, Jake's Seafood Market and Restaurant, Kama Lounge, Konditor Meister, Lavishly Dunn Catering & Event Planning, Legal Sea Foods, Lombardo's, Malai Thai, Mayflower Brewing Company, Naukabout Brewery, Newburyport Brewing Company, Orta Restaurant, Plymouth Bay Winery, Scarlet Oak Tavern, South Shore Wine Imports, Stars on Hingham Harbor, The Tinker's Son, Tosca, Union Fish Seafood & Raw Bar, Whole Foods Market, and Wicked Good Cupcakes.

Town Brook Volunteers Await Return Of Smelt

Since the first of March, citizen-scientist volunteers have been monitoring the Town Brook for the return of the smelt – no smelt have been seen yet.

Under the leadership of QEN and Conservation Committee members of the Wollaston Garden Club, assigned volunteers monitor the brook each day at six different locations, and water temperatures are recorded at two sites along the brook. The temperatures in the brook have been rising, particularly this past week to a high of 56 degrees. The average temperature during the month of March was below 40 degrees – too cold for smelt to return to the brook to spawn.

If you would like to monitor smelt in the brook you can go to info@townbrook.org to volunteer (pick a few locations and a day of the week) and if you want more information about the Town Brook at www.townbrook.org.

According to Robert Stevens, Urban Renewal Planner for the City of Quincy, the City has hired URS Corporation of Boston to monitor, for three years, the water quality and water flow requirements during the spawning season until June 1st. (2013 was year 1 of the monitoring project). Electronic instruments have been installed in the brook at the upper pocket park at Mechanic Street; these instruments will record data on 15 minute intervals.

Water quality data will be collected for water temperatures and sensors will determine the amount of ammonium, chloride, algae, oxygen, fluorescent dissolved organic matter and nitrates in the water. Monthly reports will summarize the information gathered for review by MassDEP and the Division of Marine Fisheries. Stevens is awaiting data collection and scientific analysis for the months involved and working on a system to disseminate this information to the public.

Citizens should be able to find much information at http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PLANNING/townbrookproject.cfm. as well as a detailed plan and procedure for the City's Town Brook Monitoring Process.

To teack the seasons, many human cultures have given names to the full moon throughout the year. According to the coastal New England Native American tribes, the full moon in April was called the Fish Moon. Historically this has been the time the fish (smelt, herring, and alewife) return to rivers and streams to spawn.

The Fish Moon this spring occurs on and around Wednesday April 30 with high tides of 11.3 feet at 12:21 am and 12:55 pm. Smelt, not being strong swimmers, prefer high tides to aid in their travel upstream. Tide charts can be found on the Town Brook web site; the Town Brook Stream Team volunteers hope to see fish during these and other high tides during the months of April and May.

Besides the two pocket parks at Mechanic Street, other public viewing places, include the upstream side of the bridge at Elm Street and McGrath highway (near Yellow Cab); the upstream side of the bridge at lower Bigelow Street; the downstream side of the bridge at Miller Stile Road; and the upstream side of the bridge at upper Bigelow Street.

With the approval of DPW Commissioner Raymondi a small smelt logo has been painted to designate for public viewing the most desirable and safest smelt viewing locations.

25th Annual Cleaner, Greener Cleanup May 3

Mayor Thomas P. Koch announces the 25th annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy celebration will be held on Saturday, May 3rd.

The cleanup will occur at beaches, marshes, neighborhood parks, playgrounds, schoolyards and open space areas citywide from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Mayor Koch will host an appreciation cookout at Pageant Field following the cleanup.

"Twenty-five years ago we began this program as a way of getting people involved in beautifying their neighborhood," said Mayor Koch. "Today, a quarter century later, the example we set has been emulated by towns across the South Shore. It's something we can all take pride in."

The annual cleanup draws close to 1,500 volunteers from across the City. Last year, more than twenty public areas were designated as cleanup sites, many at the suggestion of local residents. The city's elementary and middle schools participated enthusiastically, contributing greatly to the overall aesthetics of school grounds.

Cleaner Greener is sponsored by the City of Quincy, the Quincy Park Conservancy, Curry Hardware and Hannaford Supermarket.

Residents are encouraged to designate neighborhood cleanup sites and can contact the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1251 or crooneyo@quincyma.gov to do so.

Claimed 60 Lives In 2013

Opiate Abuse Rising In Norfolk County

By SCOTT JACKSON

Opiate abuse in Norfolk County continues to rise, claiming more than 60 lives in 2013 alone.

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey, Quincy District Court First Justice Mark Coven, Sen. John Keenan, and Bill Spinks of Bay State Community Services all addressed the issue of opiate abuse during a recent meeting of the City Council's oversight committee.

Morrissey told the committee 52 people fatally overdosed on opiates – a family of drugs that includes heroin and painkillers such as hydrocodone (found in Vicodin) and oxycodone (found in Percocet and OxyContin) – in 2011, his first year in office. In 2012, that number fell to 46, before rising in 2013 to 61. Morrissey said those statistics are disheartening.

"More people died in Norfolk County than all of the state of New Hampshire, all the state of Maine last year, and all the state of Vermont," Morrissey said. "That is disheartening."

The number of deaths, he noted, would have been higher if not for the Quincy Police Department's Narcan program. Officers have administered the nasal spray 257 times since October 2010, reversing 245 of those overdoses.

The Quincy-Braintree-Weymouth area of the Norfolk County has been hardest hit by the increase in overdose deaths, Morrissey added, but at least one person has died in each of the county's 28 cities and towns.

"It doesn't matter if you're from a working class community or a wealthy community," Morrissey said. "In the last three years, everyone has had at least one in the county."

Morrissey explained that people who become addicted to opiates often start by taking painkillers, ones they were prescribed or those they find lying around the house. Those people then start taking heroin because it's cheaper and more powerful than the prescription drugs. The current crisis, he noted, has affected families across the socioeconomic spectrum.

"In the old days society would look at people who were on heroin as 'that's kind of a back alley, bad person,' and they'd write those people off. That's how society viewed that in the '60s and '70s," Morrissey said. "But today it's good kids from good families that

$150,000 For Tree Plantings

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Park Department will be able to plant up to 300 trees this summer after the City Council unanimously approved a $150,000 appropriation at its most recent meeting.

The department will now be able to seek bids for a contractor to purchase and plant trees throughout Quincy; that company will also be responsible for watering the trees for the first the year after they're planted, according to Chris Cassani, the executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments. Planting may begin as early as late May or early June.

Cassani said the appropriation should be able to pay for between 275 and 300 new trees; the department installed about 225 last summer at a cost of $100,000. The city has a list of approximately 250 tree requests, including 100 Mayor Thomas Koch plans to install in Germantown as part of an initiative in that part of the city.

At the council meeting on April 7, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked Cassani if the new trees being planted this year would make up for the years following the recession when tree planting was cut from the budget. Cassani said the new trees will make up for two or three years of tree removal in the city, but not quite bring the number back to pre-recession levels.

"We're cutting down a lot of trees each year because we have to – it's a public safety issue or whatever the case may be," Cassani said. "It was about 225 trees [planted] last year. If it's another 300 this year, what that does is really probably erases the last two to three years of cut downs, so we're still probably not quite back up to equilibrium.

"Looking forward, I think we would all like to be able to plant 250 trees a year because that would keep pace with the cut downs and gradually build up the reserves."

The Park Department plans to plant a wide variety of trees across the city, Cassani said following the meeting. Up to 10 different species may be planted, though that won't be finalized until the contract is awarded.

South Cove Manor To Celebrate Opening

Ceremony Tuesday At New State-Of-The-Art Facility Located At 290 Washington St.

By KRIS KALABOKAS

South Cove Manor, a nursing and rehabilitation facility focused on caring for elderly Chinese patients, will celebrate the completion of their new, state-of-the-art facility located at 290 Washington St. in Quincy Point on Tuesday at 10 a.m.

Originally breaking ground on Nov. 28, 2012 with Mayor Thomas Koch in attendance, the facility is currently accepting preadmission referral forms.

The four-story, 86,000-square-foot facility owned by South Cove Nursing Facilities Foundation Inc., will be divided into six residential communities and will boast 141 private and semi-private beds, six dining areas, a community space, a rehab center, and activity rooms. Roughly 200 full and part-time staff members will be on hand to care for short-stay and long-stay residents.

The original 100-bed location, which opened its doors in 1985, is in Boston's Chinatown and is being replaced by the new, larger building located on what was once the Hassan Automotive Property.

"South Cove Manor has been based in Boston for almost 30 years, and initially sought to build their expanded facility there," said President and CEO Richard Wong. "After several years of searching, there were no suitable and affordable parcels of land. Quincy is nearby, easily accessible by car or public transportation, has a large Asian community, and had available land."

Over $2 million in funds to cover construction and equipment costs were raised by donors such as Bank of America, Cambridge Savings Bank, the Chinese American Nurses Association, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance, and private donors in addition to MassDevelopment bond proceeds totaling $19 million.

According to Wong, the building's lot can accommodate roughly 47 vehicles and active parking management will be on-site to manage staff and visitor cars.

South Cove is currently the only nursing home specializing in geriatric care of the Chinese community in the Northeast.

Nearly all staff is bilingual and speak Chinese dialects of Mandarin, Cantonese, and Toishanese and patients are immersed in cultural activities such as Mah Jong, Chinese Opera, Chinese New Year, and Mid Autumn Festival celebrations. On staff are rehabilitation specialists, dieticians, social workers, and nurses to provide a full spectrum of health and mental services.

"As a major innovation, the care delivery will be modeled on the 'small house' model of care," said Wong. "Residents' rooms are clustered in small living communities, each with their own dining, kitchenette and living room areas. Dedicated staff will support each community of residents, building strong relationships and personalizing care."

Chinese exercise sessions, trips into Boston to enjoy museums and restaurants, and activities such as bowling and playing card games ensures seniors get physical as well as mental exercise. Residents are given a choice of traditional Chinese foods or American dishes depending on their individual tastes.

Wong said current residents in the old location are slated to move into the new building this May.

In 2010 South Cove received the five-star overall ranking under the Federal Five-Star Quality Rating System by the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS); a rating only 16 percent of nursing homes in Massachusetts earned that year.

School-Community Partners Honored At 13th Annual Breakfast

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy School~Community Partnership (QSCP) honored Boston Scientific Corporation, Dependable Cleaners, and the Bluefin Robotics Corporation for their contributions to Quincy Public Schools at this year's 13th annual Recognition Breakfast.

Also highlighted were Granite Telecommunications, Twin Rivers Technologies, Braintree Cooperative Bank, Murphy Hesse Toomey & Lehane, and Granite Medical Group for becoming new and involved partners.

"The Quincy School~Community Partnership mission is to bring our schools, businesses, and community organizations together to enhance the educational lives and opportunities of Quincy Public School students," said Coordinator of the Quincy School~Community Partnership John Fagerlund. "Together we all thank you very much."

Partners are placed into one of four categories—called Partnership Pathways—based on their work with the QSCP. Platinum Partner status is reached once $5,000 in contributions have been made. Gold Partners reach status once they contribute $3,500. Silver Partner status is reached at $1,500 and Bronze Partner status at $600.

Platinum level partner Bluefin Robotics Corporation, notable for their research and development of Autonomous Underwater Vehicles (AUVs), was recognized for giving QPS students the opportunity to tour their research and manufacturing facility while asking engineers questions related to the company's 15-foot catamaran AUV.

They have been regular contributors to the Helping Youth Pursue Engineering and Robotics (HYPER) combined team from the North Quincy and Quincy High Schools. Their time, monetary, and mentoring commitments have helped the team succeed in competition by covering registration fees for the annual FIRST Robotics Competition, robotic development costs, facility maintenance, and year-round operations. Mentoring efforts include engineering support and one-on-one student consultations.

In 2013 they donated one laptop to each Quincy public middle school for use in classroom research.

Dependable Cleaners CEO and President Christa Hagearty said the reason her bronze level company donated time and funds to Quincy Public Schools was because of her appreciation for education. "I have always had a huge commitment to reading and learning," she said. "Whatever we can do to give back I love it, because you never really know when you're going to make a difference."

The business has provided students the opportunity to conduct mock interviews and teaches valuable job skills through internships.

The donation of sixteen Surface II tablets for the implementation of new technology strategies in the classroom starting in May as part of the Science Technology Engineering Mathematics (STEM) initiative in grades three and four was made possible due to the platinum level Boston Scientific Corporation. The company will also participate in mock student interviews in the spring.

"It really is all about relationships," said Superintendent of Schools Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

Over the roughly 25 years he has been involved with the partnership he has seen it do nothing but grow and continue to make a difference for students. "Every single aspect of our school system was touched by your generosity," he said of the partners.

He recalled a story about John Quincy Adams in which he was interrupted one morning while in his study by noises coming from the first floor of his mansion at Peace Field. When he went to investigate he found his grandson Henry causing a ruckus because he didn't want to go to school that day. He took the boy by the hand and walked him to school without further incident.

"The message is simple; there's a value to education," said DeCristofaro. "There's a pathway that [John Quincy Adams] shared with his grandkids and with his sons as well, just as you do within this partnership. You share your leadership and your passion and your dedication."

"What John Quincy Adams did, you do."

He said the partners' contributions allowed students to dream of a future where they were free to be and accomplish anything.

"I hope you keep giving and I hope you keep participating...we are so appreciative of everything that you do."

QSCP Executive Director of Career and Technical Education and Instructional Technology Keith Segalla said the breakfast was one of his favorite events.

"We have this wonderful opportunity to recognize and celebrate volunteers and partners that support our mission to enrich student learning and success," he said.

Koch: New NQHS Field Will Be 'Magnificent Facility'

work goes in in May, then the discussion begins," Koch explained. "I think we'll have a pretty good feeling by the fall of where we're going. My guess is we'll be in the ground in two years."

The city is planning to construct the new Sterling on space behind the current school where a track and basketball court currently sit.

The configuration of the new Sterling was one of several issues the mayor addressed in a recent interview, portions of which appeared in the April 17 edition of The Sun. Koch also spoke out about his plans to expand the North Quincy High campus and renovate Teel Field, Wollaston Center revitalization, and several topics concerning the MBTA.

North Quincy High

Koch's proposal to expand the North Quincy High campus includes renovating Teel Field and creating a new 157-vehicle parking lot on Hunt Street. To accommodate the parking lot, as well as two retaining ponds, the city needs to purchase eight homes on Hunt Street and one on Newbury Avenue. An appraiser is in the final stage of appraising those properties.

"It's still early in the process. We just hired an appraiser. If they haven't finished they're probably nearly finishing the appraisals on each of the properties, which is a requirement really under the law – before we enter negotiations we need to have something to base it on," Koch said.

"I know one resident has already reached out to the law office indicating they believe they have found another home and they'd like to make the move sooner. We have the law department looking at that piece."

Koch is optimistic the city will be able to reach amicable agreements to purchase the houses, though he is prepared to use eminent domain if needed.

"If you don't want to sell your home I know that's a tough one," Koch said. "Hopefully they'll all be friendly takings. If we have to use eminent domain – obviously we'd have to go through the council for that – we will. I think that it's a worthwhile project."

The mayor plans to purchase the houses using funds from the sale of the former Central Middle School. He noted funds from the sale of capital assets, like Central, need to be used for capital improvements or acquisitions.

"When we sell a capital asset like that it doesn't go into the general fund. Under the law it goes into a special account that has to be used for other capital improvements or acquisitions," Koch said. "It's perfect for this."

Koch said the project, which has a total project cost of $10-12 million, was proposed with the intent of completing the North Quincy High campus plan that began in the 1970s when the school was renovated and expanded.

"The reality is it was a disgrace the city left a gas station at the corner outside the front door – it's now a D'Angelo's. There was never enough parking for staff or visitors. It was shoehorned in. It's easy to look back and second guess but from day one I've been consistent on that. I view it as more than parking and a field. I view it as completing a campus for that school," Koch said.

"The field is going to be an incredible addition to the city in its entirety. When you put a second synthetic turf facility in the amount of play on that is unlimited. You're taking the pressure off of a lot of other fields – you're taking pressure off the stadium…It's a magnificent facility that's going to not only help North, it will help Quincy and it will help every youth program we have in the city because it's going to take the pressure off the facilities.

"It will also be lit. It will have the amenities needed so once this is built if North wants to have a home game – if they want to have it there for soccer, for lacrosse, for JV football they'd be able to do that. If they still want to use the stadium for varsity because they have the locker room and the tunnel and all that, I get that too. We'll kind of let that evolve.

"The parking I don't underestimate. We have school events day and night. You have elections down there. You have Sacred Heart basketball in there. You have rentals like the Irish step dance. People park all over the neighborhood. There's no room down there; it's just so jammed in."

Wollaston Center Revitalization

In September, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) released a 46-page report detailing recommendations on how to revitalize Wollaston Center.

The report, which was issued followed a series of neighborhood meetings cohosted by the MAPC and Quincy's Planning Department, included a series of recommendations including providing incentives for higher-density, mixed-use development; widening sidewalks; and adding bike lanes to streets.

The mayor said he has met with major property owners and developers in the months since the report was issued.

"I've met with every major property owner in Wollaston Center and there is a great interest from those property owners," Koch said. "I've also met with some developers and putting the developers with those property owners to try and come up with a program, both individual with the property owners but also for the greater district down there. Once we see a project pop down there I think they all will follow."

One residential property owner, Koch noted, has a long wait list for people who wish to rent apartments in the area.

"People want to be there. It's close to the T. It's close to all the service industries around there they do their business with – they grab something to eat, go to the cleaners, get their coffee, whatever the case may be, it's all there," the mayor said.

"It's very popular for residential living so I think it's ripe for development with some residential units."

The MBTA

Last summer, Koch introduced plans to create a new Quincy Center MBTA station that will feature retail and office space as well as a new parking garage.

Since then, the city has hired engineering firm Parsons Brinckerhoff to help design the new facility and reached an agreement with the federal government to use a $1 million grant to pay for the design process. A transportation bill approved by houses of the state Legislature could provide up to $10 million in funding for the project; wording in that legislation enables Quincy to take the lead on redeveloping the site. The mayor is optimistic about developing the station site.

"In the end we believe we'll have a new station, an intermodal transportation place, which will work far more efficiently and friendlier and aesthetically pleasing. That's the goal and I think we'll get there," Koch said.

"The station is in bad shape. The garage has been condemned. It can't sit there like that."

In addition to Koch's plan to develop the Quincy Center station, the mayor said the MBTA has submitted requests for proposals for developments at its stations in Wollaston and North Quincy. Because of agreements reached when the MBTA first extended the Red Line to Quincy, the city maintains air rights over the track.

Koch is currently the chairman of the MBTA Advisory Board, which consists of representatives of the 175 communities the transit agency services throughout eastern Massachusetts. The board is responsible for advising MBTA management on long-term goals and initiatives undertaken by the transit agency. Currently, the MBTA is in the middle of a yearlong pilot program testing out extended service hours for rapid transit lines. The mayor said is he supportive of the pilot program.

"For the most part the pilot is being driven for those people who work in the hospitality industry or medical field. They work odd shifts, come out and have no public transportation. The goal is to help them first," Koch said.

"Boston has another goal obviously and that is to, not necessarily compare us to New York, but have a little more life at night. Extend the hours. Extend the business. Make the city a little more lively, which makes it more attractive for conventions and other things. We'll see how it plays out, because it is a pilot program."

The mayor also said he is working with the MBTA and the USS Salem to find a new home for the ship. The Salem, a cruiser that serves as home to a museum, is currently docked at the Fore River Shipyard on a pier owned by the MBTA. But the transit agency is selling the pier because it is in dire shape.

"My guess is a new owner of that land is probably not going to be interested in housing the Salem there. If they're going to spend that kind of money they're going to probably want to maximize the value of their investment," Koch explained.

"Having said that I know the T, the city, we're all working with the Salem to see how best we can deal with its future location."

Koch added that the Salem's operators have begun looking for new sites, but nothing is official yet.

"I know they're looking at locations and they've floated some stuff," the mayor said, "but nothing is etched in stone."

'Raising Capital For Small Business Start-Ups' Workshop Series Begins Tonight

Quincy College, in partnership with the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and Quincy Center for Innovation, presents a two-session workshop series "Raising Capital for Small Business Start-ups in 2014", on Thursday, April 24th and Thursday, May 8th from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, 180 Old Colony Ave in Quincy.

Both sessions will include a panel of experts who will discuss new opportunities and a variety of contemporary funding options for small businesses and start-ups.

The Jumpstart Our Business Start-Ups Act, or J.O.B.S ACT (2012), is a United States law, which was enacted to help small businesses secure funding and presents some exciting new opportunities for entrepreneurs and investors. The act was passed to encourage support for entrepreneurship and small business growth. Before companies and investors jump into this new arena however, they should know all the facts.

The first of the two-session series will focus on Equity Crowdfunding, the collection of investment money to support a business venture from a large pool of backers, made by means of an online web platform. Panelist will discuss equity crowdfunding as a marketing tool, fundraising strategy, and investment opportunity. The much anticipated S.E.C. regulations will be featured as part of this session.

The second session will focus on alternative funding strategies for small businesses and entrepreneurs; including small business loans, grants, angel investing and bootstrapping. Different applications for each method, as well as general guidelines, best practices and case studies will be discussed.

The general public, including area financial advisors, entrepreneurs, business owners, fund managers, students are encouraged to attend.

The cost is $20 per session or $30 for both sessions; students are free.

The workshop will take place at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce | 180 Old Colony Ave., third floor.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, April 12, 2014, at approximately 11:00 P.M., Officer John Leuchte was working the detail at the Stadium Bar in Quincy Center when staff told him of a possible fight. Officer Colleen Paccioretti, who was outside the bar, came inside to assist.

As the Officers approached a large group, they could see that the bouncers had separated two groups that were fighting. The Officers escorted two males, identified by the bouncers as causing the commotion, outside to the sidewalk. The Officers asked the two males for their Id's.

The first male provided his driver's license and the second male stated he didn't have an ID with him, then angrily said that he believed that by asking for his ID it was now a racial matter. He continued to become verbally combative with the Officers. Officer Leuchte asked him several times for his name and to remain sitting on the curb, but he kept standing up to challenge the Officers. After numerous warnings to sit and stop trying to incite others, the Officers placed suspect 1 under arrest for disorderly conduct. When asked again for his name, suspect 1 gave the name Michael Cavanaugh along with a social security number.

At this point, suspect 2 began causing a scene by yelling and taunting several people that were later found out to be involved in the incident in the bar. Officer Paccioretti told him several times to stop yelling and to sit down. He responded by telling her, "I'm not going to take orders from a female cop. Officer Paccioretti attempted to assist suspect 2 to a sitting position on the sidewalk when he angrily said, "Get your hands off of me – stop disrespecting me." He said that he knew his rights and a female cop had no right to touch him. Suspect 2 ordered the Officers to "get another male cop to deal with me."

As this was occurring, about a half dozen bar patrons gathered to see what was happening. The Officers then arrested the second suspect for disorderly conduct.

As suspect 2 was handcuffed, Lieutenant Greg Goyette and Officer Greg Hartnett arrived on scene to assist. Officer Paccioretti talked to two patrons involved in the altercation in the bar. The first person was a female who said that both of the males were grinding up to her on the dance floor and one of the suspects "wanted to hook up with me." She stated that she told him several times to leave her alone and when this didn't work, several of her friends also told them to stay away from her. She stated that one of the suspects kept coming back and bothering her.

At this point, her boyfriend came over and asked the suspect again to leave his girlfriend alone. She said that the suspect (1) said something to her and then punched her in the right side of the forehead. She said suspect 2 then punched her boyfriend in the right side of his forehead. She said that the altercation was quickly broken up by the bouncers.

Officer Paccioretti asked several times if they wanted medical treatment but they declined. Officer Paccioretti also spoke with a male patron who said he saw the entire incident and his account matched that of the victims.

At booking, suspect 1 who gave the name "Cavanaugh" gave his real name and driver's license to booking Sergeant Patrick Faherty, who asked the suspect if he gave the Officer on scene a different name. The suspect denied this and then grew angry and uncooperative, so he was placed in a cell to cool down and booked later. The social security number he gave at the scene was different in the last two numbers from his actual number. Suspect 1, a 22 year old Halifax resident, was charged with Assault and Battery, Disorderly Conduct, and Giving and false name to a Police Officer upon arrest.

Suspect 2, a 24 year old Brockton resident, was charged with Assault and Battery, and Disorderly Conduct. Nice Work!

POPE STREET CAR BREAKS: thanks goes out to a local resident who kept watch from his porch for the suspect who had broken into cars nights earlier. At 4:00 a.m., his observations and prompt call to the Quincy Police aided in apprehending the suspect, who had a history of "breaking and entering."

CRAIG'S LIST SCAM: A resident emailed me to tell me that a house for rent listed on Craig's list was a scam. She became suspicious based on some of the information listed in the ad. The person posting actually put in photos allegedly of them doing humanitarian work outside of the country, stating that they would rent for 3 years. In addition the post read, "Rental price: $1100 per month and security Deposit is $800 (Security Deposit is Refundable) Utilities included in monthly rent Pets Welcome. Total move in cost $1900. NB that we are no more dealing with any Realtor so you will dealing directly with me, OK?" The resident said that she was able to determine that it was a scam when she "googled" the renter's name and it showed a history of scams. So, as always be careful when dealing on Craig's list.

NEXT SELF DEFENSE CLASS: the next planned two night class will be in October. Contact Lieutenant Dan Minton in September at 617-745-5719 or dminton@quincyma.gov to reserve a spot.

are finding themselves, for a variety of reasons, ending up addicted."

The district attorney also attributed a high percentage of crime to substance abuse. People desperate for cash to purchase drugs, for example, have been known to rob banks.

"I don't have a specific number but I have to think a high percentage of the crime we see in Quincy District Court is driven by people with substance abuse problems," Morrissey said. "And that spills into the areas of domestic violence and others."

Coven said he views the court as part of the community's response to the increase in opiate addiction.

"We're a community court. We're here to serve the community. We're part of the community response, we're not all the community response and we don't hold ourselves out to be all of the community response," Coven said.

The Quincy District Court is home to one of Massachusetts' 16 drug courts. Residents who attend the drug court stay in a halfway house and are subject to frequent drug tests and weekly appearances at the courthouse. Federal studies have found rehabilitation programs such as the drug court lead to reduced crime rates and drug use. Coven said it has gotten harder to place individuals in halfway houses and get them into drug court.

"You remain in the house of correction or at MCI Framingham for women until we can find programs and it's becoming increasingly hard and more difficult, particularly in the winter. Beds don't turn over a lot in the winter," Coven said. "What we're able to accomplish in the drug court is dependent on the community providers and our being able to access services and treatment."

Keenan, who is the chair of the Legislature's joint public health committee, spoke about efforts on Beacon Hill to fight the increase in opiate addiction.

In particular, Keenan highlighted the state's prescription drug monitoring program. Under the program, practitioners are required to check the database every time they prescribe a patient with painkiller for the first time. That can help make sure a patient isn't going from doctor to doctor looking for drugs, a process known as 'doctor shopping.' By this fall, the database should be updating in real time.

"The state of New York has real time prescription monitoring and they have determined there has been a drop in doctor shopping of about 75 percent," Keenan said.

Beacon Hill lawmakers are also crafting new legislation to crackdown on Zohydro and other high potency painkillers, Keenan explained. The state attempted to place an outright ban on the drug, but a federal judge threw out the ban last week.

The legislation would allow only four types of physicians – neurologists, oncologists, chronic pain specialists, and doctors specializing in palliative or end-of-life care – to prescribe Zohydro and similar painkillers. Physicians specializing in those fields looking to prescribe them would need to undergo additional licensing and training with the state.

Spinks, Bay State Community Services' director of prevention and intervention services, said a detox center is needed in Quincy to help combat the rising abuse of heroin and painkillers. The city had a detox center, which was located near Quincy Medical Center, but it closed more than a decade ago.

"When that detox closed in 2002 help disappeared overnight here in the city. For the last 12 years we have seen an increase at the Quincy Medical Center emergency room for these same clients who ordinarily would have been treated at the detox," Spinks said.

"DPH (the state Department of Public Health) now hopes to site a new detox soon in our area. That really is a welcome relief. That I see as one of the major issues we need to address in the community. We don't have a detox and you have a lot of people on the street with heroin and no place to send them."

Race To Retirement

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

And they're off!

Wanda Worker takes the lead as she visits my Social Security and gets a handle on her retirement planning. John Q. Public gains ground as he uses Social Security's Retirement Estimator to get a clearer picture of his future retirement benefits. It's neck and neck. But wait—Average Joe picks up speed as he applies for retirement benefits on his laptop from the comfort of his recliner and takes the reins of his retirement.

May celebrates races. Whether you plan to watch the Kentucky Derby in early May or the Indy 500 later in the month, May is a month for those with the need for speed.

In the 15 minutes that pass as Average Joe tunes into the Kentucky Derby, he's able to go from worker to retiree. By the time the Indy 500 rolls around, he'll know how much his monthly benefit will be.

Race enthusiasts will be pleased to know that, although they should never make a speedy decision about when to retire, they can apply for retirement in a flash using our online services at www.socialsecurity.gov/onlineservices.

Jump into our Retirement Estimator to get an instant estimate of your future benefit amount. You can take pit stops and change the scenarios (as easily as pit crews change tires) to see how your benefit amount will change with different retirement dates and future earnings estimates. Get a jump start on your retirement planning at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

Zip over to my Social Security to open your secure online account, allowing you immediate access to your personal Social Security information. During your working years, you can use my Social Security to view your Social Security Statement to check your earnings record and see estimates of the future retirement, disability and survivor benefits you and your family may receive. If you already get benefits, use my Social Security to get your proof of benefits letter, change your address or phone number on our records, start or change your direct deposit information and check your benefit and payment information. Kick start your account at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

Ready to sprint to the finish line? Complete the online application for retirement in as little as 15 minutes at www.socialsecurity.gov/applyonline. Once you complete and submit the electronic application, in most cases, that's it—no more papers to sign or documents to provide.

Whatever your choice of race, if you have the need for speed, you'll get a rush out of our online services at www.socialsecurity.gov/onlineservices.

Ann K. Mulcahy, 79

A funeral Mass for Ann Kathleen (Gorman) Mulcahy, 79, a 1952 North Quincy High graduate, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 11 a.m. in St. Paul's Church, Hingham.

Mrs. Mulcahy died peacefully Sunday, warmed and comforted by the love of her devoted family.

Hers was a life lived with love. She was born in Hingham on May 15, 1934, the daughter of Francis "Frank" V. Gorman and Helen Marie (Bowen) Gorman. The family moved to Weymouth in 1951. Her father owned the West Elm Variety Store in Wollaston, where Mrs. Mulcahy and her sisters worked after school during the later years of the Great Depression and through World War II. She was a proud graduate of North Quincy High School, Class of 1952, where she was a drum majorette. She was still demonstrating high kicks on her 60th birthday.

Enormously compassionate, Mrs. Mulcahy provided loving care to many elderly family members. She always reached out to those in need, especially those who could not help themselves, or who had been abandoned by others. In the 1960s she spent many hours volunteering at Gaches Village, an institution for the care and rehabilitation of abandoned children with special needs outside of Manila in the Philippines. She also volunteered at St. Clare's halfway house on Cape Cod during the late 1990s and early 2000s helping women in early release programs return to productive lives.

Mrs. Mulcahy worked at Massa Lab in Hingham in the early 1950s, but it was her work as a pre-school teacher in the Ivory Coast in the early 1980s that she was most proud of. She also worked at the Hecht Company in Fairfax, VA in the mid 1980s, and as an administrative assistant at Corpus Christi Parish in Sandwich in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

In addition to Hingham and Weymouth, Mrs. Mulcahy lived in Rockland; Makati, Philippines; Abidjan, Ivory Coast; Vienna, VA; Sandwich, West Yarmouth, Centerville, and Mashpee.

ANN K. MULCAHY

Loving mother of Kathleen Ann Smith (Danny) of VA, William F. Mulcahy (Andrea Morris) of Littleton, Mary Ann Hurtubise of Mashpee, Elizabeth Ann Herndon of NC, John M. Mulcahy (Shannon Veradt) of West Yarmouth, and Rose Ann Stimson (Patrick) of Marstons Mills. Cherished grandmother of Theresa and Andrew (Crystal) Smith of VA, Jessica Ann and Matthew (Dave LaBranch) Hurtubise of NH, Ryan (Samantha), Justin and Becca Ann Herndon of NC, and Ceara Angelone of MA and NH. Great-grandmother of Aidan, Caroline, and Alyssa Ann Smith of VA, and Jevin and Jay Herndon, Hunter Harp, and Trinity Ann Sams (August 2014), all of NC. Also survived by her siblings Virginia F. Normandin of Weymouth and Edward V. Gorman (Mary) of NH.

Mrs. Mulcahy lived with, and was lovingly cared for, by her son John M. Mulcahy from 2003 to 2009, and her daughter Mary Ann Hurtubise from 2009 to 2013, to whom their sisters and brother are very grateful. The family also thanks the staff of Kindred – Eagle Pond Nursing Home in West Dennis for the wonderful care given to her during her stay there.

Visiting hours were yesterday (Wednesday) 4-8 p.m. at Pyne Keohane Funeral Home, Hingham. Celebration of life service at 10:15 a.m. today in the funeral home, prior to the Mass.

Interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Interior Decorating Tips

Email Your Question To Barbara Graceffa

Dear Secretary of the Interior:

I just received a beautiful cut crystal bowl from my grandmother. Rather than leaving it in my china cabinet, can you please give me some ideas on how to use it? Marie

Dear Marie,

Kudos to you for wanting to use this beautiful object in your everyday décor. Here are a few ideas. In the bedroom, use it on your bureau top or vanity table to hold make up, nail polishes, or bracelets. On your dining room table, use it as a seasonal centerpiece to hold floating flowers or candles, pinecones, mini pumpkins and gourds, even Christmas ornaments or Easter eggs, if you celebrate these holidays. In any room, you could fill it with potpourri. In your bathroom, use it to hold unwrapped soaps. Finally, place it on the foyer table to hold your keys and sunglasses.

Dear Secretary of the Interior,

I like a monochromatic color scheme. How to I make it stylish without being boring? Annie

Dear Annie,

By definition, a monochromatic color scheme uses tints and shades of one hue. The key is to use textures in your room. People typically understand how to use color, pattern, and different sizes and shapes to add interest to a room, but many forget to add texture to the mix.

Try some of these ideas: tufted fabric and/or nailheads on furniture, fringe on the area rug, a clay vase, baskets, quilted throw, nubby fabric or lace window treatments, a straw or grapevine wreath, and any glass, crystal, mirrored or metal objects. Have fun pulling it all together— a well pointed monochromatic room can be very stylish when you add textures.

Do you have a question on interior decorating? Send it to barbara@sec-interior and it may get printed in a future issue of The Quincy Sun.

owners expressed concerns over the project's impact on parking. Burgess said 18 parking spaces would be lost at the height of the project. There will be a net loss of 24 spaces, he explained, after the project is completed.

Those parking spots that will be lost include ones in front of City Hall. Johnson said the city is working to make sure residents can easily access the building, but noted traffic studies have shown cars stay in those spots throughout the day.

"We found folks were parking there for over four, six hours. You can draw your own conclusions from that – we certainly did. Those are the spaces that are right out in front of City Hall," Johnson said. "We understand access to City Hall is very important – handicapped access and elderly access – and we're working to address those issues."

Some members of the business community who attended the meeting also expressed concern about the project. Lisa Lamme, owner of the Gypsy Kitchen at 1241 Hancock St., asked if there would be a 24-7 hotline to call during construction if any issues arise. Burgess said he was unaware of any such telephone being used.

Lamme also asked if contractor was required to install signs stating businesses remain open during construction, which Burgess said the contractor is required to do by the construction plans. Lamme then asked if the contractor or anyone else would pay for newspaper advertisements sending that same message. Burgess said that isn't included in the construction plans.

Lamme went on to ask if the city or state would help businesses recoup their losses if the project hurts their bottom lines.

"Is there money available for businesses?" she said. "Say they see a 30 percent decrease during this time, is there anything set up for that for certain businesses?"

Harrington responded that nothing in the contract between MassDOT and the contractor addresses the issue of potential business losses.

Jeffrey Bertman of Rogers Jewelry at 1402 Hancock St. said he was concerned about access to stores during construction. Burgess had stated the contractor would provide temporary access during sidewalk demolition and construction. Bertman, however, said similar wooden ramps had been used in the past and made it difficult for customers to enter and exit his store.

"I've been through the redo of downtown Quincy before with new sidewalks and stuff," Bertman said. "The last time they did the sidewalks and new trees, one of the problems was they ripped up the sidewalks in October and made it very unpassable during the Christmas selling season when people had to walk the plank."

Bertman also noted that trees planted by the city more than a decade ago have been problematic because they have outgrown their grates. Those trees also attract bugs.

"The new trees they put it – if you look around the square now 10 or 15 years later – the grates are buckling. They never planned for the roots," Bertman said. "And the trees they put in brought little, biting bugs. I hope that's a consideration, because since they replanted the downtown I've had to have an exterminator every fall and every spring for all the bugs that are biting everybody in my store."

Harrington and Johnson said the new trees would be installed using tree ways, and not grates. The tree ways allow the roots to spread out more than grates do. The species of trees being planted has not been chosen yet, but Harrington doesn't expect problems from the issues that Bertman referenced.

"I don't expect we will have those issues with the trees," Harrington said. "But I'm glad you brought them out. It makes us all aware we best deal with it."

ADAMS GREEN road and sidewalk improvement project got underway Tuesday as crews began demolishing one of the three traffic islands near the United First Parish Church (right background) near Hancock and Washington Streets in Quincy Center. All three islands will be removed as part of the initial phase of road and sidewalk work.

Central Wins Middle School Swimming Title

Atlantic Places Second, Broad Meadows Third In Intra-City Championship

CENTRAL MIDDLE SCHOOL'S swim team recently won the intra-city Middle School Swimming Championship.

ATLANTIC - Julia Klincewicz and Alex Pham.

BROAD MEADOWS - Caitlyn Caggiano and Hunter Schofield.

POINT WEBSTER - Kumudini Devalla and Christine Broderick.

STERLING - Amy Trillcott and Tammy Ma.

Central amassed 210 total points thanks to 115 points from the boys and 95 from the girls. Overall, Atlantic placed second with 132 points, 77 of those points accumulated by the girls.

Broad Meadows was third with 82.50 points owing to the boys' 51-point production just edging out Sterling that finished with 76 points (girls 36, boys 40). Point Webster ended the day in fifth with 34.50 points from its girls squad.

Meet Director Bob McGillicuddy thanked all the middle school coaches: Central - Beth Donovan & Paul Griffith; Sterling - Christine Prendiville; Atlantic - Chris Ranft; Point Webster - Michelle McMahon & Kellee Flynn; and Broad Meadows - Chris Murtaugh; the meet couldn't have run without them. He also acknowledged Chris Murtaugh who started each event in addition to his Broad Meadows coaching duties. McGillicuddy also expressed thanks to the parents for their support and creating a positive experience for the swimmers.

For the Central girls, Julianna Chieng led the charge winning the 25-yard backstroke (17.91) and placing fourth in the heavily-contested 25 free (14.13). Also earning first and fourth was Brenna Kirby who swam 18.72 and 15.63 in the 25 breaststroke and 25 butterfly events, respectively. Hannah Ford won the 50-yard freestyle and took fifth in half the distance (14.43), and Ina Hoti was second in both the 25 free (13.78) and 25 fly (15.21).

Only 25 points separated the Central girls from the next opponent, Atlantic, thanks to two gold medals from seventh grader Emily Steele who swam 1:02.69 in the 100 free and established a new middle school record of 31.38 in the 50 backstroke. Teammate Sarah O'Donovan won the 50 breast (39.94), and Julia Klincewicz placed second in the 50 free (32.10) and third in the 25 free (13.86).

For Sterling, Amy Trillcott captured the 2014 title in the 25 fly (15.10) and was second in the 100 free (1:17.15). Kumudini Devalla helped Point Webster's cause earning first in the 25 free (13.66) and second in the 50 breaststroke (40.87).

Denise O'Donovan and Noah Le, both of Atlantic, each took their respective one-meter diving events.

Central's Daniel Wong set two new records winning the 25 fly (14.50), and his effort of 36.72 in the 50 breaststroke undercut the previous record by almost four seconds. Eighth grader David Hartford dominated the freestyle events swimming 13.37 in the 25 free and 29.82 in the 50 free. Aymen Sadaka swept the backstroke events, breaking his own middle school standard with a new record of 16.60 in the 25 and 37.22 in twice the distance. Adam Tlacoxolal was first in the both the 25 breaststroke (19.82) and 100 freestyle (1:11.97). Sadaka, Wong and Tlacoxolal teamed up with Lucien Theberge to set a new record of 1:10.84 in the 100-yard medley relay.

Cory Chiu fronted Atlantic finishing second in the 25-yard breaststroke (21.09) and third in twice the distance (45.46). Derek Nguyen of Broad Meadows earned second in the 25 backstroke (19.13) and third in the 50 free (36.73). Marc Ghossoub took second in the 25 free (14.50), and Hunter Schofield was silver in the 25 fly (15.03). Sterling's Kevin Warner placed second in the 100 yard free (1:25.47) and fifth in the 50 breaststroke (49.90).

The Middle School city swimming and diving program has grown from 70 athletes to 176 this year. Former middle school participants competing at the high school levels included freshman Bailee Carey (6th at States) and Stephanie MacFarland (9th in the Patriot League) who gave a diving exhibition while MacFarland also played the National Anthem. High School captains Carolyn Schwartz and Marlena Forrester volunteered at the meet along with high school record-holder Thomas Tran. Meg Caggiano, Clare Doherty, and Emilia Kapcia also helped.

Quincy Lions Club 5K For Sight May 10

The Quincy Lions Club's 17th Annual 5K for Sight will be held Saturday, May 10 at Pageant Field in Quincy.

The event will begin at 8:30 a.m. with the children's 1K race. The adult 5K race – which is on a course certified by U.S. Track & Field – will begin at 9 a.m.

Day-of-race registration will open at 7 a.m. Prizes will be awarded to race winners in a number of age categories, and the first 150 registrants will receive a free race T-shirt and runner's giveaway bag.

Online registration for the race is open at www.QuincyLionsClub.com. The registration fee is $25 for adults and $8 for the children's 1K race. Participants who register online in advance receive a discount on the registration fee ($20 adults/$5 kids).

Quincy Lions Club President Jeff Poirier said this year's 5K will feature a variety of family-friendly activities, including entertainment, prize raffles and more.

"The 5K for Sight is a fun event for the whole family," Poirier said. "The local community has been very supportive of the Lions Club's efforts to help blind and visually impaired individuals, and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy this fun and worthwhile event."

Proceeds from the 5K for Sight benefit eye research and the Quincy Lions Club's community service activities, including providing free eye exams and free eyeglasses for local residents in need, offering free vision and health screenings, providing college scholarships to local high school students and more.

Balanced Offense Powers Quincy Baseball Over B-L

It was not merely the fact that they scored 12 runs. It was also the way, or ways, that they scored them.

Quincy played small ball and power ball. The Presidents worked walks, sacrificed runners, stole bases and squeezed home runs. Small ball. They also belted nine hits, three doubles, a soaring smash to center by Tyler Beach and exploded for seven runs in the fifth inning. Power ball.

Junior Bobby Salvucci went 4-4, had five RBI, and scored a run to highlight a balanced attack and lift Quincy to a 12-9 win over Boston Latin in a non-league contest played at a frigid Adams Field Thursday afternoon.

Senior righty Kenny Sorensen hurled two innings of shutout, hitless relief to earn the win and boost his record to 2-0. It was the second win over Latin for the Presidents in the opening weeks of the season. Quincy finished the week at 4-1.

"We have good balance in our lineup between seniors and juniors who have gained varsity experience," said coach Pat Bryan. "We swung the bats well. We're still working to clean up our defense and pitching a little, but I'm happy with our progress."

If there is a pattern emerging about Quincy's lineup in the early going, it is its balance. It is a different hitter leading the attack each game. In the first Latin game, it was Robbie Munroe. Against Scituate, it was Beach. Against Hingham, it was Padraig Geaney. In the second Latin game, it was Salvucci who combines with Matt Davis and Munroe to give the Presidents a strong 3-4-5 presence in the middle of the lineup.

Salvucci not only drilled the ball, he drilled it when it counted. He had a two-run single to tie the score at 2-2 in the first. He had a big RBI hit in the seven-run fifth. He roped a singled for two runs in the sixth for a cushion that Quincy would need when Latin put up five in the seventh. He looked very much a confident, dangerous varsity hitter.

"Bobby has had over 100 varsity at bats as a junior, and it shows in his presence at the plate," said Bryan.

Beach and Johnny Marsinelli in the 1-2 spots ignited the offense at the top the lineup. Beach, who was 10-17 through five games, had two walks and a long, booming double to center which drove in a run. He scored twice and made the pitcher work in each of his at-bats by laying off anything that wasn't in the strike zone.

"He did just what a lead-off hitter should do. He got on base and saw a lot of pitches," said Bryan whose team drew seven walks.

Marsinelli simply makes good things happen. He has fine bat control, a good eye at the plate, and excellent speed. He walked twice, singled and scored three runs. In the third, he walked and stole second. When Munroe grounded out, Marsinelli broke for third on the throw to first. When Latin fired wildly trying to get him at third, Marsinelli trotted home with a run he created by himself. One player. No hits. One run. Not a bad formula.

"He just knows how to play the game. When he gets on bases, he knows how to force mistakes," said Bryan.

Sorensen, who threw nine relief innings to get the win in the first Latin game, had shorter duty, but was just as effective. He relieved sophomore lefty Cody Desmond, who threw well for four innings, giving two hits and striking out five. Sorensen used his variety of arm angles and change of speeds to shut down Latin for two innings and give his mates a chance to break open the game.

"You can depend on Kenny. You know he is going to throw strikes. I thought Cody threw well too. It was a good improvement from his first start," said Bryan.

Mike Pugsely had a double, an RBI and scored a run. Davis added a double, a sacrifice bunt and scored twice. Munroe drew two walks, was on base three times and scored twice. Geaney had a single, a sacrifice fly and an RBI. Greg Paulo waked and scored while Liam Fitzmaurice had an RBI on a squeeze bunt.

"Geaney's sacrifice fly was a key RBI in our big inning, and Liam did a good job getting that suicide squeeze bunt down," said Bryan.

Latin held a 4-3 lead going into the fifth when Quincy opened up the game its seven-run rally. Beach and Marsinelli started it with walks and Salvucci and Pugsley had RBI hits. The Presidents led, 10-4 going into sixth and added two more in the sixth on a two-run single by Salvucci for a 12-4 edge.

Latin pushed across five in the seventh which brought up thoughts of hypothermia and a repeat of the 12-inning marathon the two teams played on opening day. However, Mike Saccoach entered in relief to end the rally with Paulo making a nice scoop at first to finish the game.

Quincy will play in the holiday tournament at Adams Field Thursday. The Presidents will host Braintree in what should be an excellent non-leaguer Friday at 11 a.m.

NQ Boys Volleyball Improves To 6-3

By BILL GRIFFIN

Communication can be spoken or unspoken. It can come from vocal warnings or directions. It can come from a silent understanding, a sense of where a teammate will be when words are not needed because there is a firm connection between players who have been together for countless games and practices.

Communication is the foundation of passing. Passing is the foundation of volleyball. North Quincy's talented front line, led by seniors Oresti Bega and Efthim Butka, talked, reacted, and played together seamlessly, making the right pass and taking the right shot en route to a 3-0 sweep over Taunton in a Southern Alliance League match last week.

"I think the thing that's pleased me most about the season is our communication," said North coach Jason Cai whose team went to 6-3 with the 25-16, 25-17, 25-8 victory. "I always stress it's important to talk to each other at all times, to let teammates know where you are, who is going after the ball, what pass is going to be made. We done that well all season."

The connection between Bega and Butka is a connection formed by sharing full careers as varsity volleyball players. Bega (24 assists, three kills, three aces, two digs) knows where and how Butka wants the ball. He sets the pass at the right height, the right speed, the right distance from the net. Butka (14 kills, four aces, two digs) never has to worry about the loft or accuracy of the pass. It will be there. All he has to do is hit the shot.

Butka was terrific. He scored off slams, touch volleys and serves. He worked to keep points alive. He moved in concert with Bega, Angelo Taho, and Kyle Richardson along the front line, getting to his spot and timing his jump to get over the top of a slam or find an open patch of floor for a soft finish with touch.

With North holding a slim 16-14 lead in the first, he opened up the game with a kill and a service winner. Late in the second game, he scored or set up five straight points with two kills, two wins off serve, and a nice feed to Bega who moved the ball along to set up Anthony Green for the winning slam. In the third game, he fired one smoking serve inches inside the sideline and then followed with another which kissed the baseline for a pair of aces.

"Efthim would have had more kills if his hitting percentage was a little higher," said Cai. "He played a good all-around match. He serves well, both the hard serves and the floaters."

Along with Bega and Butka, the most interesting story of the match was the continued development of Butka's basketball buddies Green and Richardson. Green and Richardson are each making their varsity volleyball debut in the spring of their senior years. There has been striking progress in each player, but more importantly, there is the obvious joy each takes in his new sport. Each plays with a smile on his face.

Richardson (three kills, three digs) has the instincts of an athlete. Give him a sport and he can play it. North can use him at the net because of the leaping ability which made him such a good rebounder. He can get high enough above the net for the right downward angle for kills. He also plays defense where his quickness and hustle keeps alive points. His return of serve and ability to control the ball is good considering the short time he has played the sport.

"Less than a month of varsity volleyball and he's a varsity player. That's impressive," said Cai. "He's come a long way in a short time. If he played four years of volleyball, he'd be an All-Scholastic, no doubt in my mind."

Green (11 kills) influenced the match in a tightly-contested first set. He won five points on two slams, two touch shots, and a reaction volley when the ball was on him in an instant. In the the third game, he played a point that Cai would like to see more often. Green, all 6'9" of him, took a full swing at a slam which won the point and nearly caused bodily harm to a Taunton defender.

"That's what we've been working on with him: Take a full swing," said Cai. "When he does, he hits with power. We don't want him to just tap the ball. It's a case of learning to get in position for a kill on the the varsity level."

Led by Shiggy Zhang (10 digs and strong serving), Calvin Ma and Richardson, North did a fine job reacting and hitting the floor to keep alive points. The best came late in the second game when the ball went over the net more times than April has days. Zhang, Richardson, and Butka kept the point going and Bega finished it with a perfectly-angled cross court volley for the winner.

"No one gave up the whole match. We played with enthusiasm," said Cai. "One of the best feelings for a coach is to see his players diving to keep the ball off the floor. We did that today."

Cain was also pleased with his depth. With several players missing, Taho, Kevin Huang, and Nathan Gonzales stepped up and played fine matches.

"We were a little shorthanded, and we needed good contributions from different players. They gave us a good lift," said Cai.

Houghs Neck Manets Football Sign-Ups May 17

Houghs Neck Manets Football sign-ups for the 2014 season will be held Saturday, May 17th at Pageant Field from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Kids in 3rd grade through 8th grade can participate in tackle football, kids in 1st grade through 4th grade can participate in flag football and kids in 1st grade through 8th grade can participate in cheer leading.

Nicole Parry Earns Pitcher Of The Week Honors

Former Quincy High star Nicole Parry fired two complete-game shutouts victories for Salve Regina to earn her second Pitcher of the Week honor of the season in the Commonwealth Coast Conference.

Parry, a sophomore, was 3-1 for the week with an ERA of 0.72 for the week ending April 14. She struck out 33 and walked just one batter in four games.

Parry fired a three-hitter and struck out 13 to blank Gordon College, 6-0. Parry also shut out Curry, 4-0, with a five-hitter. She fanned eight and did not walk a batter in the win.

Parry allowed just two earned runs and struck out eight in a 6-5 win over Western New England College.

She pitched well in her only loss of the week, a 3-2 decision against UMass Boston. She allowed just one earned run, struck out four and did not walk a batter.

Youth Gaelic Football Registration Sunday

Trinity Youth GAA will hold player registration on Sunday, April 27 at noon at Andrews Park (off Belcher Circle in East Milton.) Trinity practices at Andrews Park Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m. and will be fielding teams in 2014 from U-6 to U-12 ages.

First practice is Tuesday, April 29 and the season runs until the end of August. Trinity competes with other clubs in the region throughout the season.

Registration is $100/child for the season with a family maximum of $250.

The Pat O'Brien Cup will commence on Sunday, April 27 with the first round of games. The first round draw is as follows:

Wolfe Tones v. Donegal

Shannon Blues v. Cork

Christopher's v. Kerry

Galway v. Connemara Gaels

Aidan McAnespies v Mayo.

Games will be played on Field C at the Irish Cultural Center. The football championship begins May 25.

Presidents Roll To 11-6 Victory Over Fontbonne

By JOE REARDON

As ferocious a pitching ace Saxon Bresnahan has been on the mound for Quincy High, there will be those days where she finds herself in a funk and not at her very best. It happens to the Jennie Finch's and the Cat Oysterman's of the softball world so it's inevitably going to happen to a high school pitcher, no matter how impressive her resume.

That's when the Presidents' potent offensive attack kicks in on all cylinders.

Quincy had seven hits, including a mammoth three-run homer by Nicole Jorgensen to roll to an 11-6 win over nonleague opponent Fontbonne last Thursday at frigid Cunningham Park. The victory put the Presidents at 4-0 on the season after Patriot League victories against Whitman-Hanson, Scituate and Hingham. The win was also retribution of sorts after Fontbonne collected two close victories over the Presidents last season.

"They took two really close ones away from us, but they're a really good hitting team," said Quincy head coach Greg Sommers.

The chilly conditions – complete with snowflakes - affected Bresnahan, who allowed 12 hits, but still had her location throughout in striking out 12 Duck batters.

"Absolutely," said Sommers when asked if the cold was a factor for Bresnahan. "They (pitchers) can't stay loose and they can't stay warm. Their muscles kind of tighten up out there. At the beginning of the game she had some tough times hitting her spots. The girls just have to rally behind her and get the hits. They stayed on it and it turned out well."

Bresnahan did the job in helping her own cause on the mound by lacing a two-run single to tie the game at 3-3 in the second and then doubled home a run in the big six-run fourth inning. Jorgensen, Quincy's MVP so far this spring, continued her torrid hitting by jumping all over an Elizabeth Will fastball for the three-run blast to make it 11-4.

Quincy was on base early and often against the Ducks.

Lucia Buzzel reached on an error to lead off the game for Quincy and Taylor Parry was hit by a pitch to put runners at first and second. Will got Bresnahan to fly to center and Angelina Avitabile to pop out, but Quincy came out of the inning with a 1-0 lead on Kate McGahey's single that scored Buzzel.

Fontbonne came right back and started a two-out rally after Bresnahan sandwiched a pair of strikeouts around a walk to Rebecca Olivieri. Noelle Sass singled and Quincy error led to two runs. Meghan Shea proceeded to lace a single to take a 3-1 lead. Sorgensen pounded a line drive single to left and with a runner on and Bresnahan singled home two runs to tie it 3-3.

The hitting barrage continued in Fontbonne's half of the second when Haley Mueller blasted a home run to deep center to put the Ducks back up 4-3. Three errors resulted in two more runs for the Presidents to make it 6-3 in the third. Bresnahan struck out a pair of batters in Fontbonne's scoreless third and Quincy put the game away for good with a big fourth inning. McGahey singled in Parry for a run and two runs came in on Lean McColgan's groundout to go along with Bresnahan's and Sorensen's run-scoring hits to break open the game at 11-4. The Ducks were unable to get to Bresnahan as she struck out the side in the bottom of the inning. Fontbonne had runners at second and third in the sixth, but Bresnahan got Olivieri to line out for the final out. The Ducks did get one run back in the seventh when Caroline Shea singled home Katherine Nolan, who reached on a triple.

The Presidents were scheduled to play one game over the spring break, leaving time for the squad to catch its breath before returning to the grind of the season. "It kind of gives the girls a little time off – stay loose and keep throwing," said Sommers. "Having a few days off can be nice."

Quincy Spring Track Defeats Scituate, Duxbury

By JOE REARDON

Massachusetts spring track meets are notoriously cold, raw and flat out miserable early in the season and the performances are mainly average until the warm weather finally emerges.

Quincy High track coach John Green and his athletes have plenty to look forward to in the coming weeks after some very strong early-season performances that have led to personals bests, despite the less than optimal conditions.

"We had a pretty good winter," said first-year head coach Green. "Outdoors is going pretty good. We have a lot of good, hard-working kids. I've been an assistant a couple of years. I'm trying to build a program and I'd really like to have a winning record."

The Presidents were in a good position within the notoriously tough Patriot League. After the first three meets, Quincy had posted victories over both Scituate (87-31) and Duxbury (71-56) and wound up on the losing side (71-59) against a stacked Randolph team.

"We finally had a nice warm day (against Scituate) and a lot of kids had their best performances, Green said.

The Presidents have let their performances do their talking for them. Mike Munroe is off to a strong start in the shot put circle, having gone undefeated and putting up a personal best heave of 47-10. "He's a big strong kid and a really hard worker," said Green. "He's had a big jump from the winter to the spring"

Weymouth High transfer Curtis Called has given Quincy a shot in the arm in the weight events and has already qualified for the Div. 1 class meet in both the discus and shot put. His longest throw of the spring – 130 feet – was a new personal best.

First-year team member Read Laftih has cleared 5-8 in the high jump and his stellar long jump effort off 20-3 stamped his ticket to the class meet.

The team did have one warm day and took full advantage with a win over Scituate. Sophomore Aiden Smyth has excelled in the 400 hurdles and 800 and is almost guaranteed to run faster once temperatures become more meet-friendly. Smyth has put up times of 64.5 in the 400 and turned in a 2:08 time at 800 meters.

"We finally had a nice warm day and a lot of kids had their best performances," said Green.

Quincy also has a solid presence in the 100 with Lakuan Mason and De-More Holding providing a strong 1-2 with both having sprinted to a time of 11.5. Look for Mason's and Holding's times bottom out when the temperatures rise. The 4x100 team is very good with Mason, Holsen, Jayvee Handsome-Fields and Read Latin having already combined to run 45.54.

Sophomore Hashim Hamdi is one of the more versatile runners having clocked 65.9 in the 400 hurdles, 18.34 in the 110 hurdles and a high jump best of 5-5. James Lam should be in the javelin hunt when the big meets roll around after posting a terrific heave of 145-10.

The girls' team has several skilled and talented individuals as well with several potentially competing at the state level later in the season. Brandi Parker qualified for the class meet in the long jump with a 15-0 leap and has also triple jumped 32-7. So far this spring, Parker has gone undefeated in the 400 at 65.0.

Laqueen Arias will join Parker at the class meet after throwing the javelin 99-4. Nakiya Douglas has become an important part of the girls' team in both the 100 and javelin and usually finishes in third place to pick up points for the Presidents. Tasha Alexandre has improved with experience and has a 79-1 on her resume.

WE HAVE GOLFERS' BACKS

By some estimates, four out of five golfers suffer from lower back pain. Other golfing injuries (involving the shoulders, elbows, and wrists) often arise as a consequence of the body's compensatory efforts to save the back. To avert these problems, it may help right-handed golfers improve their form by bending their right knee and turning their left shoulder downward on their backswings. This adjustment (turning the left shoulder down) shifts the twisting action of the swing to the thoracic spine (mid-back) and away from the lumbar spine (lower back). The difference is that the thoracic spine is designed to rotate while the lumbar spine is not. Chiropractors may not be golf instructors, but we are expert at analyzing body mechanics.

Let us at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC suggest some types of chiropractic care to improve your pain when playing golf. Professional chiropractic care is one of the best ways to manage or prevent spinal problems and maintain a healthier life. We are located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we will only accept you as a patient if we feel we can help you. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

NQ Boys' Hoop Team Presented Sportsmanship Award

The accolades keep coming for the North Quincy High School boys' basketball program, six weeks after the Red Raiders' second straight trip to the MIAA Division I South Sectional final.

On March 22, coach Kevin Barrett and three of his seniors — Kyle Richardson, Efthim Butka and Anthony Green — accepted the 2013-14 Sportsmanship Award from the International Association of Approved Basketball Officials (IAABO), Plymouth County District Board 54. The award is presented annually to "the school that best exemplifies the highest degree of sportsmanship, character and ethics among its players, coaches, administration and spectators."

The IAABO nomination noted that throughout the season its members observed the leadership of the entire North Quincy coaching staff in "cultivating an atmosphere of good sportsmanship." Specifically, it read: "We watched student-athletes like seniors Kyle Richardson, Greg Clarke, Efthim Butka and Anthony Green grow into not only good, fundamentally sound basketball players, but also into good, respectful young adults. They were an extension of Coach Barrett whenever they were on the floor. These seniors, as well as the rest of the Red Raider basketball team, are proof that you can compete at a high level and still cultivate an atmosphere of good sportsmanship in the program."

Barrett gave credit to assistant coaches Chuck O'Brien and Joe MacRitchie for their roles in what the IAABO referred to as the Red Raiders ability to avoid "displays of showmanship or over-the-top emotions that sometimes leads to ridiculing or embarrassing other teams."

"Being recognized for sportsmanship, character and ethics is as meaningful and as satisfying as the success we have had on the court," said Barrett, who earned his 100th career win in his eighth season as head coach. "It's a reflection on the school and our program, and something the entire city can be proud of." The Red Raiders have won the Patriot League Sportsmanship Award, as voted by Patriot League coaches, following the 2009-10, 2010-11, 2011-12, and 2012-13 seasons.

In another testament to the Red Raiders' season, Richardson, Butka and Green have been recognized for their individual play. All three have been named to The Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic team. Butka, a 6-4 forward and the team's leading scorer, is also a member of The Boston Globe All-Scholastic team and the Boston Herald Dream Team. Green, a 6-9 center, joined Butka on the Boston Herald Dream Team and was one of five players named to the ESPNBoston Massachusetts All-State Team. ESPNBoston also included Green on its statewide All-Defensive Team. Green plans to attend prep school powerhouse Tilton (N.H.) Academy next year, while Butka and Richardson are undecided but would like to continue playing basketball in college.

The recognition follows a season in which the 23-2 Red Raiders claimed the Patriot League championship with a 13-0 mark, earned the #1 seed in the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) Division I South Sectional, and won tournament games against Newton South, cross-city rival Quincy, and Newton North. The season ended with a 65-58 loss to #2 seed Catholic Memorial in front of massive "Raider Nation" crowd on March 4 at UMass Boston. The Red Raiders are 58-11 over the last three seasons, with two Patriot League titles and three appearances in the MIAA tournament. The 2013-14 squad was ranked #8 in ESPNBoston's year-end, statewide poll.

On March 21, Barrett coached a team of South Select All-Stars in the 12th Annual Fitzy-Nolan Games, held at Quincy High School. Barrett's squad featured Red Raiders Richardson, Butka and Green, along with James Lam of Quincy High School, as they teamed up with other top juniors and seniors south of Boston to take on the Boston Amateur Basketball Club (BABC) Juniors. Barrett was joined on the sidelines by Bo Ruggiero, a 1960 graduate of North Quincy High School and boys' basketball coach at Cohasset High School. Proceeds from the Fitzy-Nolan event help local players attend basketball camps across New England each summer.

Quincy Competing In Town Cup Hockey Tourney

The sixth annual South Shore Town Cup [SSTC] tournament is underway at the Bog Arena in Kingston for all boys and girls hockey divisions.

Featuring the top hockey talent south of Boston, eligible players must live within the municipality they are representing. For the U-18 Boys division teams, several Division 1 college commitment players will lead their respective teams, which will include Canton, Milton, Hingham, Weymouth, Greater Plymouth, Greater Scituate, Greater Bridgewater, Greater Marshfield, Hanover, Greater Pembroke, Greater Rockland, Braintree, and Duxbury.

With help from the Quincy Elks Club and Wollaston Golf Club, the U-18 Quincy team will make its first appearance in the annual hockey classic. Led by Patriot League All-Star and NQHS netminder Nolan Greene and QHS Captains Bryan O'Callahan & Pat Freeman, the team is expected to be a relatively unknown entity.

"Anytime you can represent your city, there is a heightened sense of urgency and pride as a player," said O'Callaghan.

Much of the U-18 Quincy team, which may include a trio of Catholic Memorial Knights, played Quincy Youth Hockey (QYH) together.

"It's a great opportunity to re-kindle those memories one last time," said QHS centerman Jake Hallisey, who was also part of a U-16 QYH National team that travelled to Michigan two years ago. Former Boston College standout and current Boston College High (BCH) JV coach Brian O'Hanley (03) and BCH Hall of Famer Mike Hussey (82) will be behind the bench with a couple of emerging Eagles anchoring the defense.

With many of the U-18 hockey players finishing up their spring sport seasons (baseball, golf, and lacrosse) in parallel, the Quincy team will be practicing before school to prepare for the SSTC tournament. Beginning June 8th, a 4-game play-in round will decide the medal round seeds for the ensuing championship game on June 13th.

"Unifying a diverse and dedicated group of student-athletes in a relatively short time-frame is both a privilege and challenge," said Hussey.

Houghs Neck Community Yard Sale June 7

The Houghs Neck Community Council will host its sixth annual Community Yard Sale on Saturday, June 7th from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the lawn of the Most Blessed Sacrament Church, 2 Darrow St. in Houghs Neck.

The Houghs Neck Community Council is accepting applications to reserve a 15x15 booth.

Event application deadline is June 5th.

Sports & More Programs

The Quincy Recreation Department offered two Sports & More programs during April school vacation.

The program was set for Wednesday, April 23 and Thursday, April 24 from 5:30 to 8 p.m., in the Quincy High School Gym for boys and girls in Grade Three through Grade Six.

The cost of the program is $5. Use the Huntley Road/rear parking lot entrance of QHS for drop off and pick up.

Supervised traditional activities include group games and organized play like capture the flag, dodge ball, "Minute to Win It" contest, arts and crafts, sports and more. The program is open to boys and girls entering grades 3-6. Supervision will be provided by members of the Quincy Recreation Department Staff.

Enrollment will be limited, and a minimum number will be needed for each session for proper group activities. Registration is ongoing and can be done online at www.QuincyRec.com or in person at One Merrymount Parkway from 9 a.m to 4 p.m. For additional information, call 617-376-1394.

Free Screening Of 'The Pin' May 1 At Milton Library

Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills and the Boston Workmen's Circle will co-sponsor a free screening of the 2013 Canadian film "The Pin" in the Keys Room of the Milton Public Library on Thursday, May 1, at 7:15 p.m. The film is being shown in honor of Yom HaShoah/ Holocaust Memorial Day, and it is free and open to the public, but seating is limited. Doors open at 7:00 p.m., and a brief discussion will follow the film.

"The Pin" is a Yiddish film with English subtitles, written and directed by Naomi Jaye, and is rated R. It is about two young Eastern Europeans who find love while hiding in a barn during WW II. After a life of regret, the young man, now old, is faced with an opportunity for redemption. The film has a 4-star IMDB rating.

Elouise A. Troup

A memorial service for Elouise A. Troup, 91, of Quincy and Braintree was held April 18 at Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Troup died peacefully the morning of April 15 at home with her family.

She was a retired realtor and real estate appraiser who owned and operated Elouise Troup Real Estate for over 40 years. She was past president of the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors and the Quincy Toastmistress Club, as well as the education chairman that helped plan educational seminars. Mrs. Troup was the director of the Massachusetts Association of Real Estate Board, a Braintree Town Meeting member from 1970-1978, deputy assessor of the town of Braintree from 1971-1976, which lead to being elected as Braintree's assessor. She was also elected the coveted title of realtor of the year.

Other activities included her work on the convention committee and the program and conference committee for the state association, participation in the Make America Better committee, a past member of the Quincy and South Shore Chamber of Commerce, she was active in the Heart Fund campaign, and a past member of the finance committee of Bethany Church as well as the Fellowship Club. Other qualifications included M.R.A designation granted by the Mass. Board of Real Estate Appraisers and a trustee of the Mass Board of Real Estate Appraisers.

ELOUISE A. TROUP

Mrs. Troup was born in Quincy on Aug. 30, 1922. Her parents Bertha and Oscar Peterson were both from Sweden and moved here in their teenage years. She attended both Quincy and Braintree public schools and graduated from Braintree High School.

She was married to the late Richard W. Troup for 59 years. During WWII, she worked at the Brooklyn Navy Yard where her husband was stationed as a lieutenant junior grade. During their marriage, they enjoyed boating and cruising to Cape Cod. They kept their boat at Braintree Yacht Club where her husband was a past commodore.

Loving mother of Richard S. Troup and the late Lorraine Troup Walsh. Cherished grandmother of Deborah Carlson, Kristen Meleedy, and Jennifer and Ericka Troup. Great-grandmother of five. Dear sister of the late Doris Salvucci and Bert Peterson.

Funeral arrangements were made by Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Assoc., 20 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be tempted to be more assertive when dealing with a job-related matter. But a carefully measured approach works best at getting the cooperation you're looking for.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) While others urge you to act now, you instinctively recognize that a move at this time is not in your best interests. You should know when to do so by week's end.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A busy schedule keeps you on the move for much of the week. But things ease up by the time the weekend arrives, allowing you to reconnect with family and friends.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Travel dominates the week, and despite some delays in getting to where you want to go, the overall experience should prove to be a positive one in many ways.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Leonine self-confidence comes roaring back after a brief period of doubt and helps you get through a week of demanding challenges and ultimately emerge triumphant.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Virgos who have made a major commitment -- personal or professional -- should be able to tap into a renewed reservoir of self-confidence to help them follow through.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You soon could receive news from a surprising source that could cause you to change your mind about how you had planned to deal with an ongoing job-related problem.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A surprise move of support from a colleague who has never been part of your circle of admirers helps influence others to take a new look at what you've put on the table.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While a bold decision to take an "I know what I'm doing" approach impresses some colleagues, it also raises the risk of causing resentment among others.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A misunderstanding 'twixt you and a friend might not be your fault at all, despite what he or she suggests. Talk it out to see at what point the confusion might have started.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Getting into a community operation fulfills the Aquarian's need to help people. It also can lead to new contacts that might one day help you with a project.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A minor problem could delay the start of a long-anticipated trip for two. Use the time to recheck your travel plans. You might find a better way to get where you're going.
BORN THIS WEEK: You are a dedicated romantic who seeks both excitement and stability in your relationships.

Producer Donates $24,000 To Quincy Music Department

Mick Skidmore, co-trustee of Spirit frontman Randy California's estate, has generously donated $24,000 over the past three years to the Quincy Music Department.

Skidmore was a producer for Spirit in addition to providing photography services, writing liner notes, mastering recordings, and gathering tracks for compilation records. Originally from London, he moved to Quincy in 1982 and considers it a second home.

California, born Randy Wolfe in 1951 in Los Angeles, formed Spirit in 1967 with his stepfather Ed Cassidy. Their music was a fusion of rock, folk, blues, jazz, and psychedelia. As a member of a musical family, he was naturally drawn to the industry at a young age. He learned the basics of guitar from his mother Bernice Pearl and received lessons from noted blues musicians Mance Lipscomb and Sleepy John Estes. He eventually honed his talent by performing with Jimi Hendrix who he met by chance at New York's Manny's Music Store when he was 15-years-old. In fact, the nickname "Randy California" was given to him by Hendrix..

The relationship between Skidmore and the QPS band program began one evening at the Fowler House Cafe. According to QHS/ NQHS Band Director Richard Kenneally, North Quincy High School English teacher Thomas Henderson was enjoying an evening out and the two casually struck up a conversation. Upon learning that Henderson was affiliated with NQHS, Skidmore offered to donate half of the profits resulting from sales of Spirit CDs to Quincy music programs.

"Randy's mother…made me co-trustee of his estate when she passed away several years ago," wrote Skidmore in an email. "She wanted funds generated by CD sales and royalties for the benefit of children in public school systems that otherwise wouldn't have or be able to use musical instruments."

"In this day and age where funds are always being cut I believe it's a worthy cause and given Randy's generous nature I believe he would have been happy with it and from what [Kenneally] has told me it has been helpful in keeping instruments available for kids."

Kenneally noted that the introduction to Led Zepplin's "Stairway to Heaven" may have been heavily influenced by Spirit's "Taurus." The resemblance is not coincidental considering the two bands went on tour together in 1968.

Of note is Spirit's "I Got A Line On You," which was their most commercially successful single in the U.S.

California passed away January 2, 1997 while saving his son Quinn from a rip current while swimming in Hawaii. Spirit's last album was released December 1996.

Skidmore plans on donating as long as CD sales continue.

DPW Eyes $1.8 Million In Sewer Work

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Department of Public Works is proposing to do nearly $1.8 million in sewer work to reduce the amount of infiltration and inflow into the city's sewer system.

An appropriation of $1.757 million to pay for the project was referred to the City Council's finance committee Monday night. The project's cost would be financed through the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority's (MWRA) infiltration/inflow reduction program.

According to DPW business manager Michael Coffey, 45 percent of the projects cost, approximately $790,000 would come in the form of a grant from the MWRA. The remaining 55 percent, about $966,000 would be paid for through a no interest loan repaid over the next five years. The department, he added, has taken advantage of the MWRA's infiltration/inflow reduction program to finance sewer line repairs for the past five years.

Braintree Man Arrested On Trespassing Charges

By SCOTT JACKSON

North Quincy High School was locked down Monday afternoon when after a 24-year old Braintree resident entered the building.

Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan said Edmilson Andrade, 24, of Braintree, was spotted by a teacher inside the school around 2:15 p.m. Monday.

"An alert teacher noticed he was in the school and he did not belong," Dougan said Tuesday morning.

The teacher then alerted school security and the resource officer assigned to North. According to Dougan, Andrade first told them he was waiting for a cousin of his. That story, however, did not check out and Andrade was arrested and charged with trespassing,

Adams Green Night Work

Adams Green work will continue next week with the ongoing work removing traffic islands from the areas around the First Parish Church, and with night work beginning to install a new gas line starting near the intersection of Coddington Street and Washington Street.

The nighttime work will run from 7 p.m. to 5 a.m., with the work starting at Coddington Street and heading down Temple Street over the next several weeks.

Contractors will also begin preparations next week for the installation of a new drainage line on Hancock Street from Adams Street to Washington Street.

That work is expected to begin on May 11.

City Honors Three Marines Killed In Vietnam War

By SCOTT JACKSON

Dozens of people, including family members, friends, veterans, and elected officials, attended ceremonies dedicating memorial squares honoring three Quincy Marines killed in action 45 years ago during the Vietnam War.

The first of the three ceremonies, which all occurred on April 24, was at 33 Ellis Street. The square there was dedicated to PFC James P. Hickey. A graduate of Central Middle School who attended Quincy High, he was killed on May 27, 1969, in Quang Nam, South Vietnam, during a mortar attack. Hickey was 19.

Hickey's sister Christine Silcox spoke at the dedication. She read a poem their uncle wrote in tribute of her brother shortly after his death. Hickey, Silcox explained, pretended he had a magic horse as young child and the poem, titled "The Magic Horse," reflected that.

"When he was just a boy he had a magic horse. No one else could see it, but it was there of course. He'd gallop off at night and tie it to his bed. He knew it would stand guard so nothing he must dread. Years have ways of passing and so do childhood dreams, as boys to manhood grow almost overnight it seems. Leaving those he loves the most, leaving his magic horse. Now he goes to search out from life its very force," Silcox said, reciting the poem.

"He must be a Marine though it may bring him harm. They will cross his path in the province of Quang Nam. Now speaks a gentle voice, 'Jim we mustn't tarry for I have come this night to take you home to Mary.' 'But father I'm so young, I do not understand.' 'He knows, he knows my son, he bade me take your hand. He took me too you know, as I cried out in pain to ask my father why by men I must be slain. He sacrificed his son so that men might learn to care. He led me to my home, and I must take you there. He will not let you hurt, like I did from the cross. Dear Jim I'll lead you home, upon your magic horse.'"

In addition to Silcox, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin – the vice chairman of the council's veterans committee – and Sen. John Keenan both spoke at the dedication. Coughlin said the city's efforts in recent years to honor residents killed during the Vietnam War would help erase the legacy of poor treatment of those who returned from that war. Coughlin singled out the work of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter and Lawrence Norton, the group's president who helped organize the day's events.

"My friends we have often heard it observed, 'poor is the nation that has no heroes; shameful is the one that having them forgets.' Amidst the uncertainties of war every soldier is entitled to one certainty – that he or she will not be forgotten or abandoned," Coughlin said.

"As a nation, and certainly we here in our beloved city, have been blessed with an abundance of heroes. With the vigilance of those like Larry Norton and the combined Vietnam veterans we seek to erase the shame we brought upon ourselves in the treatment of these Vietnam vets to ensure neither PFC James P. Hickey nor any veteran will ever be forgotten."

Keenan said the sign would remind those in the neighborhood of the sacrifice made by Hickey and others who died fighting for the country.

"He answered a personal call. He answered the call of the nation with dignity and honor. It's only fitting today in his neighborhood we again remember and memorialize his service and ultimate sacrifice to his country," Keenan said. "May this marker remind us – the children and adults of this neighborhood as they ride their bikes, walk to nearby stores, run to the park, enjoy cookouts in their backyards – that they are free to do so because of young men like Jim Hickey."

The second dedication took place at 47 Vassell Street, where a square was dedicated to CPL Lawrence E. Sirois. Sirois, nicknamed "Bucket," was a 1967 grad-

South Cove Manor Celebrates New Facility Here

By KRIS KALABOKAS

South Cove Manor, a nursing and rehabilitation facility focused on caring for elderly Chinese patients, celebrated the completion of their new, state-of-the-art facility located at 290 Washington St. in Quincy Point on Tuesday with a ribbon cutting ceremony and tours open to the public.

The three-story, 86,000-square-foot facility owned by South Cove Nursing Facilities Foundation Inc., will be divided into six residential communities and will boast 141 private and semi-private beds, six dining areas, a community space, a rehab center, and activity rooms. Roughly 200 full and part-time staff members will be on hand to care for short-stay and long-stay residents.

The original 100-bed location, which opened its doors in 1985, is in Boston's Chinatown and is being replaced by the new, larger building located on what was once the Hassan Automotive Property.

President and CEO Richard Wong said Quincy was the ideal location for such a project. "After several years of searching, there were no suitable and affordable parcels of land," he said. "Quincy is nearby, easily accessible by car or public transportation, has a large Asian community, and had available land."

Following a ceremonial dragon dance, South Cove Manor Board Chairman Richard Lui addressed the crowd. "Over 30 years ago a group of community leaders had a vision to create a warm and welcoming place where Asian elders would receive the highest quality nursing and rehabilitation care in a supportive environment," he said. "This new, state-of-the-art campus that we come here to celebrate today is a continuation of that vision… what I want you to notice is the absolute amount of space compared to our current facility in Boston." He said the larger facility would allow for better interaction between families and patients while providing ample space for recreational activities in a warm and inviting environment. The additional space will also house a more substantial physical rehabilitation facility for use by short-stay residents than the Boston location.

Over $2 million in funds to cover construction and equipment costs were raised by donors such as Bank of America, Cambridge Savings Bank, the Chinese American Nurses Association, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance, and private donors in addition to MassDevelopment bond proceeds totaling $19 million.

According to Wong, the building's lot can accommodate roughly 47 vehicles and active parking management will be on-site to manage staff and visitor cars.

Mayor Thomas Koch, who attended the November 2012 groundbreaking ceremony, said the day brought tremendous joy to the city and officially welcomed the organization to Quincy. "You're on the southern fringe, really, of a new day of our Quincy Center and we're pleased you're here and we're pleased you're part of it and all of what South Cove represents to your community and to our community," he said.

Nearly all staff is bilingual and speak Chinese dialects of Mandarin, Cantonese, and Toishanese and patients are immersed in cultural activities such as Mah Jong, Chinese Opera, Chinese New Year, and Mid Autumn Festival celebrations. On staff are rehabilitation specialists, dieticians, social workers, speech therapists, and nurses to provide a full spectrum of health and mental services.

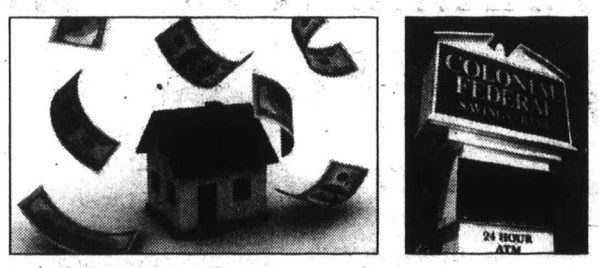
With the help of nursing staff, residents will be encouraged to cook small meals in one of several kitchenette stations to share amongst their peers; something that will recreate the feeling of living independently at home said Administrator Li Chen.

South Cove Manor Cofounder Helen Chin Schlichte said expanding elder care, particularly for the Asian community, was necessary due to demographic changes in the city.

"There's that generation of elders who are just more frail and the population is growing of Asian elders," she said. "Also, multigenerations of families are living together; some of them are coming over from China and Hong Kong and as they get older they're going to need services."

Current residents in the old location are slated to move into the new building mid-May.

A better way to get money from your house



A good idea ... from Colonial Federal Savings Bank

You have a house with lots of equity. Good cash flow. Investments you don't want to touch right now. And you have something you want money for. What's the best way to get it? How about a 15-Year refinance from Colonial Federal? With fixed monthly payments, it's more predictable than an adjustable-rate home equity line. Way less expensive than credit cards. And you'll have it all paid off in 15 short years... quicker if you make extra payments along the way. Would a 15-Year refinance be good for you? CUSHIONING EFFECT

While round brilliant cut diamonds are far and away the most popular choices for engagement rings, cushion-cut diamonds are giving princess cuts a run for their money for second place. As something of a hybrid of an Old Mine Cut (a deep cut with large facets that was common in the late 19th and early 20th centuries) and a modern oval cut, the cushion-cut diamond's soft, round edges have a decidedly romantic feel about them. Varying in shape from square to long rectangles, cushion-cut diamonds also lend themselves to a great deal of personalizing. Placing a cushion-cut diamond in a halo setting (a central gemstone surrounded by smaller stones) makes the center stone seem larger and creates extra sparkle.

The standards for cushion cut vary more than most other shapes, and personal taste will enter into the final setting and design. The cushion cut diamond is generally less brilliant than round brilliant diamonds, but they often have better fire, which makes them so appealing. THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On May 14, 1796, Edward Jenner, an English country doctor from Gloucestershire, administers the world's first vaccination as a preventive treatment for smallpox by scratching the fluid from cowpox into the skin of an 8-year-old boy. The disease had killed millions of people over the centuries.

• On May 17, 1885, for the second time in two years, the Apache chief Geronimo breaks out of an Arizona reservation. A famous medicine man and the leader of the Chiricahua Apache, Geronimo achieved national fame by being the last American Indian to surrender formally to the United States.

• On May 15, 1942, Lt. Ronald Reagan, a cavalry officer, applies for reassignment to the Army Air Force, where he would eventually put his thespian background to use on World War II propaganda films. Reagan was given a job in the First Motion Picture Unit.

• On May 13, 1958, during a goodwill trip through Latin America, Vice President Richard Nixon's car is attacked by an angry crowd in Caracas, Venezuela. The trip began with some controversy, as Nixon had engaged in loud and bitter debates with student groups during his travels through Peru and Uruguay.

• On May 12, 1963, Bob Dylan walks out of what was to be his first appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show." He had previewed "Talkin' John Birch Paranoid Blues" for Sullivan, who'd approved it days before. But the CBS Standards and Practices department equated the John Birch Society's views with those of Adolf Hitler.

• On May 16, 1975, Japanese mountaineer Junko Tabei becomes the first woman to reach the summit of Mount Everest, the tallest mountain in the world. Located in the central Himalayas, Everest stands 29,035 feet above sea level. In 1988, Stacy Allison became the first American woman to successfully climb Everest.

• On May 18, 1980, Mount St. Helens, a volcanic peak in southwestern Washington, erupts, killing 57 people and devastating some 210 square miles of wilderness. The lateral blast leveled nearly all vegetation for as far as 12 miles away.

Fashioning A Career

The Quincy Public Schools are full of exceptional students.

You'll find them competing on the athletic fields and in gymnasiums. On stage performing dramas and musicals. And at other venues showingcasing their talent and hard work.

They excel at sports, singing, the arts, academics and whatever else they enjoy.

The student-models weren't wearing clothes they found off the rack or ordered on-line. Although the impressive garments certainly looked like they could be purchased at a major department store or boutique on Newbury Street.

Each and every fashion was created by a student. And they all illustrated that these student fashion designers have a gift – a knack – a penchant – for taking an idea and making it their own.

Pretty impressive for a teen who was bitten by the fashion bug only about a year ago.

"I've been sewing for a little over a year. I used to do hand-sewing and little projects when I was a little kid but since last year I started as a fashion 1 student. I was kind of interested in it but once we got to the fashion show last year – and it was my first fashion show – I just loved it."

She loves it so much that she teaches little kids how to sew at In Stitches in Quincy.

And much of her school day involves her fashion studies. She says some designs take weeks to complete – from the thought process to the actual sewing.

"It's so nice to come (to school) and work on my stuff. I'm in fashion a long amount of the day. I'm there for my actual class period. I go there during lunch. And then I have two studies and go during both of my studies so I'm there about four periods of the day every day," Emily explains.

She says she gets her inspiration from the city and the 1990s.

"Vintage grunge is my favorite." And her favorite designers include Vivienne Westwood, an English fashion designer and businesswoman who is credited with bringing modern punk and new wave fashions into the mainstream.

In her spare time, she enjoys watching the Red Carpets before award ceremonies and listening to the commentary about what the stars are wearing.

"I like to listen to what people are saying about the fashions. I either completely disagree or think 'yeah, that's definitely right.'"

She's also a fan of the show "Fashion Police" hosted by comedian Joan Rivers.

For a teen who's just turned 16, it's remarkable that Emily has already chiseled out a clear career path after high school.

"My dream school is to go to FIDM (Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising) in Los Angeles and then hopefully start my own fashion network or brand."

This summer, she'll attend a program at FIDM encompassing three days of fashion and features a fashion show put on by the students. She'll also meet people in the industry. Emily was accepted to the program and received a scholarship after interviewing with the college.

For Emily, fashion is much more than creating unique and stylish clothing.

Fashion is an expression of art.

"I like that it makes you feel something. I don't think of fashion as just to make you look pretty. I think of it as art and art is supposed to make you feel something. It's not supposed to be just there to look at. I really like how it expresses emotions," she says.

Asked what ignited her passion for fashion, she replied:

"I used to just love my own style but once I was able to start creating my own looks I just love how it can be so different from everything else. I don't wear anything that anybody else wears. I love that I can be different from everybody else."

Besides being an accomplished sewer, she can draw and paint – two skills that she incorporates into her own fashions.

"A lot of times I'll make clothes and then do artwork on them. That's part of my aesthetic. I love graffiti and the city and sometimes I'll make tops and put graffiti on them."

Emily's focus on her future is as sharp as a pin. Where does she think she'll be in 10 years?

"In 10 years I think I'll be very busy," she says with a big smile. "I am already very busy and I'm only in high school. I have no idea where I want to take my fashion career but I just know that it will be in fashion and design."

Congratulations to all the student models and fashion designers at Quincy High School who put on a superb show this year.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 real photo postcard view of the old Adams School that was on Phipps Street just off School Street in Quincy Center. This school served the youngsters of Quincy for 70 years. It was one of Quincy's first school buildings, built in 1855 on a half-acre lot just behind the Christ Church Cemetery on the corner. Through the trees on the left can be seen St. John's Church that was built only two years before the school. Originally only six rooms, the building was expanded to 10 rooms as shown here in 1879. When a new Adams School on Abigail Avenue replaced this one in 1913, this became home to the Boy's Industrial School. Then after the new senior high school opened on Coddington Street with space specifically for the Trade School, this building was demolished in 1925. Today, the site is a parking lot for St. John's Church. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Follow Your Dreams And Stop War

We are three students who are concerned about what's happening in our world.

We want to say that we feel badly that people from our country and people from other countries as well are getting killed defending freedom. We have to find a peaceful solution not like the American Revolution and the Civil War.

Also, Martin Luther King, Jr. has inspired us that if you have a dream it can come true. We also believe that he was right... we should follow our dreams and stop war!

We have a dream that war will be no more.

Praises Quincy DARE Program

As a parent of a Quincy public school graduate and a recently retired police officer of 27 years, I appreciated the piece on Quincy's DARE Program within the Quincy Public Schools.

I have known Quincy police officer John Grazioso going back to my daughter's middle school years and I have been a longtime supporter of the DARE program in our schools.

This drug education program has been around in the City of Quincy since 1989 in the classroom. I have seen it as a necessary form, of community policing that works. The job that Grazioso and Officer Don Sautter both do is worthwhile and it has lasting effects on our children.

DARE officers can't do it alone but they and parents themselves must become more involved with our children, the dangers they face and be there to both listen and guide them toward the right choices.

I recently returned to the classroom as a substitute teacher in Quincy after my law enforcement career ended last year. I haver faith in our young people today and know the dangers lurking all around them in society. The DARE program is a vital part of the answer. We as society must ensure that our young people are educated on the dangers of making bad choices. We need to be there for them. I am thankful for the role played by the Quincy Police Department inside public schools through the DARE program.

Fond Memories Of The Wollaston School

I had the great pleasure of attending the 100th anniversary of the Wollaston School.

I went there 70 years ago and it was in the midst of the Second World War. Everything was being rationed and there was a bomb shelter in the basement of the Wollaston School.

When my mother visited the school on parent's day, the teacher told my mother I had terrible penmanship, as I was left-handed. My mother was alarmed but the teacher calmed her down saying to her, not to worry, as she had a feeling that her son, George, was going to do alright in life.

I recalled many other fond memories and my teachers in my visit to the school.

I also, for the first time, started shooting the basketballs in the school playground.

Safeguards Needed To Avert Fire Tragedy Here

Now that some time has passed, the facts are coming out in the tragedy that took the lives of two firefighters in Boston.

The owner of the building that burned is suing the welding company that apparently caused the fire. This brings to mind the fire that occurred at the Masonic Temple here in Quincy. This fire was apparently caused by grinding.

Is there not a city ordinance requiring a fire watch when such hazardous work is undertaken? And once a fire watch is established, barriers be required to be erected around the work area to prevent the spread of combustible material.

When the issues of Quincy downtown development are resolved, a great deal of construction will ensue.

Has the city government safeguards in place to prevent fires?

21 Appointments Beef Up Police, Fire Depts.

Appointments and promotions of 21 men will beef up and step up the efficiency of the Quincy Police and Fire Departments.

The 21 men representing the largest single change in personnel for the two protective branches in recent years were sworn in this week at City Hall.

It will give both departments more manpower and flexibility and bring into existence a Police Narcotics Division to fight the ominous rise in drug abuse especially among Quincy teenagers.

Mayor James R. McIntyre, who made the appointments and promotions said, "They are needed and will increase the efficiency of both departments, giving Quincy a first class line of defense against both fire and crime."

SECOND PARKING HEARING TO BE SET MONDAY

The City Council will set a date for a second public hearing on the proposed 140 car municipal parking lot on Mechanic Street, at its May 5 regular meeting.

The second hearing is necessary, Council President J. Vincent Smyth noted, because of opposition registered at the first public hearing.

Proponents argued that the project is necessary for the "economic vitality of not only the downtown business district but the city in general."

Opponents countered that the problem is not one of a need for parking but one relieving traffic congestion.

A NEW BOOK by author Anthony M. Sammarco entitled Lost Boston will be released today (Thursday, May 1) by Anova Books of London.

Howard Johnson's Author Pens New Book Entitled 'Lost Boston'

Lost Boston by Anthony M. Sammarco will be released today (Thursday, May 1) by Anova Books of London.

Lost Boston is a nostalgic journey back in time to visit some of the disappeared buildings and places in all their grandeur, before the wrecking ball and decline set in.

From the 1870s up to the present day, sixty eight different losses are represented here, including schools, churches, theaters, grand mansions, dockyards, racetracks, parks, stores, hotels, offices, and factories. Organized chronologically starting with the earliest losses and ending with the latest, the book features much-loved insitutions that failed to stand the test of time, along with old-fashioned hotels and sports facilities that were beyond updating or refurbishment.

Losses include:

Franklin Place, Boston City Hall, Cathedral of the Holy Cross, Hancock House, Gleason's Publishing Hall, Fort Hill, Franklin Street, Boston Coliseum, Boylston Market, Merchants Exchange, Haymarket Square, Boston Public Library, Horticultural Hall, Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Revere House (Hotel), Huntington Avenue Grounds, Charlestown City Hall, Molasses Tank, Cyclorama, Readville Trotting Park and Race Track, East Boston Airport, Boston Latin School, East Boston Ferries, Braves Field, Massachusetts State Prison, Boston Opera House, the South Boston Aquarium, The Howard Athenaeum, and Dudley Street Station.

Sammarco is a historian who lectures widely on the history and development of Boston. He is the author of over 60 books on his native city, including Boston: A Century of Progress and Downtown Boston.

He is also the author of A History of Howard Johnson's: How A Massachusetts Soda Fountain Became and American Icon. Johnson, an entrepreneur, businessman and founder of a chain of restaurants and motels that beared his name, opened his first restaurant in Quincy.

Sammarco lives in Boston and in Osterville on Cape Cod.

Quincy Symphony Orchestra Concert May 18th At QHS

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra (QSO) under the direction of Music Director Yoichi Udagawa ends its 60th season with a concert on Sunday May 18 at 2:30 p.m. in the Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center at Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St., Quincy.

The concert will feature a fun program of "lighter" classical music. The title of the program is "Heroes and Super Heroes."

Tickets for the performance are $25 and will be available at the door or pick them up at Quincy Access Television, 88 Washington St., Quincy (next door to the Crane Public Library.)

Free parking is available on site at QHS. The concert hall is also walking distance from the Quincy Center MBTA station.

Founded in 1955, the QSO consists of more than 50 volunteer musicians, including both amateurs and professionals from the Boston Metro-South region. The QSO offers three free concerts every season, in addition to an annual "Pops" fundraiser and holiday concert in partnership with the Quincy Public Schools.

Olde Kids Swing Band Performance May 9

The Olde Kids Swing Band will be at the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging) on Friday May 9 from 1 to 3 p.m.

The Olde Kids, always popular at the Kennedy Center, is a dance band in the style of the big bands of the 30's and 40's. The Olde Kids performed at the Kennedy Center several times last year to a standing-room-only crowd. The big band recreates the glamour and romance of an era that lasted 10 years.

Retired and semi-retired musicians are part of a resurgence of interests in live, glamorous and romantic music. The band was formed in 1991 and consists of six saxes, four trombones, four trumpets, four on rhythm and a vocalist.

Tickets are required for this event and can be purchased at the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging.) Suggested donation is $6.

For more information, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

'America's Romance With The English Garden' Program At Historical Society Tonight

The story behind America's fascination with lush gardens and rich, green lawns will be discussed by author and gardening expert, Thomas Mickey, in a program tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy.

Drawing on his recent book on the subject, Mickey will show how inexpensive printing technologies and the beginning of mass-marketing in the 1890s led to pervasive advertising campaigns that sold the attractions and the status of English-style lawns and gardens to a growing American middle class, through beautiful, elaborate illustrations and inexpensive mail-order seeds and supplies. It is a story of taste-makers, savvy businessmen and an eager public and of the beginning of the multi-billion dollar American home gardening industry.

Mickey, a Quincy resident, will illustrate the talk with the example of the ornate advertisements from the 1890s.

The program is free. A book signing will follow the lecture.

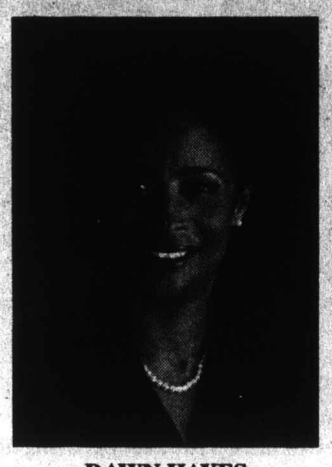
DOVE Adds Two Senior Staff Members

DOVE, Inc., as part of its efforts to strengthen its fundraising and development efforts and its oversight of operational management, announces the addition of two new senior staff members to the organization.

They are Dawn Hayes and Dana Chenevert, Esq.



DAWN HAYES

DANA CHENEVERT, ESQ.

Before joining DOVE as its new Director of Development & Communications, Hayes served as the Event Planner for Father Bill's & MainSpring in Quincy and as the Associate Director of Development at Riverside Community Care in Dedham.

As a television spokesperson, voice over artist, and actor for more than a decade, Hayes was the television spokesperson for the Massachusetts State lottery for 15 years and is instantly recognizable to many New Englanders. This, combined with her development expertise, allows Hayes to bring an enthusiasm to DOVE that helps it further its important mission to promote hope, healing, safety, and social change for those impacted by domestic violence. A graduate of Emerson College, she is active in local professional organizations such as the Association for Fundraising Professionals (AFP), with which she earned a coveted spot in its Diversity Fellows Program in 2009.

Hayes and her family live in Milton.

Chenevert earned her law degree (Juris Doctorate) from Seattle University School of Law in 2008. Having worked for two of the Big 4 professional services firms as well as in the private business sectors in Houston, Atlanta, Seattle, and Boston, she brings financial oversight and management experience to her new role as Senior Manager of Operations at DOVE.

Chenevert has volunteered her time at Interfaith Social Services, in Quincy, and as a Guardian ad Litem in Suffolk County for children who have been abused or neglected and are involved in court proceedings.

She is very passionate about DOVE's mission and their work in assisting survivors of domestic abuse. She is licensed to practice law in Washington State and is a candidate for the July 2014 Massachusetts Bar Exam.

Chenevert and her family live in Braintree.

Zucchini Parmesan

Zucchini is such a versatile vegetable and one that can be made in so many ways-from sautéed to stuffed and then some.

Today's recipe is for zucchini Parmesan and it is so different than any other way that I have prepared it. After I made it last week, it has now become my favorite way, especially since it contains bread and tomato sauce.

ZUCCHINI PARMESAN

2 medium sized zucchini
1 large long loaf Italian or French bread (cut in diagonal slices- half inch thick)
2-3 cups tomato sauce
1 cup grated Parmesan cheeses
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese

First, blanch the zucchini in hot water for a few minutes. When cooked, slice long ways about ¼ inch thick and set aside.

In a slightly greased baking dish, add a bit of the tomato sauce. Now place slices of bread on that. Then add a little tomato sauce, the zucchini, some of the mozzarella and Parmesan cheese, and then make another layer of the bread, zucchini and the cheeses. Top with some of the sauce and grated cheese. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes.

Easy Almond Cake

Just one simple ingredient can change the flavor of what is cooking. And so it was last week when I was baking a cake that called for the usual vanilla extract.

Instead, I decided to use almond extract and what a wonderful change. I have also used lemon extract for this particular cake recipe, which is also delicious. The choice is yours.

EASY ALMOND CAKE

2 eggs
1 stick butter
1 ¼ cups sugar
1 teaspoon almond extract
2 ¼ cups cake flour
2 ½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
cup milk plus 2 more tablespoons
2 or 3 tablespoons crushed almonds (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Melt the butter and add the sugar. Mix until fluffy. Add the eggs, almond extract and mix for a minute or so. Add the baking powder, salt, almonds and the flour alternately with the milk and beat for two minutes.

Place in a cake pan and bake for 30 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean from the center.

With this cake, I made a quick icing by using a cup of powdered sugar, a smidgen of water or milk, and a teaspoon of the almond extract – easy and delicious.

FEMA Flood Mapping Focus At Montclair/Wollaston Meeting Tonight

The Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin will hold a joint meeting tonight (Thursday) at the Montclair School at 7 p.m. with a presentation by Joe Shea of Woodard and Curran.

Shea will be bringing along other professionals to present on the FEMA flood mapping issue including Leslie Green of Presidential Insurance to talk about the insurance aspect of this issue and a representative from DeCelle-Burke Surveying who will be conducting property elevation surveys in Montclair for the city's appeal of the flood map designation.

The MWNA is also seeking volunteers to help participate in the city's Cleaner, Greener Quincy cleanup Saturday, May 3.

Rakes and equipment are provided and everyone will meet at 9 a.m. at Bishop Field across from the Montclair School on the Holbrook Road side. All volunteers are invited to an appreciation cookout hosted by Mayor Thomas Koch at 12:30 p.m. at Pageant Field.

The Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association needs help at The Bog (Belmont Street and Hobart Street) and Bishop Field (corner Belmont Street and Holbrook Road). At least 10 people are needed at each location to make any progress. Call one of the officers or Friends of the Bog to reserve a rake and pair of gloves.

Specialized Telephone Equipment Program

If you are a Massachusetts resident with a permanent disability, you could be eligible for the MassEDP program.

On Wednesday, May 28th at 10 a.m. a representative from the Massachusetts Equipment Distribution Program will be at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, to demonstrate specialized telephone equipment for people with permanent disabilities. This specialized equipment comes at little or no cost.

The MassEDP program offers equipment for the deaf and hard of hearing, those who are blind or who have low vision, those with cognitive (memory) issues, those with speech problems and handsfree telephones.

Registration is required for this presentation as space is limited. To register, call (617) 376-1506.

City Seeking Development Advisor

The City has issued a request for qualifications for firms to assist in strategic planning for its Quincy Center redevelopment efforts.

The move is among the first steps in pushing forward development plans following the default of the original master developer for all of downtown, StreetWorks Development. Mayor Thomas Koch has said the City is likely to pursue multiple developers for the Quincy Center redevelopment area, which includes two large pieces of public property at the Ross Parking Garage and Hancock Parking Lot.

The advisor, who will be familiar with urban redevelopment planning, will assist the City in putting together formal requests for proposals seeking new development plans and developers for much of the downtown.

Meanwhile, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance continues its work to redesign the first step of the development known as Merchants Row, which includes the block of properties anchored by the historic Granite Trust building at 1400 Hancock Street.

Responses from firms interested in advising the City are due by May 15 and the contract for the work will be paid for through fees already paid to the City by StreetWorks Development.

Council OKs $170,000 For HN Public Landing

New Gangway And 11 Floats

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday night approved a $170,000 appropriation to install a new gangway and floats at the Public Landing In Houghs Neck. The money will also cover the cost of designing and permitting a new boat launch at the site.

The funding will be allocated from the city's community preservation account. Eleven floats and the gangway at the public landing will be replaced. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret said the current floats were significantly compromised over the past winter.

"They're 15 years old. We've gotten more than our money's worth. They were significantly compromised in the offseason," Laforest said. "For this season we will be replacing all 11 floats as well as the gangway. The estimates came in at about $10,000 per float. These are heavy duty marine construction."

Laforest noted the current boat ramp is only accessible for two hours during high tide, which forces boat owners in the city to travel elsewhere. To address the long-term need to create a new boat ramp, the $170,000 allocation includes funding for engineering, permitting, and design work.

"Our boat ramp facility served well back in the skiff days of the flounder capital of the world," Laforest said. "It's just not sufficient for what our boating community's needs are. So we are including funding for the engineering, permitting, and design for a new ramp."

Before the council could approve the $170,000 appropriation Monday, the city's Community Preservation Committee gave its approval to the project. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the vice chairman of the CPC, said the committee did so because members understand the need for an improved boat launch.

"The need is they're. We're a seaside community with 27 miles of coastline. There's really no place for people in Quincy, and there's a large boating community, to put their boats in the water," Coughlin said. "The conditions here – they're not only not conducive, they're not safe."

The council approved the $170,000 appropriation in an 8-0 vote. Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes was absent from Monday's meeting.

DPW Proposes $1.8M In Sewer Work

Councillor Doug Gutro asked Coffey which streets would see sewer repairs. Coffey said East Squantum Street, from Quincy Shore Drive eastward into Squantum, is one of the areas set for work.

"We did the manholes out there last year and the year before," he said. "Now we'll be doing the sewer line."

Sewer work may also take place in Quincy Point, Houghs Neck, and Merrymount, Coffey added. Gutro requested a complete list of streets and estimates for each one before the council votes on the request. Coffey said the department would be able to provide that information.

City Remembers Vietnam Veterans At Memorial Service

By SCOTT JACKSON

The way the Vietnam War was conducted and how it was received at home made it different than any other conflict in U.S. history, a retired U.S. Marine Corps captain told a crowd of 200 at the city's annual ceremony honoring those who died and those who served during the war.

George C. McMahon, a Quincy attorney who served a tour of duty in Vietnam and was awarded a Bronze Star with Combat V, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry, and the Distinguished Flying Cross, was the special guest speaker at the ceremony held April 24 in front of the Marina Bay clock tower bearing the names of the 48 Quincy residents killed in the war.

In his speech, McMahon spoke of what made the Vietnam War different from others that came before or after it. He said the U.S. government conducted the war in a way that prevented an easy victory.

"We were not allowed to win that war. We weren't allowed cross into Laos and Cambodia and shut down the Ho Chi Minh Trail, the trail that was resupplying our enemy throughout South Vietnam. We were not allowed to invade North Vietnam, which we could have done in a heartbeat. We weren't allowed to bomb Haiphong Harbor or the railways that came into Hanoi that also resupplied our enemies in the south," McMahon said.

"If we put our heart into what we were doing over there and our government let us do it, we could've overrun that country in three weeks. That's why it's such a shame it dragged on for so long and was conducted the way it was."

In spite of all at that, McMahon explained, the Americans sent to Vietnam fought as hard as any American troops in any war in U.S. History.

"Make no mistake about it, Vietnam was an all-out war. The men whose names appear on this wall and the other veterans who are here know that. The men who fought in Vietnam fought as hard as any Americans in any time in U.S. history," McMahon said.

"They lived in horrible conditions living in holes in the ground for months on end, eating C-rations, sores all over their bodies, trench foot, monsoons that lasted for three or four months. Those were their living conditions. Not to mention the fact that they were fighting a determined enemy in the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong."

At home in the U.S., McMahon continued, the war and the Americans who fought in it were not popular. He and his fellow servicemen and women knew that and continued to fight fiercely.

"The attitude in the country at that time, and I'm not making any political judgments, was not good with respect to American servicemen or the Vietnam War. These men, before they went to Vietnam, knew that. We all knew that we were not very popular and our war was not very popular and at the same time our hands were being tied by our government in terms of fighting a true all-out war," McMahon said.

"These people who appear on this wall and the other American Vietnam veterans fought fiercely and they were fiercely loyal to each other. We should be forever grateful to them."

McMahon, who grew up in Connecticut and moved to Quincy following his service in the Marine Corps, finished his remarks by thanking the city and its veterans organizations, such as the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, for honoring Vietnam Veterans. This was the 27th annual ceremony held at the Marina Bay clock tower, which was dedicated in 1987.

"I just never knew anything like this existed – any group like this that goes so far out of its way to honor their veterans," McMahon said. "I don't think I've ever been part of something like this before or felt so much goodwill from so many. Not just towards me but towards all the Vietnam veterans who served. I'm very proud to be a citizen of Quincy."

Navy veteran Robert J. Brudno also spoke at the ceremony. His brother, E. Alan Brudno, spent seven-and-a-half years as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam after the F-4 he was flying was shot down over the country. Four months after being released, Brudno took his own life in June 1973.

Robert Brudno told the crowd he had been angry for four decades over how his brother was treated by the military following his release and how Vietnam veterans were received in the U.S. Brudno said that all changed this past fall when someone he was telling his brother's story to said he needed to let him go. After that, Brudno was able to find peace of mind.

"I return here to Quincy today, to this sacred place, willing to open up these wounds yet again in front of you all because I believe many of you Vietnam veterans can also find well-deserved peace of mind in the time you have left," Brudno said.

"I finally woke up because of the simple advice of a stranger. We can cast off this anger and bury it once and for all if we choose to. If not for ourselves, then do it for our loved ones and for our friends. It's time for us to simply feel proud of what we did and stop wallowing in the anger. It's time to go cold turkey. I found a way and by sharing this deeply personal experience I hope many of you will find a path to happiness."

The Marina Bay ceremony capped off a day of ceremonies honoring Vietnam veterans. Earlier in the day squares were dedicated to three Quincy Marines – PFC James P. Hickey, CPL. Lawrence Sirois, and L/CPL. Martine R. Keefe – who were killed in combat during the war. Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, said the organization would continue to remember those three and all Quincy servicemen lost in the war.

"They're special every year, every day, but today is a little bit better," Norton said. "They're going to be remembered in the City of Presidents as long as we're around. That's very important."

Mayor Thomas Koch thanked all the veterans in attendance for their service.

"It truly is humbling and somewhat daunting when you're in a room full of veterans. You certainly don't feel worthy to be at the microphone, but by the veterans' service and what has happened historically, it's allowed me to be at the microphone," Koch said.

"The veterans earned that right so we could enjoy that right each and every day in this country. I'm so grateful – I know I speak on behalf of my colleagues and the citizens of Quincy. Thank you to our veterans. We will never forget. God bless the veterans and God bless the United States of America."

Rep. Bruce Ayers also addressed the crowd. He promised Quincy's delegation in the state Legislature would continue to work on issues important to veterans.

"Although we may not agree on everything on Beacon Hill, nor should we, when it comes to veterans I think we all share the same philosophy," Ayers said. "Our veterans fight the real battles. They should not have to return home and fight the bureaucratic battles for housing, healthcare, and employment. That's what we try to do up on Beacon Hill and will continue to do on Beacon Hill."

Croall Coffee Hour Saturday

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall will host a "Talk N' Coffee" session Saturday, May 3rd from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. at McKay's Breakfast & Lunch, 144 Franklin St.

Residents are invited to share their concerns, ideas and opinions over a cup of coffee and also meet some of their neighbors. All Ward 2 residents are invited and encouraged to attend.

Police Investigating Vets' Records Found Near QHS

Police are investigating how a batch of old records from the Veterans Services Department were found in a park areas near Quincy High School.

The records, less than a box full and primarily dating to the 1960s and 1970s, were found late last week, at about the same time that the department had sent out thousands of old records for shredding with the approval of the Secretary of State's Office.

The locks on the Veterans Service Department office on High School Avenue have been changed, but officials had no further comment on the status of the investigation.

While the records did contain some personal information, there is no major concern of stolen identities because of the age of most of the documents, according to city officials.

The City nonetheless is reviewing the documents.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
FIRMLY ROOTED

Because it so closely resembles the structure of a natural tooth, a dental implant is often viewed as the preferred method for tooth (or teeth) replacement. The chief benefit of an implant is that it is firmly rooted in the jawbone, much as the root of a natural tooth is. The implant is made out of titanium, which has been proven able to biochemically join with the surrounding bone. As a result, the man-made crown to which it is attached (with an abutment connector) can be expected to remain as steadfast as nature's own creation. Just as importantly, the implant stimulates the surrounding bone and guards against the bone loss that would otherwise occur when a tooth is lost.

One of the first things people notice is your smile. A tooth implant can be the solution you have been searching for. Our philosophy is to provide care that will be in your best interest now, and in the years to come, so you have a smile that will last a lifetime! Please feel free to discuss all of your oral health concerns with us. We stress preventive dentistry and recommend regular dental check-ups for all family members. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Come in and see what a difference we can make to your smile. We welcome your call at 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because dentures do not prevent the loss of bone that occurs with tooth loss, denture wearers' mouths may eventually develop a caved-in appearance.

To Designate Neighborhood Cleanup Sites
Contact Park Department - 617-376-1251

Cleaner, Greener Cleanup Saturday

The 25th annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy celebration will be held on Saturday, May 3rd.

The cleanup will occur at beaches, marshes, neighborhood parks, playgrounds, schoolyards and open space areas citywide from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Following the cleanup, Mayor Thomas Koch will host an appreciation cookout at Pageant Field.

"Twenty-five years ago we began this program as a way of getting people involved in beautifying their neighborhood," said Mayor Koch. "Today, a quarter century later, the example we set has been emulated by towns across the South Shore. It's something we can all take pride in."

The annual cleanup draws close to 1,500 volunteers from across the City. Last year, more than twenty public areas were designated as cleanup sites, many at the suggestion of local residents. The city's elementary and middle schools participated enthusiastically, contributing greatly to the overall aesthetics of school grounds.

Cleaner Greener is sponsored by the City of Quincy, the Quincy Park Conservancy, Curry Hardware and Hannaford Supermarket.

Residents are encouraged to designate neighborhood cleanup sites and can contact the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1251 or crooneyo@quincyma.gov to do so.

disturbing a school assembly, and obstructing justice.

Police dogs from Quincy, Milton, and Boston searched the school Monday night without incident. The building re-opened as scheduled on Tuesday.

The school was locked down while Andrade was removed from the building, North Principal Robert Shaw said in an alert to parents and staff members Monday. Students and staff were then dismissed and the building locked down again for the search.

Shaw said the incident would prompt an assessment of the school's security procedures.

"Our students' safety is our number one priority, and this incident will lead to an assessment of our safety and security protocols," Shaw said in his alert. "I do want to say our students and staff did exactly what they are supposed to do when we enter lockdown mode. They behaved appropriately throughout. The Quincy Police responded quickly and the situation was under control in minutes.

"We will make the adjustments we need to make in response to this situation, but students, staff, and the police responded as they should."

Andrade pleaded not guilty Tuesday at his arraignment in Quincy District Court. He was released on his own recognizance.

Law Day Friday At Quincy District Court

By SCOTT JACKSON

Margot Botsford, an associate justice of the state's Supreme Judicial Court, will be the keynote speaker at this year's Law Day Ceremonies at Quincy District Court.

The ceremonies, which start at 9 a.m. tomorrow (Friday) at Quincy District Court, honor individuals within the community who have made significant contributions to its welfare and safety.

A number of awards will be given during Law Day. This year's recipient of the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award is longtime community activist and World War II Army veteran Robert Noble of Quincy. The award is given annually to those who make selfless contributions in service of their fellow man.

The Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award will be presented to Roderick Ireland. Ireland is the chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, a position he has held since December 2010. He was first appointed an associate justice of the SJC in 1997 by then-Gov. William Weld. Ireland is the first African American to hold those positions.

The Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award will be presented to Sarah A. Lelle. This year's recipient of the Alfred P. Malaney Award is Robert Harnais, an attorney with an office in Quincy Center.

Members of the law enforcement community will also be honored. The Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement will be awarded to officers from the Braintree, Weymouth, Randolph, and Milton Police Departments.

Col. Timothy Alben, the superintendent of the Massachusetts State Police, will receive the Mark S. Charbonnier Award. His predecessor, Marian McGovern, received the award last year.

'Making Waves' Coalition Flood Forum May 6

At Fore River Clubhouse

By CAROL THEMMEN

The Making Waves Quincy Coalition (formerly known as the Beechwood Knoll Flood Coalition) is pleased to present an informative session not only on flood insurance, but an understanding of the Congressional bills that have created havoc in peoples lives; Biggert Waters Act of 2012 and HR 3370 The Affordability Act.

Joe Rossi and Doris Crary from the Marshfield Citizen's Coastal Coalition will be at the Fore River Clubhouse at 16 Nevada Rd. in Quincy Point on Tuesday, May 6th from 7 to 8:30 p.m. All residents are welcome.

The Making Waves Quincy Coalition will be holding this meeting in our effort to help notify the 1400 residents that are new to the FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) maps, helping them to fully understand the importance of acquiring a flood insurance policy by May 8th. These 1400 residents are currently in an X zone, which allows them to purchase what is known as a Preferred Risk Policy (PRP).

What may cost a homeowner, as little as $176 on May 8th could become $2000 on May 9th. Beyond this is the concept of grandfathering; even a property that holds no mortgage, and doesn't require flood insurance – a flood insurance policy is critical for resale. Without a grandfathered policy to hand over to a prospective buyer, they are looking at a full rate. If you add that to a new mortgage, your home is no longer that attractive.

This is the reality that residents need to understand. Our coalition formed in the Beechwood Knoll area, with this scenario that brought neighbors together; one neighbor had fallen into the 2012 maps with no knowledge of this. She was notified that her house was in the flood zone when her bank contacted her with a threatening letter of a 'forced placed policy.' The 2012 maps had been voted in, and she was now in a 'flood zone' ineligible for a Preferred Risk Policy. Her bank demanded two years of flood insurance in escrow up front, the cost $4000, and a subsequent elevation certificate for an additional $800. As you might imagine this was a shocking event for a homeowner in a neighborhood that has never flooded.

Individually we all attended that first FEMA meeting on February 20th, which provided more questions than answers. This alerted us to get active, get educated, and figure out what are we going to do to change this? We have been meeting on a weekly and sometimes bi-weekly basis since March 8th. We started off canvassing our immediate neighborhood and branched out as far as we could, dropping flyers, alerting residents like us who have never flooded that they too were now part of FEMA's flood map.

This has been our biggest concern, those homeowners like ourselves that have never flooded caught off guard by the logic 'I am not in a flood zone as I have never flooded.' That does not seem to be a requirement to be included in FEMA's flood maps and we hope that everyone in the City takes the time to check the maps not only for themselves, but also for their family and friends. The maps are on the City's website www.mapgeo.com/quincyma or you can call the City Engineering Department at 617-376-1937.

More than a few residents have come to our meetings with anger directed at the Mayor for not appealing the maps during the 90 day window; the Coalition would like to see all of that energy directed at the federal level, because that is where it belongs. Congress voted these laws in and only Congress can effect changes to them. Marshfield and Plymouth filed appeals, but it appears that FEMA has already stated that they are not going to accept appeals on the basis of methodology and those towns will likely move onto filing their Letter of Map Revision (LOMR); the appeal that is being worked on right now in the City of Quincy. This is a process of surveying homeowner's properties, challenging the FEMA maps neighborhood by neighborhood. If you haven't signed up to be part of this appeal, again call the City Engineer.

FEMA's ultimate goal it appears, is that every homeowner will move towards 'actuarial' rates on their flood insurance, but the question; what are actuarial rates – goes unanswered? This is unsettling for a homeowner not to know the endpoint. How do you plan for anything? We recognize flaws in the National Federal Insurance Program (NFIP) and we want to make enough waves, so to speak, to have an impact on the next bill that is written. The current bill is in effect until 2017, giving us plenty of time to figure out better solutions. The Affordability Act lessened the dire impacts of Biggert Waters, but this bill is a band-aid at best, as it does not go far enough.

We would appreciate it, if residents would come and learn about the bills, how have we gotten to where we are, and most importantly the possible solutions. Joe Rossi and Doris Crary put the issues into layman's terms better than anyone we have heard from. Help us create the noise to get the attention of Congress, be it letter writers, telephone calls –there is strength in numbers. Congress needs to know that flood insurance needs to remain affordable lest our economy become further crippled. Putting homeowners out of their homes is not an answer.

The Making Waves Quincy Coalition meets Saturday mornings from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse. We can be found on Facebook: www.facebook.com/FairnessOnFloodMaps and emailed at fairnessonfloodmaps@gmail.com

We ask that residents come out to listen, become involved and give their input and voice to effect change.

Three Firefighters Deliver Baby Girl

By SCOTT JACKSON

Three Quincy firefighters delivered a baby girl in the wee hours of the morning late last week and helped make sure the child was breathing.

Around 1:30 a.m. Friday, April 25, a cab driver knocked on the door of the North Quincy fire station and said a woman was giving birth at the Hancock Street/Squantum Street intersection, a few hundred feet away from the station.

Lt. Shawn Darcy and Firefighters John Banuk and Tim Lynch quickly rushed to the intersection. When they arrived there the baby was crowning, Darcy said, and the firefighters moved the mother to the sidewalk where the baby was born.

The baby, however, was not breathing so Darcy cleared her airways and then attempted to stimulate breathing. A Fallon ambulance then arrived and Darcy and the EMTs were able to get the baby breathing. Darcy said he relied on his training to make sure the girl was breathing.

"You've got to rely on your training and focus the task at hand," he said.

Once the baby was breathing she and her parents were taken by ambulance to a Boston hospital.

This was the second emergency delivery Darcy has performed. The first happened about 18 years ago when he was assigned to the Squantum fire station and helped a woman deliver a child in her house.

Police Warn Of Coyote Risk

By SCOTT JACKSON

Coyotes are being blamed for the deaths of two pets in recent weeks, and police are urging residents to take steps to stop the wild dogs from attacking again.

Around midnight on April 24, a coyote jumped over a fence and ran off with an elderly woman's pet Chihuahua in the Merrymount neighborhood. Police Capt. John Dougan said that coyote attack was likely the second on a pet in April. A cat in North Quincy was killed two weeks prior and officials believe a coyote was responsible, though the attack wasn't witnessed.

To help avoid another attack, residents should ensure their trashcans are covered completely. Pets should not be left unattended, particularly at night.

Dougan said that coyotes are known to frighten easily. If someone encounters one, they can scare it away by yelling and making other loud noises, such as banging trash cans.

Central Students To Present 'Beauty And The Beast, Jr.'

Central Middle School students will perform Disney's 'Beauty and the Beast, Jr.' in the new Central Performing Arts Center Thursday and Friday May 8-9 at 7:30 p.m.

The cast and crew is made up of students from all three grades. The musical, which is a junior version of the Broadway show, features such family favorites as Be Our Guest, Gaston, and Beauty and the Beast.

Tickets for the show are $5 each and may be purchased in advance at the Central Middle School Main Office 875 Hancock St. or at the door on the evenings of the performances.

The new Central Performing Arts Center is located within walking distance from the Wollaston T stop, and is handicapped accessible. There is also plenty of free parking in the area.

FLOOD INSURANCE: WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW
Joe Rossi & Doris Crary
Marshfield Citizens Coastal Coalition
Tuesday, May 6th, 7pm
Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Road
All Quincy residents are invited to join us for this informational forum about the FEMA flood maps. Learn about the steps you need to take now to protect your home, how the current bills affect you and how you can effect the next flood bill to be written in 2017. Lets keep flood insurance affordable.
Joe Rossi recognized a need in Marshfield for citizen representation and activism on coastal issues, by forming the Marshfield Citizens Coastal Coalition he gave citizens that voice. The coalition has become a nationally recognized group for thier work on the flood insurance issue. Doris Crary Chair for ten years on the Marshfield Coastal Advisory Board, had Marshfield involved as one of the first participating communities to the Community Rating Service (CRS) program. Her expertise on flood issues led the advisory board to testify at Senate committee hearings. With 20 plus years in flood, she is considered an expert in regards to flood issues.

uate of North Quincy High. He was killed on Nov. 24, 1968, in Quang Nam as a result of small arms fire.

Speaking at the ceremony was Sirois' brother, Jack, himself a U.S. Navy combat veteran.

"The Sirois family's ultimate sacrifice came on the fourth generation of military warriors who served their country as part of an operating force somewhere for the last century with pride, honor, and dedication so that 'liberty' isn't just another word that's used loosely and 'Semper Fi' means something to our troops, to their values, and our way of life," Sirois said.

"Freedom isn't free and for all those men and women who went into battle and came home, I believe in heroes and I salute you. To all of those who have fallen I say God bless. You're not forgotten now and you never will be here in Quincy," he added, thanking those who helped organize the ceremonies, including Norton.

"I would like to thank all of you here today watching this dedication for a fallen hero whose main mission in life on Nov. 24, 1968, was survival and the defense of his country's principles," Sirois continued. "Life goes on and so do we. Once again, thank you for this opportunity to honor CPL. Lawrence E. Sirois, United States Marine Corps. Buckett – my brother, my hero. I salute you."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, the chairwoman of the council's veterans committee, and Rep. Tackey Chan spoke at the ceremony honoring Sirois.

"I am always humbled to be at these ceremonies and asked to speak," Hughes said. "I was remarking with Rep. Chan that Larry was a graduate of St. Ann's School, as I am, as is Rep. Chan. I think that's the important takeaway of today – these folks who we honor at these ceremonies and throughout the year were people with important, amazing lives that were ended too soon."

"CPL. Sirois is a true hero that protects our freedoms so we can actually be here today, and talk about the wonderful lives we have and to spend time with our friends and family," Chan added. "The wonderful thing about these postings on these corners is they're in our neighborhoods, not in a central location. I know we have the wall at Marina Bay, which is important, but this is a great reminder of our own neighbors, of our own friends who were here, who were defending our country, and protecting all of our freedoms."

The memorial square on Vassell Street is just steps away from Union Congregational Church. The church's pastor, the Rev. John Carl Swanson, a former Navy lieutenant, promised he would leave flowers at the foot of the memorial sign whenever flowers were dedicated on the church's altar.

The final ceremony of the day was at 222 Billings Road, where the square for L/CPL. Martin R. Keefe was dedicated. Like Sirois, Keefe was a 1967 graduate of North Quincy High. He was killed on Feb. 23, 1969, in Quang Tri Province, South Vietnam, as a result of friendly fire. Keefe was 20 years old.

Christine McSherry, Keefe's niece and goddaughter, spoke for the family at the dedication. She was only four years old when her uncle was killed.

"Although my memories of him are very brief, he reminds my youngest son Tabor. Tabor is now 16 and I imagine he is a lot like my uncle was – big-hearted, loving, and affectionate," McSherry said.

"My mother has all sorts of memories of my uncle. They grew up together in Houghs Neck and then moved here to Billings Road. They raided vegetable gardens and had tomato fights with the spoils. They brought home a stray dog named Mugsy who used to sleep in the middle of Billings Road and convinced my grandmother to keep him. My uncle would climb the rose trellises on the house after a night of underage drinking and sometimes he didn't make it in – he would fall off.

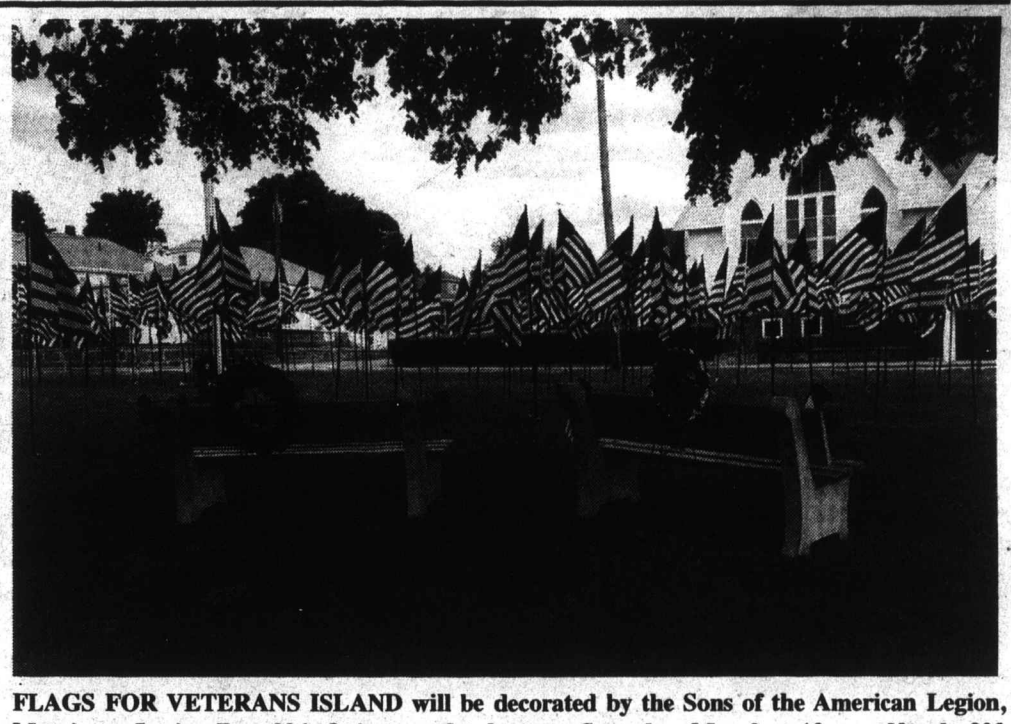
"Although they're such light-hearted memories, there is also something sad about them. They're all recollections from childhood and adolescence. There are no memories of his wedding day or of him doting on his first child or grandchild or showing off his new home he worked hard to afford, because none of those things ever happened. His life ended at 20 in Vietnam on a recon mission with two friends he enlisted with from Quincy as well. They were all killed by friendly fire."

Speaking at the ceremony were Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee and Rep. Bruce Ayers.

"We who live today by chance may end our days in some place meriting no praise," McNamee said. "We need, however, remember one thing – those who have given their lives through their heroic deeds will always be honored by their friends."

"Martin was a North Quincy High School Red Raider who graduated in 1967. Like many of us who grew up in North Quincy he played in these neighborhoods, participated in sports in school, and was a well-rounded young man," Ayers added.

"As we honor these heroes, whether it is a flag or a dedication plaque, these are all symbols of our city's commitment to never forget the sacrifices of our fallen heroes and our families. I believe this dedication captures the memories, the courage, and the commitment and sacrifices of this hero."



FLAGS FOR VETERANS ISLAND will be decorated by the Sons of the American Legion, Morrisette Legion Post 294, Quincy, and volunteers Saturday, May 3 at 10 a.m. Nearly 300 American flags will be placed on the island that is located at the intersection of School and Pleasant Streets in Quincy. The SAL Memorial Day ceremony will be held on Sunday, May 25th at 1 p.m. to honor those who served, are still serving and who have paid the ultimate sacrifice to keep America free. The public is welcome to attend the ceremony.

Quincy College Hosting Memorial Day Commemoration

Quincy College is honoring its veterans for the upcoming Memorial Day.

College faculty, staff and students were encouraged to submit the names of their loved ones who have served in the United States Armed Forces. Throughout the month of May, Quincy College is posting banners throughout its campus buildings in honor of the living, deceased, and fallen soldiers who have dedicated their lives in service to our country.

In addition, Quincy College is hosting Memorial Day Commemoration events before the end of the spring semester that are free and open to the public and will include guest speakers.

The first will take place today (Thursday) at 11:30 a.m. on the Plymouth Campus, 36 Cordage Park Circle; the Quincy Campus event will take place Tuesday, May 6 at 11:30 a.m., 1250 Hancock St.

Quincy College welcomes veterans of the United States Armed Forces, and their loved ones, to the college. The college can meet with veterans to discuss their educational needs and help navigate education benefits with the U.S. Department of Veteran Affairs. The college provides personalized assistance to all veterans and veteran dependents.

Through the Quincy College Veterans Discount Program, veterans may enroll in either Liberal Arts or Professional Programs classes at a discounted rate. Veterans are eligible for this reduced rate regardless of the number of courses they take in a semester. The veteran discount program is not funded by the state or federal government; therefore, veterans who are eligible for education benefits through the VA may also receive the Quincy College discounted rate.

Quincy College is a member of the Service Members Opportunity Colleges Consortium (SOC); we are happy to review both military and college transcripts, as well as CLEP and DANTES exam scores, for transfer credit according to American Council of Education (ACE) recommendations.

Veterans, veteran dependents, and active duty service members are able to use their federal education benefits here at Quincy College. Programs the college is approved to administer include:

- Post 9/11 GI Bill
- Vocational Rehabilitation
- Montgomery GI Bill
- Tuition Assistance

Students may Contact Christopher Sawin, Quincy College Military & Veteran Services Specialist, at 617-984-1773 or veterans@quincycollege.edu for more information.

Scenes From Yesterday

CORRECTION – Last week's Scenes from Yesterday postcard contained two typographical errors. The Sun regrets the errors and is reprinting the entire caption and photo again this week.

THIS 1920 real photo postcard is a view of the Beach Lodge Tea Room, a seasonal boutique restaurant and inn that was on the corner of East Elm Avenue and the Boulevard across from Wollaston Beach. The restaurant specialized in "dainty" luncheons and chicken and waffle dinners. They also offered a wide selection of temperance drinks to be enjoyed with the "refreshing seaside breezes." The Beach Lodge closed in 1926 and the next summer this building became the first Howard Johnson's road-side ice cream shop. It was a huge success. He had opened his first store in 1925 less than a mile from here at the Wollaston railroad depot and he soon found that his rich and creamy 28-flavors of ice cream was his best selling item. Howard Johnson's stayed at this location for 10 years before moving a block away into a new larger building that had been built as a SIMCO ice cream shop on the corner of Sachem Street. By then there were 100 Howard Johnson's stores. This East Elm Avenue corner site is now home to the Wollaston Beach Playground. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Henry Tuttle Leaving In June

Manet Community Health Searching For New CEO

HENRY TUTTLE

The Board of Directors of Manet Community Health Center has formed a search committee to identify a new Chief Executive Officer, with the resignation of current CEO, Henry N. Tuttle, who will leave Manet in June after six years to take a new post in southern California.

The Board has named Manet's Senior Director for Public Policy, Public Affairs and Program Development, Cynthia H. Sierra, as Interim CEO while the search for Tuttle's successor is underway.

Sierra,who has a Master's in Clinical Mental Health, joined Manet in 1997. More recently, she was a graduate of the Blue Cross Blue Shield of MA Foundation's Massachusetts Institute for Community Health Leadership.

Sierra was instrumental in Manet's success in winning capital development and new access point federal funding for expansion, as well as a first-in-the-nation grant from Gov. Deval Patrick's Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund for evidence based interventions and e-referral implementation to prevent and address the most common chronic illness with a consortium of nine municipal, clinical and community based organizations across the South Shore.

She also chairs the Blue Hills Community Health Alliance, CHNA 20, a volunteer coalition of public, nonprofit and private sectors working for a healthier community.

Tuttle will assume the position of CEO of the Council of Community Clinics, headquartered in San Diego, CA, which includes a network of more than 100 practice sites throughout San Diego, Imperial and Riverside Counties serving close to 2 million patient encounters annually. The Council also includes companies that handle group purchasing, training and technical assistance for primary care practices, physicians groups, health, educational and social services agencies regionally and nationwide.

"After 10 years of heading up community health centers here in Massachusetts, I'm excited about this new opportunity to widen access to quality health care and related services for the diverse communities of southern California," said Tuttle. "I'll be able to apply the wisdom we've gained in Massachusetts from implementing health care and cost reform to a broader geographic and demographic area as the Affordable Care Act rolls out in California."

The Manet Board plans to use Manet's annual Dinner and Auction on May 1 to wish Tuttle well and celebrate Manet's recent achievements over the past year in health care leadership, innovation, quality and access. These are detailed in Manet's 2013 Annual Report, which will be released for the first time at the fundraising event at the Boston Quincy Marriott, which is open to the public.

The evening's festivities will include presentation of Manet's most prestigious honor, the Manet Medallion, to the Curry Family for their generosity and citizenship in establishing the Marie A. Curry Fund in 1998, which over the years raised more than $1 million for free cancer screening and awareness programs at Quincy Medical Center. Members of the Curry Family, including Bob Curry and his children, Sean Curry and Julie (Curry) Johnson, are expected to accept the award.

The Board has set interim goals for the next three months, emphasizing its strategic planning, network development, capital expansion and optimum staffing of its growing facilities to ensure excellent patient care.

The search committee for Manet's next CEO is led by the executive leadership of the board. In addition to Rittal, it includes Chris Cogdill, Vice President; John J. Galluzzo, Secretary; Robert J. Griffin, Treasurer; Joe Reardon, Past President; and, Barbara Morris, chair of Manet's Human Resources Committee.

Interested candidates for the position may forward their credentials and cover letter to careers@manetchc.org.

Presidents Shut Out Titans, 2-0

Quincy's Bresnahan No Hits Pembroke

By BILL GRIFFIN

There are no-hitters and then there are No-Hitters.

There are no-hitters that are dotted with walks, errors and mistakes. There are no-hitters salvaged by great defensive plays. Then there are No-Hitters, dominating works of power and control, which are almost solely the work of the pitcher.

Junior Saxon Bresnahan pitched a No-Hitter Monday. She struck out 18, walked none, allowed one baserunner and permitted only four batted balls in fair territory in a masterpiece which carried Quincy to a 2-0 win over Pembroke in a Patriot League game at Mitchell McCoy Field.

"The no-hitter was mostly Saxon. We only had to make three outs behind her," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers of Bresnahan's first varsity no-hitter which lifted the Presidents to 6-0 on the season. "She throws hard and she moved the ball around well. She pitched well last year as a sophomore. The difference this season is her confidence and control. Little things don't upset her."

The most charming part of the story is Bresnahan didn't realize she had a no-hitter until a reporter found her in the parking lot and asked her about it. Surprise! There was little celebration after the game. Bresnahan didn't know. Her catcher Angelina Avitable didn't know. Her teammates didn't know. Not knowing is bliss. Perhaps the answer to better pitching is more mystery.

There were no nerves, no tension, no superstitions. There was nothing to be nervous about. Nobody knew. Bresnahan and Avitable were just out there playing catch. Batters came up, batters sat down. Just a game of catch.

"I had no idea. Honestly. If I did, I would have been nervous," smiled Bresnahan who would have had a perfect game if not for an infield pop which fell for an error in the fifth.

"I didn't know anything was going on. We're close friends and I know how to calm her down if she did get nervous," said Avitable with a wide smile as she passed her hand in front of her face.

Bresnahan threw mostly fastballs and struck out the side five times in seven innings. Not a single ball was hit to the outfield. Pembroke's longest batted ball was a popup which landed in foul territory five feet behind first base. Not only does she keep her fastball down, she hits her spots around the corners of the plate. Up, down, in, and out. She is a junior with a great arm and more than a year's varsity experience who has

The Boston Marathon: Special And Strong

By JOE REARDON

In the weeks leading up to this year's 118th running of the Boston Marathon, talk centered around the more than 35,000 runners' single-minded focus of reclaiming Boylston Street as their own after 2013's unfathomable bombings.

This year's race was hyped as being the best ever behind the mantra of Boston Strong. The Red Sox jumped aboard and rode the pride they had in the city all the way to a World Series championship. David Ortiz had let an F-bomb slip out when proclaiming his love for the city, but so what. The World Series MVP just said what we all felt and he said it from the heart.

When the bombs ripped through the crowd last Patriots Day I was in the parking garage across the street from the Fairmont Copley Plaza getting ready to head back to the Boston Herald for a shift on the high school sports desk. My assignment at the marathon that day was to cover both the male and female wheelchair winners like I had done for the past half dozen years. I finished my stories early, filed them with the sports desk and decided to hang around a bit in the press room and chat with some of the other sports writers, some of whom had come to Boston from as far away as Japan.

I heard the first explosion and thought nothing of it. Being in a concrete parking garage two blocks away muffled the sound. I figured a musket was fired, similar to the ones at Gillette Stadium when the New England Patriots score a touchdown. I thought the same when I heard the second explosion. The thought that the sounds were actually pressure cooker bombs never entered my mind – not even a little.

That all changed when I got back to the Herald and the entire newsroom was huddled around the television screens throughout the sixth floor of the Seaport Building. Even then, though, I thought the explosions might have been caused by an underground gas leak. That made more sense than a terrorist attack at the finish line of the most heralded marathon in the world.

In the weeks and months after the marathon I had trouble looking at the photo of 8-year-old Martin Richard. I have a daughter a year older and could not comprehend the overwhelming grief the Richard family must have been going through. It was tough to look at the photos of Krystle Campbell, Lu Lingzi and Sean Collier as well. Three young dreamers who had their lives snuffed away by a pair of miserable brothers crawling through life with hate in their heart.

Jeff Bauman said it the best. You remember Jeff Bauman. He was the spectator who lost both his legs in the blast. We learned just how brave and determined Bauman was. He refused to let the terrorists destroy his life. The way Bauman looked at it, one of the terrorists was dead and the other is facing the death penalty – he had come out the winner.

This year's race was truly special and it became easy to see once again why Boston is the marathon that all others are measured by. Not New York City, Rotterdam, Chicago, Berlin or London can equal the love Bostonians have for the Hopkinton-to-Boston classic.

The joy of the Boston Marathon was back. Thousands crossed the sun-splashed finish line, many with tears in their eyes. The day became even more perfect when Meb Keflezighi pulled away before the halfway point and cruised to a 2:08:37 victory, breaking the United States' winless drought that dated back to Greg Meyer's run in 1983.

Crowd-favorite Shalane Flanagan, who was born and raised in Marblehead, decided to put the pressure on the marvelous Kenyan and Ethiopian runners early. Flanagan took the lead from the start and kept the pace well under 2:20. She fell back through the Newton Hills and had to settle for seventh. Flanagan was in tears after the race, wanting to win it so bad after taking fourth last year, but she had nothing to be ashamed of. Her time of 2:22:01 obliterated her personal best by well over three minutes and would have won every other Boston in history except for two. Flanagan vowed to keep coming back to Boston until she won – Boston Strong personified.

It was a marvelous race on a marvelous day with runners from all over the world competing. The eyes of the world were on Boston April 21 and for one day, everyone who competed was a Bostonian, running proud and strong – Boston Strong.

Run For Pride And For Good Causes

Marathoners Find An Amazing Crowd

By JOE REARDON

Tracy Wilson didn't have her best race - or come close to setting a new personal best - at last Monday's 118th running of the Boston Marathon, but the veteran of six Hopkinton-to-Copley Square Patriots Day classics was proud to be running in the more than 35,000-runner Boston Strong field.

The Quincy attorney battled through the warm conditions that faced the runners in the fourth and final wave to cross the finish line in a very respectable 5 hours, 27 minutes and 33 seconds to collect her sixth medal in as many tries.

"It was a little warm for us," Wilson said, who owns a personal best of 4:44. "I think that's why a lot of people at my level didn't run as fast as they hoped."

Wilson continued to raise money for the Boston Children's Hospital, going over the $40,000 mark in the six collective races, and making even more friends in the process.

Arriving at Hopkinton Green and the starting line at 6:30 a.m., Wilson made it a point to take in the pre-race sights, sounds and energy that come hand and hand with the oldest, most fabled marathon in the world. By the time the fourth wave of 9,000 runners answered the starting gun, the temperature was at 65 degrees and rising steadily.

Wilson ran conservatively from the start looking to run just under five hours, but could feel the day warming up in the early miles and knew a personal best would be extremely tough in the warm conditions. The heart was in stark contrast to the bitterly cold conditions she trained in during the winter months. "Except for two years ago, it was my slowest race," Wilson said. "The heat was a problem. You train all winter in the freezing cold like we had and then you wind up getting a warm day for the marathon. I wanted to keep it slow and steady and finish right under five hours. I wanted to keep the pace even throughout the whole marathon. If you start off too fast you start to feel it about halfway. I was at the pace I wanted to be at, but at mile 11 I started to feel the heat and was starting to slow down. I made sure I stopped for water every chance I had."

The heat was bearable for Wilson though, due in a large part to the more than 1 million spectators who lined the course. Wilson flew through the enormously popular Scream Tunnel section of the course in Wellesley. The Scream Tunnel is the famous section of the course where the Wellesley College students gather just before the halfway point and cheer on the runners – giving high 5s and kisses to spur the runners on.

"The crowd was amazing," she said. "The Scream Tunnel is always one of my favorite parts of the course. Every year I go over and do the high 5s. You can't miss it."

Wilson began to feel a little dizzy heading up the Newton Hills and wisely stopped briefly at a medical tent looking to get a salt tablet. But because the tent had run out of salt tablets Wilson was given a bouillon cube to suck on to help her cramping. "It was as disgusting as it sounds," she said with a laugh.

Wilson got a second wind and finished strong in front of a frenzied crowd on Boylston Street. The emotion from the runners who finished was palpable. "It was emotional, especially for the runners who weren't able to start last year," said Wilson.

With the marathon behind her for another year, Wilson is contemplating switching gears and running her first New York City Marathon. She likes the prospect of crossing the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge at the start and finishing up in Central Park after traveling through all five boroughs. And as big as the crowds will be, Wilson doubts they can compare to Boston's rabid spectators. "Boston has the best crowd in the world," she said.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall was running his second marathon in six months after completing last November's New York City Marathon. As of Friday afternoon he had raised $10,000 for the "Footsteps For Faxon" project that entails building a 1-1/2-mile walking trail through the scenic park. "I think it's a great way to integrate all the beautiful aspects of Faxon Park," Croall said.

He found the Boston fans to be more vociferous than those in NYC and relentless in cheering the runners on, particularly through the Scream Tunnel. "You run through that and it's like white noise," Croall said. "BC was really loud. That was the wildest I've ever seen it. People were really amped up. The start was amazing. I don't think there were any dead spots

Greyhounds: Let's Set The Record Straight

OP ED

By SARAH NORTON

Since there is no more greyhound racing in Massachusetts, it may surprise you to learn there is still a great need for adoption. In fact, there are still 22 tracks operating in other states, and greyhounds are regularly moved about the country in order to find enough loving homes.

I walk my greyhounds along Wollaston Beach regularly, and I often hear the same questions and incorrect assumptions about these beautiful and gentle dogs. Having had nine of them over the years, I think I'm qualified to share a few facts that may surprise you.

SARAH NORTON of Quincy with three adopted greyhounds, all retired athletes. Willa is a retired thoroughbred racer, and Harriet and Pearl are retired greyhound racers.

Greyhounds are not hyperactive and do not require a lot of space. In fact, since they are sprinters and not endurance dogs, they tend to spend the majority of their day sleeping on the softest available spot in your house. They are experts at this. The amount of exercise required depends on the age of the dog, but most greyhounds should get at least one good walk a day.

Greyhounds have been bred to chase small animals, and not all of them can live with cats. My cats peacefully coexisted with greyhounds until the recently adopted feline named Alvin joined the mix. Alvin is now gatekeeper of the stairs, and the greyhounds live in fear to pass. Be sure to inform your adoption group if you have other pets.

Greyhounds are not the type of dog that can find their way home, so it is essential that they are always on a leash unless in a completely fenced area. They are bred to chase, and when Mother Nature sends a squirrel to my Pearl, no amount of training can make her hear me. Pearl spends her days protecting our backyard from squirrels and (more often) dreaming of squirrels.

Retired racing greyhounds have tattoos in their ears. Their right ear tattoo reflects the month, year, and tattoo order in the litter. For example, my dog Harriet's right ear reads 46H, meaning she was born in April 2006 and was the eighth dog to be tattooed in her litter. The left ear reflects the throughout the whole marathon. There were just walls of people. It was phenomenal. That's the closest you'll ever feel to being a professional athlete. I'm sure the 35,000 people on the road that day had a similar feeling.

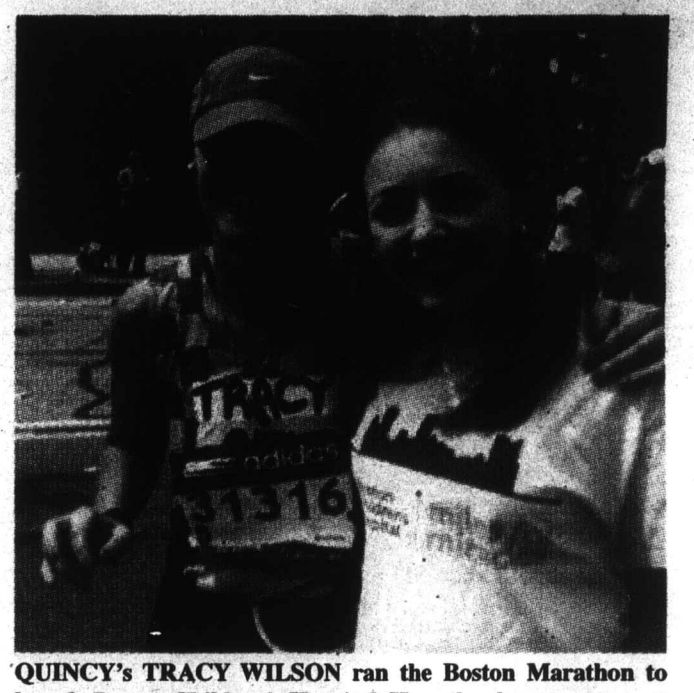
"I still had the same feeling coming down into Cleveland Circle and seeing the Citgo sign thinking I'm almost there. Then the elevation drops and you're like, 'Where's the Citgo sign?'"

Croall sailed across the finish line in 5:03:30 – not the time he was hoping for, but a strong one given the heat. "It was very warm," he said. "I get challenged in the warmer weather. The training this winter was in extremely cold conditions. I know I wasn't the only one out there suffering from the heat."



QUINCY's TRACY WILSON ran the Boston Marathon to benefit Boston Children's Hospital. Here she shares a moment with her patient partner, Maureen Walsh, at mile 13.

And of course, Croall was running in remembrance of 2013. "It's what an American is all about," he said. "Overcoming adversity."

Quincy Resident Presents Color Mood Program At Welch Group Community

A group of South Shore residents gathered with residents of the senior living community The Village at Duxbury to enjoy the recent presentation on ways color can affect mood and enhance life.

Presented by Quincy resident and style maven Maralin Manning, adjunct faculty member at Mount Ida College, the breakfast program gave valuable tips on color pairings and the way color influences our interactions with others.

Manning, who teaches in the Department of Fashion Merchandising at Mount Ida, brought a color wheel and an array of colorful scarves to illustrate her presentation. Many of the participants wore beautiful pastels or brightly colored sweaters.

The presentation is one of the many programs The Village at Duxbury will be holding this spring.

'First Ladies & Founding Mothers' At Adams Park May 11

Adams National Historical Park, a unit of the National Park Service, announce tours of the historic homes including the birthplace homes of John and John Quincy Adams, the Old House at "Peace field," and the Stone Library will be free for mothers, wives, and sisters all day on Mother's Day Sunday, May 11.

Tickets are issued on a first-come, first-served basis and may be obtained at the Visitor Center, 1250 Hancock St. or at the Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

A program entiteld "First Ladies & Founding Mothers" will be presented in the Carriage House from 1 to 3:30 p.m. on Mother's Day. The program is free and open to the public. Reservations are not required.

In a letter dated August 11, 1777, John Adams wrote to his wife, Abigail, "...upon examining the Biography of illustrious Men, you will generally find some Female about them in the Relation of Mother or Wife or Sister, to whose Instigation, a great Part of their Merit is to be ascribed." He continued, "I wish some of our great Men had such Wives. By the account in your last Letter, it seems the Women in Boston begin to think themselves able to serve their Country."

Second First Lady Abigail Adams and her daughter-in-law Sixth First Lady Louisa Catherine Adams, both mothers, wives, and sisters were "such wives" and served their country as "domestic Patriots," First Ladies, and Founding Mothers. Join Abigail Adams (Patricia Bridgman) and Louisa Catherine Adams (Judy Bernstein) at the Carriage House on Sunday, May 11, 2014 and learn how these intrepid and groundbreaking women of the 18th century continue to influence and inspire men, and women, of the 21st century.

For more information about tours, programs, special events, and family activities at Adams National Historical Park, call the Visitor Center at 617.770.1175 or visit www.nps.gov/adam.

Squantum Students Support The Boston Marathon

Squantum Elementary School students and staff showed their support for the 2014 Boston Marathon recently by wearing blue and yellow to school and running their own "mini-marathon" around the field outside the back of the school.

Fourth grade students Dawn Folan, Elisa Van Dijk and Orla Driscoll presented the idea to school staff and then helped plan the race as a way to support those running the Boston Marathon this year and also to remember a difficult event so close to home.

Student runners and teachers were greeted at the starting and finish line by school staff wearing authentic marathon jackets from previous years and every class participated by walking or running the route.

"I was so proud of all the students for showing their support for the Boston Marathon," said Principal Stephen Sylvia. He then added, "This was a healthy, fun and thoughtful way to start the school vacation."

Powerhouse Braintree Ends Presidents' Win Streak

By JOE REARDON

There's probably never a great time on the schedule for any team to play against powerhouse Braintree, but Quincy found what was most likely the absolute worst time to take on the Wamps last Friday in picture-perfect conditions at Adams Field.

The Presidents had just wrapped up an impressive win in its annual spring vacation tournament Thursday the afternoon before by chalking up impressive victories over Bay State Conference squads Weymouth and Milton and a boatload of momentum for the showdown with the Wamps.

Braintree has done the job so far this season of snuffing out both momentum and winning streaks and the Presidents ran right into the eye of the Wamps' storm but did make it a game early. Quincy matched the Wamps for three scoreless innings then watched the No. 2 ranked team in the South strike for seven runs in the fourth and seven more in the fifth, on the way to a 17-1 rout.

The loss wasn't a demoralizing one for Quincy, which fell to 6-2 on the season with three big Patriot League contests slated for this week against Hingham, Duxbury and Middleboro.

When you take on a team the caliber of Braintree you simply can't make mistakes or allow an extra batter to the plate. The same holds true against the Bridgewater-Raynhams and Xaverians of the world.

"I don't think we were flat today," said Quincy head coach Patrick Bryan. "You expect guys to throw strikes and we walked some guys and they (Braintree) started to hit. It was a tough spot to fit in Braintree. You have to be able to play with these (ranked) teams and we will."

Quincy's offense was stifled the entire game with Bobby Salvucci, Padraig Geaney and Pugsley collecting the only hits for the Presidents. Their lone run came in the bottom of the fourth when Greg Paulo's groundout brought home Salvucci to cut the lead to 7-1.

Starting pitcher Mike Pugsley was sharp for three innings, striking out three batters and allowing just one hit – a double by Colin Rios – before Braintree's bats came alive. The hard-hitting Rios hammered Quincy pitching with a 4-for-4 day at the plate and three RBI.

Pugsley started to tire and his pitches were missing high. He was unable to make it out of fourth as the Wamps began to feast on the Presidents' pitching. First baseman Cal Berman got the surge going for Braintree, driving home Umass-Amherst-bound Gino LaRossa with a sharply hit single to left for the first run of the fourth inning. With Pugsley out, the floodgates opened as Quincy pitching had all kinds of problems finding the plate. The Presidents allowed an uncharacteristic nine walks the rest of the way and the Wamps pounded the strike zone and wound up with 13 hits. Rios blasted a home run over the left-field fence to lead off the fifth inning to make it an 8-1 contest and the Presidents weren't able to close the gap against Braintree's deep pitching staff.

Nolan Greene Named SSTC Tourney Co-Captain

Senior NQHS netminder Nolan Greene has been named one of the Quincy co-captains for the prestigious South Shore Town Cup [SSTC] hockey tournament June 8th.

Greene, a Patriot League All-Star, posted a 1.94 goals-against average for the NQHS hockey team that captured the Patriot League Keenan Division title and qualified for the hockey post-season his last two seasons. NQHS Coach Matthew Gibbons summed up Greene's career as one "that will not be soon forgotten."

With NCAA and United States Premier Hockey League (USPHL) coaches expected to scout the SSTC talent at the Bog Arena in Kingston, Greene is still weighing his college options and hopes to continue playing hockey. Making its first appearance in the 6th annual SSTC, the U-18 Quincy team hopes to duplicate the same success as many of them were part of the U-16 Quincy State Championship team. Greene looks forward to playing against some of the premier talent, many of whom have already committed Division 1 schools.

A multi-sport student athlete, Greene practices with the U-18 hockey team before school and captains the Red Raiders' lacrosse team, which will be on the road against Sacred Heart High School this Saturday at 9 AM. "Both on and off the ice, Nolan is an unselfish and natural leader, who has been a great role model for all of the younger goalies in the Quincy Youth Hockey program, "said U-18 Quincy coach Mike Hussey.

THE UNCHARITABLE OFFICE CHAIR

We pay a big price for all the time (an average 8.9 hours per day) we spend sitting down. Because the spine was not designed to remain in a seated position for long periods, we often feel numbness in our rear and lower thighs and aches in our lower backs. When we sit, the lower lumbar curve collapses, turning the spine's natural "S" shape into a "C," which impedes the abdominal and back musculature that support the body. As a result, the body slouches and the lateral and oblique muscles grow weak and non-supportive. This, in turn, causes sitters to bear all their body weight through their pelvis and spine, placing the highest pressure on vertebral discs.

Should you change your office chair? Talk to your doctor of chiropractic about ways to improve your lifestyle. The chiropractic approach to health care is natural. We can help you learn more about your body and how to have greater responsibility and control over your personal health. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we recommend a continuing schedule of regular chiropractic checkups, which can help detect, correct, and maintain ultimate spinal and nervous system function. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you lead a healthier life. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

SCHOOL COMMITTEEMAN Dave McCarthy recently donated a Chevy 3500 15-passenger van to Quincy Public Schools. The van will be utilized for athletic transportation as well as other activities. "It's a good van" McCarthy said. "It will serve the students of Quincy Public school system in a variety of ways, primarily school sports. The smaller sporting teams will benefit from its use as it will be a viable option for the smaller headcount of teams such as tennis, golf etc. Sometimes the large bus option isn't available so the van will be." Baseball, lacrosse and other teams will be able to utilize it for use if other traditional bus options are not available. Other groups that utilize the van include ROTC as well as carpenty and electrical students. "It's a nice addition to the fleet. It was a great option for myself and for the schools, glad to assist in any way," McCarthy added. Photo Courtesy Dave McCarthy

McDonald Brothers Among NQ Baseball Building Blocks

By BILL GRIFFIN

They are the Brothers McDonald and they represent a bright future for North Quincy baseball.

Matt McDonald is a sophomore who plays shortstop. Kevin McDonald is a freshman who plays second base. They are both young and new to the tests of varsity baseball. They are gaining experience and seasoning, but they are also showing the ability and hustle which will serve them well as they grow and mature as baseball players.

Weymouth defeated North Quincy, 11-3 in the consolation game of the Quincy Spring Baseball Tournament last week at Adams Field, but both brothers hit the ball hard and fielded their positions well in the middle of the infield.

"They are young and learning, but I honestly believe the future at North Quincy will grow with them as they move through the program," said coach Matt Edgerly. "They are both good kids, they will do the right thing and have high baseball IQ's. They will just get better and better."

Kevin had two hits in three trips and scored a run. He handled six chances at second cleanly, including a pair of groundballs to his right with men on base. Matt, who has played well all season, had a single, RBI, and a run scored. He also snagged a pair of line drives at short and showed an accurate arm on a pair of infield bouncers.

"They will be the two key players up the middle going forward for us," said Edgerly.

Sophomore righty Josh Helfrich threw well in six innings of work for North. He gave seven runs, only three were earned, struck out two and walked just one. His control was excellent. His curveball got better as the game went on and when he kept his fastball down, he was tough. He is another sophomore who is growing on varsity, and he has had three quality starts. He also belted a double at the plate to help own cause.

"He's learning how to pitch and he will only get better," said Edgerly. "He will get stronger and he'll throw harder. He will learn to spot his fastball as he matures. He has good velocity. It's a matter of keeping the ball down."

Senior Andrew Currie was the offensive standout of the game for the Red Raiders. He was on base three times with a walk, single, and a double. He stung a double to drive in a pair of runs in the fifth inning.

"Pitching, defense, and hitting. He's given us senior leadership all season," said Edgerly.

Senior Robbie Cameron had a good game in leftfield. He grabbed a sinking liner in the fifth and doubled a runner off second. In the seventh, he hustled to the line to run down a hit and held Weymouth's Jason Davern to a single on what easily could have been a double.

Sophomore catcher Cam White walked, scored a run and showed a strong arm from behind the plate.

"Robbie is a senior who is out for baseball for the first time, and he's been terrific," said Edgerly. "Those were two good plays he made in left. He's also leading us in RBI. Cam is another sophomore who is learning and improving. He has a great arm."

Weymouth built a 6-0 lead before North scored three in the fifth. White walked and advanced on a wild pitch. Kevin and Matt McDonald singled for to drive home White and make it 6-1. One batter later, Currie ripped a double to narrow it to 6-3.

The Wildcats added one in the sixth and four in the seventh to finish the scoring.

North is 0-8, but anyone who saw the Red Raiders in the opening week of the season can easily notice the improvement. The freshmen and sophomores are getting better. They will make mistakes on a day such has the Weymouth game when there is an East wind howling and turning baseballs into wiffleballs as they float and dip through the air. The effort is there. The key is to maintain the enthusiasm as the club goes through its growing pains.

"It wasn't our best defensive game. We showed our inexperience in the windy conditions," said Edgerly. "We want a better start because we are capable of stringing together three runs in an inning like we did today. As we get older and stronger, we'll get used to playing on days like today."

Milton defeated North, 10-3 in the first round of the tournament. Cameron had a triple, two RBI and scored a run. Currie pitched well over the first four innings for North.

North is at Whitman-Hanson Friday at 4 p.m.

Quincy Blanks Milton To Win Spring Tournament

Kenny Sorensen Improves To 3-0; Matt Davis (4 Hits) Paces Offense

By BILL GRIFFIN

Take all the good things a team can do in a baseball game, put it on tape and present it as a DVD displaying Quincy's almost impeccable 7-0 victory over Milton in the championship game of the Quincy Spring Tournament at Adams Field Thursday afternoon.

Always begin with pitching. Senior Kenny Sorensen upped his record to 3-0 with five innings of shutout, two-hit, no-walk relief. Move on to hitting. Senior Matt Davis simply crushed the ball four times to lead an 11-hit attack with two singles, a double and four RBI.

Now for defense. There was nothing spectacular, but Quincy made all the plays, all the solid plays a good team has to make to close out games. And there were the little things. Quincy stole four bases, moved runners along, took the extra base, executed the hit-and-run, worked deep into counts and got runners home from third with less than two outs.

Pitching, hitting, defense, and the little things pretty much covers all that is good about baseball. The Presidents did them against a quality team from the Bay State Conference, and they did them to win their home tournament which made it just a bit sweeter.

"This is the first time we've won the tournament since I've been coaching," said coach Pat Bryan whose club won six of its first seven starts. "It meant a lot to the kids. It's their tournament.. Overall, I'm very pleased. We played a good game against a good team. The kids are having fun, and they're playing good baseball."

Quincy advanced to the title game by building an 8-0 lead and holding off Weymouth, 10-7 in the first round. Junior Greg Paulo went the distance fanning eight and giving just five earned runs. Sophomore lefty Cody Desmond, who blanked Milton over the first two innings of the championship game, had two hits and an RBI.

If there was a turning point against Milton, it was in the third when Sorensen took control of the game. Quincy led, 5-0, but the Wildcats had two runners on and nobody out when Sorensen entered in relief. The righty, who throws from every angle except directly off his shoetop, struck out Liam Collins on a curveball, Pat Coffey on a changeup and got Cam Brown to bounce to second to end the inning.

He retired 15 of the 18 hitters he faced, and Milton never threatened again.

"The third inning was the big moment in the game," said Bryan. "Milton is a good hitting club, but Kenny makes tough pitches in big situations. He got us out of a big jam when we needed it to hold the lead."

Once again, Sorensen changed speeds and arm angles, but what baffled Milton was his willingness to throw any pitch on any count. Few pitchers on any level throw a soft curve or a change when behind 2-0 or 3-1 in the count. Sorensen throws any pitch at any time.

"He keeps the hitters off balance because he changes speeds off every pitch he has. The hitter can't expect a certain pitch, no matter what the count," said Bryan.

Davis (five hits, six RBI in the tourney) had the barrel of bat squarely on the ball all day. He hit four shots. His hardest hit ball was his only out, a rocket to right center knocked down by the wicked East wind which was strong enough to overturn a steamship in the bay. He jump-started Quincy with a two-run single in the first and started a three-run third with a double which cut through the wind in center field.

"He was right on the ball all day," said Bryan.

Seven players hit safely for Quincy. This is a deep, balanced lineup which hits from top to bottom.

It all starts at the top of the order with Tyler Beach (11-21 for the season) and Johnny Marsinelli (a double and two singles vs. Milton). The pair was on base a combined five times and scored four runs. They worked the hit-and-run perfectly to start the first with Marsinelli bouncing a grounder through the empty right side to send Beach to third.

Beach squeezes everything out of every at bat by working the count and seeing multiple pitches. Marsinelli sets the offense in motion. Not only does he get on base, but he uses his speed and instincts to disrupt defenses and create scoring chances. Example? When Milton missed the cutoff man on the hit-and-run in the first, Marsinelli took second base. Second and third. No out. A nice way to start an inning.

"I love their leadoff guy (Beach)," said Weymouth coach Jim Dolan. "You have to throw him a strike. Anything that's out of the zone, even by just a little, he just won't swing at."

Quincy made just one harmless error. There were no highlight-film plays, but the Presidents were steady and sure with all the routine plays. Second baseman Mike Pugsley made the most important play when he ranged to his right to handle a tough chance which ended the third and stranded two Milton baserunners.

Geaney and Paulo produced the situational hitting that Bryan loves with ground balls which scored runners from third with less than two out in the third.

"Liam Fitzmaurice had his second straight excellent game behind the plate. He called a good game and did a good job blocking pitches in the dirt. Bobby Salvucci played well at third," said Bryan.

Munroe had a double, an RBI and a run scored for Quincy who scored two in the first, three in the third and two in the fourth. Geaney had a single and an RBI while Salvucci added a single and a run scored. Pugsely drilled a double and Paulo had an RBI.

Quincy traveled to Silver Lake Wednesday at 4 p.m. and visits Middleboro Friday at 4 p.m. for road tests against two of the best teams in the Patriot League.

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth Tryouts

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth will hold tryouts on May 3, 4, 10 and 11 beginning at 9:30 a.m. at O'Rourke Field.

Tryouts are open to Quincy residents between the ages of 16 and 19. To be eligible to try out a player must have been born on or after Jan. 1, 1995.

The 18-game season starts June 1 and ends in late July.

Wollaston participates in the Senior Babe Ruth South Shore League and plays against teams from South Boston, Dorchester, Norwood, Westwood, Dedham, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton, and Hingham/Hull.

For more information, call Steve Reardon at 617-438-5727 or Bob Griffin at 617-472-4811.

"She mixed in curves and screwballs as well," said Avitable.

"I've been close, and it's a good feeling to get my first no-hitter on varsity," said Bresnahan who one-hit Stoughton earlier this season. "I'm happy with the no-hitter, but the most important part about my pitching is that it's helped get us off to a good start."

Junior Emma Kelly jump-started the Quincy offense from the leadoff spot. She had a walk, two singles, three stolen bases and a run scored. She bunted safely on a two-strike count and came around to score the only run Bresnahan would need in the third.

"We're working with Emma on batting left-handed," said Sommers. "She has such good speed that if she makes contact, she'll probably beat the throw to first. Once she's on base, she makes things happen with her speed and baserunning."

Bresnahan can also hit. She bats out of the Number 3 spot in the lineup. She had a booming double to left, an RBI, and ripped a hot shot to third which Pembroke's Malinda McCartney turned in to an out. Avitable had a double and an RBI while Bethaney Walker added a single.

"Hits were hard to come by today. I thought Pembroke's pitcher (Tayrn Cahill) was excellent as well," said Sommers.

In the Quincy third, Kelly bunted for a hit and came around on a stolen base and ground balls by Taylor Parry and Bresnahan. In the fifth, Bresnahan slammed her long double. Designated runner Lucia Buzzell scored on a double by Avitable to make the final, 2-0.

In a game when a pitcher is as dominant as Bresnahan, it is easy for the outfield and infield to drift away a bit because nobody is hitting the ball to them. It was interesting and impressive to see Quincy stay alert and in the game, backing up bases on throws to the mound and to first base.

"You have to be careful not to fall asleep when the pitcher is throwing as well as Saxon did today. I was happy with the way everyone stayed in the game," said Sommers.

Quincy was scheduled to host undefeated Silver Lake and its star pitcher Maddy Barone Wednesday at 4 p.m. and is at home against Middleboro Friday at 4 p.m.

"So far, pitching and defense have been the keys for us," said Sommers of his team's fast start. "We've also been able to put our bats on the ball consistently. We're getting contributions throughout our order."

LUCIA BUZZELL (left) rounds third and heads for home with Quincy's second run in the Presidents' 2-0 shutout victory over Pembroke Monday at Mitchell-McCoy Field.

Some Solid Performances For North Quincy Track

By JOE REARDON

Quincy's brand new track layout may be a state-of-the-art facility on par with any in the state, but the chance of windy conditions, particularly early in the season, are practically a given. It isn't until spring is here to stay that the wind begins to subside.

And that's when North Quincy track's head coach Geoff Hennessy believes most of his athletes will turn in some of their biggest performances of the season.

"It gets very windy," said Hennessy, whose name is synonymous with everything track in the city. "I don't know why, but I've never seen it as windy as it's been this season. It knocks everything down. It flipped the high jump mats and benches over. It's been a mess. It's almost like we're two or three weeks behind schedule. It's April vacation and the toads are out – we can hear the toads. The next day we heard nothing. It was too cold for them. They're a good indicator of the weather.

At this point in the track season, Hennessy estimates North Quincy could be up to three weeks behind in the training he'd like to do with his team. "If it wasn't cold it was windy as hell," he said. "We just can't get anything done. We do what we do. Everybody else has to experience it as well. People will just get better later in the year. I'm not worried about it. It is what it is." Even so, the Red Raiders have put up several solid performances this season in less than optimal conditions. The cold and wind didn't bother Emily Bryson when she ran a solo 2 mile in a swift 11:35 and could obviously have run fast if she had to. "It was funny because she did it all by herself," said Hennessy of the best female distance runner on the South Shore and one of the best in the state. "It didn't look like she was even trying."

Emily's twin sister, Julia, has had a successful season so far as well. Julia has already clocked a 5:42 and like Emily, is undefeated in both the mile and 2 mile. "We've been flip-flopping them every meet and neither one has lost," said Hennessy. "Even against Hingham, which is a pretty good team, they still won."

Hennessy did point out that girls tend to off days in the big meets later in the season and it's an albatross he wants to get a hold of. Concerned because they tend to peak at the state coaches invitational and not later in the year. "It didn't happen in cross country so we have to see what we're doing right there," said Hennessy. "Outside of the fact that they were both sick as dogs during state meet indoors. We're not going to stop them. This is the year we let them loose. I'm hoping as juniors this is the year to cash in and do well in postseason stuff. We'll see what happens."

The other sister tandem on the team, Maya and Melody Umoren, have owned the shot put circle and are good bets to perform well come late meets when the postseason starts to heat up. Maya, who had a heave of 40 feet last spring, has already hit 38' despite a bothersome knee. Melody is only a freshman and has shown a ton of potential this spring. She dominated her specialty at the Route 228 Freshman/Sophomore Invitational at Notre Dame Academy with a terrific toss of 35-2, nearly four feet ahead of the second-place finisher.

Hennessy has good reason to believe they just may turn out to be the best two shot putters in the Patriot League. "They're going to dominate," he said. "(Maya) won't lose. We don't even compete against Pembroke until the league championship and they're the only team in the league who has a shot putter who has thrown close to them."

Camille Mullaney also qualified for the Div. 2 meet in the high jump, while the talented lineup of Mia Healy, Isabelle Flaherty, Mandy Hazelton and Melody Umoren has pleasantly surprised Hennessy in the 4x100 relay. The all-freshman group punched its ticket to the Div. 2 meet with a swift 56.34 performance. "I didn't think Melody was a sprinter, but she's fast," said Hennessy.

The boys too are competing hard. Mike Mullaney has been his usual rock-solid self in the distances, as has Jimmy Cannon. Connor Pound has been picking up important points in the shot put and discus and Mike Munroe's performance at the Route 228 meet will go down as one of the best of the season. Munroe easily took the shot put with a 45-4 effort.

The numbers are down, particularly on the boys' side because of the MIAA's questionable decision to turn what could have been a great cooperative program into two separate entities this spring. That's not going faze Hennessy, who expects many strong efforts this spring.

"The kids we have do a good job and they're easy to work with.," said Hennessy. "When we get into a big meet we look dominant. Our kids score in a bunch of different events. We look like we're doing something. In a dual meet, forget it. We just don't have the numbers.

"Track kids are all about improving their personal improvement and running well in the invitationals. That's our mentality. We're never about dual meets. We're all about what's the big meet coming up? How well are you going to do in it? That's what we do. It's more like a college type thing. Colleges don't care who wins dual meets. They want to see how many kids qualify for divisionals or conference. That's how you measure success. That's a program."

The Red Raiders will get an extra shot to qualify for the big meets, thanks to a new meet on the schedule. Because the league meet was moved back a week it left an opening on the schedule that Middleboro jumped at. "I said sure why not," said Hennessy. "It gives some other kids an opportunity that may not be going to the league meet. Plus it's a home meet and that's good for us."

Squantum Wins Middle School Basketball Title

Squantum defeated Sterling in the Middle School Division Championship of the Quincy Recreation Department All-City Basketball Tournament.

In the final game of the single elimination tournament, a meeting of the two highest scoring teams in the field of 8, the balanced Squantum offense overcame a strong Sterling defense to claim the title of 2014 Champion.

Leading the scoring for Squantum was Max Storch, who started the game hot from "downtown," netting three consecutive three-point baskets, and finishing the game with 15 points total. Not far behind was Mark Monahan, who finished with 9 points, most coming from second-chance baskets around the hoop. Elmer Lainez, Raphy Veras, and Ryan Cox chipped in 4 points apiece. Rounding out the scoring was Antonio Allen (3), Samy Elouizi (2), and Miguel Nunez (2).

Andrew Airosus and Matt Klier showed excellent passing skills, setting their teammates up for some easy scoring opportunities, while Joshua Jackson and Tom Veasey each contributed to the win with a number of tough rebounds in traffic. Josh Dangora, Tim Layden, and Joe Sands all played sturdy defense.

Coach and veteran Recreation Leader Pat Dooley, who was assisted by leader Katelyn Layden, praised the team's consistent effort and teamwork over the course of the tournament.

For Sterling, Danny Keegan capped off a nice tournament performance by leading his team in scoring with 13 points to go along with strong performance on the boards. Tyreek Woodley scored 7 points and Shorn Hawthorne contributed 5 points. Nasir Cardoso, Raheim Leathers, and Davi Soares each helped the offensive effort, contributing 2 points each.

Nathan Dunn, Noah Herrera, and Matt Pittman all showed smart passing and rebounding skills in what was a valiant effort by the Sterling team.

Coach Colleen Nichol was proud of her players for their enthusiasm and sportsmanship throughout the tournament and congratulated Squantum for a well-played championship game.

The All-City Basketball Tournament is a Quincy Recreation tradition that is conducted annually at the conclusion of the winter recreation programs and has been held for more than 50 years. Teams are created from participants in the neighborhood recreation programs from all parts of the city. Recreation leaders, who were assigned their respective gyms when the program started in November, coach all teams. Participants regularly attend the gyms in their home neighborhoods and are from both public and private schools.

Both teams faced a long road on their way to the championship. In the semi-finals, Squantum, won a tough game against Point Webster Yellow 53-47 to advance to the championship behind strong performances by Monahan and Veras, who finished with 14 and 12 points, respectively. For Point Webster, Jules Wiggins put on an impressive scoring display, leading his team with 14 points, 10 of which came in the first half.

Albi Biba showed off his mid-range shooting skills to the tune of 12 points, while Rahmy Chebo went 7 for 8 from the free throw line, finishing with 10 points. Melvin Gonzalez did his damage in the second half, hitting two from long range and two from the line to finish with 8 points. Kellum Haong hit a momentum-swinging basket to finish with 2 points, and Brian O'Connor hit one from the line to finish with one. TJ Ortiz showed good leadership and ball-handling skills, while Marcus Laphiste and Mike Lomanno both played excellent defense to keep the game close until the final buzzer.

Rookie coach Rich Turpin was pleased with his team's attempt and noted that they never gave up. On the other side of the bracket, Sterling capitalized on a dominant effort inside by Keegan, who finished with 17 points, to defeat Merrymount 51-33 and move on to the final.

Merrymount countered Sterling's inside attack with a three-point barrage, connecting 8 times from long range. Leading scorer Brendan Keaveny accounted for four shots from downtown, finishing with 12 points overall. Brendan's twin brother Colin Keaveny hit two from long range for 6 points. Ryan Mele and J.J. Camera each hit a three and a layup to finish with 5 points each, while Pat Nazarro capitalized on his offensive rebounding to finish with 7 to round out the scoring.

Kaliegh Matulonis and Nick Moosick both showed great court vision and passing, while Dylan McDonald, Ryan Kelson played tough on the defensive end of the court. Win Tran and Jack Cook helped the cause by showing their rebounding abilities.

Coach Paul Carson expressed his pleasure with his player's effort, and is excited about bringing his team back for another run in next year's tournament.

In prior tournament action, Merrymount held off a late comeback by Atherton Hough to prevail, 42-38. Merrymount was lead in that game by Ryan Cefalo, who hit five tough lay-ups to score 10 and set the pace for his team.

Trailing by 14 at half time, and down by as many as 20, Atherton Hough came storming back to make it a close game in the second half. Steve Andrews and Kyle Cabezas, who each scored 11 points, and Christ Pham, who finished with 10 points, led the comeback. Doug Concannon and Jason Lam scored two points. John Kamb, whose staunch defense gave the opposing ball handlers, fits during the comeback effort, also chipped in with two.

Tim Gaffney, Jon Bousquet and Jason Whalen showed great skill moving the ball on offense, while Billy Powers, John Early and James Keenan helped out on defense. Vincent Nguyen and Peter Le both played valuable minutes in key points of the game.

Coach Eddie Grennon was proud of his team, and was impressed with their "never say die" attitude.

Eventual champions Squantum played Snug Harbor in the first round of the tournament, winning 41-22. Caitlyn Caggiano led Snug Harbor with 8 points. Ian Kahugu scored 4, and Robbie Hill, Michael Nguyen, Mark Goose, and Phillip Vu finished with 2 points each. Andrew Chieng, Johnathan Costello, Jon Brolin, and Andrew Chieng all played well and showed good sportsmanship. Paul Cunniff coached the Snug Harbor team.

In the other first round match-up, Sterling defeated Point Webster Green 62-35. Joe Osgood put on a show, hitting five three-pointers and adding two lay-ups to finish with 19 points. Joe Ban hit three long-range baskets of his own and finished with 11 points.

Also scoring for Point Webster Green were Paige Maze and Olivia Skinner, who hit on basket each to finish with 2 points. Billy Nguyen and Eric Manter played good, aggressive defense, while Manny Maloof had several nice rebounds.

Also playing well for Point Webster was Kimera Chaico, Meagan Piquette, and Jalen Roach. Rich Turpin coached Point Webster Green.

Recreation Director Barry Welch presented certificates of achievement to all finalists and trophies to the members of the Champion Squantum team. The game was videotaped for rebroadcast by the Recreation Department and can be seen on Q.A.T.V.

The department extends its congratulations to all who participated and its gratitude to all staff members who coached, officiated, or otherwise contributed to another successful tournament.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, April 23, 2014, at approximately 5:45 p.m., Officer Joseph Paccioretti was dispatched to a West Quincy address to investigate a past family trouble call.

Upon arrival, the Officer interviewed the female victim who stated that her boyfriend had threatened to kill her over the phone. The victim said that she dated him since 2011 and in 2012 they were married in Medford. She added that they did not have a marriage license because he was still married. The victim revealed that at times during their relationship, he was physically abusive toward her.

The victim said that she stopped their relationship after learning he (the suspect) was still married, however, he would still come to see her at her apartment and has keys to get in. The victim then recounted an incident that occurred on April 14th when he was at her apartment and she confronted him about his marriage and the future of their relationship. She said that he became angry, pushed her against a wall, grabbed her around the neck and threw her onto her bed. After a few minutes he left.

The victim stated that on April 16th she learned that she was pregnant, so she notified the suspect. He immediately grew angry and demanded that she have an abortion. When she told him that she wanted to have their baby, the suspect initially told her that he would take the baby away to Jordan and she would never see "it" again. The victim also told the Officer that she contacted the suspect's wife and informed her of the situation. After doing this, the victim decided it would be best to stay away from her apartment.

On April 22nd, she returned to her apartment to find her belongings had been disturbed. The victim stated that she believed that the suspect entered her apartment looking to destroy pictures of the two together. On the same day, the victim sent the suspect a photo via internet of their baby's ultrasound which resulted in the suspect threatening to come over to kill her and her baby if she did not get an abortion. The victim told Officer Paccioretti that she was in fear for her life because the suspect has keys to her apartment and could enter anytime day or night. She added that her landlord was going to change her locks.

After the Officer strongly advised her to get an emergency restraining order, the victim said she would wait until the morning to go to court for the order. The Officer again advised her to take this step but the victim said that she would stay at a friend's house until her locks were changed. The suspect lives in Stoughton so Officer Paccioretti contacted the Stoughton Police Department and requested that they attempt to locate and arrest the suspect.

At approximately 7:50 p.m., the suspect was placed under arrest in Stoughton and then transported to the Quincy Police Station for booking. The 44 year old suspect was charged with, "Assault and Battery and Threats to Commit a Crime." Officer Paccioretti received a telephone call from the suspect's wife, who confirmed that the victim had contacted her and her husband by phone and text during the week. High bail was set for the suspect. Nice Work!

Off duty but always on duty: Officer Brandolini, in uniform, was in Stop & Shop an hour before his scheduled shift doing some early morning shopping. He observed a female in an aisle remove a store product from a box and then conceal the item in her pocket. The Officer confronted the female who attempted to walk away upon seeing him.

When told that she was seen stealing the item and instructed to remove it from heir pocket, the female suspect initially denied any wrongdoing, then handed over the item, a Nutrisse Female Hair Dye package. The suspect was then escorted to the front of the store where the store manager was. Although the stolen item totaled $8.49, the manager said that the suspect has been observed shoplifting on other occasions and given verbal warnings. Based on this information and a record of such incidents, Officer Brandolini placed the 56 year old Quincy resident under arrest for "Shoplifting" and trespassed from the store. Nice Work!

Interior Decorating Tips

Email Your Question To Barbara Graceffa: barbara@sec-interior

Dear Secretary of the Interior:

I want to redecorate my entire living room. I painted the walls a medium charcoal gray. I have also purchased a rug and drapes in a light gray. Can you please advise me on what color to choose for the furniture? Derek

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Dear Derek,

Gray colors have been very popular for several years now. Since gray is a neutral color, the sky's the limit for choosing a second color —any color will work with it. Navy or marine blue, wine, sage green, or cherry red would look beautiful with your contrasting greys. A gray, soft yellow, and white or cream combination is attractive, too. Find an inspiration fabric or piece of art and choose your colors from it. Silver metallic, stainless steel, and mercury glass accessories play well with the gray scheme, too.

Dear Secretary of the Interior:

I'm moving into my first apartment and have very little budget to buy furniture and accessories. Can you give me some budget friendly tips? Jessica

Dear Jessica,

First, ask your family, friends, and coworkers if they have any hand-me-downs they can donate – you wouldn't be the first— or last—to do this! Try thrift stores and used furniture galleries, too. Also, outside furniture is considerably less expensive than its interior cousins. Although a loveseat or sofa would not have the comfort level you need, consider a cushioned outdoor resin or metal easy chair, coffee table and/or end tables to save some money. When it comes to accessories, enlarge some of your favorite photos and "frame" them on inexpensive clip boards or simply add them to the wall with clear push pins. However, be sure to buy a quality new mattress, even if you buy a used bed frame or headboard.

Do you have a question on interior decorating? Send it to barbara@sec-interior and it may get printed in a future issue of The Quincy Sun.

Porch Swing Showing Its Age

By SAMANTHA MAZZOTTA

Q: My mother's house has an old wooden swing on the front porch that we enjoyed as kids. But it doesn't look very safe anymore -- the wood seems to be rotting, the paint has mostly peeled off, and it doesn't swing straight. Is it worth convincing her to replace it? -- David H., via email

A: That depends on a couple of factors, besides convincing your mom to let you replace it. One, is there enough interest among the family to continue to have a porch swing? And two, is the porch structurally sound enough to safely put up a new swing?

The reason I ask is that older homes, while probably pretty sturdy, may have developed hidden problems structurally. Porches usually are built outside any load-bearing points and so don't present a threat to the house itself, but they are sometimes built with less-durable materials and therefore deteriorate faster. There's nothing more embarrassing than putting up a sturdy, heavy porch swing only to have to anchor bolts tear out of a rotting beam, dumping out the swing's occupants.

Have a construction professional who specializes in outside attachments like decks and porches inspect and evaluate the condition of the porch. Tell him your plans to replace the swing and ask about the best places from which to anchor it.

Another option: If the porch doesn't check out, or if you or your mom simply don't want a swing on the porch, try a freestanding swing in the yard. Again, look for a sturdy, durable model with good supports that will stand up to outdoor weather for several years.

HOME TIP: Want to paint a wooden porch swing? Be sure to use exterior grade paint or paint specially formulated for outdoor porches.

Ground Broken For New Veterans Housing Complex

By KRIS KALABOKAS

National Community Development Week (CDW) wrapped up on Friday with a ceremonial groundbreaking at 178-186 East Howard St. for a 12-unit, 13,690 square foot veterans housing complex funded by the HOME Investment Partnership Program (HOME), and the Community Development Block Grant Program (CDBG).

The week-long celebration gives CBDG and HOME grantees the opportunity to meet with local Congressmen to showcase projects and programs, and celebrate community development as well as educate the public on the importance of community development efforts.

HOME, enacted in 1990, gives formula grants to localities that communities use, many times in partnership with local nonprofit groups, for the funding of buying or rehabilitating affordable housing for rent or homeownership. They also provide rental assistance to low to moderate-income individuals. CDBG provides funds for addressing community development needs and was enacted into law in 1974 as part of the Housing and Community Development Act. The purpose of the CDBG is to provide safe, sanitary living spaces as well as economic opportunities to low to moderate-income families and individuals.

Since 1992 Quincy has received $17,254,696 in HOME funds and $80 million in CDBG funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Officially performing the groundbreaking were Community Development Director for the City of Quincy Sean Glennon, Cong. Stephen Lynch, state Rep. Tackey Chan, Quincy Planning Director and Chair of the Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee Dennis Harrington, state Sen. John Keenan, Deputy Director of the Office of Community Planning and Development for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Cedric Kam, Majority Leader of the House of Representatives Ronald Mariano, and Vice President of Colonial Federal Savings Bank Angela Blanchard.

Greetings of the City were delivered by Councillor Joseph Finn, President of the Quincy City Council and President & Executive Director of Mass. Housing & Shelter Alliance. "The City of Quincy has a great deal to be proud of because we've accepted that public responsibility and have directed most and all of those resources that we've received here towards housing," he said. "Today what we're doing is we consecrate a living monument, not only to [veterans'] sacrifice but to those still living who stood willing to make the same sacrifice often at great cost to themselves."

He said the building would symbolize their commitment to duty and honor.

Lynch said the development would meet the needs of those that had given so much of themselves for their country. "There is a toll psychologically, physically, emotionally, with men and women doing so many tours in an environment where there is no sense of safety," he said. "The wear and tear that falls upon those soldiers, those marines, sailors, air force personnel, national guard, reserve; there's a tremendous unmet need there and we see the consequences of that at home here."

He thanked city representatives for cobbling together the agencies, initiatives, and programs that fund veterans housing. The city's Affordable Housing Trust Fund is allocating $250,000 and the Quincy Home Program will be allocating $750,00 towards the project. "I'm not surprised that it's Quincy stepping forward and meeting that need...the City of Quincy is known for treating its veterans very, very well and honoring them during their service and especially when they come home," he said.

Not only will the building provide housing to veterans but it will also help spruce up the area, which many complain is plagued by graffiti and has been made unsightly due to billboards according to Lynch.

Kam welcomed future development in the area and expressed gratitude to the City of Quincy for providing NeighborWorks Southern Mass with $1 million in support for the project.

"Our mission is to help develop viable communities by providing decent housing, creating a suitable living environment and expanding economic opportunities particularly for low and moderate income persons," he said: "It's so nice to see this sort of thing happen... thanks and keep it up!"

Echoing his sentiments was Mariano, who said the neighborhood was his home and he was excited to see construction in the area. "This is my home...so this has a very significant impact on my life both as a representative and as a resident of the neighborhood," he said. "Keep it coming. We've got plenty of land!"

Harrington said he appreciated having the opportunity to host CDW for the tenth year and recalled telling Mayor Thomas Koch that he wanted to significantly fund a veterans home in Quincy. Koch was on board immediately.

According to Executive Director of NeighborWorks Southern Mass Robert Corley, immediate neighbors were receptive to the idea of veterans housing in their neighborhood. "Not one neighbor, not one abutter was against this. They were all for it," he said. He also noted that Harrington played an instrumental part in selecting the site and even designing the building.

Massachusetts is the only state that mandates every city and town has a Veterans Service Officer he said.

Glennon anticipates construction will be completed by November; just in time for Veterans Day.

Capping off the ceremony was the presentation of four National Community Development Week awards to those who have dedicated their lives to public service.

The Mayor's 8th Annual Community Service Award went to Melinda Alexander of Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) in recognition of her dedication to individuals and families seeking assistance at the South West community Emergency Food Shelter.

A Certificate of Recognition went to Sarah Morrison, Executive Director of Quincy After School Child Care in recognition of her dedication to families with school-aged children.

Executive Director of the Squantum Community Center Sandra Buckley was the recipient of a Lifetime Achievement Award. Her son accepted on her behalf for her contributions to the Squantum area and the countless hours she has devoted to orchestrating neighborhood events such as the 4th of July parade and organizing dance classes.

A second Lifetime Achievement Award went to Sister Joanne Westwater who in 1992 opened Good Shepard Maria Droste Services, an organization that offers mental health counseling in Quincy to low-income and uninsured individuals and families. "I've never worked in a better city in my whole life, and that's many years!" she said.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This is a good week to look at healing bruised feelings and re-establishing weakened relationships. It's also a good week to start new projects and make new job-linked contacts.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Music and art dominate the week, giving the sensual Bovine a lot to appreciate. On the practical side, deal firmly, but fairly, with those who might try to undermine your work efforts.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Good feelings continue to flow from your recent efforts to reconnect with family and friends. But be ready to defuse a dispute before it can disrupt all that peace and harmony.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A practical view of a romanticized situation could help to clarify some of its more confusing aspects before you make a decision that could be tough to undo later on.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Pay more attention to what a recent spate of workplace criticism might say about your performance and not what you think it implies about you personally. Some flexibility might be called for.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) With new information, and new promises of support (not to mention growing self-confidence), this could be a good time to restart a project you couldn't quite handle before.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Before you decide to close down a problem-loaded project and make a fresh start with someone else, try once more to reach a compromise with your balky partner. He or she might surprise you.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) While you continue earning points for your sharp negotiating skills, be alert for an attempt to undercut your efforts. You'll need to provide solid facts and figures to stay in the game.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A minor health problem might cause you to ease up on your usually busy schedule. But you'll soon be back in the saddle and ready to pick up the reins and charge ahead.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The adventurous Sea Goat might be eager to take on a new challenge. But before you do, you might want to take some time to check out previously overlooked factors.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A feeling of being overwhelmed by all that you have to do can be eased by setting priorities. Deal with the most urgent and time-sensitive situations first, and then work down the line.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Creating a calm, peaceful place for yourself in the middle of a roiling emotional whirlpool this week starts when you, and no one else, decide how to make decisions about your life.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your determination to stick with your principles wins the admiration of everyone who knows you.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

In Sarasota he was a real estate agent, most recently with the Re-Max Company. Mr. Dalton was an avid golfer at the Stoneybrook Country Club in Sarasota where he shot a hole in one. He will be remembered for his undying love of the Boston Red Sox, New England Patriots, Boston Bruins, and most recently the Tampa Bay Rays. One of the highlights of his life was being present at Fenway Park for Carl Yastrzemski's 3000th hit and for Yaz's induction into the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY.

Gardening, cooking, sea cruises and trips to Sagamore Beach were among his greatest joys. Gifted with his sense of humor and outgoing personality, Mr. Dalton was blessed with many friends. Most of all, he treasured sharing his life with his devoted wife Mary. He will be sorely missed by his family.

Beloved husband of Mary (Wolanski) Dalton. Beloved son of Pearl (McDonnell) Dalton of Quincy and the late Dr. John T. Dalton. Beloved brother of Mollie Tucker and her husband Thomas of NY, Denise Dede Dalton-Martell and her husband Bob of Quincy, John T. Dalton, Jr., and his wife Anne of Hingham, Lois Hamilton and her husband Mark of RI, and Michael Dalton of Quincy. Loving uncle to Tom, Emily, Colleen, John, Christopher, Johanna, Mollie, Michael, Oliver, Hanna, and Beatrix.

Funeral arrangements were made by Clancy-Lucid Funeral Home, Weymouth.

Interment was at St. Mary's Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to St. John the Baptist Church, 21 Gay St., Quincy, MA 02169 or to the Joseph Dalton Town of Weymouth Scholarship, Weymouth Scholarship Committee, 75 Middle St., Weymouth, MA 02189.

Greyhounds: Let's Set The Record Straight

National Greyhound Association litter registration number. Litters must be registered in order to be eligible for racing, and puppies are tattooed by the time they are three months old.

Two common myths are that greyhounds can't sit and that greyhounds can't get fat. These intelligent dogs can learn all kinds of tricks, and – just like any other dog – they should get regular exercise and avoid overeating. You should be able to see their last three ribs.

Greyhounds are surprisingly clean and require very little grooming. They have a short, smooth coat, and the amount of shedding varies greatly by dog. I've had dogs that needed weekly brushing and dogs that require no regular brushing.

Greyhounds need to live indoors. They should not be left unattended in a yard, particularly if the fence is under six feet. They are also thin skinned and should not be exposed to the elements (heat or cold). Greyhounds have about half the body fat of most other dogs and require coats in chilly weather.

A greyhound's head is about the same size as their neck, so they need to use a collar type known as a martingale. Martingale collars contract when the leash is pulled so the collar doesn't slip over the dog's head. You will want to discuss sizing with your adoption group, since it's also important that it's not too tight in case it accidentally gets caught on something.

These unique dogs are affectionate, clean, and smart. To learn more about them and to see a list of adoption groups in our area, visit The Greyhound Project's website at www.adopt-a-greyhound.org.

National Adopt-A-Greyhound Month was observed in April, but these beautiful dogs are grateful no matter what month you bring them home.

See you at the beach!

Blessing Of The Motorcyclists

The third annual Episcopal Church of Our Saviour Motorcycle Blessing will be held Sunday, May 4 from 12 noon to 3 p.m. at Babcock and Adams Street, East Milton.

A Service of Blessing will begin at 2 p.m.

The event promotes motorcycle riding safety and awareness.

The public is invited to attend.

There will be an ongoing Block Party and BBQ with live rock music by "Party With Ed." Bring your motorcycle, bike, scooter, skate board, carriage, cart, stroller, segwey or unicycle—all are welcome.

This is a rain or shine, family-friendly, free event.

Voluntary donations are most welcome in order to defray costs and provide a financial contribution to the Southeast Massachusetts Motorcyclist Survivor's Fund.

Pastor Victoria Pretti has been blessing motorcyclists and their machines since first being ordained as an Episcopal Priest. Reverend Pretti has owned and ridden three Harley Davidson motorcycles over the past 14 years, the latest of which is a fire engine red Heritage Softail Classic.

Would Add 10 Police Officers, Increase School Spending $3 Million

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch proposed a $268.54 million municipal budget for the upcoming fiscal year, which will provide enough funds to hire 10 new police officers and increase school spending by nearly $3 million.

The mayor unveiled his proposed budget for fiscal year 2015 – July 1, 2014, to June 30, 2015 – to the City Council Monday night. The proposed budget is $10.7 million more than the city's $257.82 million FY14 budget, an increase of 4.1 percent.

The mayor's proposal would give the Police Department an extra $822,000 in funding, bringing the department's budget from $24.4 million to $25.3 million. The money would allow for the hiring of 10 new officers as well as funds for specialized training.

"In this budget there are 10 additional police officers, which gets us closer to a number I'm more comfortable with," Koch said. "We have a very safe city – it's by no accident and our Police Department does an outstanding job each and every day protecting us on the street."

The budget includes enough funding for 161 patrol officers, 30 sergeants, 14 lieutenants, four captains and the police chief, as well as 44 traffic supervisors and 29 civilian employees.

Under the proposed budget, the Fire Department would receive an extra $1.5 million in funding. That money would increase the department's budget to $21.4 million from $19.9 million. The increase would pay for $325,000 in extra overtime costs. The remainder of the increase is to pay for contractual obligations and expiring grants.

The mayor's proposal would give the School Department an extra $2.9 million in funds, bringing the department's budget up to $94.1 million from $91.2 million. The School Committee will decide how the budget is allocated.

Mahoney Opposes 4th Grade At Middle School

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A proposal to have grades 4-8 placed in a newly-built Sterling Middle School isn't sitting well with some local parents and one school committee member who told colleagues she does not support the concept.

"I am not in favor of putting 4th graders in middle school," said committee member Anne Mahoney at last Wednesday's meeting of the facilities and security subcommittee. "I don't think they're ready for middle school in fourth grade."

Chairperson David McCarthy said the plan was not yet concrete and that authorization was still needed by the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA). "We are in the initial, infantile stages of requesting approval from the MSBA on our configurations that the [Superintendent of Quincy Public Schools Richard DeCristofaro] and his leadership have worked on the past several months and came up with, in their minds, the best options for the City of Quincy."

So far, enrollment projections and maintenance and capital planning information have been submitted to the MSBA. Still pending submittal are a local vote authorization, an actual enrollment count, and a feasibility study agreement. "They want to know that what we've submitted is really what's current and present," said DeCristofaro.

The idea to build a new, possibly 4-8 Sterling Middle School stemmed from overcrowding issues and an increase in kindergarten enrollment over approximately the past decade. "We look at kindergarten registration and that has been our bellwether for a long period of time to say what is the trend," he said, adding that there isn't an overwhelming need, as of now, to evenly distribute students between schools and that looking at current kindergarten enrollment will predict any future need to relocate grades.

The Lincoln Hancock Community School would also benefit from the proposed changes as removing the 4th grade and converting to a K-3 grade configuration would allow for the expansion of early development programs, particularly in the areas of special education. "If indeed we feel that's

Letter Carriers' 'Stamp Out Hunger' Food Drive Saturday

The National Association of Letters Carriers will hold its 22nd annual "Stamp Out Hunger" Food Drive Saturday, May 10.

Letter carriers will collect non-perishable food donations from mail customers. The donations go directly to local food pantries to provide food to people in Quincy who need help.

To participate in the food drive, leave a non-perishable food donation in a bag by the mailbox Saturday. Letter carriers will collect the donation.

Last year, letter carriers collected more than 74 million pounds of food nationally, feeding an estimated 30 million people.

The food drive's timing is crucial, said Quincy Letter Carrier David Thureson. "Food banks and pantries often receive the majority of their donations during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday season. By springtime, many pantries are depleted, entering the summer low on supplies at a time when many school breakfast and lunch programs are not available to children in need.

"I invite the public to join in America's greatest day of giving and help us in our fight to end hunger."

Officials Review School Building Safety Protocols

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Michael Draicchio, Director of Transportation, Safety and Security for Quincy Public Schools briefed school committee members on high school lobby safety protocols at a meeting of the facilities and security subcommittee following last Monday's breach of security at North Quincy High School in which 24-year-old Braintree resident Edmilson Andrade entered the building through an unsecured loading-dock entrance.

Both North Quincy and Quincy High School currently have visitors state their name and purpose for entering the school and are asked to provide official identification. The information is recorded by either office or security staff and the visitor is handed a numbered security pass. Before they leave they must also sign out with school officials and return the pass. "What I did as an extra precaution with this is I've numbered all the backs of the [passes] so that when they log in with their logbook they have a number on them," said Draicchio. Committee member Barbara Isola praised the system but suggested that identification be kept by security while a visitor is in a school building as an added security measure. "I would like to see identifications taken and kept at the desk so that we ensure that they return the visitor badge," she said.

Committee member Anne Mahoney asked if an alarm would sound if a buzzer-equipped door were left ajar for an extended period of time. "If the door is ajar, we need to know it's ajar," she said.

According to Draicchio, the doors currently installed

Coddingon Hall Project Seen Completed In June

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The renovation of Coddington Hall is almost copleted and on schedule according to representative of Quincy's public buildings department Walter MacDonald.

"We're moving on really well on this and we're on schedule," said MacDonald who briefed school committee members of the project's progress at last Wednesday's meeting of the facilities and security subcommittee.

Slated to move into what opened in 1908 as the Coddington School are school administration offices currently located in the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) building at 159 Burgin Parkway and planning department offices currently located in City Hall.

Completed so far is the installation of slate roofing and snow guards, exterior masonry painting and chemical washing, the installation of windows and drywall, prime coat interior painting, acoustical ceiling grid installation on the 2nd and 3rd floors, bathroom tile work, HVAC installation, rough electrical work, and 80 percent of all plumbing.

In the next month major projects will include the construction of a handicap rear entrance, the placement of exterior lighting, a security system including interior and exterior cameras and card readers which are currently in place but need to be tested and calibrated, a telephone and IT system, a fire protection system, elevator upgrades and refinishing, and interior painting.

MacDonald said elevator repairs were necessary because the cab was in "bad shape and pretty beat up."

"With an elevator sitting in a building dormant for a while…we had to change some of the wiring," he said. "It's an existing elevator but it's upgraded." He hopes addressing any existing issues now will mitigate the need for future excessive maintenance.

Construction began in July of 2013 with an estimated cost of $10 million. The colonial revival style building is on the National Register of Historic Places and was originally designed by architect Charles

IT'S A MISMATCH

One of today's more interesting jewelry trends involves mismatched stud earrings. This idea may seem a bit unusual to those accustomed to wearing matching pairs of earrings, but that is the whole point. Mismatched studs catch the eye and make a style statement in ways that matched sets simply cannot. With this in mind, a number of fine jewelry designers are offering mismatched studs that are made of similar materials and/or strike a similar theme. For instance, one mismatched pair of studs may consist of a star on one ear and a crescent moon on the other, both in gold. Or, a jewelry designer might make a jeweled butterfly for one ear and a dragonfly for the other.

In addition to purchasing "ready made" mis-matched studs, you can create your own statement of unmatched earrings by purchasing two complementary pairs of earrings on your own and creating something unique. Shop at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to select the earrings that are right for you as well as any other jewelry or gift or contact us at 617-773-3636.

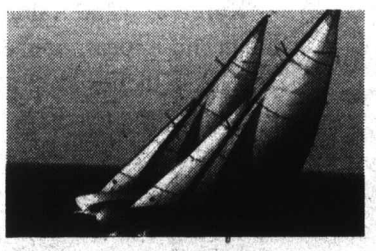
Finally … you get to do what you want to do



The question now – what's the best way to pay for it?

Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk to – someone you like, whose judgment you trust and respect – to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, we specialize in working with people like you. Here you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Including sometimes being able to make customized loans. Sound interesting? Like to talk? Call Angela Blanchard, Vice-President/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

• On May 22, 1843, a massive wagon train, made up of 1,000 settlers, sets off down the Oregon Trail from Independence, Missouri. Known as the "Great Emigration," the expedition finally arrived in October, completing the 2,000-mile journey in five months.

• On May 25, 1878, Gilbert and Sullivan's "HMS Pinafore" premieres at the Opera-Comique in London, beginning a near-record run of 571 performances. The story of Pinafore concerns a First Lord of the Admiralty who is thwarted in his attempt to woo and marry the beautiful young daughter of a British Navy ship's captain.

• On May 21, 1901, Connecticut becomes the first state to pass a law regulating motor vehicles, limiting their speed to 12 mph in cities and 15 mph on country roads. The proposed legislation had requested a speed limit of 8 mph within city limits.

• On May 23, 1911, the New York Public Library, the largest marble structure ever constructed in the United States, is dedicated in New York City. The day after its dedication, some 40,000 citizens passed through to make use of a collection that already consisted of more than a million books.

• On May 19, 1935, T.E. Lawrence, a former British Army officer known to the world as Lawrence of Arabia, dies as a retired Royal Air Force mechanic living under an assumed name. The legendary war hero, author and archaeological scholar succumbed to injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident six days earlier.

• On May 20, 1969, Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.), in a Senate speech, condemns the battle for Ap Bia Mountain in Vietnam, which had become known as "Hamburger Hill." During the intense fighting, 597 North Vietnamese were reported killed and U.S. casualties were 56 killed and 420 wounded.

• May 24, 1989, "Sex, lies and videotape," the debut feature from the 26-year-old writer-director Steven Soderbergh, wins the Palme d'Or at the Cannes Film Festival. The $1.2 million film was aggressively marketed by its distributor, Miramax Films, and went on to gross some $26 million. (c) 2014 King Features Synd., Inc.

A Very Special Delivery

This Mother's Day will be extra special for Quincy native and Olympic bronze medalist Karen (Cashman) Lehmann and one of her best friends.

Last Friday, Karen helped deliver her friend's baby in her house in Plymouth.

Karen and the mom, Sarah Bachi, are both foreign language teachers at Marshfield High School. Sara teaches Spanish and Karen French.

Friday began uneventful but by mid-afternoon it became a day they won't soon forget.

Sarah – despite feeling a little under the weather – still went to school May 2 and was determined to fulfill all her teaching responsibilities. Around 2 p.m., the Foreign Language Department head, Maura Bulman, showed up at Karen's classroom with Sarah and said she wasn't feeling well. Maura brought Sarah's car up to the closest door and asked if Karen would follow her home.

Karen agreed – like any good friend would – and also offered to drive Sarah home herself. But Sarah – who was 38 weeks pregnant – said she was fine and drove her car home while Karen followed her home.

On the way home, they stopped at a day care center where Sarah picked up her two-year-old daughter. Then her water broke.

"I wanted to drive her home but she insisted she was fine, so I followed her home to Plymouth. Once we got to Plymouth, everything happened so fast," said Karen.

Sarah's contractions got worse very quickly and Karen suggested taking her to the hospital.

But there was no time for that.

The baby – who was not due until May 15 – decided it was time to make his arrival.

Right in the bathroom of the home.

Karen assisted Sarah as Erik Alexander Bachi made his grand appearance, debuting at 7 pounds, 11 ounces and 22 ½ inches long at about 3:07 p.m. – just over an hour after the teachers left Marshfield High School for Plymouth.

"Honestly, I still didn't believe that she'd actually have the baby at the house," said Karen who immediately called 911 after handing the baby to Sarah.

"I frantically told the dispatcher that my friend just had her baby on the bathroom floor," Karen said a few days after this wonderful moment. "I stayed on the line with them until the police, firemen and paramedics arrived. They were asking about the baby's color, if the baby was breathing, if the airways were clear. They asked how Sarah was doing, how far along she was and other questions. They said check the airways and pat the baby on the back."

Karen got clean towels to wrap the baby in. Sarah stayed so calm and focused through all of it.

"I heard the firemen say mom and baby are doing well," Karen said.

Sarah's husband, Keith, also called to say he was on his way home. Karen told him the baby was already here. The first responders took the baby out to the ambulance, then rolled out a smiling Sarah on a stretcher. Keith pulled up to the house that was surrounded by police cars, a fire truck and ambulance.

Keith was able to see Sarah just before they left to take her to Beth Israel Plymouth Hospital.

Karen, a North Quincy High School track star and an Olympic Bronze Medalist in short-track speedskating at the 1994 Olympics, has earned a reputation as a focused athlete who excelled under pressure.

She also managed to stay as cool, calm and collected as can be expected when one of her best friends was in labor and a baby was about to be born.

"Before the baby arrived I was a little nervous but I just wanted to be there for Sarah and her daughter and do whatever she needed," Karen recounted. "I was really hoping Keith would show up soon, though. I really didn't believe that the baby would come at the house until I saw it with my own eyes.

"Once the baby came I was very nervous and a little shaky but I think I stayed relatively calm considering and just tried to do whatever the dispatcher said and answer her questions. I was praying inside that the baby was ok.

"It became a scary experience once I realized the she was really having this baby and that it was just us at her house. It was scary waiting for help and hoping that everyone was going to be ok."

Karen – who has an eight-year-old son with her husband, John – is happy to report that mom, dad and baby are all doing well.

"Everyone is fine and happy," she says.

To Sarah, Karen and moms everywhere, Happy Mother's Day.

CONGRATULATIONS ALSO go out to Karen's dad, Fred Cashman of Quincy. Fred is a member of the senior hockey team that recently won a gold medal at the Massachusetts Senior Olympics.

FRED

It was the first time Fred's team had defeated this one particular team in 17 years to win gold at the event.

THE SUN extends our deepest condolences to the family of Robert (Bob) Barker, former longtime owner of Quincy Typewriter in Quincy Center.

BOB

Bob passed away unexpectedly May 3. He was 81. Funeral arrangements were pending as The Sun went to press Tuesday.

A frequent visitor here at our office, even after his retirement several years ago, Bob brightened our work day with his unique humor of original one-liners and also brought candy for the staff.

My dad used to call on Bob quite a bit to help him fix his manual typewriter or replace a ribbon. Henry - like all of us - was glad to see Bob and called him "Dr. Barker."

Bob considered Henry one of his favorite customers.

After my dad passed away five years ago, Bob liked to stop by Henry's old office and look at the typewriter he used for so many stories and columns throughout his years as the Sun's publisher and editor.

Bob would also reminisce about the good old days and how much he thought of Henry.

We'll miss Bob.

He was one of a kind.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1918 postcard view of Elm Avenue in Wollaston. Originally the driveway to the estate of Boston Mayor Josiah Quincy this wide boulevard like Avenue was created by The Wollaston Land Company, the developer of the Quincy family property into what was known as Wollaston Park in the 1890's. They planted four rows of Elm trees along here, one row on each side of the sidewalks. Electric trolley tracks ran down the street adjacent to grassy islands in the middle of the road. The trolleys ran from here through Huntington Square to West Elm Avenue and left onto Billings Road to Norfolk Downs. Although a few of these great Elms still stand, hurricanes and the Dutch Elm disease have pretty much wiped them out. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Delegation Secures $12M For City In Transportation Bond

Members of the Quincy legislative delegation announce $12 million in funding for transportation projects for the City of Quincy. This funding was included in a $13 billion Transportation Bond Bill that was signed into law by Governor Patrick at the end of April.

Included within the bond bill was an authorization of $10 million for the redevelopment of the Quincy Center "T" Station and garage, $1.2 million for the redesign and reconstruction of the Sea Street/Quincy Shore Drive intersection, and $800,000 for road improvements and the extension of Commander Shea Boulevard for better access to Squantum Point Park.

In addition to the funding, the bill also designates Quincy as the lead planning agency for the Quincy Center "T" Station redevelopment project.

"Investing in transportation is vital to economic growth, and a renovated Quincy Center station, combined with a revitalized downtown area, will fuel economic development for the entire region for many years to come," said state Sen. John Keenan. "The efforts made by the Quincy legislative delegation, along with Mayor Koch and our partners at the Massachusetts Department of Transportation ensure that Quincy's transportation needs are prioritized, and I look forward to continue working with my colleagues to move these projects forward."

House Majority Leader and Quincy Rep. Ron Mariano said:

"I am pleased that the Senate and Governor Patrick have agreed with the House that Quincy Center Station is such an important priority for the city and the region. The parcel is an asset which will play an important role in Mayor Koch's vision for the future of the downtown.

"And as always, we know that Chapter 90 funds are critical to help the city maintain our local roadways."

The final bill also included a $300 million authorization for the Chapter 90 program, which provides cities and towns like Quincy extra assistance for local road, sidewalk and bridge projects.

"Working with the legislative delegation, I am proud that we were again able to secure the maximum amount for local road assistance funding for Quincy and maintaining the highest amount authorized ever of this local assistance," said state Rep. Tackey Chan. "In addition, we were able to address a public safety issue by dedicating funding to modernize the Sea Street and Quincy Shore Drive intersection to improve traffic flow and pedestrian safety. This funding will assist the City's efforts on improving traffic and pedestrian safety in that location. "

Rep. Bruce Ayers added:

"Working with the delegation it is important that we advocate for projects that generate economic development and job creation while improving our transportation system. I have also advocated to obtain $800,000 for road and infrastructure improvements that would support the Marina Bay Ferry transportation initiative. This initiative will help improve our water transportation and tourism to the area."

Each project is subject to further review and approval by the Massachusetts Department of Transportation and the Governor.

Commends Sun For QHS Fashion Show Coverage

I wish to commend The Quincy Sun for printing pictures of the recent fashion show by the students at Quincy High. As the readers could see, the clothes were beautiful and original – showing much effort by the students and teachers.

Our leaders in Quincy should be present and acknowledge the accomplishments of our students. As a retired teacher, I know what praise from leaders in the school and community can do.

Thank you.

Strong Opposition To School Board Expense Account

A suggestion to grant school committee members expense accounts appears doomed in the face of strong school committee opposition.

The matter was scheduled for discussion at an upcoming school committee meeting at the request of School Committee Member Daniel G. Raymondi who is opposed to the expense account proposal.

Raymondi said he planned to "air once and for all" a suggestion to grant expense accounts to school committee members.

Raymondi said committee member John J. Sullivan raised the matter during an executive session meeting of the committee.

School Committee Members Harold Davis, Frank Abselmo, and Frank McCauley also expressed opposition to the proposal.

CITY MUST TAP FUNDS TO AID TAX RATE

Mayor Walter J. Hannon said the city would be forced to tap the Emergency and Deficiency Fund (E & D) to keep the tax rate as low as possible.

The E & D Fund, known as the city's rainy day account, now contains $370,313 according to City Auditor Charles L. Shea.

The city was faced with a loss of $2.2 million in state aid, which could add nine dollars to the present rate of $159.90.

Hannon blamed the unexpected loss in state aid revenue on forced busing in Boston. "We are paying for busing," said Hannon. "Boston needs the money to bus kids."

FRANCIS SULLIVAN VETS SERVICE DIRECTOR

Mayor Walter Hannon appointed Francis L. Sullivan as Director of Veterans Services. He succeeded William Villone who retired.

Sullivan has been assistant director for 15 years. A graduate of Quincy High School, he was a lifelong resident of Quincy.

In making the appointment, Mayor Hannon said he was "pleased to be able to fill the position with a career employee of the city."

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open For Public Tours Saturday

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for public tours on Saturday, May 10 between 1 and 4 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Dating from 1686, the house is 328 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the pre-Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

Quincy Homestead is operated by the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR). It will be open to the public on six dates this year: May 10, June 14 and July 12 from 1 to 4 p.m. and on Aug. 2, Sept. 6 and Oct. 4 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the Discover Quincy Days.

Groups may request a private tour on a date of their choice by phoning 617-742-3190 or emailing nscda-ma@verizon.net. For more information, visit the Homestead's website: http://www.nscda.org/ma/quincy_homestead.php.

JQA And The War Of 1812 Program May 29

A program entitled "John Quincy Adams from the War of 1812 to Lincoln & the Civil War" will be presented Thursday, May 29 at 7 p.m. at the Adams National Historical Park Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

The program is free and open to the public. Reservations are not required.

Fred Kaplan, the acclaimed, award-winning author of Lincoln, returns with John Quincy Adams, an illuminating biography of one of the most overlooked presidents in American history—a leader of sweeping perspective whose progressive values helped shape the course of the nation.

The sweep of John Quincy Adams' career includes two wars, one in which he was an indirect but important participant, the War of 1812, which included his attempt to settle with the British the American claim that Britain owed the United States compensation for slaves that had left with the British military during the Revolutionary War.

The other war, John Quincy saw coming. In his prophetic vision, the rising shadow of what he came to believe was an inevitable civil war over slavery haunted him during the last decades of his life.

John Quincy had become convinced that slavery would destroy the Union unless it was eradicated. When he collapsed with his fatal stroke in the House of Representatives in February 1846, Abraham Lincoln was in the same room. Unlike Adams, Lincoln did not think that slavery would be the rock against which the nation would crack and fall apart. The South, he believed, would not succumb to the folly of secession.

Adams knew the Southern mind better than Lincoln did. By temperament and almost willful self-delusion, Lincoln hoped, even expected, until the stark reality was forced upon him, that good sense and the "better angels of our nature" would prevail and that slavery could be eliminated peacefully, over time. Adams never believed that would be possible. He predicted the inevitable war.

'Kids Dig It' Program At Old House May 17

To celebrate Kids to Parks Day, the Adams National Historical Park will present "Kids Dig It!: Archaeology at the Old House" on Saturday, May 17 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Old House at Peace field, 135 Adams St., Quincy, Massachusetts.

Kids to Parks Day is an annual nationwide day of play organized by the National Park Trust. The goal is to engage kids across the country with parks and public lands - to engage children with the health and wellness benefits of outdoor park recreation; to teach students about the unique science and history of the parks; and to inspire a generation of conservation leaders and stewards that will take action to protect their parks. At the heart of the initiative is Buddy Bison, the National Park Trust's mascot whose message to children and their families is to "Explore Outdoors, the parks are yours!"

"Kids Dig It! Archaeology at the Old House" is a hands-on archaeological exploration of the people and material culture of Peace field, from native peoples through the occupancy of the Adams family.

The program introduces children and families to the art and science of "digging into the past." This engaging and interactive educational experience encourages participants to "get their hands dirty" as they sift through the "debris" of the past to discover connections between their lives and the lives of the site's earliest occupants.

The program is free and open to the public. Reservations are not required.

For more information about tours, programs, special events, and family activities at Adams National Historical Park, call the Visitor Center at 617-770-1175 or visit www.nps.gov/adam.

Frank DiCesare Celebrates His 100th Birthday

Quincy native Frank DiCesare has seen his hometown grow from the quiet days of horse-drawn-carriages and dirt roads to the modern world of smart phones and wi-fi.

Born on April 17, 1914, Mr. DiCesare grew up at 41 Roberts Street in South Quincy and attended the Lincoln School. As a teenager, he enrolled in the Quincy Trade School, graduating in 1932 as a machinist.

In the early years of the Great Depression, Mr. DiCesare worked at Kay Jewelers in Quincy Square for two years, making $16 a week. In 1934, he landed a job as a machinist with Bethlehem Steel at the Fore River Shipyard for an extra $1 a week. Later, when gasoline prices soared above $2 per gallon, Mr. DiCesare often quipped that in his day, you could buy 10 gallons of gasoline for $1. He would also recall when he could fill the trunk of his 1934 Plymouth with groceries for $5.

In 1939, Mr. DiCesare married Lucille Giancaterino, who would remain his bride for 64 years. At the Shipyard during World War II, he made parts for the aircraft carriers USS Wasp I and II, the battleship USS Massachusetts and cruisers USS Quincy and USS Salem.

In 1955, Mr. DiCesare was promoted to supervisor, a job that made him responsible for overseeing 47 men in the Shipyard's machine shop. When General Dynamics bought the Shipyard in 1964, he became a quality control inspector, a job he would hold for 15 years before retiring in 1979.

In retirement, he chose to work part-time for another six years as a security guard at a number of banks in Quincy and Milton and at Quincy City Hospital.

Mr. DiCesare lived in Quincy until he was 91. He now resides in Scituate with his son Frank and his daughter-in-law Margaret.

Olde Kids Swing Band Performance Friday

The Olde Kids Swing Band will be at the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging) on Friday, May 9 from 1 to 3 p.m.

The Olde Kids, always popular at the Kennedy Center, is a dance band in the style of the big bands of the 1930s and 1940s. The Olde Kids performed at the Kennedy Center several times last year to a standing-room-only crowd. The big band recreates the glamour and romance of an era that lasted 10 years.

Retired and semi-retired musicians are part of a resurgence of interests in live, glamorous and romantic music. The band was formed in 1991 and consists of six saxes, four trombones, four trumpets, four on rhythm and a vocalist.

Tickets are required for this event and can be purchased at the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging.) Suggested donation is $6.

For more information, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Yellow Dot Program At Kennedy Center May 21

Joseph Canavan of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's Office will be at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, on Wednesday, May 21 at 10 a.m. to introduce seniors to the "Yellow Dot Program."

The program is designed to help seniors in the event that they are involved in an auto accident. A Yellow Dot will be placed on the rear window identifying the driver as a member of the program providing the emergency crews with the driver's medical history.

To register, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Summer Sweet Potato Salad

For years, I have made potato salad in various ways. And until recently I have never made it with sweet potatoes. Most people like sweet potatoes almost as much as regular potatoes-so this recipe will be a nice change, and very easy to make.

Today's recipe will be a great one to go with the summer cookouts.

SWEET POTATO SALAD

4-5 sweet potatoes
½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup plain Greek yogurt
½ cup chopped roasted red peppers
Salt and pepper
¼ cup chopped scallions

Peel and cut the potatoes in bite size pieces. Boil until tender. Let the potatoes cool completely before mixing.

In a bowl, mix the mayonnaise, the yogurt together. Add the rest of the ingredients and mix until well blended. Add the potatoes and toss until all are covered.

The colors were amazing all together.

Leftover Lamb Pot Pie

Believe it or not I actually had some food left over at Easter. And what to do with the lamb? It was either make a lamb stew or a pot pie. I chose making a pot pie

The pot pie had great results.

It is a dish that can be made ahead of time if needed, and can be served alone because of all the vegetables.

LAMB POT PIE

1 pie crust (biscuits can also be used)
2 cups cubed lamb
1 package frozen mixed vegetables (defrosted)
2 medium sized potatoes (diced)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 ½ cups milk
1 teaspoon bullion (or equivalent)
Salt and pepper to taste

In a saucepan, melt the butter and add the flour mixing until it is a roux. Add the milk and bouillon and cook until thickened.

In a bowl, mix the lamb vegetables, potatoes and place them in the sauce. When this is blended, Place in a slightly greased casserole dish and cover top with the crust.

Egg wash the top by beating one egg and pierce a couple of holes in the top.

Bake in a 350-degree oven until the crust is lightly browned.

'12 Years A Slave' Film Screening Tonight

The Academy-Award winning film "12 Years A Slave" will be screened tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The film is based on an incredible true story of one man's fight for survival and freedom. In the pre-Civil War United States, Solomon Northup (Chiwetel Ejiofor), a free black man from upstate New York, is abducted and sold into slavery. Facing cruelty (personified by a malevolent slave owner, portrayed by Michael Fassbender), as well as unexpected kindnesses, Solomon struggles not only to stay alive, but to retain his dignity. In the twelfth year of his unforgettable odyssey, Solomon's chance meeting with a Canadian abolitionist (Brad Pitt) forever alters his life.

The film won three Academy Awards for 2013 - including Best Picture.

Directed by Steve McQueen, the film stars Alfre Woodard, Benedict Cumberbatch, Brad Pitt, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Garret Dillahunt, Michael Fassbender, Michael K. Williams, Paul Dano, Paul Giamatti, and Sarah Paulson.

The 134-minute film is rated R for violence/cruelty, some nudity and brief sexuality.

Other films featured Thursday night this month at the Library:

• "Inside Llewyn Davis," May 15, 7 p.m.; "Out of the Furnace", May 22, 7 p.m.; and "Chasing Ice," - May 29, 7 p.m.

The North Quincy branch, 381 Hancock St. also hosts matinees every Wednesday afternoon starting at 2:00 p.m. May's features are: May 14: "12 Years a Slave;" May 21: "In a World;" and May 28: "Out of the Furnace."

Quincy College Honors Vets At Memorial Day Ceremony

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy College held their first Memorial Day Commemoration Ceremony on Tuesday in honor of those who have sacrificed their lives for this country.

Susan Bossa, Quincy College associate vice president and president of the veterans' support team delivered opening remarks. "We are here today to honor the generations of servicemen and women who went before us and those who are currently serving to keep our country safe and to allow us to enjoy the freedom of this great nation," she said.

Quincy College is a veteran-friendly school offering extensive guidance and counseling to those returning back from serving their country, she explained.

The posting of the colors was performed by the Quincy Police Department Honor Guard and the laying of the ceremonial wreath was done by Quincy College student and army veteran Joseph Sparda.

Following Quincy Police Officer Don Sautter's rendition of the National Anthem, guest speaker Aaron Levine, a Quincy College faculty member and WWII navy veteran, described his life as a first-generation American with extended family in the U.S. armed forces and recalled with great joy the day his mother received her United States citizenship. "I remember that my mother used to tell me that one of the proudest days of her life was the time she answered the question 'who was the first president of the United States?'" he said. "She answered George Washington and she became a U.S. citizen."

Levine recalled his two uncles returning from fighting in WWI. "[One uncle] came back with mustard gas. I remember he was coughing the rest of his life," he said. "On Memorial Day, I think of them and other veterans and the sacrifices they made." When WWII came about, it was his generation's turn to fight and to "pay the price."

In closing, he tearfully thanked veterans, those who served years ago and those serving today in Iraq and Afghanistan. "Memorial Day is a day to remember good times and bad. We all have something to be grateful for," he said. "Thank god we are American with liberty and justice for all."

Student veteran Jelani Lewis, also the son of immigrants who came to this country to better their lives and the lives of their children, said that after attending Johnson & Wales University for a year and a half, he decided to return home to work. After seeing an armed forces recruitment commercial, he was spurred to call a recruiter to inquire about serving his country in the hopes of receiving aid to continue his education. He joined the navy, figuring he would be safe from being called to active duty as Afghanistan is a landlocked country. To his surprise, a year after joining in January 2007, he was told he was going overseas.

"They say blood is thicker than water, which implies that the bonds we share with our family members are stronger than the ones we share with people that don't share our genealogy," he said. "But we cannot survive without water."

His first few firefights resulted in no casualties. "It was just a fun day at war for us. We were just playing. We were naïve," he said. "For me, August 14, 2008 is a day that I'll never forget. On that day, I lost three brothers and that's when war wasn't fun anymore. I wanted to go home."

The POW/MIA table commemoration was dedicated to those who have never returned from battle. Sparda and Quincy College student and marine corps veteran Christopher Breton explained that the table was set for one, symbolizing the fact the members of the armed forces are missing from their ranks. The table was small, symbolizing the frailty of one prisoner against his or her suppressors. The white tablecloth was symbolic of the purity displayed by those called to arms for their country. A single red rose signified the blood shed in sacrifice to ensure the freedom of the United States.

"A veteran is someone who, at one point in their life, wrote a blank check made payable to the United States of America for an amount up to and including his or her life," said Bossa during the ceremony's closing remarks. "That is honor."

QHS's Ursula Biba Awarded First Place At State Science Fair

Seven Other Students Present Projects

Quincy High School was well represented at the Massachusetts State Science Fair this past weekend.

Quincy High School shows a great diversity of competitive projects each year at the Regional and State Level and this year was no different.

Eleventh grade student Ursula Biba was awarded First Prize for her project titled: "Plasticizer Toxicity: The Effect of Bisphenol-A and Diethyl Phthalate on Fresh and Salt Water Organisms." Biba was also the recipient of the $1000 EMC award, the 2014 Air Force Award, and is the alternate candidate for a $60,000 scholarship to Northeastern University

Also representing Quincy High School at the Massachusetts State Science & Engineering Fair held at Massachusetts Institute of Technology Campus, Cambridge were:

• Leanne Gough, 9th grade, "The Effect of Non-polar vs. Polar Pollutants in their Migration Through Soil."

• Alicia Walker, 10th grade, "The Effect of Acidity Levels on the Survival Rate of Brine Shrimp."

• Julie Nguyen, 10th grade, "The Effect of Different Pigments on Dye-Sensitized Solar Cells."

• Megi Maci, 10th grade, "Building an Algae Photobioreactor from Recycled Water Bottles.

• KunYi Li, 11th grade, "Fresh or Frozen? A comparison of antioxidant levels in fresh and frozen produce."

• Marisa Abundis, 11th grade, "Effects of Cyanobacteria on Lactuca Sativa.

• Amira Abdelaziz, 11th grade, "Disease Control Using Beneficial Bacteria and Natural Resources."

All eight of the Quincy High School students spent three days at MIT touring the campus with some of the best Science/Engineering students from Massachusetts and networking with top professionals in the field of Science Technology Engineering and Mathematics.

Yard Sale, Can Drive At Broad Meadows School

Students at Broad Meadows Middle School will hold a yard sale Saturday, May 10 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the school.

All of the proceeds from the yard sale will benefit the educational project chosen by the students involved in Operation Day's Work-USA. This year's project is GoodWeave-India. The project will provide 250 child laborers from three villages with educational opportunities.

In addition to the yard sale, the studentyswill hold a can and bottle drive and a cash for gold drive to raise even more money for GoodWeave.

The public is invited to drop off cans and bottles, as well as any broken or unwanted gold or silver jewelry during the yard sale hours on Saturday.

All of the ODW members schools, which include Broad Meadows Middle School, Quincy High School and Archbishop Williams High School, have set a goal of raising $10,000 for GoodWeave-India this year.

Sisterhood Presents Night Of Comedy June 1

The Sisterhood of Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills will sponsor "A Night of Comedy" featuring Newton native Jon Fisch, on Sunday, June 1, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Fisch has appeared on the Late Show with David Letterman, Last Comic Standing, Comedy Central, VH1, and numerous comedy clubs. He has been featured on Celebrity Apprentice and in Maxim Magazine, and has opened for Jerry Seinfeld. He also was host of the widely popular podcast "In the Tank", and has performed at multiple comedy festivals.

The public is invited to this "fun-raiser" which includes a catered cocktail hour with complimentary beer and wine from 6-7 p.m., an opening act followed by Jon Fisch from 7-8 p.m., and dessert with coffee and tea from 8-9 p.m. It will be held at 1372 Brush Hill Rd, Milton, in the Fuller Village Function Hall

Tickets are $50 per person. Guests are invited to reserve tables with their friends or colleagues, and all reservations are requested by May 14.

Friends Of Souther Tide Mill 'Spring Fling' Fundraiser May 22

Friends of the Souther Tide Mill will host a Spring Fling fundraiser Thursday, May 22 at the Squantum Yacht Club, 646 Quincy Shore Dr.

All proceeds raised will be used for the design, purchase, and installation of new educational signage.

The new sign along Southern Artery right in front of the Mill was purchased by the Friends group about a year ago. This sign has spurred questions and interest in the Mill recently according to Doug Morrill, President of Friends of the Souther Tide Mill.

"We want to be able to place educational signage around the Mill," Morrill said, "so that people can walk up and learn about the vast history of the Mill and the many industrial uses the area has seen over the past 150 years."

Members of the group expressed great pride in the progress made to the Mill in the past few years. In 2009, Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds and a large donation from Jay Cashman allowed for substantial structural repairs to be made to the walls, roof, and shingles of the building.

"The Mill's really seeing a rebirth since the fire a few years ago," said Morrill. The CPA funds accounted for $170,000 of the improvements; Cashman donated over $50,000 to the effort.

The future of the Souther Tide Mill looks bright too. Last year, a CPA grant for $55,000 will go to an engineering firm to design further structural improvements to fortify the foundation and pilings of the Mill. This year $10,000 in CPA funds will be used to develop a long-term plan for the future use of the structure and site.

Long-time community advocate and past president of the Friends group, Carolyn Marks, said, "There's lots of little things going on too. We've had volunteers from the Wollaston Garden Club plant flower beds around the Mill, and we're making strides to get the structure listed on the State Register of Historic Places. This is the first step towards getting on the National Register."

The event on May 22 looks to be a full evening.

"We've been asking the City to run electricity to the Mill so that we can have a security system installed," Morrill said. "So we are excited to have Mayor Thomas Koch as our keynote speaker for the evening. The City owns the building and needs to be the key stakeholder in making the structure a gem for the community."

The evening's entertainment will feature Rick, Andy and Judy (a Peter, Paul, and Mary cover band), who will debut a song they recently wrote about the Souther Tide Mill. Other speakers will present the history of the site and will the many changes coming soon to the Mill.

Tickets are $20 per person or $25 per family. There will be hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. Cocktails at 6:30 p.m. with the first speaker scheduled for 7 p.m. For more information, contact Doug Morrill at (617) 471-3628.

Budget Includes Bumps For Mayor, Councillors, Dept. Heads

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed budget for fiscal year 2015 includes raises for dozens of city employees as recommended by a special salary commission.

Included in the salary commission's recommendations was a $38,000 raise for the mayor, which would bring Koch's salary from $122,000 to $160,000, and a $5,000 raise for each of the nine members of the City Council, bringing each councillor's pay to $22,500. The panel also recommended raises for 57 other department heads and non-union appointees.

Koch's FY15 budget proposal includes most of those recommended raises, though there are exceptions. The salary panel called for paying the city auditor a salary of $80,500, up from the current salary of $74,964. Koch's proposed budget would give the auditor a $108,000 salary, on par with other employees including the mayor's chief of staff and Quincy's planning director, inspectional services director, public works superintendent, and IT director.

The panel also recommended cutting the salary of the city's traffic engineer from $103,599 to $95,000. Koch's budget would cut that position's salary to $101,000. That salary is equal to the city engineer's salary, among others.

The salary commission –David Colton, Easton's town manager and a former Quincy DPW commissioner; Edward Flavin of Flavin & Flavin; QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo; Dolly Di Pesa of the Di Pesa Company; and Kate Yaeger, former Quincy human resources director – made their recommendations in a report issued last November.

Before the mayor proposed his budget Monday night, the councillors had a chance to speak with members of the salary commission during a finance committee meeting last week. At that meeting, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said he would oppose any of the raises recommended in the report. He told his colleagues on the council – and members of the salary commission – he couldn't support the raises while many of his constituents are still reeling from the effects of the recession that started more than five years ago.

"As an elected city councillor, I can't operate in a vacuum," McNamee said. "I have taxpayers out there; I have to be accountable to them and not all of them are public employees. The private sector employees, like I said, they've had a pretty tough time. So in good conscience this is where I am."

At the meeting, other councillors quizzed Colton, the commission chairman, about the recommended increase for the mayor's salary. Councillor Doug Gutro noted a study by the International City/County Management Association (ICMA) found that the average pay for a city with a population between 50,000 and 99,000 was $148,000 and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said the recommendation would make Quincy's mayor among the highest paid in the state.

In response to those inquiries, Colton said the mayor of Quincy's salary has long been undervalued.

"I know it's a lot of money all at once," he explained. "It is a big raise. But frankly the salary for the mayor of Quincy has been undervalued for a very long time."

Colton later added that there is a market for the mayor, just as there is a market for other positions, and that needs to be reflected in the mayor's salary.

"Just because it's elected doesn't mean there isn't a market," Colton said. "That is part of the calculation people make when they decide whether or not they want to be the mayor – it's not just ego. There is a market for mayor just like there is a market for any other job. We need to take that into account."

Some councillors at the meeting also questioned the tiered salaries the panel recommended for department heads and other staffers, excluding the police and fire chiefs. The top tier – an annual salary of $115,000 – includes the public works commissioner, city solicitor, city clerk, and municipal finance director. The city clerk currently earns $99,669 annually, the solicitor earns $103,599, the finance director $104,593, and DPW commissioner $113,736.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci questioned whether the solicitor and DPW commissioner should receive the same salary. The solicitor, he explained, requires a law degree while, on paper, no such requirement for the DPW commissioner exists. (Current DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi is an attorney).

"Arguably you could go down to Quincy High School on graduation day and hire a DPW commissioner and put him right in the job," Palmucci said.

Colton, who headed the public works departments in Quincy and then Milton before becoming Easton's town administrator, said Palmucci's claim was 'insulting.' He explained that salary isn't based only on education requirements and other certification, but also on the scope of the job itself.

"Education and certification isn't the only thing that goes into compensation. You look at the breadth of the job, what it entails, and the size of the organization one is managing," Colton said. "The solicitor is extremely important because the weight of the city's legal help is on his or her shoulders. It's a significant position. But the DPW commissioner has the entire infrastructure of the city on his or her shoulders. That is at least an equal level of responsibility."

Palmucci countered that salary should account for both an employee's internal value – how much he or she is worth to the city – and external value, or how much that employee is valued by others.

"I guess what I'm getting at is there is a higher cost of replacement for a city solicitor because there is a higher external value for someone with that level of expertise than there would be for some of these other positions," Palmucci said. "When I reference the DPW commissioner, there is no specific external requirements or professional degrees or certifications required in that position."

Gutro raised concern over the raises for the director of the council on aging and the director of veterans' services. The panel recommended raising the pay of the council on aging director from $71,831 to $87,500 while raising the pay of the veterans' service director from $71,831 to $77,500.

Colton said the panel recommended raising the pay for the council on aging director because of the number of seniors the city services.

"We believe that salary deserved a substantial increase because of the level of responsibility for that job and what other communities are paying," Colton said. "Quincy has a very large senior population. It has a very well-developed infrastructure for senior citizen services and it provides a lot of services."

Colton also explained the difference in salary recommendations for those positions.

City Council Begins Budget Review Monday

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee will review Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed FY15 budget during three sessions scheduled to take place this month and in early June.

The first session is scheduled for next Monday, May 12, at 7:15 p.m. Among the departmental budgets scheduled for review that night are the Parks, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments; the Health Department; the Law Office and Quincy's judgments account; the Planning Department; the Recreation Department; and the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Monday's meeting will be preceded by a public hearing on the proposed budget at 7 p.m. The meeting and hearing will take place inside the temporary council on the second floor of the City Hall annex.

Monday's budget session will also include a presentation on the city's projected revenues for the upcoming fiscal year by Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh.

The second budget review is scheduled for Tuesday, May 27, at 6:30 p.m. The Fire Department's budget will be reviewed that night, along with the various departments and accounts falling under the umbrella of public works. The Council on Aging, Veterans' Services, and Inspectional Services Department are also slated for that second meeting.

The third session will take place on Monday, June 9, at 6:30 p.m. The Police and School Departments are among those scheduled for that final meeting. Also on the slate that night are the various departments in the City Clerk's Office, the budgets for the mayor's office and City Council, the Animal Control Department, and the city's long-term and short-term debt.

Under Quincy's form of government, the council may only make cuts to the proposed budget; they lack the ability to increase any line items. The council also only sets the bottom line for the School Department's budget – the School Committee is in charge of that department's budget.

Principal Kathleen Colin shares, "Our faculty and staff have created an academic and co-curricular program that nurtures the student as well as engages her in multi-disciplinary learning. Their enthusiasm for welcoming younger students to the community is palpable and they are looking forward to mentoring students at a fundamental point in their development."

The Cuvilly Division features:

- A nurturing environment
  Our classrooms are places where girls feel comfortable exploring their gifts and talents.
- Integrated approach to science
  Courses cover life science, earth science, and physical science with a strong emphasis on experiential learning and inquiry based experiments.
- Opportunities for music, art, and drama
  Courses are fully integrated into the curriculum.
- Talented faculty
  Our teachers are passionate and committed to their students and subject areas.

Town Brook Stream Team Volunteer Photographs Small Group Of Smelt

Ask City To Help Restore Both Eel And Smelt

By PAT ARTIS

Stream Team volunteers have been monitoring the brook every day since March 1, at different times and different sites, awaiting the return of the smelt to spawn in the Town Brook.

Even though the water temperatures have warmed to the mid fifties – no smelt had been seen.

On Wednesday evening, April 30 at 6:30 p.m. at the down stream side of the bridge at Miller Stile Road, volunteer Kevin Cheung lowered a water proof camera into the brook and photographed seven smelt swimming at the bottom of the brook. Volunteers had learned that on April 8 a state Department of Marine Fisheries employee discovered a few smelt eggs at the first riffle below the stream flow guage at Miller Stile Road. The URS scientist-consultant hired by the city also reported finding some smelt egg casings in the same area of the brook during April.

None of the smelt eggs have been found upstream where the enhancement project occurred last year.

Under the leadership of QEN and Conservation Committee members of the Wollaston Garden Club, volunteers have been assigned to monitor the brook each day at six different locations, and to record water temperatures at two sites along the brook.

Volunteers have found the water in the brook murky and muddy due to the frequency of rainy days in the last weeks of April, especially during times of extreme high tides, when the smelt are expected to swim up stream.

If you would like to monitor smelt in the brook you can go to info@townbrook.org to volunteer (pick a few locations and a day of the week) and if you want more information about the Town Brook at www.townbrook.org.

Long-time residents with properties adjoining the brook and Stream Team volunteers are dismayed that the numbers of smelt reported so far are so low. In the past, before the Town Brook Enhancement Project, during spawning season hundreds of smelt would gather at Elm Street and McGrath Highway, upstream at the Lower Bigelow bridge, downstream at Miller Stile Road bridge, upstream at the Upper Bigelow bridge and the area of the Lower Pocket Park at Mechanic Street, site of the former American Legion Post. Residents have expressed concern that the smelt appear not to be returning to Town Brook as they have done for years in the past.

Brad Chase of MA Department of Marine Fisheries said he is hopeful that this has been a "late and slow start." The growing season also has been affected and is two weeks behind due to the cold winter and late spring. Chase also reports that the "smelt fyke nets at other locations in the Fore River watershed are not catching very many smelt." He summarizes this year as "a very slow year for smelt…with only a few weeks left to the season."

Stream Team volunteers and long-time residents wonder whether they will ever see smelt in the hundreds again during the spawning season, and urge the city to seek real solutions to restore both eel and smelt to the Town Brook.

With the better weather in May upon us, citizens are encouraged to "see for your self". Besides the two pocket parks at Mechanic Street, other public viewing places include the sites at Elm Street, Bigelow Street, and Miller Stile Road.

With the approval of DPW Commissioner Daniel Raymondi, a small smelt logo has been painted to designate for public viewing the most desirable and safest smelt viewing locations.

Central Students To Present 'Beauty And The Beast, Jr.'

Central Middle School students will perform Disney's 'Beauty and the Beast, Jr.' in the new Central Performing Arts Center Thursday and Friday May 8-9 at 7:30 p.m.

The cast and crew is made up of students from all three grades. The musical, which is a junior version of the Broadway show, features such family favorites as Be Our Guest, Gaston, and Beauty and the Beast.

Tickets for the show are $5 each and may be purchased in advance at the Central Middle School Main Office 875 Hancock St. or at the door on the evenings of the performances.

The new Central Performing Arts Center is located within walking distance from the Wollaston T stop, and is handicapped accessible. There is also plenty of free parking in the area.

For more information contact the main office at 617-984-8725.

Mahoney Opposes 4th Grade At New Middle School

where we should go I think that would really become an early childhood space," he said.

Parents are concerned about 4th graders mingling with 8th graders according to DeCristofaro, who said that as a parent himself, he understands why such a configuration would be somewhat alarming. Interaction between the two groups would be limited due to a school building design that would isolate younger children from older ones, going so far as to have different school entrances and staggered start times between grades.

Keeping 4th and 5th graders separate from kids in higher grades would also assist in keeping pressure to assimilate with older children to a minimum.

"If there's separation involved then there's a reason for that so why would you want to separate them?" asked Mahoney. She said at the ages of nine and ten, students are just learning to transition from one class to another and that adding an entire school transition would be too overwhelming.

While DeCristofaro feels not everybody has to agree to the proposed configuration, they should keep their minds open to any and all promising possibilities, as they would preserve the "neighborhood school" model as a way to provide consistency of services to students and their families. "The goal that I have...is that neighborhood schools work in Quincy forever and a day," he said.

School committee members will have some input into the design of the school but the building committee will have more say in the building's layout.

Committee member Noel Dibona asked if there were any other 4-8 schools in Massachusetts and said the decision to go forward with the proposed model would make the city a "trendsetter."

Currently, one school in Clinton is configured in such a way, although following a visit, DeCristofaro admitted their student population was much smaller than Quincy's, making it harder to reflect on the possible success of such an arrangement in Quincy.

Once concrete enrollment figures are handed to the MSBA, the building authority can suggest different options and building layouts for the school committee to consider, something Mahoney said she confirmed by contacting MSBA officials directly.

"There are other options we can put on the table that can be discussed," she said.

are not equipped to function in that way.

Rigging an existing security system to detect when doors are being opened for deliveries and other authorized and planned uses would be difficult because of excessive false alarms and the need to have someone constantly monitoring the doors, according to Chairperson David McCarthy. "You would have to make sure they were in perfect sequence with things that happen throughout the day," he said. "It's tough. It's tougher than you think but it's a good thought."

Draicchio said that while such technology could be installed, it would be cost prohibitive, as would the installation of identification card readers. Such readers would be of limited value because their cost far exceeds their usefulness as limited background information, such as a criminal history, can be gathered legally from the device he said. He said he based his conclusion on conversations he had with Brockton school officials where security is more heavily implemented due to having a larger student population.

When asked about making the Hunt Street entrance of North Quincy High more secure, Draicchio assured that controlled access for the staff is in place in the form of card readers.

As for North Quincy High's loading dock, an additional camera will be installed, pointing directly at the entrance. School officials have been unable to determine whether the door was left unlocked or ajar as no cameras were set up to visualize it. "We're going to put another surveillance camera inside that's pointing from the cafeteria right down to those doors and that will be done soon," he said.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro commended staff and students for their reaction to the breach of security at North Quincy High but said being prepared was a safer, more reliable way to prevent any future events at not only the high schools, but at all Quincy schools. "Our response was excellent—the administration, our security, the Quincy Police Department—the issue really is how do we do more proactively?" he said. "That's the hardest part. Making sure that people consistently are reminded about how serious this situation is."

Coddingon Hall Project Seen Completed In June

Brigham, most known for designing Boston's Museum of Fine Arts.

Funding for the project was covered by Community Preservation Act and city annual budget money.

A "state-of-the-art security system" that's cloud-based will be utilized by exterior and interior cameras and may possibly be set up to tie in with systems in other city buildings.

All utilities are underground and their installation, according to MacDonald, may begin in as little as two weeks and will only take a few days to complete. He said a schedule would be arranged to not interfere with students commuting to and from neighboring Quincy High School.

Landscaping work is anticipated to begin in late May and the estimated completion date for the entire project is June.

School committee member Anne Mahoney asked for clarification on the security system being put in place. Besides the card reader at the main entrance, visitors will have to be buzzed in and someone will be monitoring a camera pointed at the front doors. The rear door will be accessible strictly using key cards.

Parking will remain in the front and on the sides of the building, although MacDonald was not able to provide a figure for the number of spots.

"We have a wonderful opportunity over there for our parents to feel they can come to the central office and not have to sweat [finding parking]," said committee member Barbara Isola.

Community Activists, Police Officers Honored At Law Day

By SCOTT JACKSON

More than a dozen community leaders, state officials, and law enforcement officers were recognized for their service at the Quincy District Court's recent Law Day ceremony.

The James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award at this year's Law Day, held May 2 at the court, was presented to longtime community activist Robert Noble and his late wife Gloria. Sheila McIntyre, the wife of the late mayor and state senator, and former Mayor Arthur Tobin, now the court's clerk-magistrate, presented the award.

"Bob and Gloria came to Quincy in 1952 from Dorchester and immediately became involved in worthy community causes in countless ways for over half a century – 60 years to be exact," Tobin said. "Bob and Gloria were soon recognized as a team for their selfless giving. Bob was quoted at the time as saying, 'if you get one of us to volunteer, you get the both of us.' Besides their civic and charitable involvement they were actively involved in their children's PTO and their Boy Scout and Girl Scout activities."

Tobin identified a number of organizations the Nobles had been associated with over the last 60 years such as her involvement with the Wollaston Mothers Club, DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) Inc., Good Shepherd Maria Droste Counseling Services, Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Quincy Historical Society, and the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee and his work with veterans groups, including serving as the commander of the American Ex-Prisoners of War Department of Massachusetts two times.

The former mayor also noted a number of awards the Nobles received, such as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award, and awards from the Quincy Lodge of Elks and Jewish War Veterans.

Noble, who covered the court's Law Day ceremonies for many years as a photographer for The Quincy Sun, said he never expected to be recognized by the court.

"I've been here at Law Day for many, many years taking pictures for The Quincy Sun. I never expected to be up here as the recipient of this award," he said.

"Arthur stole most of what I had to say, but when Gloria and I came over the bridge 60-some odd years ago, a lot of people were going further south. We didn't want to do that. We got involved in Quincy and met many wonderful friends.

"My wife was my ears. She had a knack of talking to everyone, listening to what they had to say remembering what they had to say and repeating it back to them whenever she could. She was a wonderful person. Mayor Koch said she was a special person and she was."

The Alfred P. Malaney Award, presented by Quincy Bar Association Vice President Laura Martin, was given to Robert Harnais. Harnais, a Quincy Center-based attorney, is the general counsel to the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

"Throughout his 25-year legal career, it is apparent that the only [thing] more impressive than Robert Harnais as a lawyer is Robert Harnais as a man," Martin said.

Mayor Thomas Koch opened this year's Law Day address by bringing the greetings of the city. He recognized the contributions made by Noble and Harnais.

"I do want to single out a couple of the recipients this morning – I'm offering my congratulations to each of them but I know a couple of them very well personally. One is Mr. Robert Noble, a member of the greatest generation and just an outstanding citizen of our city. He served our nation, served our community, and continues to serve our community and has raised a beautiful family that also adds to our community," Koch said.

"I also want to offer my congratulations to attorney Robert Harnais. He served on the Planning Board for Quincy for many years until [Braintree Mayor] Joe Sullivan stole him and he's now with the planning board in Braintree."

Eight members of the law enforcement community were recognized during the Law Day ceremony. Col. Timothy Alben, the superintendent of the Massachusetts State Police, received the Mark S. Charbonnier Award. Alben received the award for his role in the investigation of last year's bombings at the Boston Marathon.

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey presented the Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement to seven police officers from four communities in the court's jurisdiction.

Braintree Det. Stephen Wallace received the award for apprehending the so-called "Brim Beanie Bandit." The suspect in that case was linked to a string of bank robberies, including one in Quincy, between December 2013 and January 2014. Fellow Braintree Det. Thomas Molloy received the award for arresting a suspect charged with groping girls at the South Shore Plaza.

Milton Police Officer Christopher Potts received his Dana award for actions during two traffic stops. In both instances he was able to wrestle loaded firearms away from the suspect.

Randolph Sgt. William McNamara and Officer Craig Staffier received the award for catching an armed bank robber last November.

Weymouth Det. David T. Galvin, Jr., and Officer Brenden R. Fogarty received the Dana award for catching two suspects charged with the violent armed robbery of Weymouth market in September.

Morrissey also presented the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award to Assistant District Attorney Sarah A. Lelle.

Roderick L. Ireland, the retiring chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, received this year's Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award. His colleague on the court, Associate Justice Margot Botsford, gave the Law Day Address. She spoke of need for more drug courts throughout the state, similar to the one already in place at the Quincy District Courthouse.

The theme for this year's Law Day was 'American democracy and the rule of law: why every vote matters.' It was chosen in recognition of the upcoming 50th anniversary of the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

1,000 Volunteers Take Part In Cleanup

More than one thousand volunteers fanned out across Quincy on Saturday for the 25th Annual Cleaner Greener Quincy Day, and Mayor Koch was joined by more than 500 people for the appreciation cookout at Pageant Field.

Volunteers cleaned up local beaches, parks, open spaces and school grounds. Mulch was provided by the Park Department and was spread across more than two dozen locations.

"At the end of Cleaner Greener Quincy the City looks more beautiful,' said Mayor Koch. "Folks are so proud of their schools, their parks and their neighborhoods, and that pride is on full display each year during this wonderful event."

Cleaner Greener Quincy was sponsored by the Quincy Park Conservancy, Curry Hardware, the Quincy Park Department and the Quincy Recreation Department. Hannaford Supermarket sponsored the cookout by providing hamburgers, hot dogs, beverages and serve ware for all of the volunteers.

POINT WEBSTER Middle School students helped make the school grounds cleaner and greener during Saturday's city-wide cleanup.

Youth Football, Cheer Sign-Ups May 17

Quincy Youth Football & Cheerleading kicks off its 64th preseason with the annual League-Wide Sign Up Day, Saturday May 17 at Pageant Field Pavilion from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Quincy Youth Football League was founded in 1950 and is comprised of six franchises located in Quincy and Milton: West Quincy Elks, Quincy Point Panthers, North Quincy Apaches, Houghs Neck Manets, Squantum Storm and Milton Mustangs.

The QYFL offers:

• Tackle Football: 3 Levels of Play for children ages 8-14 entering grades 3rd -8th

• Cheerleading: 3 Level of Cheering for children ages 6-14 entering grades 1st-8th.

• Flag Football: 2 Levels Flag for children ages 6-9 entering grades 1st-4th.

The QYFL operates on "Neighborhood Based" format, where players and cheerleaders play with their neighbors for the local team. Travel requirements are very minimal, all practices are held at neighborhood fields and games are played in Quincy and in Milton.

QYFL costs are $125 for Tackle, $100 for Cheerleading and $75 for Flag. Each team supplies all the necessary equipment and uniforms and provides a safe and structured environment for children to learn their chosen sport.

For more information, contact QYFL Vice-President, Sean Halpin at (617)980-2674 or email seanhalpin1@comcast.net.

Walk Raises Over $20,000 For Interfaith Social Services

Hundreds of umbrella toting participants lined the sidewalks of Quincy's normally scenic Squantum neighborhood April 26 to participate in Interfaith Social Services' 40th Annual South Shore Walk/Run. The event, hosted at Quincy's Kennedy Center, has been organized by Interfaith Social Services for the past forty years to benefit thousands of South Shore families in need of food, counseling and emergency assistance.

The rain didn't stop Pat Baird from walking. Baird, an 86-year-old Weymouth resident, has been participating in the event ever since it began four decades ago.

"My husband and I started walking because our Church, Old South Union in Weymouth, told us of a walk in Quincy to help less fortunate families. By walking and raising as much money as we could we felt that we were doing our part every year. I am still doing the walk today because I know that it will go to help many families," Baird said.

"It is wonderful to see so many people come out year after year for this event," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "Participants raised over $20,000 this year to help local families in need. That is incredible! They all collected donations to help their neighbors in need. That is a true example of a community helping their own community, and that is what Interfaith Social Services is all about."

That theme was also echoed by Julie Nations, Director of Community Relations and Outreach for Boston Medical Center HealthNet Plan, a sponsor for this year's walk. Nations helped to encourage walkers and runners as they got ready to leave, "Look to your left, now look to your right," said Nations. "All of these people that you see are your community. What a group! People who will walk in the rain to help feed hungry people, you are awesome!"

Interfaith Social Services does their best to help people remember that the word fundraiser starts with the word "fun." The Walk and 5k were only the beginning of the festivities on April 26th. When participants returned to The Kennedy Center they were greeted by lunch courtesy of Stars on Hingham Harbor, the Atria at Marina Bay and Ocean Spray. Everyone sampled frozen treats from New England Ice Cream Corporation as they enjoyed music, raffles, kids' games, a photo booth, face painting and complimentary massages from The Facilitated Healing Center.

This year was the first time that Interfaith added a professionally timed 5K run to the festivities. The top three male runners were Sean Seigel with a time of 21:18; Greg Einhaus of Quincy with a time of 21:34 and Eric Dolinski of Quincy with a time of 24:48. The top three female runners were Caitlyn Shultz of Norwood with a time of 25:40; Caroline Lauer of Cambridge with a time of 26:22; Sarah June of Cambridge with a time of 26:23.

Founded in 1947, Interfaith Social Services relies on hundreds of volunteers each year to deliver compassionate, client-centered programs focused on hunger, mental health and emergency assistance. Interfaith operates one of the largest food pantries in Greater Boston. Last year their volunteers provided over 22,000 hours of service to the community.

One of Interfaith's volunteers, serving in their food pantry each week, is Linda Schatz of Abington. She won the Highest Fundraiser award at this year's Walk raising $1,145.

"Linda worked really hard to raise that money," said Interfaith's director Rick Doane. "She knows that it will help to purchase the food she serves to hungry South Shore residents every week. What an amazing accomplishment by Linda as well as everyone who helped to make this event so successful."

DESPITE PERIODIC DOWNPOURS, hundreds of walkers and runners participated in Interfaith Social Services' 40th Annual South Shore Walk/Run in Quincy on April 26th. The Walk/Run raised over $20,000 to help local families in need.

AN EXHIBIT of artwork and photography by members of the Quincy Art Association is on display during May in the Coletti Reading Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center. Media on exhibit include: oil, acrylic, pastel, watercolor, photography, sculpture and mixed media. A public reception will be held on Saturday, May 17 from 12 noon to 3 p.m. For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

Navigation Technology, Privacy Topic May 13

What does it mean to never get lost?

Location technology has radically transformed in the past century. Phones are now smart enough to pinpoint one's presence to within a few feet—and nosy enough to share that information with governments and corporations.

The public is invited to the Thomas Crane Public Library on Tuesday, May 13 at 7 p.m. to learn the story of navigaton technology and privacy, filled with tales of scientists and astronauts, inventors and entrepreneurs, from Quincy's own Hiawatha Bray, author of the recently published, You Are Here: From the Compass to GPS, the History and Future of How We Find Ourselves (Basic Books, April 1, 2014), and technology columnist for the Boston Globe.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

Literacy Volunteers Needed

Literacy Volunteers-Quincy needs volunteer tutors (who are available in the day time) for one-on-one instruction to adults in basic reading and writing.

Orientation sessions will be held Tuesday, June 17 or Thursday, June 26 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library (40 Washington Street, Quincy). To register for the orientation or receive information call Literacy Volunteers 617-376-1314 or email quliteracy@ocln.org.

Literacy Volunteers of Massachusetts - Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library is a non-profit educational organization that offers free tutoring to adults in basic reading and writing through a regional network of trained volunteers. Although the program is based in Quincy, tutors and students come from 16 communities on the South Shore.

NQ Softball Staying Positive

By JOE REARDON

It's all about moments on the diamond for the North Quincy softball team this spring.

Young, inexperienced and finding their way in the brutally tough Patriot League, the Red Raiders are hanging their hats on the positive plays within the game that, if done consistently, will result in wins over time. The victories may not come this season, but any type of momentum Jim Connor's crew can generate could be carried over to next year. It's important for the team to take its lumps now and garner the experience that will make the players better softball players in the coming years.

A coach can take away positives from any game - always. And despite a lopsided 12-0 loss Monday at Mitchell/McCoy Field against tournament-bound Middleboro (8-4), North Quincy made plays in the field and did hit. Co-captain Lauren Gambon had a strong afternoon at the plate, lacing a pair of hard-hit singles off Sachem pitcher Mykala Dimond and Sarah Franklin also added a single for North Quincy.

Connor wants to see his team work on pushing through its timidness and getting aggressive at the plate and get plenty of swings in. "It's (hitting) kind of tough in these games when everyone has a good pitcher," said Connor. "We were talking about that after the game. We've got to be hungry to hit. At this point I'm not really concerned about how great an eye you have for a walk. Let's get up and be hungry to hit the ball and want to hit - make every at bat count towards your improvement. We're trying to get over the timidness."

Middleboro put the Red Raiders away for good in the fourth inning when they pushed across nine runs to put their lead at double digits. The Sachems sent 16 runners to the plate and struck for five hits. North Quincy made three errors and pitcher Dana Grasselli had trouble finding the plate as she walked four batters and hit another.

Despite Grasselli's control issues later in the game, she still struck out a pair of Sachem batters and showed sparks of what she can do from the hill. "Dana is kind of a semi converted pitcher," said Connor. "She pitched years ago and stepped in for us after we had a couple of injuries. We're going to struggle with control at times. But when she's throwing strikes good things happen."

CENTER FIELDER Tristine Thong makes a fine play running down a fly ball as teammate Nancy Aimola looks on.

The Red Raiders did look good in the field on several occasions. The strong-armed Franklin easily threw out a runner trying to steal third to end the scoreless top half of the second inning. In the third, shortstop Madison Hally snared a line drive and alertly fired the ball to Gambon at third to complete the double play and end the inning. Grasselli had a strong fifth inning, setting the Middleboro batters down in order with a strikeout sandwiched between a pair of groundouts.

Connor knows the more the girls play, the faster their confidence will grow. And making heads up, fundamentally sound plays in the field against a team the calibre of Middleboro will only pump the girls up to do the same against other teams.

"We're coming along," said Connor. "We have a lot of first year softball players and a lot of first year varsity softball players. I think they're timid when they see a girl like this (Dimond) who's an outstanding pitcher. She does a good job and we get up there and are kind of nervous. It's a tough scenario, but they stay positive with each other so that's good.

"We're getting better. We are improving. They're (Middleboro) a very good team and I don't think their record is indicative of how good they really are, I think they're even better than that. They're going to win our division (Keenan)."

NQ Girls Lacrosse Showing Steady Improvement

By JOE REARDON

It may be premature for North Quincy Girls Lacrosse Nation to be talking tournament, but these are exciting days for Megan Therrien's vastly improved club so why not? The Red Raiders, after all, improved their record to 4-6 on the season with last Thursday's 20-6 thrashing of nonleague opponent Cardinal Spellman in the comfortable confines of Veterans' Memorial Stadium and have been improving with each outing. The tournament will become a real possibility if the Red Raiders continue their spirited play.

North Quincy head coach Megan Therrien didn't balk when talking about the team's prospects for a slot in the postseason, but was cautious about the Red Raiders getting too far ahead of themselves, especially with the bulk of a rock-solid Patriot League schedule still to play.

"Right now I think we can get closer," Therrien said. "It's .500. That would be six more wins. It's definitely a tough league, but we're definitely looking to get more wins - possibly six. Hopefully we'll get a streak going."

Co-captains Katie Burke and Molly Brown continued to set the tone for the Red Raiders as they attcked the Cardinal Spellman defense. The American University-bound Burke had four tallies in the first half on the way to a six-goal game while Brown struck for four tallies of her own. Ciara Forde added a pair of goals for the Red Raiders.

Cardinal Spellman coach Meredith McManus was confident before the game that North Quincy was a winnable contest for the struggling Cardinals, who came into the game with one win in their inaugural season. The Raider Raiders, though, had other plans and never let Spellman get close. North Quincy was able to get to the Cardinals' net from the start and put plenty of pressure on the Spellman defense. The majority of North Quincy's tallies came just outside the goal crease, leading to an 8-2 lead by halftime.

The speedy Burke fired home a goal 2:31 into the game and North Quincy went up 2-0 when Molly Brown capped off a solid surge down the field with a tally from the right side. Burke scored again 6:01 in with a hard shot from just outside the crease for the 3-0 lead. Spellman came back with the next two goals, the second on a bounce shot from Katie Garvey with 15:15 left to cut the lead to 3-2. North Quincy continued to work the ball in close and put up the next five goals; two from Burke and one each from Brown, Kiera Clifford and Forde for a six-goal lead at the break.

Burke has noticed the improvement in the Red Raiders' play from the beginning of the season and is confident the squad can continue building on its strengths moving forward. "Things are going along well," she said. "We've made so many good improvements since the beginning of the season, especially in our passing and catching. We've really come along with our outbreaks and moving the ball down the field. It's really a team sport. Without each other none of us would be as good as we are. I'm really proud of everyone."

Goals by Forde and Sarah Tran in the first minute of the second half put the Red Raiders up 10-2 and it went to 11-2 with Marissa McGue's tally 1:25 in.

North Quincy goaltender Marguerite Belcher has kept the squad in games all season and was sharp between the posts against Spellman. The sophomore had big back-to-back saves in the first, robbing Emily O'Neill on a pair of shots with just under seven minutes left and stopped Annie Marchisio's rifle from 10 yards out early in the second half.

"She did very well," Therrien said of her ever improving goaltender. "Her reaction has been great. She's in the right spot at the right time. She's working on her stick work and has made a lot of opposite side saves. She's definitely giving the defense the chance to get rebounds. They've been picking the ball up and clearing it right away. She's making some crucial saves that help keep the momentum going."

The Red Raiders' passing and transition back to defense got stronger as the game continued and has been a key improvement in the Red Raiders' turnaround from a year ago. The team has only been getting better and that should be apparent during the second half of the season.

"It was a good game," said Therrien. "We're definitely connecting on our passes and making transitions quick. The girls are very unselfish. We had multiple scorers which is great to see. Our passes have looked so much better. It's great to see the progress. I see it every day."

NQ Boys Volleyball Posts 3-1 Win Over Boston Latin

By BILL GRIFFIN

From the beginning, it has been a matter of blending in new players with two established veterans who led and stabilized the team.

It has worked well for North Quincy's volleyball team all season and it worked well for the Red Raiders in a non-league match against Boston Latin last week. Efthim Butka and Oresti Bega controlled the net with touch and power, and Jackie Chen, Angelo Taho, and Shiggy Zhang led a strong supporting effort which helped North recover from a slow start and post a 3-1 non-league win.

North won by scores of 16-25, 25-23, 25-19, and 25-16 for its fourth straight victory which upped the Red Raiders' record to 9-3 and put them one win away from their sixth straight tournament appearance under coach Jason Cai.

"I've very satisfied with the season," said Cai. "We were raw at the beginning with so many new players. We only had two starters (Bega and Butka) returning, and we needed the newer and younger players to contribute. They've done a good job. The tourney was always our goal, but to be this close at this point in the season is a pleasant surprise. I like the team I have now."

All season Cai has preached communication and playing clean volleyball. Avoid unforced mistakes. His team listened to him after a difficult first game, took command with a narrow second-game win and swept to impressive decisions in the final two games.

"We didn't play well in the first game. We made too many mistakes, especially serving," said Cai. "We just need to get the ball over the net with something on it. I've been talking about communicating all season and after the first game, we did a good job of it."

Bega and Butka were certainly the foundation of the comeback. Bega (33 assists) controlled the pace of the match and Buka (eight kills, eight digs) not only put away shots, but also kept points alive with quick reactions at the net. But there was more than the two senior standouts. There was Chen (12 kills, seven assists, five digs) swinging away at the net, Zhang (12 digs) serving and saving points on the back line, and Taho (eight kills) blocking and finishing at the net with touch volleys.

Chen is a junior. Taho and Zhang are sophomores. The younger players have delivered for North.

"Jackie played very well. He was aggressive and hit hard at the net," said Cai. "Shiggy played a good all-around match and Angelo has improved at the net as the season has gone on. We needed contributions from our younger players, and we had players step up and play well."

And there was more. Anthony Green (eight kills) has made striking improvement in his first year of varsity volleyball, especially in the final set when he towered over the net and won clinching points with quick returns and accurate placements. Junior Calvin Ma played a strong all-court game. Sophomore Nathan Gonzales, freshman Eric Huang and senior Kyle Richardson also played strong matches. The depth Cai wanted to develop around Besti and Butka has worked out just fine.

"Anthony has continued to make progress," said Cai. "In the past two weeks, I've seen an improvement in his blocking. He's getting his timing down and making his jump at the right moment. Nathan has played well on defense, a position where we needed help. Eric has a world of potential and Kyle has played well for his first year on varsity volleyball."

The key to the match was the second game. Latin was up 1-0 and was on the threshold of a 2-0 lead as the two battled with one or two points separating them for most of the game. Latin was within two points of winning the game, but Bega's all-around play, serving well and setting up Butka and Green for kills, and Chen's powerful shots at the net gave North a 25-23 win. The Red Raiders were in control for the rest of the match.

"Give Latin credit. They swung away and played well. The second game was very close and could have gone either way," said Cai.

The key to the final two games was North's net play. Bega set the ball with the right pace and height for kills from Butka, Green, Taho, and Chen. The Red Raiders blocked, attacked and kept points alive on the front line.

In the final game, Butka and Chen drilled slams to open an 11-4 lead. Green had three kills in the game on a put-back, a touch volley and a full-throttle swing which Cai loves to see. Taho blocked well and showed good vision and accuracy with his placements

The Red Raiders ran the final three points of the match. Chen and Bega made great saves to force errors for a 24-16 lead. Cai listened to the chants of the crowd and put Richardson in for the final point. Richardson responded with a nice touch volley which Latin could not return to end the match.

"Definitely, the net play was the key in the final games," said Cai. "We defended well with the block. We read the ball and knew what shot to use to finish the point."

In addition to the Latin win last week, North competed in the Cambridge Rindge and Latin Invitational Volleyball Tournament. North defeated Latin, Lowell Catholic and St. John's Prep to win the Silver Bracket Championship. Bega had an excellent tournament. Cai was happy with his team's performance and enjoyed watching them perform in a tournament atmosphere.

"It was good to see them play when the pressure was on, when the momentum swung back and forth before a big crowd. It was a good experience for them, and it should make us a better team."

North hosts Brockton Friday at 5:30 p.m.

Presidents Rally Against Middleboro

Quincy Plays Well Enough To Win But Bows To S-L

By BILL GRIFFIN

The simple truth is this: The No. 1 rated softball club in the state came into Mitchell/McCoy Field last week to play Quincy in a battle of unbeatens and, in the end, there was only a slender shade of difference between the two teams.

"Quincy is a very good team. Absolutely, one of the best we've seen this year. We're fortunate to come out of here with a win," said Silver Lake coach Tony Pina after his team dropped the Presidents, 3-0 in a Patriot League Keenan Division beauty of a softball game.

Quincy faced a considerable challenge in the Lakers (11-0). Sophomore Maddy Barone had hurled five consecutive no-hitters this spring and allowed two runs through 11 games. The Lakers back her with an explosive attack which at one stretch this season put up 100 runs in six games. They are ranked No. 1 in every state poll. They are a powerhouse. And against all this, Quincy was so close, dead even for most of the game.

"I was proud of the way we played," said coach Greg Sommers. "What I liked best was we competed. They are very good, but we did not take a step back. We didn't give an inch. We played our game."

In other action last week, Leann McColgan drove in the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning to lift Quincy past Middleboro, 4-3. Quincy finished the week at 7-1.

Junior Saxon Bresnahan matched Barone pitch-for-pitch. Quincy hit the ball solidly off Barone at times and had two good scoring chances. The Presidents hustled and played terrific defense highlighted by a 1-3-2 double play to end the fifth inning which belongs in a textbook.

The difference was two unearned run and a home run by Barone in the sixth.

"Quincy played well enough to win. It was a matter of making a play or a timely hit," said Pina.

Bresnahan gave four hits. Barone gave three. Bresnahan struck out 12. Barone struck out 14. Bresnahan walked two. Barone walked one and hit a batter. Bresnahan threw hard, changed speeds and moved the ball around well. When she kept her fastball down, it was unhittable.. Barone relied on her powerful riser, a rocket which rides up and over swinging bats:

It was pitching at its best. The junior from Quincy went up against the best in the state and there was little to choose between the two.

"I saw the Quincy girl last year, and she has really developed. She has movement on her ball and she hits her spots," said Pina.

"Barone is something special, but Saxon was excellent, especially when she hit her spots. She should be proud of her performance," said Sommers.

Quincy also hit the ball. Sophomore Nicole Jorgensen drove a shot to the base of the fence in center field for a base hit. Angelina Avitabile roped a liner down the left-field line for a single. Emma Kelly slapped an infield hit for the second straight game. Bresnahan hit the ball hard twice. Kate McGahey put down a perfect sacrifice to move Jorgensen into scoring position in the fifth.

"We put the bats on the ball," said Sommers. "Nicole hit her ball a long way, and Emma is doing just we want at the top of the order, slapping the ball and using her speed to get on base."

The Presidents also played good and, at times, exceptional defense. Avitable made a perfect throw to catch a base-stealer at second in the second. Dana Varmahmoodi ranged far in left towards the line to grab a fly ball with a runners on in the sixth. Shortstop Rachel Papile handled a hard smash with a runner on to end the seventh.

The best came in the fifth. First, Kelly raced in from center field to back up second, control an errant throw and stop a baserunner from advancing. With one out and a runner of third, Emily Colton hit a grounder back to Bresnahan. Bresnahan fielded it cleanly, checked the runner at third and threw to Jorgensen at first for the out. When the runner from third broke for a home, Jorgensen threw a low, hard strike to Avitabile who blocked the plate for the out and the double play. It was great stuff.

"All three players have to do their jobs or we don't get the double play," said Sommers. "Saxon has to field the ball cleanly, Nicole has to make a strong throw, and Angelina has to make a good tag."

It was 0-0 through three as Bresnahan struck out eight of the first ten batters. Silver Lake pushed across a pair of unearned runs in the fourth for a 2-0 lead. Barone drilled a home run in the sixth to up the lead to 3-0.

Kelly and Jorgensen both advanced to second after their base hits, but Barone worked her way out of the threats with a ground ball and a strikeout.

"We have Quincy at Silver Lake Thursday and I can tell you I'm not looking forward to playing them again," said Pina.

Quincy hosts Hingham Wednesday and is at Silver Lake Thursday. Both games start at 4 p.m.

NQ Boys Lacrosse Falls To Sacred Heart, Dedham

By BILL GRIFFIN

They were two back-to-back losses by identical scores, and they were especially difficult because both were winnable matches which would have put North Quincy's boys lacrosse team firmly in the hunt for a tournament berth.

Dedham scored twice less than 30 second apart late in the final period and then held off a furious North Quincy rally to edge the Red Raiders, 6-5 in a non-league match Monday afternoon at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Earlier last week, Sacred Heart tipped North, 6-5 despite a goal and three assists from junior Mike Finn.

The losses dropped North to 4-9 on the season. Two wins and the Red Raiders would be 6-7 with a great shot at a good stretch run to make the tourney.

"We could have been right in the tourney chase," said coach Mark Nutley. "I thought they were two games we had a good chance to win, but wed played sloppy. We made too many mistakes with dropped balls, and our passing could have been sharper too."

Finn had another excellent match against Dedham with three goals and an assist. He's tough, absorbs contact well while making the offensive play, and has a rocket of a shot off a quick release. Finn not only scored, but controlled possession and set up his teammates for good chances.

"He's an excellent player. He has a great pair of hands," said Nutley. "The trouble is opposing teams know about him. They double and triple-team him. We need to do a better job moving without the ball and getting open for his passes."

Sophomore Timmy Glynn also had a strong effort on attack for the Red Raiders with a goal and two assists. He has a good connection with Finn. He hustled hard to maintain possessions and created scoring chances especially in the second half.

"He came on strong after the first period. He worked hard, scored a big goal, and definitely made things happen for us," said Nutley.

Freshman Joey England played a remarkable game in goal for North. He is only a freshman, playing lacrosse for the first time, but he kept North in the game with five point-blank saves, two on clear breakaways. He is fearless and has the instincts of a keeper. As the game progressed, it became clear that not only was he making saves, he had Dedham trying for the perfect shot which resulted in a number of chances sailing wide of the corners of the net.

"This is is first-year playing lacrosse on an level. He didn't even play in youth league," said Nutley. "He not only makes the big saves. He throws great passes. He's started us a a lot of fast breaks because his passes are so accurate."

Rob Hines also scored for the Red Raiders. Senior Pat Janeiro was outstanding on defense. Freshman Tom Koch played good defense and won three ground balls in the final minutes which gave North valuable possessions.

"Janeiro was tremendous for us, and Koch gave us a chance to tie the game at the end," said Nutley.

Dedham led, 4-3 entering the final period. Hines tied it by cutting out of the corner, finding a clear spot in the middle, and finishing with a high drive with 6:51 remaining.

There it stayed until Dedham scored with 2:53 left and 2:24 left for a 6-4 edge. North regrouped and cut it a one-goal deficit in the final minute. Finn made the playing, circling through center, shaking off big hits and finding Glynn clear at the left side of the net. Glynn drove it home to make it 6-5 with 0:58 left.

North had three late possessions but couldn't get the equalizer.

"We had chances, but we hurt ourselves with mistakes. We had a good play to run in the final 30 seconds, and we just dropped the ball. You can't do that in a close match," said Nutley.

North scored the first two goals of the match. Glynn, Nolan Greene and Finn worked a beautiful passing play which Finn finished for a 1-0 lead with just over 5:00 left in the opening period. Finn upped it to 2-0 early in the second, knocking home a terrific through pass from Glynn.

Dedham scored twice before halftime for a 2-2 deadlock. Finn tipped home a shot from the corner of the net in the third, but Dedham scored twice in the period for a 4-3 lead entering the fourth.

It has been a season of development for North. The Red Raiders only have four seniors which has allowed Nutley to give the underclassmen varsity experience which will help North over the next two years. Tom Koch and England are two freshman who have a bright future with the program. Finn and Glynn also return next season which should give North a dangerous, veteran attack.

"We've been able to bring a lot of kids along who wouldn't normally have gotten a lot of varsity time," said Nutley. "We've thrown them into the fire, and they've stepped up and played well. Austin Lee and Ryan Adducci are also freshmen who have done a good job for us."

Lee scored his first varsity goal and played a solid all-around game against Sacred Heart. Adducci, Janeiro, and Cornelius Koch also scored for North.

The Red Raiders are at Duxbury Thursday at 4 p.m., and host Sacred Heart in a rematch Monday at 4 p.m.

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth Tryouts

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth will hold tryouts on Saturday, May 10 and Sunday, May 11 beginning at 9:30 a.m. at O'Rourke Field.

Tryouts are open to Quincy residents between the ages of 16 and 19. To be eligible to try out a player must have been born on or after Jan. 1, 1995.

The 18-game season starts June 1 and ends in late July.

Wollaston participates in the Senior Babe Ruth South Shore League and plays against teams from South Boston, Dorchester, Norwood, Westwood, Dedham, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton, and Hingham/Hull.

For more information, call Steve Reardon at 617-438-5727 or Bob Griffin at 617-472-4811.

Parry Hurls No-Hitter For Salve Regina

Former Quincy High standout Nicole Parry pitched a no-hitter to lead Salve Regina to a 10-0 win over Curry in the first game of the Commonwealth Coast Conference playoffs last week.

Parry walked one and struck out eight. Out of 57 pitches, she threw 44 strikes.

Parry was also named first-team all-conference for her performance during the regular season. She finished the regular season with a 9-5 record.

In later playoff action Salve Regina fell to Endicott (3-1) and Western New England (5-0) in the double-elimination tourney. Against Endicott, Parry struck out four and allowed just six hits.

QHS Hockey Celebrates Season, Looks Forward Next Year

By JOE REARDON

Quincy hockey coach Ted Walsh had plenty of time to reflect on a winter that saw the Presidents finish 4-0-1 in the final week of the regular season to qualify for a post-season berth.

The Presidents capped off the sterling run with a 6-6 tie against Abington where they scored four times in the final, frantic 10 minutes to clinch a spot in the tournament. Quincy wound up one-and-done in the playoffs with a loss to a tough Medfield High squad and an 11-0-2 overall record.

Walsh, a member of the Quincy High Hockey Hall of Fame, Class of 1983, was extremely happy with the team's play and has high hopes for next season.

"It was definitely a season goal," said Walsh of making it into the tournament. "We wanted to go further, but we drew a tough seed and in the end they (Medfield) had a little more experience than us. We have so much experience coming back. All the jobs are open. Overall, it should be a veteran squad coming back."

Several members of the Quincy High squad were recognized for their stellar seasons at the recent awards banquet.

Mike Pugsley and Jimmy Brennick were recipients of the Boosters Book Award for academic excellence. Pugsley also earned the 7th Player Award as the player who exceeded season goals and expectations.

Matt Kozlowski copped the Bobby Harvey Scholarship that is awarded to the player who is a hard working journeyman hockey player. Steve Bowe and Blair Brennan were awarded the Coaches Pride Award that is given to the players who demonstrated outstanding team spirit and attitude. Mike Gendreau copped the Unsung Hero Award as the player who did not receive the credit he deserved for all the positive contributions made on and off the ice. The George Peachey Award for the players who demonstrated exceptional performance on the ice and in the classroom that made him an outstanding student athlete at Quincy High was presented to Jimmy Brennick and Matt Davis.

The prestigious Steven Barrett Memorial Cup, awarded to the players who most closely emulated many of the same outstanding leadership qualities as the former captain of the golf, hockey and baseball teams, was presented to Kozlowski and Pat Donovan. Donovan, Pat Freeman and Brian O'Callaghan were recognized as Patriot League All-Stars and Davis and Brandon Beal were honorable mentions. Pugsley picked up the Patriot League Sportsmanship Award and the entire team copped the MIAA Academic Gold Level Achievement Award for its 3.34 GPA.

Real Boston Rams Semi-Pro Soccer To Play Here

7 Homes Games Start May 17 At Veterans' Memorial Stadium

By JOE REARDON

Get ready for some semi-pro soccer this summer because the Real Boston Rams are coming to Quincy.

The affiliate of the New England Revolution, the Rams will be playing their home games at Veterans' Memorial Stadium after being presented the Rookie Franchise of the Year Award by the United Soccer League (USL) in 2013, the team's inaugural season. The Rams drew 300-700 fans at their games last year Oliver Ames High School, but outgrew the facility.

General Manager John Barata said he is excited about the move to the stadium and having its home games in Quincy.

"Veterans' is just a great stadium," he said. "Quincy is such a great soccer hotbed with all its different nationalities. I want to make this a community team. We want to make this everyone's team. We're very much looking forward to our season."

The Rams are a member of the USL's Player Developmental League's (PDL) Northeast Division and one of the youngest squads in the league with the average age last summer of 20. The team finished 5-7-2 in its inaugural season. "We were very happy about that," said Barata.

The team's main goal is to develop players for college and the pros and has several players currently playing at the Div. 1 level collegiately and gives the older players the opportunity to play professionally in their hometowns in the Greater Boston area, as well as channels provided by the Revolution and USL. Other opportunities include possibly playing at the International level or on the U.S. Men's National squad.

The roster currently has 17 players with seven or eight players on the fringe battling for a place on the team. "This roster will feature a few MLS future players," Barata said.

The team is in close contact with the Revolution and holds its practices at Gillette Stadium and several players are called upon to attend the morning practices with its parent squad. "It allows for the Revolution to keep tabs on their homegrown players," Barata said.

The Rams played the Revolution last June 18 in a benefit game for Sandy Hook in a "Soccer Revolution Night" in New Britain. The Newtown Pride went up against the New York Cosmos in a wonderful night of high caliber soccer. The Rams will be playing against the Newtown Pride May 11 in another benefit game.

The Rams have seven home games scheduled and all start at 7 p.m. beginning with the season-opener on May 17 against Vermont.

Other home games at Veterans' Stadium and opponents are:

- Montreal on May 24
- Westchester May 25,
- Western Mass May 31
- Seacoast June 14
- CFC Azul July 5.

The Rams will also play a home game at 12 noon June 28 at Gillette Stadium against Portland.

The Rams are on the road in Portland June 1, Westchester June 7, Vermont June 21, Western Mass June 27, Montreal July 11, Seacoast July 17 and CFC Azul July 19.

RALLYING AROUND THE FLAG

Because chiropractic's primary goal is to maintain healthy nervous system function, which is governed by the brain, the chiropractic community has concerns about concussion injuries among school-age athletes, in particular. Sharing these concerns, some neurologists and neuroscience researchers have advocated banning tackle football altogether for pre-high school players, while the Pop Warner League instituted a new rule in 2012 limiting (but not eliminating) full-speed contact during practices and banned head-to-head contact. As for parents, worries over concussions have compelled increasing numbers to have their kids play flag football instead of the full helmet-and-pads tackle game. This would seem a good step because flag football teaches the same basic rules and strategies of football as tackle football while sidestepping concussive injury.

Individuals who are at higher risk should be especially attentive about taking preventive measures and wearing full helmet and pads. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we provide safe and gentle chiropractic care for the entire family. We take pride in providing you with an affordable, convenient, and natural health care alternative through chiropractic. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you feel better the natural way - the chiropractic way. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Research is beginning to show that a series of seemingly minor concussive incidents can lead to as much damage as fewer major concussions, especially when they occur in growing brains.

JAY CROSSEN, a Quincy resident and YMCA Member, is helping to raise awareness of the life changing impact the Y is able to make as a result of charitable donations.

YMCA Launches Annual Campaign To Support Community Needs

The South Shore YMCA launched its annual campaign this month to ensure that everyone on the South Shore has access to vital community programs and resources that support youth development, healthy living and social responsibility.

Every day, the South Shore YMCA works to support people and neighborhoods through community programs, services and outreach - such as providing safe and supportive environments for children and teens during out of school time, offering inclusive programming to help individuals with developmental and physical disabilities become more confident, connected and independent, and partnering with local schools to ensure every child has the opportunity to take swim lessons and receive water safety education.

"Throughout the South Shore, countless people know the Y. But there's so much more to our Y than one might think," said Paul Gorman, President & CEO of the South Shore Y. "The Y is more than a gym. It's a cause. As a charity, we're dedicated to nurturing the potential of every child and teen, improving the nation's health and well-being, and giving back and providing support to our neighbors."

This year, the South Shore YMCA hopes to raise $2,294,701 as an association with each local branch working toward an individual fundraising goal. Funds raised will support financial assistance opportunities for programs including child care, summer camp and the Partnership Program, which partners individuals with disabilities or requiring special assistance with a volunteer exercise partner and a structured exercise program using adaptive equipment. More importantly, 100-percent of donations stay in the local community, having a direct impact on residents right in your own neighborhood.

Jay Crossen, a Quincy resident and YMCA Member, has chosen to share his story with fellow members and the community in an effort to help raise awareness of the life changing impact the Y is able to make as a result of charitable donations.

Over the course of five years, Crossen had endured a hip replacement and five major back surgeries. All of these medical procedures left Jay angry, struggling to accomplish basic daily tasks, and with a severe loss of mobility. Through a community organization, Crossen was introduced to the Quincy branch of the South Shore YMCA. He came to the Y not knowing anyone, but was pleasantly surprised when he came across a classmate from high school, Jack Marshall, a personal trainer at the Y. Marshall guided Crossen in a rehabilitation program that has returned Jay to an active, pain-free and happy life.

In Crossen's words "the Y saved my life."

On a recent weekday Jay could be found working out at the Y with a big smile on his face. As he finished his workout he announced to those surrounding him that he was heading home to rake leaves in his backyard, a task unthinkable just several years ago.

Julie Bloomer, Jack Dunford Receive Grossman Award

Archbishop Williams seniors Julie Bloomer and Jack Dunford, both of Quincy, are this year's recipients of the Reuben A. & Lizzie Grossman Award.

The award recognizes high ideals of leadership and service which have been demonstrated through outstanding accomplishments within the community and school. The award also serves to promote and encourage youths to place service above self.

Both Bloomer and Dunford are peer ministers and model students at AWHS. Bloomer said she felt especially honored to receive the meaningful award.

"Community service has had a huge impact on my life. I have been able to realize the many gifts I have been given and use them to help others," said Bloomer. "At Archbishop Williams, service is a priority and is taught as part of the curriculum. Service has enriched my high school career because through the lessons that I have learned in the classroom, especially in theology, along with the morals and values that have been instilled within."

While at AWHS, Bloomer participated at a fundraiser at the TD Garden, volunteered at Bingo with the senior residents at Independence Manor and even traveled to Dunbar, Penn. to participate in a weeklong service trip.

"The service projects I have participated in the past four years at Archie's has allowed me to appreciate the gifts that I have been blessed with," said Bloomer.

Like Bloomer, Dunford said attending AWHS has allowed him to share his passion for helping others.

"Service has played a key role in my development. I have met some of the best people I know through service and found a way to give back to the greater community," said Dunford. "Archbishop Williams has made me into the man I am today. My time here has helped me to grow as a person both inside and outside the classroom.

Bloomer and Dunford recently attended an award luncheon at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy with AWHS Guidance Couselor Jane Kelleher. Both students were awarded with a $750 scholarship for their outstanding service contributions.

"I cannot think of two more deserving recipients than Jack and Julie," Kelleher said. "They give, and give, and give to our school and to the community as a whole," Kelleher said. "We are so proud of all they have done while here at Archbishop Williams and are so excited to see the great things they go on to do in college and beyond."

Koch Budget Adds Police, Teachers; Boosts Library $250K

"The priority for our School Committee is always in the classroom. The ratio of teachers versus pupils – small class size – is our first priority," Koch said. "But we've also been working extremely hard on upgrading our infrastructure, our school buildings, which become the homes for the kids each and every day of the week."

The Thomas Crane Public Library would receive an extra $250,000 under the mayor's proposal, bringing the library's budget to $3.07 million. Most of that extra funding offsets losses in state funding. An extra $20,000 will go towards the purchase of books and other supplies.

"There is about a $250,000 increase in the Crane Library budget. A big part of that is to offset the cuts in the regional library service of our state. We would have seen four or five layoffs had we not made up that difference," Koch said. "I think we've made great strides the last couple years restoring library services to where they are today and we certainly want to maintain that."

The mayor's proposal also incorporates the Traffic and Parking Department budget into the Public Work Department's budget. That means employees such as traffic engineers, parking control officers and others currently employed by the Traffic Department will now be DPW employees. No new positions are being created, except for a new general foreman for motor vehicle repairs as the department will be responsible for maintaining city vehicles. The budget would also allow for the hiring of a legal counsel and a video technician within the Drain Department.

Koch's proposal would allow the city to hire a second full-time assessor. The city had three full-time assessors prior to the recent recession and currently has one full-time assessor and two part-time ones. One of the part-time assessor positions would be eliminated as a result of the budget.

The budget would also authorize the city to hire additional employees such as a translator for health outreach services, a graves registration officer for the Veterans' Service Department, and an electronic document facilitator in the Inspectional Services Department.

The proposal also includes an extra $2.8 million in long term debt payments, a number that would increase from $9.5 million to $12.2 million. That increase is largely due to payments owed for the 2011 Capital Improvement Plan bond. The city's short term debt payment would decrease from $1.2 million in FY14 to $544,000 in FY15.

Unlike the last two budget cycles, Koch did not say how much his proposed budget will increase property taxes next year. The city, he explained, is currently in the midst of revaluating all the property within in the city and won't have that information for several months. The mayor did say he would try to keep the tax increase in line with past increases.

"We're in a reval year. I don't have enough information right now and I certainly don't want to put a number out there as I stand here that would be inaccurate without all the information," Koch said. "It's my goal to have a modest increase as we've been doing each of the last few years. I understand the sensitivity of people with taxes, particularly property taxes."

In FY14 property taxes for the average single-family home increased by $107. The increase in FY13 for the average single-family home was $110 and in FY12 the average increase was $97.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, April 28, 2014, at approximately 8:40 p.m., Detective Sergeant Tapper, Detectives Duran, Keenan, Powers, O'Brien and Coen of the Quincy Police Drug Control Unit (DCU) were conducting surveillance in the Brewer's Corner area of West Quincy due to recent citizen complaints of alleged drug activity. The DCU conducted numerous drug related investigations within this area which have resulted in drug related arrests and seizures.

DCU Detectives were working in a plain clothes capacity while operating unmarked police vehicles. At this time, Detective Powers observed a male get out of the rear seat of a vehicle at the Brewers Corner Liquors store located on Granite Street. Detective Powers recognized this male from previous investigations and knew that there was an outstanding warrant for him. Detective Powers informed the other DCU Detectives of his observations and then contacted Officer Jim Cassidy (operating a police vehicle equipped with emergency blue lights and siren) to assist in stopping the vehicle once the suspect got back in. After the suspect got back in the vehicle, Officer Cassidy pulled in behind the vehicle and activated his blue lights, but the driver continued on for a short distance prior to pulling over on Quarry Street. Detective Powers approached the suspect, still seated in the rear passenger seat and asked him to step from the vehicle.

Once the suspect, a 37 year old Quincy resident, stepped out, he was advised about the outstanding warrants and placed in handcuffs. During the time that the suspect was getting out of the vehicle, Detective Duran approached the front passenger seat and spoke with a female who gave a name later determined to be her sister's identity.

As Detective Coen approached the driver, he noticed that he leaned towards the female passenger. Based on this movement and the failure to pull over immediately, Detective Coen instructed the driver to take the keys out of the ignition. Fearing that the driver may be attempting to reach for a weapon, he was instructed to exit the vehicle. Once outside the vehicle, Detective Coen performed a pat frisk of the driver. Although there was indication of a weapon, Detective Coen immediately felt what he believed to be a "crack pipe" in the driver's chest area underneath his jacket.

For Officer safety purposes, the driver was placed in handcuffs but not under arrest at that time. The Detective then retrieved a blue sock from inside the driver's jacket and located a "crack pipe" inside, containing a white residue believed to be that of crack cocaine. The driver confirmed that he smoked "crack" earlier in the day. Detective Coen informed Detective Duran of his findings and requested he have the female passenger step from the vehicle. Detective Duran advised the female of her Miranda rights to which she stated she understood. She then admitted that she was going to purchase three bags of crack cocaine from the driver. Detective Sergeant Tapper noted that the female had five - twenty dollar bills crumbled up and clenched in her right hand.

Detective Sgt. Tapper and Detective Coen examined the money which appeared to be counterfeit based on color, texture and appearance. The bills had no security thread and two of the bills contained the same serial numbers. Inside the female's purse was another "crack pipe." When asked where she got the counterfeit money, the female did not provide an explanation. She was advised that she was under arrest for "Possession of Counterfeit Notes." She then admitted that she had warrants for her arrest.

The counterfeit money was seized as evidence. The "crack pipes" were seized from both the driver and the female passenger. The driver, a 44 year old Dorchester resident, was advised and sent on his way. The two suspects were transported to the station for booking.

The female initially was uncooperative during the booking process and refused to be booked. After a period of time to calm down, the female was fingerprinted. Upon confirmation from the FBI's Automated Fingerprint Information System, (AFIS) the female's real identity was exposed. The record showed that the female suspect, a 46 year old Boston resident, had numerous alias names and an extensive criminal record, along with three default warrants for "Larceny Over $250 out of Quincy District, Assault and Battery and Larceny From a Person out of West Roxbury District and Shoplifting By Concealing Merchandise, 3rd Offense out of Roxbury District Court. Photographs of the counterfeit bills were taken and forwarded to the U.S. Secret Service to further investigate cases involving counterfeit currency. Nice Work!

INVESTING IN PRECIOUS METALS: The Federal Trade Commission advises the general public to be cautious of solicitors of retail precious metals for investments. According to the FTC, the deceptive practices have included telemarketing operators posing as "brokers" and offering precious metals as purported high-profit, low-risk investments. By failing to disclose key information about the investments' terms and high costs, these brokers deceive consumers into believing that the investments provide a safe and secure vehicle for savings. Sadly, many Americans have lost their life savings to these unscrupulous operations.

LOVE JOY

OBITUARIES

Roy W. Ellison, 94

Funeral services for Roy Wendall Ellison, 94, of Hingham and formerly Weymouth and Quincy were privately held.

Mr. Ellison died peacefully April 26 at home surrounded by his family.

Mr. Ellison was born in Quincy on Dec. 24, 1919, the son of the late Carl A. and Bertha I. (Larson) Ellison. He graduated from North Quincy High School and married Phyllis L. Johns with whom he shared 64 years of marriage before her passing.

Mr. Ellison served a four-year apprenticeship at Fore River Shipyard, a division of Bethlehem Steel, receiving his certificate as a shipwright and joiner. He remained at the shipyard for several years, often inspecting ships during their trials. He worked on the USS Massachusetts.

After leaving the shipyard, he began a 30 plus year career at Boston University, eventually becoming head of the building and grounds department.

Mr. Ellison enjoyed playing baseball for the Fore River Apprentice and Park Leagues where he was known for being an excellent pitcher. In addition, he played basketball for the Church League, later coaching many basketball teams within his church.

The Quincy Community United Methodist Church was a special place for him. He not only was a member of the church for many years, but also served in many capacities. He was a lifetime member of Wollaston Masonic Lodge A.F. & A. M. Mr. Ellison enjoyed carpentry, woodworking and woodcarving, often making pieces of furniture for loved ones as well as items that were sold at the church and Linden Ponds fairs.

Loving father of Judy Ellison Morris and her husband Bruce of CT and RADM David Roy Ellison, USN (Ret.) and his wife Leslie of MD. Cherished grandfather of Wendy Wendel, Deborah Roe, Katherine Donnald, Karen Morris, Christian Ellison, Lt. Col. Kyle Ellison, USMC, and Kari Romero. Also survived by 15 great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were made by Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Hospice of South Shore, 30 Reservoir Park Dr., Rockland, MA 02370 or the Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, MA 02170.

Marjorie G. Bollen, 83

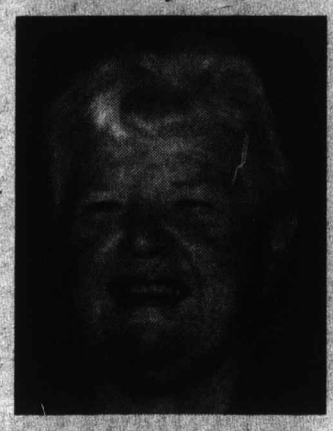
A memorial brunch and celebration of life for Marjorie Grace Bollen, 83, of Braintree, a retired North Quincy High School science teacher of 32 years, will be held May 18 from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Granite Links Golf Club, Quincy.

Ms. Bollen died peacefully April 25 at Alliance HealthCare Center at Braintree.

She was born Aug. 29, 1930 in Quincy. She spent her time sharing her passion for teaching, gardening, traveling the world and spending time with friends, family, and her pets. Her travel destinations included Italy, Greece, France, Thailand, Japan, and Peru, among others.

A Braintree resident, she also maintained a vacation home in Wilmot Flat, N.H., where she spent much of her free time and enjoyed hosting family and friends. A 1957 graduate of Bridgewater State Teachers College, she completed additional coursework at Tufts University and Columbia University. After retiring she volunteered at a Braintree public elementary school near her home.

Ms. Bollen will be remembered for her generosity and many devoted friends and students. Marjorie was a supporter of the Harvard



MARJORIE G. BOLLEN

Brain Tissue Resource Center and the University of Massachusetts Medical School.

She is survived by her younger brother Clifford S. Bollen, her foster sister Betty Michard, 13 nieces and nephews and several great-nieces and great-nephews. She was predeceased by three older brothers, James W. Bollen, Donald C. Bollen and Robert J. Bollen and by her parents, John James Bollen and Grace Elizabeth (McCharles) Bollen.

Reservations to the memorial service can be made at mbollenbrunch@yahoo.com.

Funeral arrangements were made by Peck Funeral Home, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research, Grand Central Station, PO Box 4777, New York, NY 10163-4777.

Jordan E. Picot, 82

A funeral Mass for Jordan E. "Tinker" Picot, 82, of Quincy was celebrated May 3 in Holy Trinity Parish at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, Quincy.

Mr. Picot died peacefully April 28 at home surrounded by his loving family.

He was born and raised in Dorchester and lived in the Adams Shore neighborhood of Quincy for more than 50 years. A highly decorated New England Amateur boxer, Tinker was a former Golden Glove Champion, New England Champion, and NEAAU Champion. His record was 246-5 with 160 knockouts. In 1957 he qualified and was licensed as a boxing professional with the state of Massachusetts.

Mr. Picot was the founder and sponsor of Picot's Comedy Boxing Team, a traveling boxing comedy show with the purpose of generating funds for youth charities. He was a boxing coach to many and a professional referee. In his later years, he was inducted into the "Ring Four" hall of fame.

He was a 55-year active member of the Local 7 Iron Workers Association and worked for the MBTA a majority of these years. He represented the Local 7 union in various leadership positions such as vice president and chief shop steward. Dedicated to youth and community organizations, Mr. Picot served as president of the Hunting Elementary PTA and president of the Adams Shore Community Association.

He will be remembered by his family and friends for his unconditional love, big heart, and the natural ability to make everyone laugh and feel good. He knew everyone and everyone knew him; he was truly a living legend.

Beloved husband of 63 years of Gladys (Mulligan). Loving father of Deborah Picot of Quincy, Denise Picot of Weymouth, and Donna Picot of Quincy. Devoted grandfather of Glenn Picot and Donna Concannon and the brother of Wilfred Picot and the late Leonard Picot. He is also survived by his sisters-in-law Pat Mulligan, Mary Picot, and Margery Picot as well as nieces, nephews, and many friends.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Jimmy Fund at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, PO box 849168, Boston, MA 02284-9168.

George Frost

A funeral Mass for George Frost of Quincy was celebrated May 3 at St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Frost died April 29.

He was the self-employed business owner of All State Seating for over 50 years. During this time, he grew to know and love many clients. Mr. Frost's favorite hobby was gambling, especially at Foxwoods, playing his game of choice: three card poker.

His main passion during his life was spending time with his family and friends. He will be sadly missed by all those whose lives he touched with his gentle and loving heart.

Mr. Frost was the youngest and last survivor of eight children. He is reunited with his siblings and his loving dog, the late Romeo.

Beloved uncle of Robert Hession and his wife Lynne of Middleborough, David Hession and his wife Jennifer of Abington, and Katie Adelstein and her husband James of RI. He was also a caring, loving great-uncle to Kayla, Conner, Brody, Matthew, Myles, Max and Michael. As a friend, he was devoted to many, especially Michael and Patricia Baldwin of Weymouth and John and Kathy O'Leary of Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment was at St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Memorial donations may be made to the Home for Little Wanderers, 271 Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02115.

William F. Ryan, 75

Committal services and interment with military honors for William Francis "Billy" Ryan, 75, of Quincy and formerly Dorchester will be held today (Thursday) at 11:30 a.m. in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Mr. Ryan died April 28 after a courageous battle with cancer.

He was proud of his years serving our country and enjoyed doing construction work while in the Army. He enjoyed watching wrestling matches and horseracing and most other sports. There were many Thanksgiving dinners at his apartment in Dorchester and cookouts after a Dorchester Day parade where all were welcome.

"I would argue cities and towns generally provide a more robust menu of services for seniors than they do for veterans," Colton noted. "Most of the veterans' programs are provided by other levels of government and the director of veterans' service kind of marshals those services – he's not directly responsible for most of it."

In response, Gutro reiterated that he would like to see those positions paid the same.

"I'd like those two comparable," he said. "We have an equally impressive veterans population in the city of Quincy as we do seniors."

Council President Joseph Finn argued that the city auditor should've been paid more than the panel's recommendation of $80,500, the same salary as the assistant library director and first assistant city solicitor. The commission, Finn explained, undervalued the position and how important the auditor is to the council.

Be it ordained that $ 1,757,000.00 (One Million, seven hundred and fifty seven thousand dollars) be appropriated for the purpose of financing the engineering and construction of sewer system improvements to remove Infiltration and Inflow (I/I) from the City's sanitary sewer system. This amount will be financed though the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority's (MWRA) I/I reduction program, and the Treasurer-Collector, with the approval of the Mayor, is authorized to borrow all or a portion of the 1,757,000.00 from the MWRA to fund this appropriation. The Treasurer-Collector is hereby authorized to enter into a loan agreement and/or security agreement with the MWRA relative to such loan, and the Commissioner of Public Works, with the approval of the Mayor, is authorized to contract for and expend any Federal, State or other aid available for the project, including any grant related to such program from the MWRA, and to take any other action necessary to carry out this project.

Pending in Finance Committee of the Quincy City Council to be passed at a later date.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
PURCHASING DEPARTMENT
1305 HANCOCK ST., QUINCY, MA 02169

Invites sealed bids/proposals for furnishing and delivering to the City of Quincy:

LAW DEPARTMENT SALE OF CENTRAL MIDDLE SCHOOL MAY 29, 2014 @ 11:00 A.M.

In accordance with M.G.L. Chapter 30B, The City of Quincy is offering for sale, through the Request for Proposal ("RFP") process, and in accordance with the provisions of Council Order No 2014-049. Proposals will be received at the office of the Purchasing Department; City Hall; 1305 Hancock Street; Quincy, MA 02169, until Thursday, May 29, 2014 at 11:00 a.m. This bid is available on the City of Quincy's website: www.quincyma.gov

The City is requesting proposals from interested parties, with statements of qualifications, to purchase and develop the Property in accordance with design standards and restrictions specified herein. It is the objective of the City that the Property be developed for residential occupancy which is at a scale appropriate to the site, consistent with neighborhood characteristics and in compliance with existing zoning and other restriction s, as may be amended or accepted, all as set forth in this RFP. The City recognizes the need to create the highest and best use for its assets and will entertain development proposals to that end.

The Property is designated as Map 1124, Block 5 on the City Assessors' maps, comprised of and comprises 1.96 acres of land, more or less. The Property currently is improved by a three story, 59,490 square foot, masonry building and the original section of which was constructed in 1890. The Property was designed and occupied as a high school, then a middle school, but was deemed obsolete for educational purposes and has been vacant since October, 2013.

Non-Price Bid/Proposals must be in a sealed envelope and price proposals must be in a separate sealed envelope. The outside of the sealed envelopes are to be clearly marked "RFP - NON PRICE PROPOSAL ENCLOSED" with time/date of RFP and "RFP - PRICE PROPOSAL ENCLOSED" with time/date of RFP.

Bids/Proposals will be received at the Purchasing Office until the time and date stated above, at which time and date they will be opened and registered. Late Bids/Proposals, delivered by mail or in person, will be rejected.

Detailed specifications are available on-line at the City of Quincy's website: and also available at the office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, 02169, between the hours of 8:30 AM and 4:30 PM

The City of Quincy reserves the right to withdraw the Request for Proposal; to reject any and all proposals; and to accept any proposal deemed to be in the best interest of the City of Quincy.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court
Norfolk Probate and Family Court
35 Shawmut Road
Canton, MA 02021
Docket No. NO14P0867GD
In the matter of:
Velma McLeod
Of: Quincy, MA
RESPONDENT
Alleged Incapacitated Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by John Adams Health Care Center of Quincy, MA in the above captioned matter alleging that Velma McLeod is in need of a Guardian and requesting that Andrew McLeod of Avon, MA (or some other suitable person) be appointed as Guardian to serve Without Surety on the bond.

The petition asks the court to determine that the Respondent is incapacitated, that the appointment of a Guardian is necessary, and that the proposed Guardian is appropriate. The petition is on file with this court and may contain a request for certain specific authority.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 05/14/2014. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. K.M.D. 5/8

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Untangling personal problems might take more time than the impatient Lamb expected. But it's important to hang in there until all those knotty situations are straightened out.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You still need to work out last-minute snags in your dealings with a rival. Hold your ground despite a perceived lack of support. Things should turn around before you know it.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Best not to delay preparing for that upcoming family event. The sooner you get things started, the better chance you have of finding potential problems and making needed changes.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The romantic Moon Child might be reluctant to see the reality behind that "ideal" situation. But by midweek, the practical Crab emerges to help clear away the moonbeams.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Although the Big Cat might be receptive to more "purrsuasion" to get you to agree to a workplace change, make sure you can distinguish the fine line between facts and flattery.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your positive attitude in the workplace helps to get you noticed by the right people. Now go ahead and use some of that new self-confidence to help shore up a personal relationship.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you might still have to work out some problems with a business partner, things go more smoothly on the home front. An investment opportunity might need more study.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Don't be reluctant to act on your suspicion. Even if others see nothing wrong, the astute Scorpio could sense an underlying problem that isn't always obvious on the surface.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A new opportunity presents some obstacles that need to be dealt with as soon as possible. Delaying action in hopes that the problems will go away could be counterproductive.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A friend or family member's request might carry some hidden factors that could later create problems. Be sure you know all the facts before you make your decision.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A setback in implementing a plan could turn out to be a blessing in disguise. Use the downtime to rework your original concepts and see where changes could be made.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might not be consciously fishing for compliments, but admit it -- won't you feel great when your efforts are noticed? So accept the praise gracefully. You earned it.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of beauty in your personal life extends to your efforts to protect and preserve the natural world around you.

ABOUT 20 VOLUNTEERS helped beautify and decorate Flags for Veterans Island at School and Pleasant Streets in Quincy Saturday during the city's Cleaner, Greener Cleanup. Volunteers included members of the Morrisette American Legion Post and Sons of the American Legion Post 294 and students at North Quincy High School who are active in the Junior ROTC program. The group planted flowers and decorated the island with 300 American flags representing veterans who have served, are still serving or those who gave the supreme sacrifice. The SAL will hold its annual Memorial Day ceremony at the island on Sunday, May 25 at 1 p.m. The public is invited to attend. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Reduced Flood Insurance Rates Still Available

1,400 New Properties In Flood Plain; 2,700 Properties In Higher Risk Zones

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents being placed into a flood plain on June 9 who have yet to purchase flood insurance still have a chance to lock in reduced rates.

About 1,400 properties are being added to a flood plain on June 9 when FEMA's new flood maps come into effect. Another 2,700 properties currently in flood plains will be re-mapped into higher risk zones as well.

FEMA had offered a preferred risk policy, which includes reduced premiums, to residents being mapped into the flood plain on June 9. That option, however, may no longer be available because there is a 30-day waiting period before the preferred risk policy comes into effect.

At meeting on flood insurance and FEMA's new flood maps cohosted by Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, Ed Flavin of realty and insurance firm Flavin & Flavin, explained that FEMA has begun offering a preferred risk extension policy.

The preferred risk extension policy is available to anyone mapped into a flood plain since 2008. The preferred risk extension policy's premiums cost more than those paid under the regular proposed risk policy. A policy for the minimum amount of coverage, $20,000, would have annual premiums of $176 under the preferred risk policy compared to $207 for the preferred risk extension policy. For the maximum amount of coverage, $250,000, preferred risk policyholders would pay $460 in premiums annually, compared to $542 for those with the extended policy.

Preferred risk extension policy holders would see their premiums increase 20 percent annually, compared to 15-18 percent for the reg-

11 Budgets OK'd By 8-1 Vote

McNamee Dissents Over Proposed Salary Increases

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council gave preliminary approval to raises for 11 department heads Monday night as part of its review of Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

The council's finance committee, a committee of the whole, met Monday night to review 16 departmental budgets. Among those were 11 departments whose directors Koch proposed giving raises to, following recommendations made by a special panel he formed last summer.

Each of those 11 budgets was approved in an 8-1 vote, with Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee dissenting. At the start of Monday's meeting, McNamee told his colleagues he planned to vote against every department whose budget included recommendations made by the salary commission. He said the mayor should have proposed only some of the raises and not included them all at once, and should have used an independent firm to review salaries.

"Someone decided not to do it piecemeal. They decided to do it wholesale and that's what I'm objecting to," McNamee explained. "They could've used an independent firm that was recognized for salary surveys and compensation studies. They didn't. They chose to use a committee of some very friendly and familiar faces.

"That doesn't help when you're trying to do something as comprehensive and something the taxpayer wants to embrace with trust. That's just not the way you go about it."

As he did two weeks prior during a review of the salary commission's work, McNamee again noted that private sectors have been struggling as a result of the recession that started in 2008. He also cited Quincy's plans to build

'Shred Days' For Records Disposal

By SCOTT JACKSON

After two incidents involving the disposal of old records in recent months, city departments will now be asked to dispose of all documents during 'shred days.'

During a recent meeting of the City Council's municipal technology committee, City Clerk Joseph Shea said he would instruct the city's department heads to hold off on disposing of records until selected citywide shred days.

The city has held such days in the past, including one in June 2013. Shea said Monday the next one would take place in either late June or early July as the city's Planning and IT Departments prepare to move into the newly renovated Coddington Hall. Other city departments will also be taking part in that shred day.

"People are now reading up on the rules and regulations," Shea said. "They're addressing what

Hydrant Testing, Maintenance Starts May 20

The Quincy Fire Department will conduct citywide testing and maintenance of fire hydrants beginning Tuesday, May 20.

If a discoloration of water is noticed during testing, residents are advised to flush water for a few minutes. Rust color is not unsafe and will abate after a short time of water running.

The testing is necessary to ensure that hydrants have appropriate pressure during emergencies.

Quincy-Built USS Salem Bound For East Boston

By SCOTT JACKSON

After being berthed in the Fore River Shipyard for 20 years, the USS Salem could be leaving for East Boston within the next 12 months.

The Salem had operated as a museum ship since 1995 after it was brought back to Quincy the year before. The Salem shutdown last September, after the MBTA closed the pier it was docked at, citing the high cost it would take to fix the pier.

Last week, it was reported that the Salem would be moving to the Boston Harbor Shipyard & Marina within six months to a year. That marina is currently the home of the Nantucket Lightship.

On Monday, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said she was hopeful a deal could be struck to keep the Salem in Quincy. Laforest, now the director of tourism and marketing for the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, was instrumental in bringing the Salem back to the Fore River Shipyard and later volunteered on the ship, assisting with fundraisers and other special events.

"I hope there is an opportunity to keep the USS Salem here in Quincy. In the past it was said Quincy's pride was Quincy's shipbuilding. Our reputation was known world wide for our contributions – particularly in World War II – and the ships we produced at the Quincy yard, the Fore River Shipyard, and their contributions in winning the war," Laforest said.

"I would truly hope she can remain in Quincy. Not only is the Salem and her collection a part of our community's history, but also the archives are aboard her for so many other ships of the yard. I truly believe she belongs in Quincy."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, whose district includes the shipyard and surrounded neighborhoods, said it would be a sad day for the city if the Salem does depart.

"The USS Salem making the decision to go to East Boston will be a tremendous loss to the city of Quincy. It's emblematic of the economic powerhouse and all the lives that were affected positively through the shipbuilding years. It's the place where I held my

GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

THE GEMSTONE THAT CHANGES COLOR
Alexandrite, the June birthstone, is a most unusual variety of the chrysoberyl mineral that can change its color. In daylight, Alexandrite is green or bluish-green. When observed under incandescent light at night, this remarkable gemstone changes to raspberry red or purplish-red. From a historical standpoint, this variety of chrysoberyl was discovered in Russia (where the national colors happened to be red and green) in 1831 on the birthday in which Tsar Alexander II legally became an adult, hence the name. However, you have to be neither Russian nor of royal heritage to enjoy this very rare and very valuable gemstone. It is the perfect choice for the woman who favors jewelry with unique attributes.
There is mysterious magic and lore credited to the Alexandrite and is considered to be a stone that has a good omen and believed to aid creativity and inspire the imagination. Because it is scarce, especially in larger sizes, alexandrite is a relatively expensive member of the chrysoberyl family. It is the June birthstone along with the cultured pearl and moonstone. USS Salem Loss Leaves A Void

The USS Salem's days here are apparently numbered with news the Quincy-built heavy cruiser will depart for another berth in East Boston.

It will mark the end of an era and be a sad day for those who are proud of the city's shipbuilding heritage.

For twenty years, Salem – once the Flagship of the Sixth Fleet that served during the Cold War in the 1950s – has been the centerpiece of the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the former Fore River Shipyard. She represented so many Quincy ships that helped win World War II nearly 70 years ago.

But the fate of the USS Salem could have easily ended two decades ago, too.

After the 716-foot ship was decommissioned in 1959, she was mothballed and remained berthed at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard for 35 years. It may have been only a matter of time before the ship – like other vessels before her – was scrapped or sold to a foreign navy.

But a group of dedicated volunteers – spearheaded by then Mayor James Sheets – coordinated her triumphant return to Quincy in the fall of 1994.

And what a return it was.

After being tugged from Philly to the Black Falcon Terminal in South Boston, 600 passengers boarded the ship for Quincy on a Sunday afternoon, Oct. 30, 1994. Another 50,000 spectators dotted the shoreline from Boston to Quincy to the place of her birth – the Fore River Shipyard – where she would later become the centerpiece of the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

The three-and-a-half-hour trip to Quincy was capped off by a picture-perfect scene of well-wishers waving from atop and below the Fore River Bridge. A fireboat sprayed towering streams of water beneath a bright orange sunshine.

Among those on board were local officials and invited guests, as well as former Salem crew members, including the ship's last commanding officer, Ret. Admiral Alan B. Roby. The 87-year-old Roby renewed old friendships with former crew mates and chatted with guests as he toured his former command under escort.

Crew members like Bob Ahearn of Milton reminisced about their days aboard ship. He fondly recalled the ship's tour in the Caribbean, including a stop in Haiti, and later in the Mediterranean.

"As the flagship of the Sixth Fleet, this was just a beautiful ship, well-maintained. It was the pride of the fleet," he said from the ship's deck.

For some, the Salem's arrival was a bittersweet day that October Sunday 20 years ago. A group of volunteers had lobbied hard for another Quincy-built ship – the highly-decorated aircraft carrier USS Lexington – to return home. But after the U.S. Navy awarded the "Blue Ghost" to Corpus Christi, Texas, in 1991, the Salem became the focus for a shipbuilding museum in Quincy.

The Corpus Christi decision didn't sit well with some former USS Lexington crew mates with Bay State roots.

Charles Ryberg of Plymouth, who was aboard the USS Salem that day in October, 1994, told this reporter:

"The Lexington belongs in Corpus Christi as much as the Alamo belongs on Cape Cod."

When the Salem finally reached Fore River, it was mission accomplished.

Among those who were there to greet her: Sen. Ted Kennedy who used a bullhorn to welcome passengers before they disembarked on a gangplank that was positioned as night began to fall.

The following spring, in May of 1995, the USS Salem was re-commissioned as the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum. Approximately 1,200 people, including Quincy native Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army Chief of Staff, attended the outdoor ceremony on a beautiful spring day.

"This ship is indeed a living monument to the men and women who have gone off to war, from the City of Quincy," Gen. Sullivan said. "If you look around in this crowd, look in the faces of the people who are here, you will see the strength of America.

"This is a great country. The reason it's great is because of what you see on this tarmac and this great shipyard. And I, like you, have relatives who worked here. I have memories of this shipyard just like you do. We all do.

USS SALEM, berthed at the former Fore River Shipyard since 1994, will be reportedly moving to East Boston. The departure of the heavy cruiser – the centerpiece of the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum – will leave a void in the city's proud shipbuilding past. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

"It represents the strength of America."

Now, 20 years later, the USS Salem is apparently heading a few miles north to East Boston.

One the on hand, it's positive news that the ship will be preserved.

But on the other, there's some disappointment because the cruiser – ordered during World War II but launched in 1947 after the war was over – will no longer be berthed where she was built.

Her departure will leave a void in the city's shipbuilding heritage.

Quincy deserves a shipbuilding museum or at the very least a proper memorial to honor the thousands of men and women who built hundreds of ships at breakneck speed to help win a World War and preserve our freedom.

Between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day (Aug. 14, 1945), the Fore River Shipyard launched 92 ships. Three of them – including the light cruiser Pasadena – were delivered in one day (June 4, 1944).

Even after the war, the shipyard turned out a myriad of vessels, including passenger and cargo ships, nuclear subs and three Apollo tracking ships – Vanguard, Redstone and Mercury.

General Dynamics ceased shipbuilding operations in the mid-1980s and closed the yard in 1986.

Quincy has monuments to presidents, wars and veterans.

But when the Salem goes, there will be no suitable reminder of that glorious shipbuilding past.

Perhaps some civic group or private-public partnership can join forces and raise money for a proper memorial. One idea is a granite marker listing every World War II ship ever produced at the shipyard.

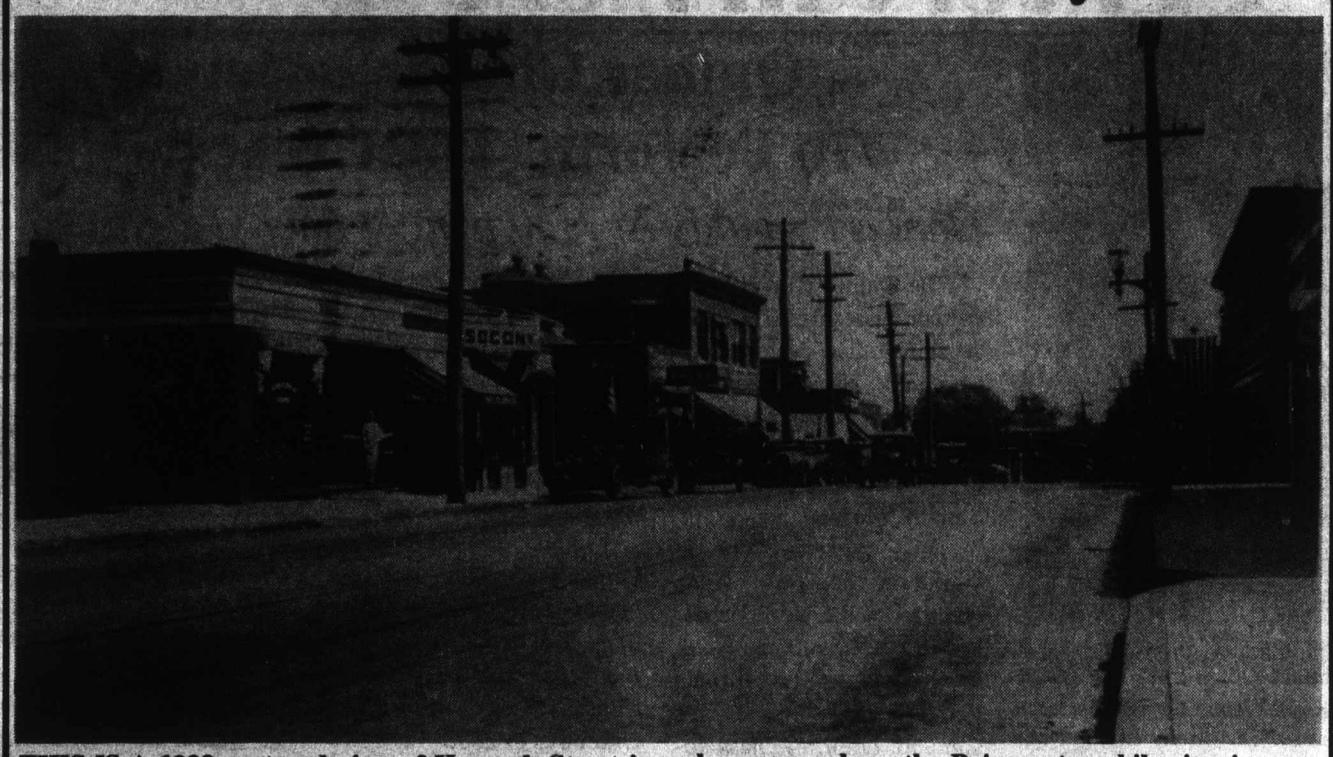
Or could the new Fore River Bridge be renamed something like "Shipbuilders Bridge" in honor of the cast of thousands who turned out ship after ship in one of the nation's greatest hours.

There was a will and a way to return a heavy cruiser to Quincy 20 years ago.

Two decades later, this should be a will – and a way – to create a permanent and fitting reminder of the city's shipbuilding legacy.

Don't give up our shipbuilding history.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1933 postcard view of Hancock Street in Norfolk Downs looking south from in front of today's North Quincy branch library. The cafe´ on the left is now a parking lot but beyond its doorway the rest of these buildings are pretty much unchanged. Today, Russell Chin's Law Firm is in the store just beyond the open awning. Shortly after this picture was taken, Cornelius Keohane opened his first funeral parlor in the next store, now the Salon 2000. Keohane's Funeral Service has moved from here but it is the only business in the Downs at the time of this picture that is still in business in Quincy today. The Fratus family built all of these buildings and later sold Pontiacs from the same showroom where the Paige automobile sign is seen here. The two-story building at the corner was home to MacKay's newspaper and stationery store that later was for many years the Naborhood Drug store and is now the YoCha frozen yogurt shop. The U.S. flag flying over the sidewalk on the right was outside the Plaza Cafe´. At the time of this picture, on the corner across Billings Road on the right, the building there was the home of Howard Johnson's candy factory; later it became the Granite Trust Company and now it is the Pho Hoa Restaurant. Senate Adopts Substance Abuse Prevention, Treatment Reforms

The state Senate this week passed a bill to expand access to substance abuse treatment services, and to take new steps towards addressing an ongoing prescription and opiate abuse epidemic.

The bill, introduced by Senate President Therese Murray, Quincy Sen. John Keenan, and Fitchburg Sen. Jennifer Flanagan, takes a multipronged approach with proposals that address prevention, detoxification, crisis stabilization, and long term treatment around substance addiction.

Keenan said the omnibus bill incorporates the work and recommendations of several legislators, and includes three of his own initiatives. It proposes targeted reforms against diversion and addiction, while also requiring regulatory agencies to protect chronic pain patients who have a compelling and legitimate need for pain relieving drugs.

The bill would require increased reporting, both to the Public Health Department and to the Federal MedWatch system, of overdose deaths in Massachusetts. It would require better use of data from the Prescription Drug Monitoring Program, to develop stronger addiction prevention measures.

Another provision establishes standards for abuse-deterrent opiate drugs in Massachusetts. A revamped drug formulary commission would identify drugs that are available in safer forms, then require that pharmacists dispense those safer forms of the drug when filling prescriptions. Keenan noted during debate that final discretion on what drug to dispense remains with the prescribing physician, but the new formulary would give guidance to pharmacists on appropriate substitutions.

Drugs that are identified as high-risk, and that have no abuse-deterrent substitute, would be subject to new public health safeguards and limitations. The bill follows the market release of Zohydro, a powerful new opiate that was given final approval by the FDA last year despite an 11-2 vote in the negative by the federal agency's panel of medical experts.

A third provision highlighted by the Quincy senator would allow the public health commissioner to issue emergency prohibitions against the retail sale of synthetic drugs. Designer drugs, such as "bath salts" or synthetic marijuana products, evade regulation because their chemical structures are frequently changed to exploit legal loopholes in drug classification.

Keenan said the emergency authority would allow a more rapid response to a threat that is proving to be among today's most complicated substance abuse challenges.

The bill also takes major steps towards expanding access to addiction and recovery services, by removing barriers to insurance coverage, requiring that all commercial insurers pay for at least a 21 day course of treatment, and establishing a task force to develop a new standard in addiction treatment that will shape future licensure and insurance coverage practices.

"This bill is another major step by the Legislature to prevent and treat addiction," Keenan said after the bill was passed. "We know, however, that this epidemic is constantly evolving, that addiction poses a very complicated challenge, and that our work in this area is not complete."

The bill, which passed unanimously in the Senate, now goes to the House of Representatives for further consideration.

Stop Salary Hikes, Hire Conservation Commissioner

(A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quncy Sun for publication.)

Dear Councillor Hughes,

I want to congratulate Councillor McNamee for already saying he will not vote for the proposed gigantic pay raises.

I urge you and all the City Councillors not to approve more than a 5% raise with a cap of no more then $5,000 for all the top earners. That is almost $100 a week for someone earning $100,000.

With respect to approving new positions the mayor says we need, I urge you not to approve these new positions until and unless, he and his advisors see the need for a renewed position for Conservation Commissioner. That position is now filled by our Building Inspector who is trying to do the job of two people. The position was cut a number of years ago to "save money." That position is urgently needed in Quincy. The proposed raise for the mayor alone would have more then fund the salary of a Conservation person.

With a tax increase and then the revaluation of all our homes which could add even more to our tax bills, the pay raises as proposed cannot be approved. The taxpayers will be considering each of your votes in upcoming elections to determine if you all are truly representing your constituents.

Push To Keep Sand Trucks Off NQ Streets

By SCOTT JACKSON

Efforts were underway to prohibit heavy MDC sand trucks from North Quincy streets after a near tragic incident in which one flipped over at the intersection of East Squantum Street and Newbury Avenue.

"If the accident had happened two hours earlier North Quincy and Atlantic Junior High students would have been congregating at that very corner," Ward 6 Councillor J. Vincent Smyth said. "We could have had a real tragedy."

Both Smyth and Mayor James R. McIntyre fired off demands to MDC Commissioner John Sears to have the trucks use Quincy Shore Drive instead. The fleet of trucks was hauling an estimated 50,000 tons of sand to Wollaston Beach to improve the area following winter erosion.

An empty 10-ton truck's dump body accidently elevated around 4:45 p.m. on a Monday afternoon, cutting overhead wires and overturning. An estimated 600 area residents lost telephone service as a result and 400 were left without power. A utility pole was snapped in half and one section tossed 40 feet.

Power was restored within three hours but telephone service remained down overnight.

One person – a 59-year-old East Squantum Street resident – was treated for leg bruises at Quincy City Hospital when she was struck by one of the slashed wires. The truck driver escaped unharmed.

Smyth condemned the use of Quincy's streets by the trucks assigned to the project when roads maintained by the MDC – such as Quincy Shore Drive – were available.

"The most disturbing element of this was the fact that these trucks were engaged to deliver sand for Wollaston Beach, which is under the jurisdiction of the MDC," he said. "I think it is very unfair for the MDC to prohibit the use of their boulevard at any time by the trucks engaged in an MDC project."

NEW TEACHER SALARIES SEEN

The School Committee was expected to approve new salaries that would pay Quincy's 900 public school teachers a minimum salary of $7,125 and a maximum salary of $14,108 annually.

The minimum had been $6,600 and the maximum was $13,068.

The new pay schedule – an index system based on experience and education levels – would represent a 7.8 percent increase. Under the new system, teachers with a bachelor's degree would start at $7,125 per year. Those with master's degrees and 10 years teaching experience would receive the maximum rate.

Officials predicted the increase would add approximately $1.50 to 1970's property tax rate.

The new schedule came after nearly six months of negotiations between the Quincy Education Association and the School Committee. The new figures were reached with the aid of William Fallon, former chairman state Board of Mediation and Conciliation.

The School Committee was also expected to approve raises for other school personnel, such as clerks, carpenters, nurses, and maintenance staff.

Totally Arts Beechwood, Fugi Group Form Partnership

J.P. Fuji Group and Totally Arts at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School have formed a new partnership.

Jimmy Liang, president and co-founder of J.P. Fuji Group, presented the group with a check for $3,000 at the school's recent P.T.O. meeting.

Totally Arts is a group unique to the Beechwood Knoll School. Its mission is simple: All children should take part in the arts as active participants and as audience members at no cost to their families.

Second grade teacher Tom Natola launched Totally Art six years ago and Co-chairs the Board of Directors with Marla Yanovitch.

"Totally Arts fosters individuality, creativity and personal initiative which are essential building blocks to a child's learning," Natola said.

Participating instructors include internationally-known artists, as well as local artists from in and around Quincy. The students are able to engage in a variety of experiences including playing in a chamber orchestra, learning Irish step dancing, origami, digital photography, "My Own Art Studio," acting in plays, needlepoint, recorder ensemble, A Cappella and Gaelic Singers, Harvest Moon Dancers, bell chorus and much more.

Jimmy Liang said, "J.P. Fuji Group is incredibly pleased to be joining in the mission of Totally Arts. I attended Quincy Public Schools and look forward to continuing to support our city in whatever way I can."

"We are extraordinarily grateful to J.P. Fuji Group for believing in our mission and supporting our students' involvement to the arts," Marla Yanovitch said.

Mayor Thomas Koch also attended the PTO meeting as the guest speaker to answer questions from parents, teachers and people in the community. He shared the progress being made in upgrading the school and city buildings along with improvements to the parks and playgrounds throughout Quincy.

Quincy Choral Society To Perform 'The Creation'

Concert Sunday At 7:30 p.m. At Sacred Heart

The Quincy Choral Society concludes its 2013-2014 season with a performance of Franz Joseph Haydn's glorious oratorio The Creation, under the direction of Maestro John Nichols on Sunday, May 18.

This musical work is based on the story of the creation of the world as described in the biblical Book of Genesis and in Milton's Paradise Lost. Written for soprano, tenor and bass soloists, chorus, and orchestra, The Creation is the second most popular oratorio after Handel's Messiah.

The concert will be performed in English and will be held at Sacred Heart Church, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy, at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $18 and will be available at the door.

Making his Quincy Choral Society debut, the bass soloist is Paul Max Tipton. Tipton's career has spanned opera, oratorio and chamber and he has performed and recorded throughout North America. A short list of his collaborations includes New Trinity Baroque in Atlanta, Ensemble Florilege and Emmanuel Music in Boston, the Yale Collegium Players in New Haven, Connecticut, and Tenet in New York.

Tipton soloed under Leonard Slatkin on the Naxos recording of William Bolcom's Songs of Innocence and Experience, a project that won three Grammys in 2006.

The soprano soloist for this performance is Judy Stafford. A singer with international acclaim, Stafford currently performs in the Greater Boston area, having earned a Master in Music degree from New England Conservatory. Her operatic roles have included Musetta in La Bohème, Micaela in Carmen, Lisinga in Le Cinesi, and Kupava in the American premiere of Rimsky-Korsakov's The Snow Maiden with the Lowell Opera House.

Stafford recently soloed with the Quincy Choral Society in its December performance of A Ceremony of Carols. She is currently a member of the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, the official choir of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops.

Making his second appearance with the Quincy Choral Society as the tenor soloist is Gregory Zavracky. He recently performed in The Barber of Seville with both the Boston Lyric Opera and Townsend Opera, Gianni Schicchi with the Lake George Opera, and Così Fan Tutte and The Merry Widow with the Cape Cod Opera.

Zavracky's concert experience includes opera and pops concerts with both the Chautauqua and Utah Symphonies, the Back Bay Chorale, and Chorus Pro Musica. His first appearance with the Quincy Choral Society was as the tenor soloist in Mozart's Mass in C minor in May 2011.

QSO Concert Sunday At QHS

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra (QSO), under the direction of Music Director Yoichi Udagawa, ends its 60th season with a concert on Sunday, May 18 at 2:30 p.m. in the Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center at Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St., Quincy.

The concert will feature a fun program of "lighter" classical music. The title of the program is "Heroes and Super Heroes."

Tickets for the performance are $25 and will be available at the door or pick them up at Quincy Access Television, 88 Washington St., Quincy (next door to the Crane Public Library.)

Free parking is available on site at QHS. The concert hall is also walking distance from the Quincy Center MBTA station.

Founded in 1955, the QSO consists of more than 50 volunteer musicians, including both amateurs and professionals from the Boston Metro-South region. The QSO offers three free concerts every season, in addition to an annual "Pops" fundraiser and holiday concert in partnership with the Quincy Public Schools.

Wollaston Garden Club Plant Sale Saturday

Members of the Wollaston Garden Club have been busy these past few weeks dividing and potting perennials and shrubs for their annual Spring Plant Sale of hardy locally-grown plants on Saturday, May 17 (rain or shine) from 10 a.m. to noon at Wollaston Congregational Church at the corner of Lincoln and Winthrop Avenues.

Jan Clifford, Mary Cassidy, Colleen Lawler, and Marie Zinkus are chairpeople of this year's plant sale.

Besides a wide array of perennials, also available at the sale will be: annuals, house plants, herbs, tomato plants and other vegetables, and a selection of gardening gift items.

The palm-flex style gardening gloves used by many of the garden club members will be also sold.

Principals from each of Quincy's secondary schools have received vouchers and information regarding the garden club's 'plant-give-away' at the end of the sale, designed to improve their school yard gardens.

Three WGC Master Gardeners will be on site to answer questions and provide planting advice. Plants will be organized according to light requirements: sun to shade.

WGC President, Jan Clifford reminds shoppers "to arrive on time for the best selection." Locals know well the benefits of buying hardy garden club perennials for really successful gardening.

Proceeds from the plant sale benefit the many educational, civic beautification and conservation projects of the garden club.

Wollaston Garden Club is a member of the National Garden Clubs, Inc. and the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

Dependable Cleaners Read To Ride Program

Dependable Cleaners' annual Read to Ride program is underway.

The program is designed to encourage students to keep up with their reading during the summer months. Students from ages 6-15 will have the chance to win a bike or another prize for every book they read. Since the program's inception in 1999, more than 66,000 books have been read.

For every book a child reads, they fill out an entry form and submit it at any of the 16 Dependable Cleaner locations or with Dependable Cleaners' Home Delivery Drivers.

Entry forms are available at all Dependable Cleaners locations, delivery routes, Country Ski & Sport locations, Farina's Bike Store in Watertown, local libraries, bookstores and online at DependableCleaners.com/Read-Ride.

One grand prize winner will be drawn each Monday beginning June 2 until Aug. 11 (except for July 7).

The grand prize winners will receive a new bike and helmet. Two additional winners will receive runner up prizes each week.

A full list of Read to Ride partners, terms and conditions, and a printable entry form are accessible at www.DependableCleaners.com/Read-Ride.

Germantown Neighborhood Center Hosts Mother's Day Dinner

The staff of the Germantown Neighborhood Center along with 30 volunteers recently hosted their annual Mother's Day Dinner.

The evening brought together a cross-section of 70 women from throughout the city of Quincy to honor them for their commitment to their children. Childcare was also provided for close to 100 children who enjoyed their own dinner event as well as made cards for their mothers' special day.

The downstairs space of the center, currently under renovation for the new Music Club House, was transformed into a beautiful dining room with the generous assistance of many local Quincy businesses.

Linens donated by The Neighborhood Club of Quincy and 30 tropical plants from The Home Depot decorated the space. Stop and Shop donated paper goods. Each mother received her own gift plant courtesy of the Quincy Rotary Club. The catered dinner from The Chef's Table, owned by Julie Ellis was donated by Kathie and Jack McDonough. Dinner for the children was prepared by Chef Karen Veneto-Montes of the Germantown Neighborhood Center. Both the mothers and their children experienced an evening of friendship and fun.

After the meal, the women shared their thoughts with the group about the best part of being a mother. Some spoke about light-hearted moments in parenting. The predominant theme was, of course, experiencing the grace of a mother's unconditional love for her children.

"It was our best Mother's Day event yet," said Mary Jo Murphy, director of Women's Programming for the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

The Germantown Neighborhood Center is a dynamic safe haven that provides life changing education and support to society's most vulnerable members. Lives are transformed through GED, adult literacy, cooking and nutrition classes, women's health & wellness programs, domestic violence counseling, teen mentoring programs and tutoring for school age children.

The new Music Club House, scheduled to open in May, is a state-of-the-art recording facility with musical instruments and instruction to enrich children's creative spirits. Multiple after school and summer camp programs round out the mix. The Germantown Neighborhood Center Food Pantry provides quality groceries weekly to numerous Quincy residents.

This special Mother's Day celebration was enjoyed by the mothers as well as their children. A resounding "Thank you!" to all the volunteers and contributors who made this much anticipated event possible.

Stuffed Mini Red, Yellow Peppers

With the ham that I baked for Easter, I was trying to find something almost as a garnish for the presentation,

While I was food shopping, I spotted a bag of mini red and yellow peppers that looked almost like the colors of Easter, so I decided to stuff those and place them around the ham. The combination of the flavors of the peppers was delightful.

STUFFED MINI PEPPERS

This recipe made 20 peppers, but you can change the amount if needed.
4 slices of bread (soaked and squeezed)
¼ cup seasoned breadcrumbs
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
2 tablespoons tomato sauce
1 teaspoon basil
½ teaspoon garlic powder
1 tablespoon or so of black sliced olives
Salt and pepper

After the peppers are washed and dried, cut the tops off and set aside.

In a bowl, place the soaked bread and crush it until it smooths a bit.

Add the other ingredients and blend well. Fill each pepper and then place in a slightly greased baking dish. On the bottom put a little water and another tablespoon or so of the tomato sauce and bake in a 325-degree oven for 35-40 minutes or until peppers are tender as you like.

Yogurt Lemon Cream Pudding

In our family we usually enjoy all kinds of puddings, either a vanilla or chocolate are the favorites.

But I found a delicious lemon cream pudding that everyone loved. I don't usually use condensed milk, but it seems to work in this recipe.

YOGURT, LEMON CREAM PUDDING

14 ounces condensed milk (sweetened)
1 cup plain yogurt (I used Greek)
Zest of two lemons plus the juice
2 egg whites
1 tablespoon sugar

In a bowl, put the condensed milk. Gradually beat in the yogurt, the grated lemon and the juice. Stir thoroughly until well blended.

In another bowl, whisk the egg whites until stiff and gradually add the sugar. Continue whisking until mixture stands in firm peaks.

Fold the egg whites gently in the condensed milk mixture. Spoon pudding into four dishes, and chill for four hours.

Broad Meadows Students Working On Passanageset Knoll Project

Inspired by a writing assignment in Ron Adams' class, six students – Michaela O'Gara-Pratt, Eve Anderson, Colleen Connor, Mackenzie Maguire, Grace Higgins and Abigail Kraunelis – at the Broad Meadows Middle School have initiated a project focusing on gaining recognition for Passanageset Knoll.

Passanageset Knoll is an area of significance to the Massachusetts Indian Tribe, which is located in the Broad Meadows Marsh. Through their research the History Girls, as they have become known, have discovered that the Passanageset Knoll was the seat of the Chief of the Massachusetts Indians for thousands of years.

The History Girls project focuses on gaining recognition for this site through the creation of signage, create curriculum to be taught in schools informing the students of Quincy of Passanageset's significance, as well as seeking the return of artifacts discovered at Caddy Park which are now being housed in Colorado.

Thus far, the History Girls have sought and obtained the support of many people. They have met with Mayor Thomas Koch, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Sachem, Gil Solomon of the Massachusetts Indian, Annawon Weedan of the Wampanoag Tribe, Ed Fitzgerald from the Quincy Historical Society, State Archeologist, Ellen Birkland and many, many more.

'America's Romance With English Garden' Program At Historical Society May 22

Quincy Historical Society will offer an encore of author Thomas Mickey's presentation, "America's Romance With the English Garden," on Thursday, May 22 at 2 p.m.

The program tells the story behind America's continuing fascination with lush gardens and rich, green lawns. Drawing on his recent book on the subject, Mickey will show how the beginning of mass-marketing in the 1890s sold the attractions and the status of English-style lawns and gardens to a growing American middle class, through beautiful, elaborate illustrations.

Mickey will illustrate the talk with examples of these ornate advertisements from the 1890s.

The program is free. A book signing will follow the lecture.

Senior Safety Program Topic At Kennedy Center May 21

Joseph Canavan of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's Office will be at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, on Wednesday, May 21 at 10 a.m. to introduce seniors to the "Yellow Dot Program."

The program is designed to help seniors in the event that they are involved in an auto accident. A Yellow Dot will be placed on the rear window identifying the driver as a member of the program providing the emergency crews with the driver's medical history.

To register, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

'Discover Quincy Days' Aug. 2, Sept. 6, Oct. 4

Discover Quincy, the tourism agency of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, will offer its "Discover Quincy Days" program on three Saturdays this year.

On Aug. 2, Sept. 6 and Oct. 4, visitors and residents can experience Quincy and all of its rich history for one admission price.

Participants may purchase a Discover Quincy wristband for $5 that gives them admission for the day to the Adams National Historical Park which operates the birthplaces and summer White House of U.S. Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, the Adams Crypt at the United First Parish Church, Quincy Historical Society Museum, Josiah Quincy House, and Dorothy Quincy Homestead.

With the purchase of a wristband, visitors can visit one, two, three, four, or all five historic sites on Discover Quincy Days. They may use their own transportation and travel from location to location or they may take advantage of a shuttle that will depart from the Quincy Historical Society and run on a continuous loop between the sites from 10 a.m. – 4 p.m.

In addition, participants can explore Quincy's history by walking in the footsteps of John Adams. A Walking Tour map provides a self-guided tour for visitors from the Adams Academy/Quincy Historical Society down Hancock Street. Along the way, a variety of statues and markers, such as the John Adams and Abigail Adams/John Quincy Adams statues and Granite Ball are highlighted. At the Hancock Cemetery, located across the street from the United First Parish Church, a historical interpreter will be on hand to guide visitors through the town's earliest cemetery.

Discover Quincy wristbands will be sold at all of the participating historic sites on Discover Quincy Days and in advance at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St. or the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, 180 Old Colony Ave., Suite 300.

Discover Quincy is also offering a similar combined admission valid until Nov. 10. For $10, visitors will receive a ticket and can tour each attraction when convenient for them. These tickets can be purchased online at DiscoverQuincy.com or at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

For more information, visit DiscoverQuincy.com or call the Quincy Chamber of Commerce at (617) 471-1700.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

REPLACING MISSING TEETH

Patients with one or more successive missing teeth can choose between two replacement possibilities other than dental implants. A "bridge" is a permanent dental appliance that consists of a pontic (false tooth) and two crowns that are cemented into place on the abutment teeth (on either side of the space). Unlike removable partial dentures, fixed bridges cannot be taken out of the mouth. Removable partial dentures usually consist of replacement teeth attached to pink or gum-colored plastic bases, which are connected by a metal framework. Removable partial dentures attach to the patient's natural teeth with metal clasps or devices called "precision attachments." Precision attachments are generally more aesthetic than metal clasps and are nearly invisible.

Tooth loss is often an outcome of injures, dental diseases and old age. There are number of reasons why you may consider replacing your missing teeth. Physical appearance is the most important reason why people may choose to get false teeth alternatives. Our dental team is trained to take universal precautions to protect our patients. Our goal is to provide the very best dental care possible to our patients so that they may achieve optimal dental health. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our entire staff operates as a team. Call 617 479-6220 to schedule your next appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. A precision attachment consists of precision-machined, interlocking "male" and "female" components that connect a removable partial denture to fixed bridgework.

new schools and the end of the city's agreement with Street-Works as reasons to oppose the raises.

"We have a situation where there is a proposal to do a new Sterling Middle School. I've heard a proposal to do a new Squantum Elementary School. There is a proposal to do an expansion of the North Quincy High School. As a further backdrop to all of this we, in my humble opinion, just had a significant failure, or a significant shortfall, in achieving the objectives for downtown revitalization," McNamee said.

"In this greater context I have to tell you I cannot vote for any one of these budgets that has that salary survey data in it – even if it's a little bit – because it's a wholesale adoption. I think the taxpayers are properly concerned about this and they've expressed their concerns to me."

The raises approved by the finance committee Monday night were: a $1,200 raise for Board of Assessors Chairman Peter Moran, bringing his salary to $95,000; a $1,400 raise for Treasurer/Collector Deb Coughlin, which would bring her pay to $101,000; an $11,400 raise for City Solicitor Jim Timmins, making his new salary $115,000; a raise of $8,300 for Personnel Director Helen Murphy, increasing her salary to $101,000; a $4,400 raise for IT Director Chuck Phelan, bumping his salary to $108,000; a raise of $4,400 for Planning Director Dennis Harrington, bringing his salary to $108,000; a raise of $1,300 for Park Director Chris Cassani, making his new salary $101,000; a $2,300 raise for Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, bringing his salary to $95,000; a raise of $15,700 for Council on Aging Director Tom Clasby, whose new salary would be $87,500; a $8,200 raise for Library Director Megan Allen, whose new salary would be $101,000; and a $6,500 for Recreation Director Barry Welch, bringing his salary to $95,000.

In addition to those departments, the finance committee approved budgets for the city's tax title, judgments, worker's compensation, and health insurance expenditures, as well as the Cemetery Department. Those were approved by voice vote.

Prior to the committee's review of those departmental budgets, the finance committee received a report from Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh on local receipts for the fiscal year 2014, which ends June 30. Through May 6, or 85 percent of the way through FY14, the city had collected 91.6 percent of expected local receipts for the entire fiscal year. Through Monday, that number increased to 94 percent.

"It's not fantastic but it's a nice increase and certainly beats the alternative," Cavanagh said. "We're modestly ahead of the 85 percent mark and we're healthy."

The city had projected collecting $8.2 million in excise taxes, for example. Through May 6, the city had collected $7.8 million, or 96 percent of the original projection. Through Monday, that number climbed to just over $8 million, and Cavanagh expects to collect upwards of $8.8 million in excise taxes for the fiscal year.

Despite a rough winter, the local portion of meals tax revenue is also exceeding the orginal projection. Through the end of the third quarter of FY14, the city had received 79 percent of its projected meals tax receipts. The state disperses meal tax receipts quarterly, and Cavanagh expects strong fourth quarter receipts.

One area of local receipts that decreased was parking ticket receipts. The city has collected approximately $350,000 in parking tickets so far this fiscal year, compared to the previous fiscal year when the total was more than $500,000. Cavanagh attributed that in part to this winter's severe storms as well as construction in the downtown and college students who haven't paid their tickets.

The finance committee will hold its second round of budget hearings on Tuesday, May 27, at 6:30 p.m. Among the items that will be reviewed that night are proposed raises for the mayor and City Council. Koch's budget proposal would give himself a salary of $160,000, up from his current salary of $122,000 and each councilor would see their salary increase by $5,000 to $22,500. Under state law, however, the raises for the mayor and city council can't go into effect until January so only half the dollar amount for those proposed raises are included in the budget.

Among the other departments up for review during the May 27 meeting will be the Fire Department and various departments falling under the purview of Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi, including the Water and Sewer Department budgets, which are drawn from an enterprise account and not included in the city budget. The Inspectional Services, Public Buildings, Veterans' Services, and Purchasing Departments are also slated for review at that meeting.

The third and final budget meeting is set for Monday, June 9, at 6:30 p.m. The budgets for the Police and School Departments are among those scheduled for review that night, along with the City Clerk's Office.

After the three finance committee budget hearings, the full council will have to approve of the entire budget. That will likely happen during the council's June 16 meeting, the last council meeting scheduled before the body takes its summer recess.

'Shred Days' For Records Disposal

needs to be done."

Department heads, the clerk explained, will be tasked with drawing up a list of documents for disposal, following state regulations. Shea will then submit those for review by the Mass. Secretary of the Commonwealth's Office. If that office approves, the documents can be disposed of.

The School Department, which is also moving into Coddington Hall, handles document disposal separately from Shea's office, as does the Police Department.

Shea also anticipates a second shred day taking place before his offices move back into the City Hall annex as part of the renovations ongoing at old City Hall. During each of the upcoming shred days, a department head will be on hand.

"It will be supervised," Shea said. "There will be a department head there at all times."

The first incident involving document disposal happened in March, when DPW employees were seen burning public records without obtaining permission from the Secretary of the Commonwealth's Office first. That office did approve of the disposal after the fact.

The second incident occurred last month, when Department of Veterans' Services records were found near Quincy High School. An investigation into that incident by the Quincy Police Department found that those records had fallen off the back of a truck.

The documents, some of which contained sensitive information such as Social Security Numbers, were found near the intersection of Russell Park and Woodward Avenue on the afternoon of April 22. The Police Department was asked to investigate how those documents got there.

Lt. Tom Pepdjonovic, who conducted the investigation, reviewed surveillance footage from a security camera at Quincy High School pointed directly at the intersection. According Pepdjonovic's report, the footage shows a white box truck driving through the intersection towards Southern Artery shortly before 4 p.m. on April 22. In the video, something can be seen falling from the back of the truck and then what appears to be numerous paper are seen floating in the air.

Pepdjonovic then compared the truck in that footage to a photograph of the Shred King truck that picked up the documents from the Veterans' Service Department headquarters at 24 High School Ave. Pepdjonovic's report says the vehicle in the photograph appears to be the same one seen in the surveillance footage.

The detective also spoke with the driver of the truck. Pepdjonovic said the driver parked outside 1250 Hancock St. to wait for his wife after picking up the documents from the Veterans' Services Department, but moved the vehicle after being told he couldn't park there. The driver then circled down Russell Park to Southern Artery and Coddington Street before parking in a different spot at 1250 Hancock St. and then picking up his wife.

The driver, the report states, then proceeded to head towards the expressway via Burgin Parkway. At some point he hit a bump in the road and noticed the lock on the back of the truck was dislodged and open. The driver said he then began to move boxes to lower positions inside the truck and drove slow with hazard lights activated on the way back to Holbrook.

Based on the surveillance footage and the interview with the truck driver, Pepdjonovic determined the documents fell off the truck and no criminal charges will be filed.

Stop & Shop Begins 100th Anniversary Celebration

By SCOTT JACKSON

Stop & Shop kicked off the celebration of the supermarket chain's 100th anniversary outside its Hancock Street offices in front of a crowd of several hundred employees, residents, and local officials.

Joe Kelley, the president of Stop & Shop's New England division, attributed the company's long-term success to numerous innovations made by Stop & Shop since the company's first store opened a century ago in Somerville.

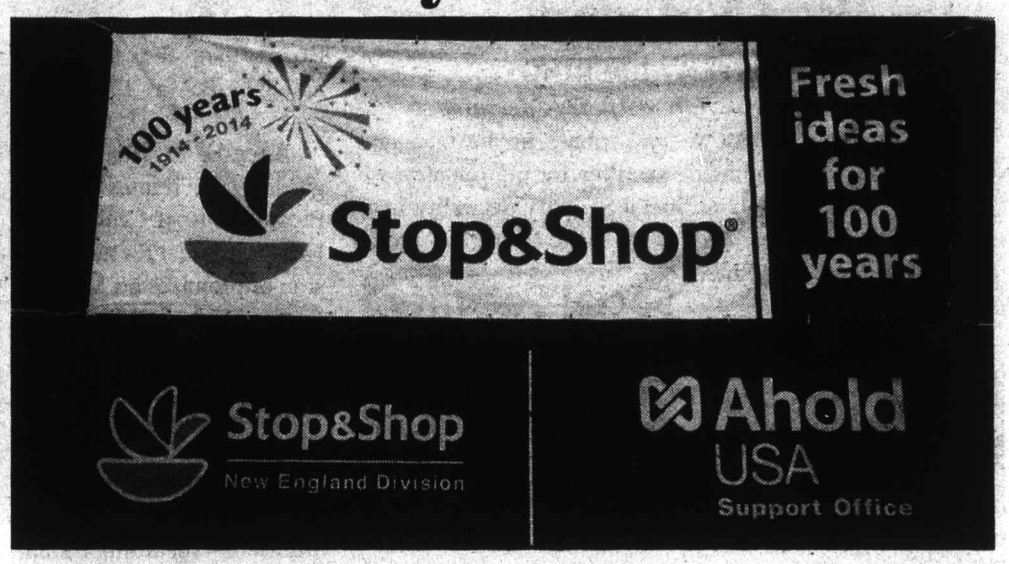
"In 1914, the first Stop & Shop opened in Massachusetts. Like the old show 'The Waltons,' customers asked for what they wanted at a counter and the clerk would go and get it for them. In 1918, Stop & Shop introduced the first self-service supermarket. What a novel idea, customers want to pick out their own groceries," Kelley explained.

"In 1982, Stop & Shop introduced the first superstore in Pembroke, Mass. It included books, TV sets, rugs. It started a trend that today there is no sign of stopping."

He also highlighted Stop & Shop's ties to the Quincy. Its New England headquarters on Hancock Street opened more than 30 years ago and is now home to some 900 employees, many of who were on hand for the ceremony on May 8. The company also operates two stores in the city.

"For much of our modern history Stop & Shop has been fortunate to have a wonderful partner in the city of Quincy," Kelley said. "We've been in Quincy in this building since 1982 – more than 30 years. We've grown into this building and we're now 900 strong. We also have two stores here in Quincy – on Newport Avenue and Southern Artery – serving thousands of customers everyday."

STOP & SHOP kicked-0ff its 100th anniversary celebration May 8 with a ceremony outside the company's Quincy Center offices. As part of the celebration, Stop & Shop will be donating $1,000 a day for 100 days to local charities. The first recipient of the $1,000 donation was the Quincy Public Schools' music programs. Pictured above (left to right) are Stop & Shop New England President Joe Kelley, Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, and House Majority Leader Ron Mariano of Quincy.



A BANNER CELEBRATING Stop & Shop's 100th anniversary was unveiled last week outside the company's New England headquarters at 1385 Hancock Street. The company will host a series of concerts on the plaza in front of the building on Wednesdays this summer as part of its anniversary celebration. The supermarket chain is also offering products in vintage packaging as part of the anniversary celebration. Quincy Sun Photos/Scott Jackson

As part of the anniversary celebration, Stop & Shop will be donating $1,000 per day to local charities, and will donate to 100 charities in all. The first recipient of a $1,000 donation was the Quincy Public Schools music program. Kelley presented the donation to Deputy Superintendent Kevin Mulvey at the ceremony.

The company has other events to mark the anniversary. Beginning later this month, select items in Stop & Shop stores will be sold in vintage packaging and stores will sell two new products –confetti cake and diamond jubilee bouquets. Stop & Shop will also host a summertime lunch concert series on the plaza in front of their Hancock Street offices on Wednesdays from noon until 1 p.m. beginning June 4. A birthday party-type celebration will take place on Sept. 6 in all the chain's stores, recognizing the day the original Stop & Shop opened.

Local officials joined Stop & Shop executives and employees at the event. Mayor Thomas Koch told the crowd he still remembers going to the supermarket chain's Southern Artery location with his mother as a child.

"My first memory of Stop & Shop was when I was kid. I was one of seven – my mother will tell you to this day I was the favorite, I was the model child so frequently she would take me with her when she would go to Stop & Shop on Southern Artery," the mayor said. "To this day I can remember an old gentleman by the name of Harold who was the bagger we would see Saturdays when we went there. He was always so pleasant and warm and kind to families."

Koch also thanked the company for being good corporate citizens and proving good jobs to residents.

"As mayor I'm so grateful for the corporate citizenship that Stop & Shop provides and is, in a very real way as I stand here before you, providing good jobs and good wages for the people of our city and the greater area," he said.

The mayor finished by reading a proclamation, declaring May 8 'Stop & Shop Day' in the city. The proclamation cited the company's donations to Quincy organizations, which total more than $160,000 over the past five years, as well as donations totaling $65,000 to the city's schools over that same time period. Koch also thanked Stop & Shop for sponsoring Quincy's annual Christmas parade the last two years.

"The Christmas parade has come down Hancock Street on the Sunday after Thanksgiving for the last 65 years," the mayor said. "The last two years it wouldn't have gone by without the giving of Stop & Shop."

In addition to the proclamation from the mayor, Stop & Shop received citations from Gov. Deval Patrick and both houses of the state Legislature. House Majority Leader Ron Mariano of Quincy presented those citations to Kelley.

"Today is truly a very, very special day and I'm not sure everyone will understand why. I have in my possession three citations – one from the governor, one from the Senate, and one from the House. You don't know how rare that is Joe," Mariano quipped. "You've got all three agreeing on the same issue."

Mariano said he hopes Stop & Shop continues to have success and grows along with the city.

"I have a lot of respect for the Stop & Shop organization and the parent company, Ahold, as well," he said. "I hope that Stop & Shop continues their success right here in Quincy. As Quincy grows and expands, we hope Stop & Shop will grow and expand with them."

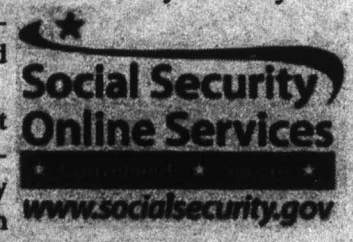
Faster Benefit Decisions For Veterans

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

On Memorial Day, as we pay tribute to the men and women who gave the ultimate sacrifice for our country, we also share some news about Social Security disability benefits for veterans with disabilities: a new expedited disability process.



We believe it is important to recognize those who currently serve in the military as well as those injured in the line of duty and consider it an honor and a duty to serve them. Whether the injury is physical or mental, getting a decision about Social Security disability benefits from your government shouldn't add to the problems faced by the injured.

Carolyn W. Colvin, Acting Commissioner of Social Security, recently unveiled a new initiative to expedite disability applications from veterans with a Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) disability compensation rating of 100 percent Permanent and Total (P&T). Under the new process, Social Security will treat these veterans' applications as high priority and issue expedited decisions, similar to the way we currently handle disability claims from wounded warriors.

"Our veterans have sacrificed so much for our country and it is only right that we ensure they have timely access to the disability benefits they may be eligible for and deserve," said Acting Commissioner Colvin.

Learn more about the new expedited process for veterans at www.socialsecurity.gov/pressoffice/pr/2014/expedited-dib-process2-pr.html.

Read about this new service at www.socialsecurity.gov/pgm/disability-pt.htm.

Also, you'll want to visit our Wounded Warriors page at www.socialsecurity.gov/woundedwarriors. There you'll find informative webinars, a Disability Planner, an overview of our disability programs and the convenient online disability application.

Quincy Medical Center Receives Top Safety Score

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) has been honored by the latest Hospital Safety Score with an "A" – its top grade in patient safety.

Designed to rate how well hospitals protect patients from accidents, errors, injuries and infections, the Hospital Safety Score is compiled under the guidance of the nation's leading experts on patient safety and is administered by The Leapfrog Group (Leapfrog), an independent industry watchdog. The first and only hospital safety rating to be peer-reviewed in the Journal of Patient Safety, the Score is free to the public and designed to give consumers information they can use to protect themselves and their families when facing a hospital stay.

"Patient safety is our number one priority at Quincy Medical Center and we are wholeheartedly committed to ongoing quality improvement. I am extremely proud of our highly skilled staff and their unwavering focus on quality and safety, and of the exceptional care our team provides to our patients each and every day," said Donna Rubinate, president of Quincy Medical Center.

"Safety should come first for our families when we pick a hospital, because errors and infections are common and deadly," said Leah Binder, president & CEO of The Leapfrog Group, which produces the Hospital Safety Score. "No hospital is perfect, but we congratulate the Board, clinicians, administration, and staff of Quincy Medical Center for achieving an "A" and showing us that you made the well-being of you patients your top priority."

Calculated under the guidance of Leapfrog's Blue Ribbon Expert Panel, the Hospital Safety Score uses 28 measures of publicly available hospital safety data to produce a single "A," "B," "C," "D," or "F" score representing a hospital's overall capacity to keep patients safe from preventable harm. More than 2,500 U.S. general hospitals were assigned scores in spring 2014, with about 32-percent receiving an "A" grade. The Hospital Safety Score is fully transparent, and its website offers a full analysis of the data and methodology used in determining grades.

To see how Quincy Medical Center's score compares locally and nationally, and to access safety tips for patients and their loved ones, visit the Hospital Safety Score website at www.hospitalsafetyscore.org. Consumers can also go to www.hospitalsafetyscore.org for a free download of the Hospital Safety Score app.

ular preferred policy. The increases under both plans would stop at what FEMA determines the actuarially rate should be.

There is no 30-day waiting period for the preferred risk extension policy to come into effect and no elevation certificate is required. That policy is available for purchase until July 2015.

Owners of properties in the flood plain must purchase insurance if they have a mortgage. Property owners without a mortgage may also purchase flood insurance.

In response to a question from one of the 50 residents who attended the meeting, Flavin said property owners without a mortgage should consider purchasing flood insurance if they plan to sell their homes. A homeowner who purchases one of the preferred policies, he explained, would be able to transfer that policy if they sold the house. Not doing so would mean the new buyer would pay a higher rate, which would decrease the amount they could qualify for if they applied for a mortgage.

"That's going to figure into their ability to qualify for the mortgage," Flavin said of the higher rates, which could cost between $2,000 and $3,000, or more, annually. "The mortgage is going to have to be less because they can only qualify for a lesser mortgage and if their down payment is constant that means your property price is going to come down."

Laforest relayed a story about a family who sold a house in the "Pre-G" section of her ward – the Empire Street, Broady Avenue, and Brockton Avenue neighborhood off Palmer Street. The family had listed the home for $250,000 but had to cut the price by $40,000 after the buyer was quoted a $4,000 annual premium for flood insurance.

"For me that's the big concern," Laforest said. "We're talking about the city's tax base – look what's happening as these houses try to sell and the value drops."

Engineering firm Woodard & Curran is currently working with the city to appeal the new FEMA maps. One resident being mapped into a flood zone on June 9 who had already purchased flood insurance asked if she would receive a refund on her flood insurance if her home is moved out of the flood zone as a result of the appeal. Flavin said the bank holding the mortgage ultimately decides whether flood insurance would still be required or not. Smaller, local banks, he explained, are generally easier to work with on that than larger, national banks.

City In Life Sciences Corridor Initiative

The mayors of Boston, Cambridge, Quincy, Somerville, and Braintree announced Tuesday the formation of the Life Sciences Corridor.

The partnership, created by Boston Mayor Martin J. Walsh, Cambridge Mayor David Maher, Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, Somerville Mayor Joseph Curtatone, and Braintree Mayor Joseph C. Sullivan, will focus on promoting the robust life sciences sector along the MBTA red line in the Greater Boston region. An event for the announcement was held at the Museum of Science, a middle point between the five partnering cities.

"Our cities alone perform quite well, but collaboratively, we will continue to transform the economic prospects for the life sciences sector of the Greater Boston region," Walsh said.

"This partnership will have immediate impacts on business development and institutional growth, and ensure the region remains an economic engine for the Commonwealth, and a top location for cutting-edge research."

"The life sciences are at the heart of our economic development future as a City and together as a region." Koch said. "This initiative harnessing the resources of the entire Red Line corridor is a great collaborative step forward toward reaching our region's full potential as the world leader in life sciences development."

Together, the five cities represent over 460 companies within the life science industry sector. The Life Sciences Corridor will focus on attracting business from outside the region, retaining businesses within the region, and promoting cross collaboration between universities, institutions and businesses across the region.

This year in San Diego, Cambridge, Boston and Quincy are attending the BIO International Convention (BIO) and coordinating outreach efforts. BIO is the world's largest gathering of biotechnology companies, academic institutions, state biotechnology centers and related organizations across the United States and in more than 30 other nations.

Leaders said the life sciences industry in these cities is sustained by the skilled workforce, access to leading universities, established innovative research and development districts, the proximity of major research hospitals, and the presence of venture capital resources.

Additionally, the new Corridor is naturally connected by the MBTA Red Line, which serves as an important and efficient connecting link between Cambridge, Boston, Quincy, Somerville, and Braintree.

"For anyone from outside of Massachusetts seeking to grow their business here, the Boston region has always been defined broadly, and the new Life Sciences Corridor initiative embraces that," said Robert K. Coughlin, President & CEO of MassBio, the life sciences trade association. "We are the destination for not just research & development companies, but contract research and manufacturing organizations, life sciences information technology companies, device and diagnostic companies and support services across the entire healthcare spectrum."

Susan Windham-Bannister, Ph.D., President & CEO of the MLSC, added:

"It is terrific to see five of our leading cities taking a collaborative approach to life sciences company recruitment," said "This is the sort of collaboration that makes Massachusetts unique, and acknowledges that our state has many great options to offer companies seeking to locate and grow here.

"Massachusetts has become a magnet for life sciences companies around the world, and this new collaboration will communicate even more strongly that we are committed to making our state the best place to do business."

USS Salem Bound For East Boston

community cookout for the last two years, so I've seen on the ground level people coming to enjoy history," Croall said.

"If the final decision is to go to East Boston, it will be a sad day."

The USS Salem (CA-139), a Des Moines-class heavy cruiser, was built at the Fore River Shipyard and launched in 1947. Two years later the Salem was commissioned and it would serve as the flagship of the U.S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea during in the 1950s during the Cold War before being decommissioned in 1959. It remained berthed in a reserve fleet for decades until it was brought back home to the shipyard and outfitted as a museum ship.

As a museum ship, the Salem was known for hosting overnight programs for Boy Scouts and other community groups. It also hosted an annual haunted ship program in the fall leading up to Halloween and was home to Kilroy's Mini Golf.

The Quincy Sun reached out to Michael Condon, executive director of the organization that owns the Salem, for comment but those inquiries were not returned.

Quincy Celebrates Community Development Week

The City of Quincy recently joined communities across the country in celebrating National Community Development Week.

The weeklong celebration provided the opportunity for communities to showcase block-grant-funded projects and programs, and to educate residents, businesses, and government officials about the block grant programs provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which are administered by the city's Department of Planning and Community Development. These block grants provide the city with resources to address a wide range of unique community development needs.

Locally, block grants are used to support activities and services such as community center programs; emergency food centers; housing rehabilitation activities; code inspections; the creation of affordable housing units; first-time homebuyer assistance; homelessness assistance; and also supports economic development activities such as public works projects and assistance to small businesses for jobs creation.

Several events were featured this year to celebrate Community Development Week, including programs at the Kennedy Center, the Houghs Neck Community Center, the North Quincy Community Center, and at the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

Two formal speaking programs were also held during the week. The first was a check presentation at the Manet Community Health Center in North Quincy. The city is providing $235,000 in CDBG funds for the renovation of this site, which will include the addition of 27 exam rooms, a vision care center, and a discount pharmacy.

The second speaking program was held at 178-186 E. Howard Street – the future site of twelve housing units for veterans and their families, under development by NeighborWorks Southern Mass. The city is investing $750,000 in HOME funds into the project, with an additional $250,000 from the Affordable Housing Trust Fund. Several awards were given out at this event. Cong. Stephen Lynch presented Rosa Evora from NeighborWorks with a citation as well as a flag that was flown over the United States Capitol in honor of her military service, and in recognition of her tremendous efforts running the Boston Marathon last year and this year, and for also completing the One Run two years in a row, where she had the honor of carrying the American flag across the finish line.

The Mayor's Annual Community Development Achievement Award was presented to Melinda Alexander from Quincy Community Action Programs in recognition of her dedication and commitment as director of QCAP's Southwest Quincy Community Emergency Food Center.

A Certification of Recognition was presented to Sarah Morrison, Executive Director of Quincy After School Child Care, in recognition of her exceptional service to the organization.

Steve Buckley accepted a Lifetime Achievement Award on behalf of his mother, Sandra Buckley, in recognition of Ms. Buckley's years of dedicated service as director of the Squantum Community Center.

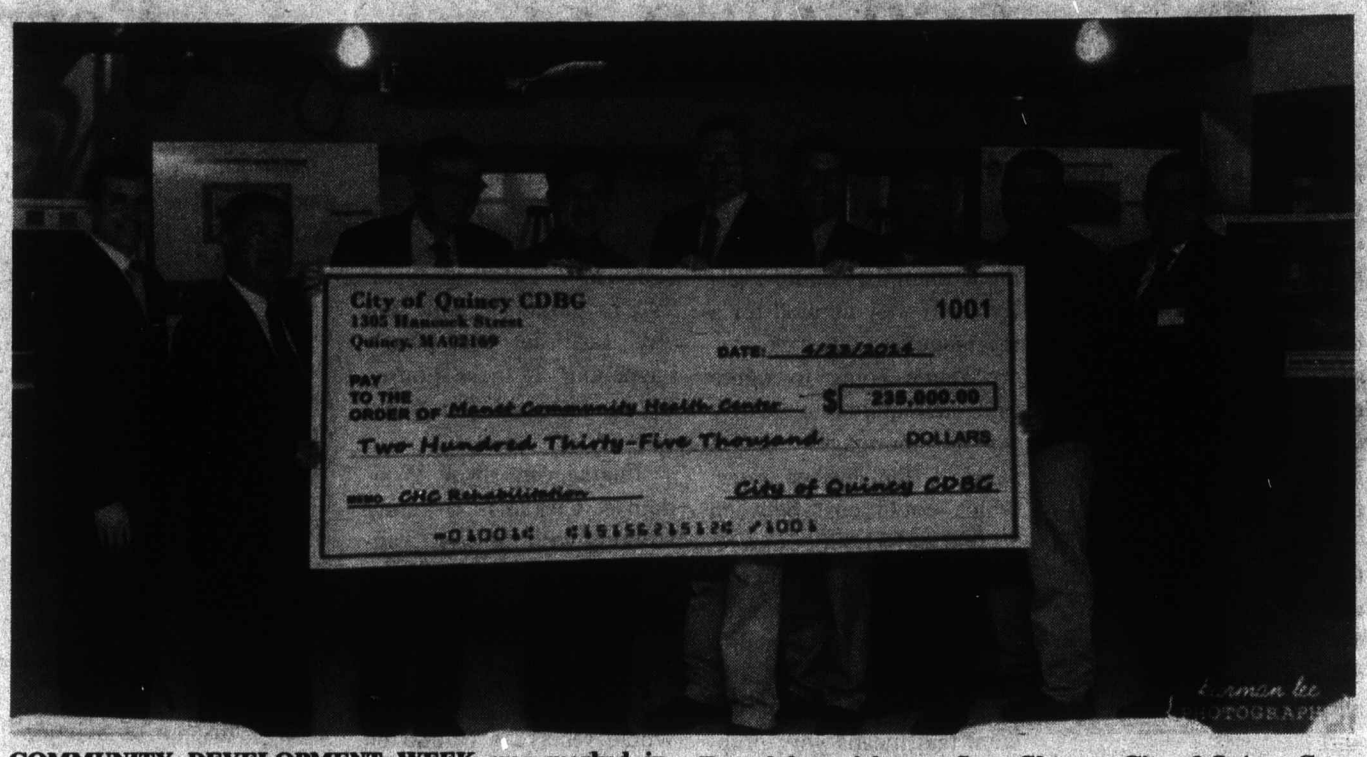
And the City of Quincy's Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee presented a Lifetime Achievement Award to Sr. Joanne Westwater, founder of Good Shepherd Maria Droste Counseling Services.

In attendance for the project groundbreaking were Cong. Lynch, Cedric Kam from HUD, state and locally-elected officials, and about 75 individuals representing non-profits, businesses, and community groups.

Community Development Week also included a check presentation at the Germantown Neighborhood Center (GNC). The city is investing $50,000 in CDBG funds for the construction of a professional recording studio at the center. During this event, representatives of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Mass. were presented with a Community Development Certificate of Recognition for their assistance in creating a beneficiary database for the GNC.

"I am very appreciative of the outstanding work performed by our Department of Planning and Community Development, under the direction of Dennis Harrington," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "Dennis and his community development team work tirelessly every day to meet the needs of our residents, utilizing these crucial block grant programs."

Since 1975, the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development has provided over $81 million to the City of Quincy under the Community Development Block Grant; over $11 million under the HOME Investment Partnership Program; and over $2 million under the Emergency Shelter/Solutions Grant.



COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT WEEK was marked in Quincy with a series of events showcasing block-grant-funded projects and programs that support activities and services such as community center programs. One activity was a check presentation at the Manet Community Health Center in North Quincy. The city is providing $235,000 in CDBG funds for the renovation of this site, which will include the addition of 27 exam rooms, a vision care center, and a discount pharmacy. 8-Year-Old Aiden White Is 'Firefighter For A Day'

AIDEN WHITE of Quincy recently enjoyed a day as an honorary Quincy firefighter at the Wollaston Firehouse, Engine 4 and Ladder 2. Aiden, a second grader at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, toured the firehouse and learned about the fire fighting profession. Firefighters including Jason Petrucci (right) also demonstrated some of the tools of their trade, including a fire axe (above). Aiden also (bottom photos from left) washed a fire truck, wore a fire helmet, carried a fire hose and directed an aerial truck.

QUINCY FIREFIGHTER Derek Monroe helps 8-year-old Aiden White of Quincy aim the fire hose during a recent visit to the Wollaston Firehouse. Looking on is Fire Lt. Mike Palaza. The Beechwood Knoll School second grader enjoys being outdoors, playing sports with his friends and building models. He also likes basketball and has played for the past two years on the Sacred Heart basketball team. Photos Courtesy Quincy Fire Department

Boston Breaker Visits Quincy Youth Soccer Players

Sunday Is QYS Night At Breakers-Chicago Game

Julie King of the Boston Breakers in the National Women's Soccer League (NWSL) recently visited Quincy Youth Soccer players at Pond Street field.

King is in her third year as a starting defender on the Breakers. Before that, she was a star at Auburn University in Alabama.

King visited QYS through a partnership between the professional team and QYS. She signed about fifty autographs, with most of the youth being aged 8-10. She also demonstrated how she practices and approaches the game. Highlights of her time with the players were when she passed them the ball so they could shoot on goal, demonstrated long throw ins, and how she takes on an attacking player and makes a good soccer tackle.

Larry Chretien of Quincy Youth Soccer said, "Most of the professional athletes that our young people see are men, so it is great when they can meet someone like Julie who is a great athlete and very accessible. I know that the kids, especially our young girls, enjoyed talking with her and learning from her. We are very lucky that Boston is one of nine cities in the country with a professional women's soccer team."

Sunday, May 18 will be QYS Night at the Boston Breakers as they take on Chicago at 6:30 p.m. at Harvard Stadium. Tickets for that game and other home games are available at a discount below face value. Call the Breakers ticket office at 617-945-1704 or go to BostonBreakerSoccer.com. Use the promotional code – "QYS14" in order to receive the discounted price of $17 for Category 2 tickets.

North Quincy Eyes Tourney, Quincy Improving

By JOE REARDON

The North Quincy High volleyball team is out to make things right again this spring. And with the season more than halfway gone and the Red Raiders sitting comfortably at 11-3, head coach Jason Cai believes his squad is on track for a big postseason. And that would go a long way towards erasing the North Quincy's nightmarish tournament experience in 2013.

Facing a New Bedford Voke team that, on paper, looked to be inferior to the Red Raiders' solid lineup, North Quincy captured the first game in the quarterfinal round, only to have New Bedford stun the Red Raiders by sweeping the next three games and bouncing North Quincy prematurely from the South Sectionals.

Cai, who played for North Quincy before graduating in 2005, has guided the Red Raiders the last seven years and is hoping the team peaks when the tourney rolls around in a few weeks. The team is still gelling and getting a feel for each other on the court.

"I'm still looking to develop some of the kids," said Cai. "It's a rebuilding year for me, believe it or not. We graduated seven seniors last year. I'm still trying to get them molded together. Hopefully, we'll push far into the tournament."

North Quincy's club looked just fine at home in Thursday evening's city battle against Quincy. The Red Raiders came away with the 3-0 victory, posting scores of 25-12, 25-18 and 25-13 against the Presidents.

North Quincy was its usual strong self up front with Anthony Green (eight kills), Jackie Chen (11 kills) and Efthim Butka (12 kills) dominating the front row. Kevin Huang did his job setting up the point scorers with 28 big assists while Chen and Zheng Hao Zhang finished with 10 and 15 digs, respectively.

"Anthony has helped us a lot with the block game," said Cai. "Jackie's moving along - he swings very hard. Efthim is a three-year veteran. We always expect him to be our go-to guy."

Chen and Butka scored the bulk of the points as the Red Raiders pulled out to a 12-2 lead in the first game while Quincy's Phu Tang (three kills, nine assists, four digs) rifled some balls over the net late to get the Presidents into double digits. The Presidents also had quality outings from Brian Sullivan (five assists, two digs), Jack Fischer (two kills), Javier Smith (six kills) and Colin Mason (one kill, one dig).

The matchup proved to be another frustrating contest for the struggling, 1-13 Presidents. Jacqui Niosi's team took the lead six different times in the second game, easily it's best of the three. Butka broke an 11-11 tie with a kill to put the Red Raiders ahead for good. The third game was all North Quincy as they went on a 7-0 run to go up for good, 9-2, and clinch the match.

Quincy High coach Jacqui Niosi is trying to make the Presidents play aggressive style from the start and put pressure on opposing teams out of the gate in her first year coaching the boys after leading the girls in the fall for nine years.

"We wanted to be very aggressive against them because we had nothing to lose," Niosi said. "They're really aggressive, especially off the serve and attack. You have to counter that. You can't play it safe. You just have to go for it and hope you're having a good day. I thought we played great in the second game. I thought we came out kind of tense in the beginning. Even towards the end a little bit their serving just got us into a funk. I thought we gathered ourselves pretty well and responded."

Niosi, who played at Quincy High and graduated in 2001, has seen improvement from her club and is confident in saying that the Presidents are far better than their record would indicate.

"We've had a lot of really close games," she shrugged. "We've competed with teams and wound up on the bad end of a lot of them unfortunately. We've definitely had a lot of improvement. We're doing alright. Our record I don't think reflects how we've done."

She's found the skill set with the boys different, but everything goes back to the fundamentals and perfecting them. "It's a little different," Niosi said. "They (boys) can jump through the roof. It's still tough just concentrating on basics and trying to get better at those things. They're a little more blocking oriented and offensive whereas the girls are a little more heavier on the defensive end. You're still pushing basics on everything."

North Quincy finishes out the regular season with games at Taunton May 14 and at Weymouth May 19.

Quincy has games against New Bedford May 14 and Braintree May 19.

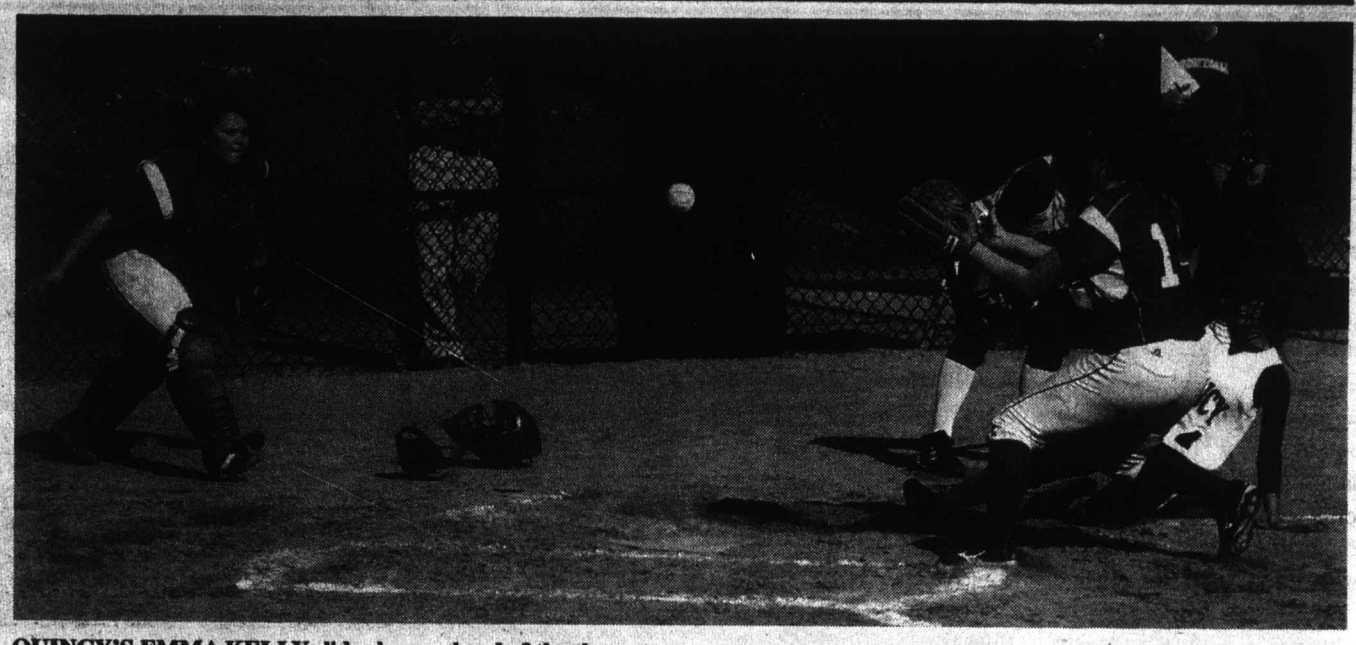
Kelly Sparks Quincy Past Hingham, 7-1



QUINCY'S EMMA KELLY slides home ahead of the throw to score a run in the Presidents' 7-1 win over Hingham. The junior had three hits, two RBI, two runs scored, two stolen bases and made a fine running catch in centerfield.

Speed wins.

A leadoff hitter with speed influences, disrupts and controls a softball game. Fielders worry about bunts and slap hits. They play too shallow and rush their throws. Routine ground balls turn into singles. Singles turn into doubles. Pitchers worry about walks. Speed turns walks into a runner on second, a runner on third. Pitchers worry, fielders worry, catchers worry. The whole game changes.

When speed is on base, the carousel continues. Pitchers think of the base runner, not the batter. Poor pitches are made and line drives are hit. Bases are stolen. Throws sail into center field. A hurried toss, an infield tap, a shallow popup means an extra base. Wild pitches and passed balls mean a run. The pressure builds and builds. It is controlled chaos and the runner with speed directs the show.

Junior Emma Kelly ignites Quincy with her speed. She had three hits, two RBI, two runs scored, two stolen bases, and a fine catch in centerfield to support a terrific pitching performance from Saxon Bresnahan and lead the Presidents to a 7-1 decision over Hingham in a Patriot League Keenan Division softball game at Mitchell McCoy Field last week.

Bresnahan was in complete command. She allowed just five singles, struck out out 16, and did not walk a batter.

In other action last week, Bresnahan fired a three-hitter and fanned nine as Quincy dropped Duxbury, 3-0. Angelina Avitabile had a double and home run while Bresnahan was 3-3 at the plate. Kelly, Dana Varmahmoodi, and Kate McGahey played strong defensive games in the outfield. Shortstop Rachel Papile and third baseman Bethaney Walker were also sharp defensively.

Whitman-Hanson rallied past Quincy, 3-2 despite Bresnahan who pitched well again and had a single, double, home run, and two RBI. Unbeaten Silver Lake defeated Quincy, 12-1. The loss to Silver Lake left Quincy at 9-3 overall and 7-3 in the league.

"Emma's impact on the game with her speed is huge," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers. "When you have that much speed, anytime Emma makes contact, she can get on base. It introduces a whole new element into the game. It makes the other team nervous"

Against Hingham, Kelly beat out an infield single in the third. Her speed forced a wild throw and put runners on second and third. Both runners scored. In the fifth, she singled sharply up the middle, stole second, went to third on a ground ball and scored on a wild pitch. In the sixth, she cracked a ringing double to right center to drive home two runs.

She stole two bases. She scored on two wild pitches. She took third on a ground ball to the shortstop. She made the most important defensive play of the game, ranging to deep right center to run down a fly ball with two Hingham runners on in the sixth. Speed wins.

"Her speed plays a part both offensively and defensively. She has excellent range in centerfield," said Sommers.

Kelly is a switch hitter. She has her own somewhat unique approach to the situation. Against pitchers like Silver Lake's Maddy Barone who throw hard, Kelly bats lefty and tries to slap the ball for infield hits. Against pitchers not quite as swift, she bats righty. It's a trifle unusual, but it works. She hit lefty in her first at-bat against Hingham, then switched to the right side. She had her three hits batting righthanded.

"Emma says she has too much time to think batting lefty against pitchers who don't throw quite as hard," smiled Sommers. "We like her ability to slap hits from the left side. We're fortunate we have her ability to bat both ways."

Bresnahan continued her brilliant season. Her poise and growth on the mound has been impressive. Little bothers her. She has had great stuff for two years, but she enjoys the game more as a junior. It shows in her pitching.

"Her maturity on the mound is impressive," said Sommers. "She is at her best when she's loose and having fun. I like to see her enjoying laugh with someone on the bench. Things don't bother her as much as they used to."

Leann McColgan, who drove in the winning run against Middleboro, had a double, a sacrifice fly and two RBI. Angelina Avitabile walked twice, made a fine play on a hard popup directly into the sun and caught an excellent game behind the plate.

"Leann is swinging the bat well and she's had some important hits for us," said Sommers. "Angelina is good on those popups because she has no fear of the backstop. She'll run right into it. She called every pitch today. She takes control behind the plate."

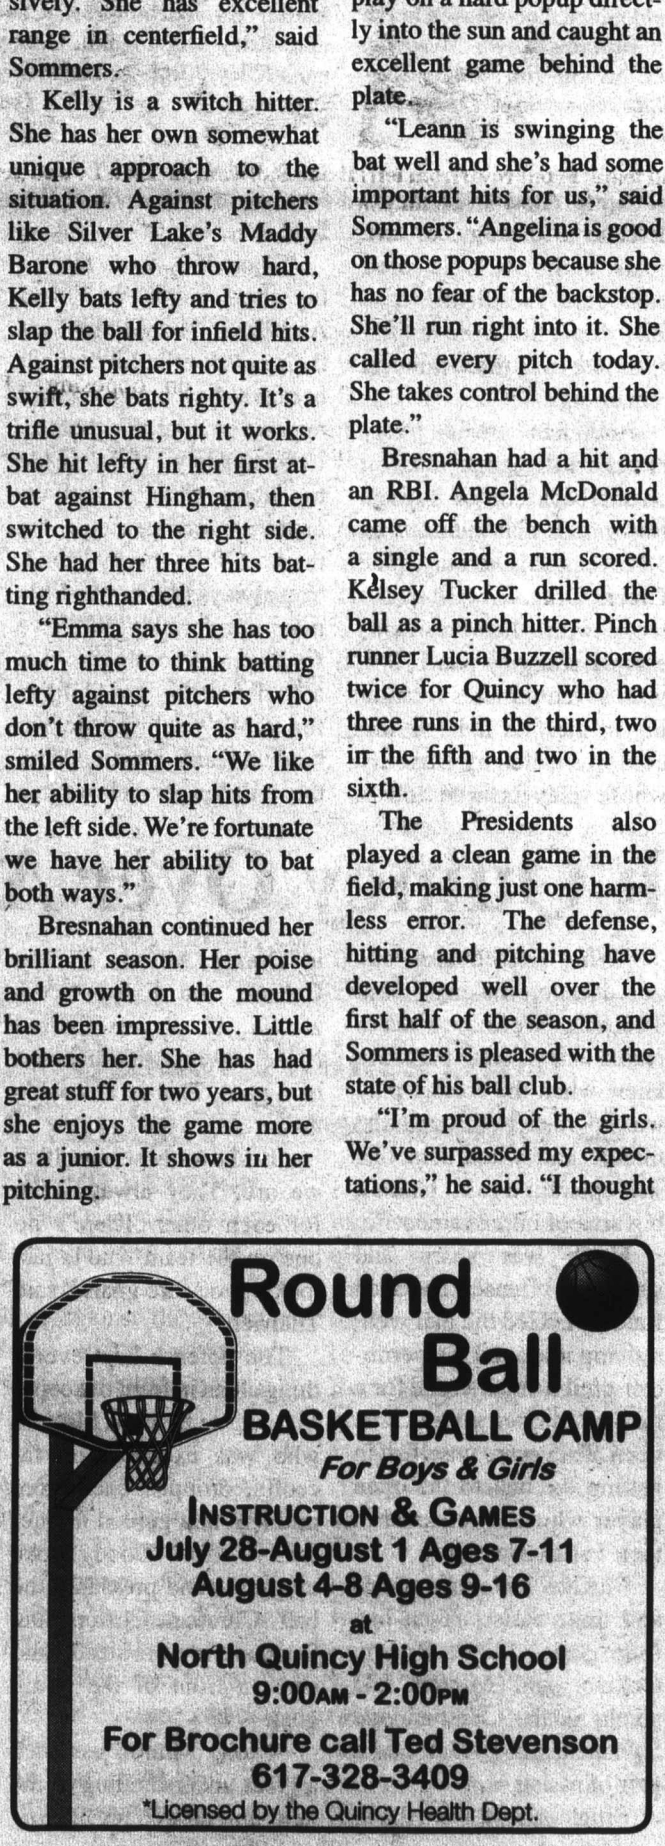
Bresnahan had a hit and an RBI. Angela McDonald came off the bench with a single and a run scored. Kelsey Tucker drilled the ball as a pinch hitter. Pinch runner Lucia Buzzell scored twice for Quincy who had three runs in the third, two in the fifth and two in the sixth.

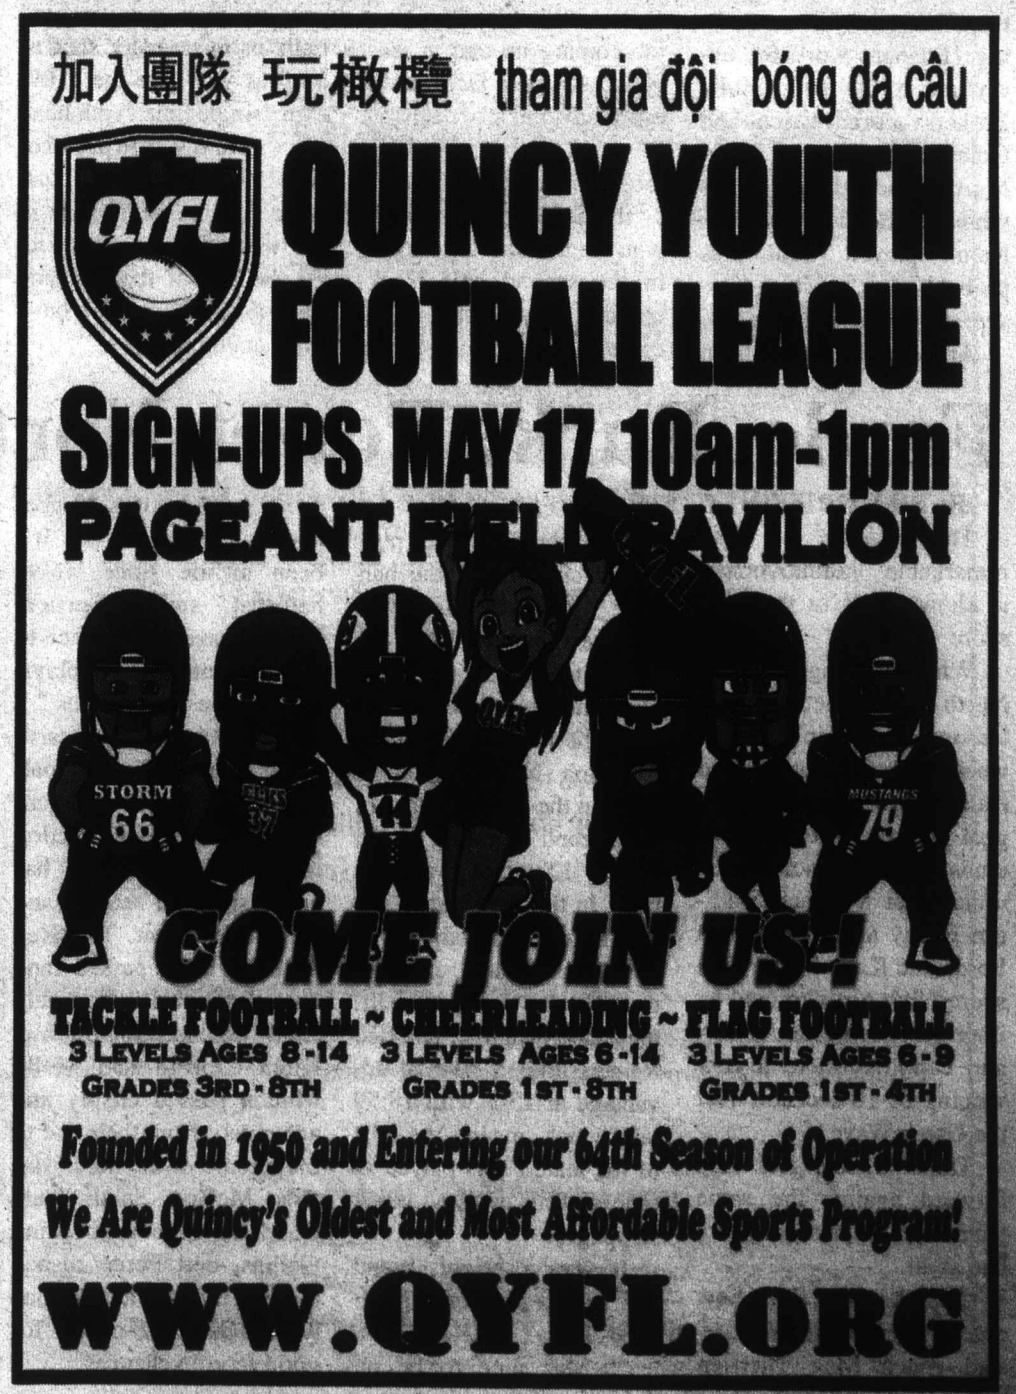
The Presidents also played a clean game in the field, making just one harmless error. The defense, hitting and pitching have developed well over the first half of the season, and Sommers is pleased with the state of his ball club.

"I'm proud of the girls. We've surpassed my expectations," he said. "I thought our pitching and defense would be good, but I wasn't sure about the hitting. We're swinging the bats well, putting runners on base, and driving them home."

Quincy meets North Quincy tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m.

LEANN McCOLGAN doubles in a run for Quincy in the Presidents' 7-1 win over Hingham. McGolgan also drove in the winning run against Middleboro last week.





Focused Presidents Poised For Tournament Berth

By JOE REARDON

Quincy girls lacrosse coach Alisa Arakelian gathered her team in the catacombs of Veterans Memorial Stadium and, for more than 30 minutes after the Presidents' 15-4 loss against a very tough Hingham squad last Thursday, addressed several points the girls needed to concentrate on for the remainder of the schedule.

Meetings like those can turn into defining moments when looking back at the season and Arakelian wanted to make sure the Presidents knew what was expected of them as they work towards a possible spot in the postseason. The team was frustrated with the loss to the Harbormen, despite one of its best efforts of the season.

"One or two of our players got down and sort of got frustrated - whether it was their own game or the way we were playing," said Arakelian. "Unfortunately, the score didn't really reflect how we played. A couple of our kids got frustrated and it started to bring the rest of the kids down. I was just trying to emphasize we needed to keep that positive head. It was a positive talk to reinforce to the kids what we need to do. We all have to be unified. You're only as strong as your weakest link. We all have to be together."

Arakelian is confident the points she stressed in the meeting got through to the Presidents after making Hingham work for every inch of the field. Gabby Zorkers scored twice and Courtney Ryan and Kayla McArdle added solo tallies while goaltender Madeline Kamb played what was probably her most aggressive game of the spring.

Arakelian has been working with her goalie in creating havoc for opposing teams in front of the Quincy tally and she took a big step forward with her play against the Harbormen. It's that kind of play from Kamb that the Presidents will need if they stamp their ticket for the tournament.

"I have to take my hat off to Maddy," said Arakelian. "I've asked her to really step up and step out. Some of the best goalies I've ever seen play, play as almost an eighth defender out there. They're not only in the goal, but they pick off passes, they help with transition balls and they're really just another man on the field. Maddy has stepped right into that role because she's very athletic, confident and aggressive. She's fit in there very well."

Quincy's defense was able to slow Hingham's high-powered offense, but the 8-4 Harbormen were still able to get to the net and when they did they put points on the board. The score was 4-0 before Ryan was able to cut through the defense and power home a tally from the right side, cutting it to 4-1 with 13:03 left in the first half. Hingham led 7-1 at the half and looked to be on the verge of breaking the game open.

"When they beat us, they were just so close to the net so it's very tough for a goalie to react when they're that close to you," said Arakelian. "Maddy did a great job coming up and at least getting in their faces, making them make a decision. I couldn't have asked for more from her."

It was Hingham, though, who came out hard early in the second half. Zorkers' first tally 36 seconds in came on a hard, short-corner shot to cut the lead to 7-2. Hingham's Ali Hill made it 8-2 with 21:37 remaining, but Zorkers made it a five-goal difference with 21:19 left for the 8-3 score.

"I strive for two things from my kids," said Arakelian. "You can miss every pass, not pick up any ground balls or miss every shot as long as you give me 110% every single time - your head stays up and you're proud of the 110% you gave. I just want them to have pride in the work they put forward. At the end of the day you have to say ' I couldn't have done anything more.'"

The Harbormen began to wear down Quincy's defense to the tune of five goals until McArdle fired home the Presidents' final tally to put the score at 14-4 with just over three minutes remaining.

Arakelian was very pleased with Quincy's effort on the back end of a tough two games that included an 18-5 loss to Duxbury. The Green Dragons had problems with the Presidents early, leading by just 1, 5-4, with seven minutes remaining in the first half. A timeout was called by Duxbury whose players were obviously frustrated by Quincy's tenacity at both ends of the field.

"Their kids were throwing their hands up," said Arakelian. "I told the kids their coach called a timeout because they haven't faced opposition like this before. Unfortunately they made too many changes and we couldn't compensate for them. 6-8 is pretty good. You always like to sit a little more comfortably. We have some games coming up that are definitely possibilities for us. We've played the two hardest teams already. With those under our belt we can certainly pick up stride. I prefer it this way because if we can go into the tournament with a winning record it will spring board us to play well and give us some positive reinforcement."

In other action, the Presidents Monday bowed to Hanover, 21-10.

Quincy has a great opportunity this week to clinch or get close to a tournament berth with games against Cardinal Spellman, Whitman-Hanson and Silver Lake. "I think we're in a good position to take them down one at a time," Arakelian said.

Forde, Burke Power North Quincy Over Abington

By BILL GRIFFIN

The measure of their remarkable improvement is shown well in the final score.

When Abington and North Quincy met in a girls lacrosse match in the first weeks of the season, the Red Raiders squeezed out a one-goal victory. When the two clubs met in a non-league rematch at Veterans Stadium Friday afternoon, Ciara Forde and Katie Burke each scored five goals to lead an impressive overall effort and carry North to a convincing 20-10 decision over the Green Wave.

That's a nine-goal step forward against the same team in less than month. Not bad at all.

"I think it does show how much we've improved," said coach Meg Therrien after her club went to 6-9 on the season. "We possessed and passed the ball well. We made far fewer turnovers than we did in the first match against them. We were much more fluid."

In the first meeting with Abington, North scored 12 goals in the entire match. In the second meeting, North scored 12 goals by halftime. In the first match, the Red Raiders gave up 11. In the second match, midway through the second half, they had given five. The Red Raiders built a 10-goal advantage at 15-5 with 18:59 left which meant the rest of the match was played in running time with no clock stoppages.

It was a bright, brand new feeling for North. It felt good.

"It was nice to be on the good side of a 10-goal lead and running time. It's been awhile since we've had that," smiled Therrien. "It also gave us a chance to work on setting up our plays, and that was good for us."

This was an impressive performance from goalkeeping to defense to transition to offense. Transition is the area Therrien has emphasized all season, and it was excellent. The Red Raiders both passed and carried the ball effectively from defense to offense. Kiera Clifford and Molly Minton passed crisply and accurately from their end to the middle of the field. Marissa McGue, Sarah Tsan, Charlotte Chretian, Aislinn Collins, and Forde rushed the ball into the attack zone with speed and power for good scoring chances.

"What I liked best was our decision-making," said Therrien. "We knew when to cradle and when to pass. We knew when the correct play was to rush it through the middle and when someone was open for a pass. That's a big area of improvement."

North was sharp and smart on offense. The Red Raiders cycled the ball well, moving it around the perimeter until a small crack for a rush or an open cutter came open. They were unselfish in getting the ball to the open player which is reflected in their balanced scoring.

McGue had three goals and three assists. Tsan had four goals. Molly Brown, Collins, and Minton had single goals. Chretian and Savannah Flynn each had a pair of assists.

Single assists went Jackie Doody, Minton, Forde, Collins, and Evlyn Scuzzarella. 12 players figured in the scoring with an assist or a goal. That is a coach's dream.

"It shows how unselfish we are. They always look for each other. There's no one on the team who is just looking to score goals," said Therrien.

The defense kept everything clean in front of keeper Marguerite Belcher. Minton, who was excellent on faceoffs, dropped back from midfield and guided the defensive effort. Doody broke up passes and pressured the ball. Chretian, Clifford and Scuzzarella were steady and sure in front of the North goal.

"Molly Minton has such a great understanding of the field and an eye for making the right pass," said Therrien. "Jackie Doody was outstanding. She caused turnovers and tracked the ball all over our end."

Belcher had 12 saves in goal, including several difficult stops off free shots or point-blank opportunities. She was out working with her coach 30 minutes before the match on reaction drills, and she showed her quick feet and stick during the match.

"I also like the way she has become more vocal. You can hear her all the time out there. She's directing us which is what a keeper should do," said Therrien.

In the first half, North ran eight unanswered goals in less than ten minutes to take control with a 9-2 lead. Tsan scored two on a rush

Red Raiders Drop Sacred Heart, 9-8

By JOE REARDON

North Quincy's lacrosse team won't be going to the tournament this spring, but Mark Nutley's squad is relishing the opportunity to take on the spoiler role as the season winds down.

Take Monday for example.

The Red Raiders (6-11) put a huge dent in Sacred Heart's postseason hopes and got a little revenge in process with a spirited 9-8 nonleague win at sunsplashed Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Saints (7-8) now have the task of winning two of their final three games to reach the playoffs. Sacred Heart had beaten North Quincy in a close 6-5 contest the first time the two teams met this season so the payback was satisfying for the Red Raiders.

Once again, the Red Raiders fell behind from the start, but the team ran down every ground ball and was patient working the ball towards the Saints' net.

"We spotted them four goals last time and two goals this time," said North Quincy head coach Mark Nutley. "We just had to keep clawing away. We had to finish. We had a bunch of shots on net. It was a good game though - a fun game.

"We're a Jekyl and Hyde team. One day we look like a lacrosse powerhouse and the next day we look like we've never played before. We're a hot and cold team. We outhustled them on ground balls. We didn't keep track of it, but I think most of the ground balls we came up with. That was a big thing - hustle, hustle, hustle. We're not a deep team either. We're still working on the simple stuff, passing and catching."

North Quincy played its best quarter of the season in the third, holding Sacred Heart scoreless and getting a tally from Mike Finn with 6:29 left for a 7-5 lead. Finn led the Red Raiders with four goals while Rob Hines, Chris Gorman, Tim Glynn, Pat Janerio and Cornelius Koch added single tallies.

"The third quarter we had the ball in their zone the whole time," said Nutley. "We only scored two goals but we had a lot of possession time which is huge."

Sacred Heart got on the board first with Dan Goldman firing home a goal from 10 yards out and then making a strong run towards the net and tucking the ball in for a 2-0 lead with 9:46 left in the opening quarter. Finn got the Red Raiders' offense moving when he scored his first goal by unleashing a laser from just outside the crease to make it 2-1. Finn tied it at 6:08 and then gave the Red Raiders the 3-2 lead with 2:40 left.

The Red Raiders continued to get their chances in the second with several opportunities in close, but it was the Saints who scored the next two goals with Kyle Ferreira tying it at 6:58 and Dan Goldman putting Sacred Heart ahead 34 seconds later to make it 4-3. North Quincy came right back, though, with consecutive tallies from Hines, Gorman and Koch for the 6-4 lead with 2:17 left in the half. Ferreira came back to score with 2:11 left to cut the advantage to 6-5 at the break.

After Finn's third quarter tally and a defensive effort that shut the Saints down, North Quincy saw the lead cut to 7-6 on a goal by Sean Coleman with 6:15 left in the game. Just under a minute later though it was Glynn who found the back of the net for a huge tally to make it 8-6. Janerio put the Saints in a deep hole with his goal at 5:01 to make it a three-goal contest, 9-6.

Sacred Heart made it interesting in the closing two minutes with goals from Jacob Hallam and Coleman with 27 seconds left to make it 9-8, but it wasn't quite enough to overtake the Red Raiders.

Tonight should be a good one with North Quincy facing Quincy. "They're on the cusp of making the tournament so that's a team we'd like to bounce a little bit if we could," said Nutley. "We'll see how it goes."

Presidents Bow To Duxbury, Edge Whitman-Hanson

By BILL GRIFFIN

There are days when the other team is simply swinging the bats too well.

Duxbury rapped out 15 hits and broke the game open with a six-run fourth inning en route a 15-4 win over Quincy in a Patriot League Keenan Division contest at Adams Field Monday afternoon.

"Duxbury is a good team fighting for first place in the league, and they swung the bats well today," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan.

Duxbury is 12-3 (8-2 in the league) on the season while Quincy slipped to 9-6 (5-5 in the league), one win shy of a berth in the tournament.

After Duxbury scored four in the first, Quincy battled back. Johnny Marsinelli and Tyler Beach each singled and stole a base to put runners on second and third. Matt Davis drilled a double to center to bring them home and cut the lead to 4-2.

Duxbury, who had five extra base hits and eight players hit safely, took advantage of the strong wind which was blowing straight out and upped the lead to 6-2 in the second. Duxbury then put it away with six in the fourth.

"They got up early, and they put the pressure on. It's tough to play from behind. We have to do a better job of coming to the game ready to play," said Bryan.

The Presidents were right on the ball as well. Quincy had ten hits and had men on base in every inning. The Presidents left nine runners on base and were a key hit away from a big inning of their own especially in the fourth and fifth when they stranded five baserunners

"We had our chances, but couldn't break through,"

NORTH QUINCY'S Emily Bryson set a personal best and took one step closer to breaking the coveted 11-minute barrier in the 2-mile at Saturday's State Coaches Invitational at Dilboy Stadium in Somerville. Bryson finished a step behind Div. 1 state cross country champion Kaley Richards of Lowell in 11:00:13. Richards was clocked in 10:59:10. Bryson's time is the fifth fastest in the state this spring. The junior shattered her personal best by 23 seconds and also set a new school record, breaking the mark established in 1984.

said Bryan.

Davis had a big day at the plate, going 3-3 with a double, two singles, a walk, a run scored and two RBI. Beach played a terrific game, going 3-4, stealing two bases and scoring a run. He also was excellent on the field, handling three chances cleanly, including a fine play going to his left on a Jake Reagan ground ball to start the game.

"Tyler played well. He had a good day at the plate," said Bryan.

Beach is 21-47 on then season for a .447 batting average. He has also drawn eight walks along with playing a strong shortstop.

Robbie Munroe and Liam Fitzmaurice each had a single and an RBI. Mike Pugsley had a single and drew two walks. Marsinelli added a single, a stolen base, and a run scored while Bobby Salvucci drew a walk and scored a run for Quincy.

"We had opportunities, but you can't fall behind like that against a good team like Duxbury," said Bryan.

Quincy's infield play was excellent, David Cooper at third and Pugsley at second played solid defensive games along with Beach.

Quincy scored its final two runs in the fifth. Davis singled, Salvucci reached on an error, and Munroe singled for one run. Fitzmaurice laced a single to center to score the final run of the inning.

In other action last week, Quincy edged Whitman-Hanson, 7-6. Pugsley picked up the win with three innings of shutout relief. Pugsley and Padraig Geaney each had a pair of hits while Cooper had a hit and drove home the tying run.

Silver Lake edged Quincy, 3-2 despite another fine pitching performance from senior righthander Kenny Sorensen. Sorensen is 3-1 with a 1:16 ERA, and has walked just two batters in 36 innings of work. Beach went 2-4 in the game.

Hingham stopped the Presidents, 6-3. Fitzmaurice and Marsinelli each had a pair hits.

Quincy meets North today (Thursday) at Adams Field at 6:30 p.m.

Kids' Walk To Cure Diabetes May 31

The third annual JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes will be held Saturday, May 31.

The 3K walk will kick off at 10 a.m. from the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School and wrap up approximately 45 minutes later with family fun including healthy snacks, a DJ, dancing and face painting.

Walkers should arrive at the school prior to the walk by 9:30 a.m.

The Walk is a partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation and many Quincy Public School students, friends, and family.

The money raised will go toward funding for research, treatments, and eventually a cure for Type 1 Diabetes, a disease that affects more than 18 million Americans, with 15,000 children diagnosed each year. JDRF spends more on research from its fundraising than any other nonprofit, with 80% of monies raised going directly to research and development, and just 20% to administrative costs. JDRF is also the largest organization that funds Type 1 Diabetes research in the world.

One of the fundraising tools is the sale of "Quincy Strong" T-shirts and Quincy walk bracelets.

The bracelets can be purchased at many of the walk participating schools including: Beechwood Knoll Elementary, Bernazzani Elementary, Merrymount Elementary, Montclair Elementary, Lincoln-Hancock Elementary, Squantum Elementary, Parker Elementary, Sterling Middle School, Central Middle School and Atlantic Middle School,

For more information about the walk or sales of fundraising items contact walk committee members Stephen and Jennifer Golden at 617-786-8738.

Forde, Burke Power Raiders Over Abington

and a pass from Minton in the spree. McGue had a pair on a quick burst off a faceoff and a beautiful feed from Flynn. Forde connected off two terrific fakes in front of the cage. Chretian scored on a free shot and Burke clicked on a good pass through the middle from McGue.

Burke later connected on two wraparounds from behind the net for a 12-4 halftime lead which quickly expanded to the ten-goal lead and running time in the second half.

Offense, defense, transition, and goal-keeping. Those are four parts to the game and North was just fine in all of them.

"The leadership has been very good and it's been a matter of gaining experience and learning what to do. It's been a season of great improvement for us," said Therrien.

North meets Quincy tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

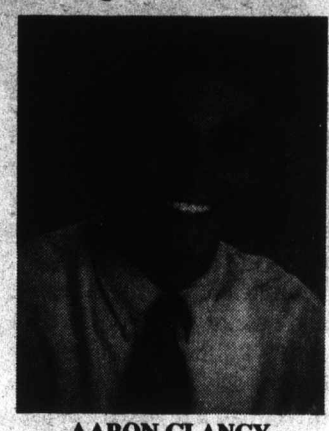
Aaron Clancy Joins U-18 Quincy Hockey

As the city's U-18 hockey team gears up for its first appearance in the annual South Shore Town Cup (SSTC), emerging Catholic Conference All Star and junior Catholic Memorial (CM) Hockey Co-Captain, Aaron Clancy may be a hidden jewel amongst the Commonwealth's top high school hockey talent next year.

The U-18 Quincy Hockey SSTC team is primarily made up of QHS and NQHS hockey players. However, given the rare opportunity to represent the city, Clancy remarked on "the honor to play with many of my former Quincy Youth Hockey (QYH) teammates on behalf of the city."

Many of these hockey relationships stemmed from his early pond (Butler's) hockey days behind the former Central Middle School. Traditionally ensconced in fierce public and private school rivalries, QHS junior ice mates, Jake Hallisey and Bryan O'Callaghan were the first to recommend the Knight forward and "welcomed Aaron's participation" on the Quincy U-18 team.



AARON CLANCY

Historically, Quincy has been a melting pot for hockey talent, while occasionally seeing that rare athlete who excels across three-sports at his or her respective high school.

For a three-sport letterman, Clancy has quietly built an impressive set of academic and athletic credentials. As a junior scholar, he was inducted into both the National Honor Society and Latin National Honor Society. His leadership outside the classroom was also recognized by his Knight teammates on the diamond, gridiron, and ice of which he is the starting catcher for the baseball team and plays both offense (fullback) and defensive end in football. Additionally, he was designated 2014-15 team captain elect for the Catholic Memorial football and hockey teams.

Generally a post-season fixture in the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) tournaments Super-8 hockey division, Catholic Memorial's Athletic Director and Head Football Coach Alex Campea added that "Aaron is a hardworking and talented young athlete, he leads by example both on and off the field of play. He is well respected by his peers, coaches and faculty, here at CM."

Like most high school juniors, Clancy has just started looking at colleges and is hoping to leverage very impressive athletic and academic achievements at CM. However he remains humble and strives to maintain a delicate balance between his daily academic and athletic demands, which he credits "his Mom and Dads (Kathryn and Glenn) support". He is also very proud of his QYH and Merrymount heritage. In lieu of any baseball game conflicts, Clancy routinely makes many of the U-18 team's early morning skills sessions before school. "Probably Aaron's most impressive qualities are his resilient work ethic and selfless dedication in all of his endeavors, which extend to civic responsibilities as a youth hockey camp director in the summer and a peer minister at CM", said U-18 Coach Mike Hussey, who played at arch rival BC High and was a former 3-sport athlete at the US Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, NY.

While the squirt and pee wee level teams have yet to earn a berth in any of the SSTC level medal rounds to date, Quincy U-14 Bantam team coach Jim O'Leary hopes they can reverse that trend at the Bog in Kingston this week. Courtesy of Pro Edge Sports, CM alumnus, Quincy natives Doug Dolan and assistant U-18 Quincy coach Brian O'Hanley, the Quincy players are already expanding their hockey conditioning before school.

With 12 South Shore teams registered for the annual Town Cup, the June 8th U-18 SSTC hockey tournament is shaping up to be a good one.

Youth Football, Cheer Sign-Ups Saturday

Quincy Youth Football & Cheerleading kicks off its 64th preseason with the annual League-Wide Sign Up Day, Saturday, May 17 at Pageant Field Pavilion from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Quincy Youth Football League was founded in 1950 and is comprised of six franchises located in Quincy and Milton: West Quincy Elks, Quincy Point Panthers, North Quincy Apaches, Houghs Neck Manets, Squantum Storm and Milton Mustangs.

The QYFL offers:

- Tackle Football: 3 Levels of Play for children ages 8-14 entering grades 3rd -8th
- Cheerleading: 3 Level of Cheering for children ages 6-14 entering grades 1st-8th.
- Flag Football: 2 Levels Flag for children ages 6-9 entering grades 1st-4th.

The QYFL operates on "Neighborhood Based" format, where players and cheerleaders play with their neighbors for the local team. Travel requirements are very minimal, all practices are held at neighborhood fields and games are played in Quincy and in Milton.

QYFL costs are $125 for Tackle, $100 for Cheerleading and $75 for Flag. Each team supplies all the necessary equipment and uniforms and provides a safe and structured environment for children to learn their chosen sport.

For more information, contact QYFL Vice-President, Sean Halpin at (617)980-2674 or email seanhalpin1@comcast.net.

PELVIC PAIN DURING PREGNANCY

Although the area located at the point where the hips meet at the front of the pelvis is typically quite stable, hormonal changes during pregnancy relax the ligaments to allow for movement. In the event that the ligaments loosen to the point where a misalignment of this joint occurs, pregnant women will experience varying degrees of pain. This pain at the front of the pelvic girdle can be mild or so severe that pregnant women may experience difficulty walking, lifting and carrying objects, rolling in bed, climbing stairs, getting in and out of the car, and standing. Because it is not advisable that pregnant women take anti-inflammatory drugs, chiropractic treatment of the underlying cause is often preferred.

Are you pregnant? Are you experiencing any of the symptoms talked about in today's column? We not only address low back pain, but a variety of other health conditions as well. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are trained and licensed to treat the entire neuromusculoskeletal system and can help people lead healthier lives by focusing on wellness and prevention. For professional chiropractic care we invite you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. Seek chiropractic care and try to exercise daily. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Pregnancy-related pelvic girdle pain (PPGP) can occur at any time during pregnancy or after giving birth, but it typically begins in the second trimester.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On May 2, 2014 at approximately 2:50 p.m., Officer Timothy Kaes was working on a private detail in the middle of the intersection of Stedman Street and Ellis Street when he observed a Volvo traveling towards him and the construction site at a high rate of speed.

The Officer stepped towards the oncoming vehicle, attempting to get the driver's attention by putting his hands up to stop the vehicle. The Officer grew concerned for the work crew as the driver continued on, passing through the stop sign.

Officer Kaes stepped closer to the oncoming vehicle with his arms raised to stop, which resulted in the vehicle striking his arm as it went through the intersection. This apparently caught the driver's attention and the vehicle stopped approximately 20 feet beyond the intersection. Officer Kaes ran up to the vehicle and called for an area car to assist.

The Officer asked the driver several times for his license and registration and the driver finally said he did not have his license with him. The driver then began moving about the inside of his vehicle as if looking for something. For his safety, the Officer ordered the driver to shut off his motor vehicle and turn over the keys. The driver seemed impaired and the Officer did not want the driver to leave the scene. The driver refused to give up his keys so the Officer reached inside the vehicle towards the ignition. The driver responded by reaching for the keys with his right hand while taking his left hand to ward off the Officer from reaching for the keys.

Fearing that the driver was going to start up the vehicle and drive away with the Officer hanging in a bad position, Officer Kaes put both hands on the driver and attempted to remove him from the vehicle as he informed the driver he was under arrest. The driver continued to fight and resist. Sergeant Steve O'Donoghue and Detective Dennis Keenan arrived on scene and saw the potential danger Officer Kaes was in. The three Officers were able to extract the driver from the vehicle and he was immediately handcuffed and transported to the station for booking.

With the situation now stabilized, Detective Keenan found a wallet with a passport identification with a name and date of birth and an EBT card with the same name. A license check showed that the driver had a revoked license.

Detective Keenan also located a plastic cup full of brown liquid in a cup holder along with a half empty bottle of single malt scotch whiskey. The Detective also noticed clear plastic bags containing a white powder substance sitting next to the cup holder in the interior of the door, which was determined to be cocaine.

A check of the driver's criminal record showed that he had been charged and found guilty of possession of a Class B substance. The driver, a 59 year old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Disobeying a traffic control signal, Operating after license revoked, Knowingly resisting arrest, possession of class B subsequent offense, drinking from an open container in a motor vehicle and Assault and Battery on a Police Officer." Nice Work!

DRIVEWAY PAVING SCAMS: It's that time of year! A man knocks on your door and says he has extra asphalt and is willing to pave your driveway at a discounted price. His high pressure approach often confuses and intimidates residents. You may not be getting a deal and could be scammed. If you agree to hire this man, here is what likely happens:

Workers and equipment suddenly appear and begin "working" on your driveway. At some point, the conman claims a mistake was made and you owe thousands more than the original price. He threatens that if you refuse to pay, the "work" will cease. You may be escorted to the bank to withdraw money. When you realize the scam you try to cancel the check only to learn it was cashed within minutes of it being written. A second scam is that the amount of asphalt applied comes up short and the scammer tells you that you need to pay for more asphalt to finish the job. There is also the scam of making a pavement in good faith and not receiving any work. Paving scams like this occur regularly in Massachusetts and increase during spring and summer. The perpetrators target senior citizens and are well known to police across the country. Criminal charges vary by state but are commonly filed. Avoid victimization and consider the following suggestions:

- Beware of unsolicited offers to do paving work. Do not let the solicitors inside your home. Calmly but firmly tell the solicitors you are not interested and tell them to leave your property. If they refuse your instructions call the police.
- Educate yourself and your family. Search the internet for "paving scams."
- Ask to see proof of the solicitors' insurance. Conmen rarely have worker's compensation insurance and if one of them is injured at your home, the claim could be made against your homeowner's insurance.
- Call the Police if you are even considering hiring such a company. Let us check them out. Call the police if they begin "working" without your consent for service.
- Be a good neighbor. Paving scams target senior citizens.

Interior Decorating Tips

Dear Secretary of the Interior:

I rent a condo with an all-white kitchen: cabinets, counter tops, appliances, and wall color (which I cannot change.) In lieu of purchased accessories, I can sew and take great photographs. Any ideas for adding color? Deanna

Dear Deanna:

By all means, put your talents to work to create a personalized space you can brag about. Every room needs a little whimsy, so try these ideas. Make a patchwork wall-hanging or sew your own curtains or tablecloth using kitchen-y fabric with a retro print or one with fruits or vegetables. Take your camera to the supermarket and snap photos of brightly colored cereal boxes and enlarge them to 8 x 10 and place them along the backsplash. Not only will you have a colorful room but a unique one, too.

Where are your favorite places to shop for accessories? Kathie

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Dear Kathie:

Although I frequent places like HomeGoods, Pier 1, and Bed Bath & Beyond, I love the hunt at a thrift store, yard sale, a gift shop I find while on vacation, or at craft, quilt, or home shows. But I have had great luck with budget-friendly finds at Target, Home Depot, and Lowes. Also, I prefer to shop at small local businesses like the Queen's Garden in South Weymouth and Goodies II in Scituate harbor. Finally, don't overlook the craft stores like Michaels Arts and Crafts (and watch for their frequent coupons!)

What are your favorite decorating magazines? Alison

Dear Alison:

My favorite is This Old House, even though I live in an urban condo. I like its how-to and instructional columns —I always learn something and often copy the articles for my continuing ed students. Other favorites include Coastal Living, HGTV Magazine, House Beautiful, Southern Living, Traditional Home, and any of the special publications from Better Homes and Garden like Do It Yourself. When traveling to a foreign country, I always pick up a few decorating magazines to look for new trends and design ideas—even if they are not in English, I can admire the pictures!

Do you have a question on interior decorating? Send it to barbara@sec-interior and it may get printed in a future issue of The Quincy Sun.

Getting Your Home Ready To Sell

This Is A Hammer

By SAMANTHA MAZZOTTA

Houses can sell in any condition -- but the price will take a hit if it needs a lot of work. I vividly recall being shown a triple-decker in East Boston several years ago with foundation problems so bad, the structure was tilting at an alarming angle. The house sold, but at about one-third the average price for homes in that neighborhood.

If the house is structurally sound, you may be able to raise its sale price by investing some time and sweat into freshening up its appearance, outside and in. A fresh coat of paint alone can make a home's value jump, and it's not a huge investment.

Make a plan to do specific things over several weekends, or even one day a week if that's all the time you have. Enlist family and friends to help. Put together a budget ahead of time so you know how much you can spend on minor repairs.

• Spruce up the house exterior by keeping the lawn mowed and the hedges trimmed. Tear out any dead vegetation. Plant a few flowers along the walkway or in front of the house.

• De-clutter the entire home interior, too. If there's a lot of furniture or keepsakes, if the closets are full of clothes, find out what your parents want to keep, sell or distribute. If they can't come to the house to show you, take pictures of all the items, put them on your laptop and go through them with your parents.

• Clean as much as possible: Get dust and cobwebs out of the house, wipe the walls clean and get the kitchen and bathrooms as sparkling as possible.

• Give interior walls a fresh coat of paint. Remove peeling or torn wallpaper, and repair small holes and dings in the walls.

• Check out websites or books about staging a house. HGTV has some quick tips, as well as a room-by-room staging guide.

• Finally, if the house has some major repair issues, such as needing a new roof, foundation or plumbing issues, talk with the broker about them and how these can affect the sale of the home.

HOME TIP: Make decluttering and staging a home easier by removing personal items, photos and memorabilia first -- it takes much of the emotion out of the decision-making.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An unexpected development could change the Arian's perspective on a potential investment. Keep an open mind. Ignore the double talk and act only on the facts.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surge of support helps you keep your long-standing commitment to colleagues who rely on you for guidance. Ignore any attempts to get you to ease up on your efforts.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family continues to be the dominant factor, but career matters also take on new importance. You might even be able to combine elements of the two in some surprising, productive way.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A realistic view of a workplace or personal situation helps you deal with it more constructively once you know where the truth lies. Reserve the weekend for someone special.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) As much as you Leos or Leonas might be intrigued by the "sunny" prospects touted for a potential investment, be careful that you don't allow the glare to blind you to its essential details.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A friend's problem brings out the Virgo's nurturing nature in full force. However, don't go it alone. Allow others to pitch in and help share the responsibilities you've assumed.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business decision might need to be put off until a colleague's personal matter is resolved. Use this time to work on another business matter that you've been anxious to get to.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Relationships (personal or professional) might appear to be stalled because of details that keep cropping up and that need tending to. Be patient. A path begins to clear soon.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A promotion could cause resentment among envious colleagues. But others recognize how hard you worked to earn it, and will be there to support you if you need them.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Handling a delicate personal matter needs both your wisdom and your warmth. Expect some setbacks, but stay with it. The outcome will more than justify your efforts.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resist the temptation to cut corners just because time is short. Best to move ahead step by step so you don't overlook anything that might later create time-wasting complications.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use the good will you recently earned with that well-received project to pitch your ideas for a new project. Expect some tough competition, though, from an unlikely source.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of family extends beyond your personal life to include others to whom you generously extend your care and affection.

OBITUARIES

Richard A. Benson, 78

RICHARD A. BENSON

Funeral services for Richard A. Benson, 78, of Weymouth and formerly Quincy were held May 9 at Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Mr. Benson died peacefully May 6 at home surrounded by his loving family.

He was born in Hyde Park, raised and educated there and had lived in Weymouth for 30 years, previously in Quincy. He was a certified arborist, owner and operator of the Benson Tree and Landscape Service in Weymouth for 55 years and had been retired eight years.

He served in the U.S Army during the Korean War era. Mr. Benson was an avid swimmer and loved his pool. He was a garden railroad enthusiast and also enjoyed travelling.

Devoted father of Sandra M. Buckley and her husband John of Weymouth. Longtime companion and best friend of Jeanne. Former husband of the late Lorraine A. (Scheinck) Stewart.

Private interment.

Memorial donations may be made to the Carmelite Nuns, OCD, 16 Mount Pleasant Ave., Boston, MA 02119.

Joan L. Hilchey, 74

A funeral service for Joan L. (Young) Hilchey, 74, of Quincy was held Monday at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. Hilchey died May 7.

She was born and raised in Maryland and lived in Dorchester before moving to Quincy, where she resided for the past 27 years. Mrs. Hilchey enjoyed taking trips to New Hampshire, shopping, and going to the beach. Most of all she adored spending time with her grandchildren, who where the cornerstone of her life. She will be missed by all who had the pleasure to have known her.

Beloved wife of 52 years to George Hilchey of Quincy. Loving mother of Karen R. Hilchey of Quincy, Joyce M. McGee and her husband Robert of Quincy, and Kenneth E. Hilchey and his wife Christine of Plymouth. Sister of the late Charles Young. Cherished grandmother of Kenneth and Maureen Hilchey of Plymouth and Colleen McGee of Quincy.

Interment was at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation, P.O. Box 650309, Dallas, TX 75265.

Robert P. Barker, 81

ROBERT P. BARKER

A funeral Mass for Robert P. "Bob" Barker, 81, of Weymouth was celebrated May 10 at St. Albert the Great Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Barker died May 3.

He was a veteran of the U.S. Army. He was the owner and operator of Quincy Typewriter in Quincy Center for many years.

An antique car enthusiast, Mr. Barker was a lifetime member of South Shore Antique Auto Club. He will be remembered for his great sense of humor and generosity in helping others.

He was the beloved husband of Marilyn C. (Mullins) Barker. Loving father of Michael Barker of Raynham and Gerald Barker of Weymouth. Brother of Richard Barker of CA, Edward Barker of Boston, Mary Goodell of Braintree, and the late Louis Barker and Rose Collier.

Funeral arrangements were made by McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Interment at a later date.

Louis T. DiTullio, Jr.

LOUIS T. DITULLIO, JR.

A memorial service for Louis T. DiTullio, Jr., formerly of Quincy and Holbrook, was held Tuesday at St. Joseph's Church, Holbrook.

Mr. DiTullio died April 28 in Vero Beach, Fla., following a long illness.

He was a member of Teamsters' Local 122. His passions were his family and baseball. He was a member of both the Park and Cranberry Leagues Halls of Fame for his outstanding accomplishments as a player, and served as the Cranberry League's commissioner for several years.

In Loving Memory of DENIS P. CRONIN
on his Birthday
May 5, 1928 – October 14, 2004

You can only have one father,
Patient, kind and true;
No other friend in all the world,
Will be the same to you.
When other friends forsake you,
To father you will return,
For all his loving kindness,
He asks nothing in return.
As we look upon his picture,
Sweet memories we recall
Of a face so full of sunshine,
And a smile for one and all.
Sweet Jesus take this message,
To our dear father up above;
Tell him how we miss him,
And give him all our love.

"Ar dheis De go raibh a anam"
May his soul be on God's right hand side.

Lovingly remembered and Sadly Missed by: Margaret, Jerry, Jack, Dan, Denise, Eileen, Peggy, Denis, Mike, his 17 grandchildren and many friends.

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton Offers Community Health Grants

Grant Applications Due June 27

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) is offering mini-grants in amounts ranging from $500 up to $1,500 to residents, local service agencies, non-profit organizations, Boards of Health, coalitions and community groups to address specific community health needs outlined in the hospital's 2014 Community Health Needs Assessment.

Grant applications are available through the hospital, and applicants should submit proposals which use proven or promising practices to improve primary care, disease prevention and/or health promotion for vulnerable populations with a focus on at least one of the following issue priorities:

- Provide access to affordable, community-based medical or preventive services, particularly for seniors;
- Offer educational programs and/or screenings to address chronic disease prevention and education that impacts vulnerable populations;
- Increase awareness of substance abuse as a growing health problem with a focus on education and prevention;
- Enhance community knowledge of mental health as a primary health issue and promote available mental health resources and supports;
- Develop programming that addresses health education around obesity and nutrition;
- Improve access to care by promoting existing public transportation options.

Applications must be for programs in BID-Milton's market area of Milton, Randolph, Quincy, Dorchester, Hyde Park, Canton, Braintree or Weymouth, and are due Friday, June 27.

For more information or to receive a grant application email robert_mccrystal@miltonhospital.org or call 617-313-1590.

"The high standard maintained by Mr. Agnitti not only benefits Agnitti Insurance Agency, Inc., but the insurance profession as a whole," said Dr. William T. Hold, CIC, CPCU, CLU, and President of the Society of CIC.

Blue Hills Green Up Day June 8

The public is invited to join the Friends of the Blue Hills for a spring festival of stewardship and fun.

The annual Green Up Day will be held on Sunday, June 8, from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at the Ponkapoag AMC Cabins. Volunteers will enjoy music, face painting, food and drink, crafts and a scavenger hunt while helping with an essential task: pulling up invasive weeds that threaten the Blue Hills.

Many plants look alike for most of the visitors to the 7,000 acre Blue Hills reservation, yet many of the plants that have expanded in recent years are not native to the park and threaten to crowd out naturally occurring species. Vigorous weeding during the warmer months helps maintain a healthy balance in the forest.

Meg McMillen, a history teacher and community service coordinator at Quincy High, is encouraging her students to volunteer at Green Up in order to complete the required community service hours.

"This is a perfect event for all those students who are working to get their hours," McMillen said. "And it is a great chance for the kids to be outdoors, doing something important, and having a good time doing it."

Volunteers should park at Temple Beth David, 1060 Randolph St., in Canton. It is a short, scenic walk to the cabins.

The event is rain or shine, and while some gloves will be available for weeding, volunteers are encouraged to bring their own gardening gloves if they have them. Please RSVP to Greenup@FriendsoftheBlueHills.org or 617-696-8248.

Friends of the Blue Hills was founded in 1979 and has been working for 35 years to protect the Blue Hills Reservation's beauty, natural habitats, and recreational opportunities. The Blue Hills has 22 hilltops, 125 miles of hiking trails, and spans six towns: Braintree, Canton, Dedham, Milton, Quincy and Randolph.

For more information, visit www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org.

School Partnership Receives $3,600 Donation

Granite Telecommunications, LLC, a Quincy School - Community Partnership partner, has donated $3,600 to the Quincy Public Schools as a result of a "Wear Jeans to Work Day" held on May 2.

Employees of Granite made a $3 donation and then could wear jeans to work. Granite Telecommunications matched each donation made.

The donated funds will be used to purchase and install three short throw classroom projectors at the Montclair Elementary School.

John Adams Health Walk Saturday

John Adams Health Walk will kick off its first walk of the season Saturday, May 17 at 8 a.m. at Pageant Field.

This is a rain or shine event. Baby carriages and friendly dogs on leashes are welcomed.

The event is open to all, there is no sign up, and free parking is available. The walk is 3.4 miles in length.

The committee's goal is to see the establishment of a permanent trail in Quincy in honor of John Adams, a founding father, pride of Quincy and avid exerciser.

The proposed amendments include:

By deleting Section 8.1.2 in its entirely and by substituting therein the following Section 8.1.2:

"The FPOD includes all flood hazard areas within the City of Quincy designated as Zones A, AE and VE on the Norfolk County Flood Insurance Rate Map (FIRM), issued by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) for the administration of the National Flood Insurance Program. The map panels of the Norfolk County FIRM that are wholly or partially within the City of Quincy are panel numbers 20521C0202E, 25021C0204E, 25021C0206E, 25021C0207E, and 25021C0208E dated July 17, 2012, and panel numbers 20521C0066F, 25021C0067F, 25021C0068F, 25021C0069F, 25021C0086F, 25021C0088F, 25021C0089F, 25021C0226F and 25021C0227F dated June 9, 2014. The exact boundaries of the District may be defined by the 100-year base flood elevations shown on the FIRM and further defined by the Norfolk County Flood Insurance Study (FIS) report dated June 9, 2014. The FIRM and FIS report are incorporated herein by reference and are on file with the City Clerk, Planning Board, and the Director of Inspectional Services".

A copy of the proposed amendment may be reviewed in the Office of the City Clerk, 1259 Hancock Street, Quincy, Ma. During regular business hours 8:30 A.M. – 4:30 P.M.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
PURCHASING DEPARTMENT
1305 HANCOCK ST., QUINCY, MA 02169

Invites sealed bids/proposals for furnishing and delivering to the City of Quincy:

LAW DEPARTMENT SALE OF CENTRAL MIDDLE SCHOOL MAY 29, 2014 @ 11:00 A.M.

In accordance with M.G.L. Chapter 30B, The City of Quincy is offering for sale, through the Request for Proposal ("RFP") process, and in accordance with the provisions of Council Order No 2014-049. Proposals will be received at the office of the Purchasing Department; City Hall; 1305 Hancock Street; Quincy, MA 02169, until Thursday, May 29, 2014 at 11:00 a.m. This bid is available on the City of Quincy's website: www.quincyma.gov

The City is requesting proposals from interested parties, with statements of qualifications, to purchase and develop the Property in accordance with design standards and restrictions specified herein. It is the objective of the City that the Property be developed for residential occupancy which is at a scale appropriate to the site, consistent with neighborhood characteristics and in compliance with existing zoning and other restriction s, as may be amended or accepted, all as set forth in this RFP. The City recognizes the need to create the highest and best use for its assets and will entertain development proposals to that end.

The Property is designated as Map 1124, Block 5 on the City Assessors' maps, comprised of and comprises 1.96 acres of land, more or less. The Property currently is improved by a three story, 59,490 square foot, masonry building and the original section of which was constructed in 1890. The Property was designed and occupied as a high school, then a middle school, but was deemed obsolete for educational purposes and has been vacant since October, 2013.

Non-Price Bid/Proposals must be in a sealed envelope and price proposals must be in a separate sealed envelope. The outside of the sealed envelopes are to be clearly marked "RFP - NON PRICE PROPOSAL ENCLOSED" with time/date of RFP and "RFP - PRICE PROPOSAL ENCLOSED" with time/date of RFP.

Bids/Proposals will be received at the Purchasing Office until the time and date stated above, at which time and date they will be opened and registered. Late Bids/Proposals, delivered by mail or in person, will be rejected.

Detailed specifications are available on-line at the City of Quincy's website: and also available at the office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, 02169, between the hours of 8:30 AM and 4:30 PM

The City of Quincy reserves the right to withdraw the Request for Proposal; to reject any and all proposals; and to accept any proposal deemed to be in the best interest of the City of Quincy.

Thomas P. Koch, MAYOR
Kathryn R. Hobin, Chief Procurement Officer

Holy Spirit Novena
Holy Spirit. You who solve all problems, light all roads so I can obtain my goal; You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life You are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank You for all things as You confirm once again that I never want to be separated from You, even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with You in eternal glory. Thank You for your mercy toward me and mine. Say this prayer for three consecutive days, the favor will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Prayer must be published immediately without mentioning the favor.

The Quincy Sun

Visitor Guide
2014 Tourism Season

City of Quincy, Massachusetts
Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

We cherish our history in this great City, and it is once again my distinct pleasure to introduce The Quincy's Sun's special "Historic Quincy" supplement celebrating the great heritage and proud history of our City of Presidents.

Inside the pages of "Historic Quincy," you will find a helpful guide to Quincy's rich past – The Adams National Historic Park and presidential homestead; the United First Parish Church, home to the crypts of John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams; Hancock Cemetery; the Adams Academy and the Quincy Historical Society; our granite and shipbuilding history and so much more.

Our community takes its responsibility to protect and enhance this heritage very seriously, symbolized by an unprecedented investment in historic preservation over the last several years. As you walk through Quincy Center this summer, you'll come across a number of major projects that will help preserve our history for years to come.

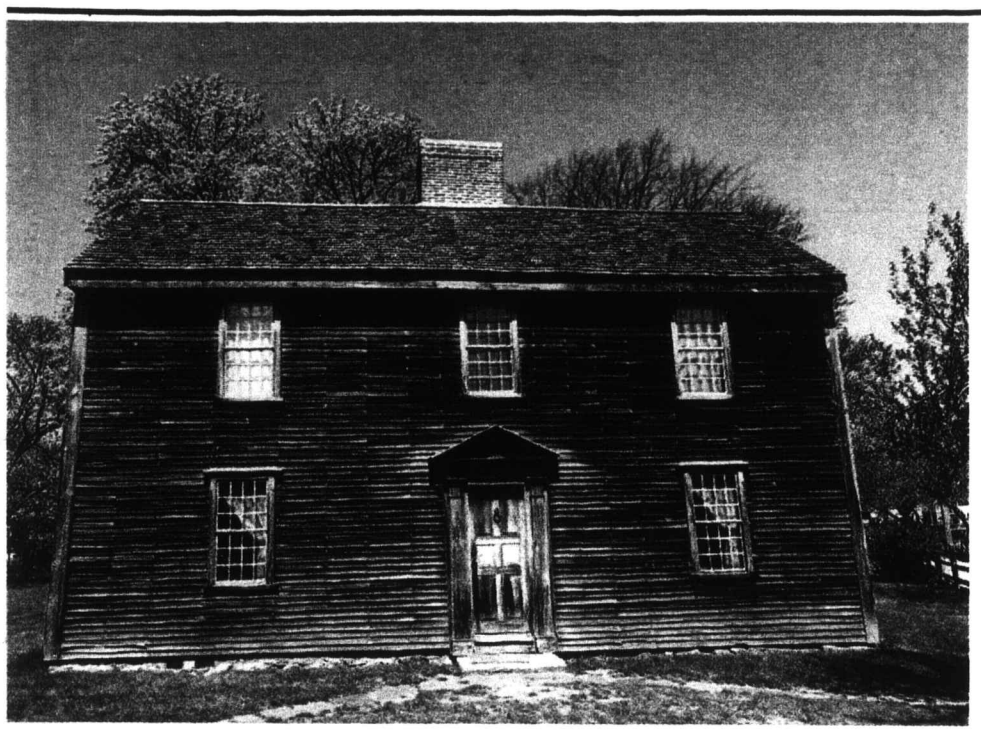
Our original City Hall, built in 1844 and one of our nation's oldest functioning local government buildings, is undergoing a complete restoration. Next door to City Hall, gravestones in our Colonial-era Hancock Cemetery are being meticulously preserved. And just a few blocks away the architectural masterpiece that is the former Coddington School is about to get new life as a fully refurbished City office building.

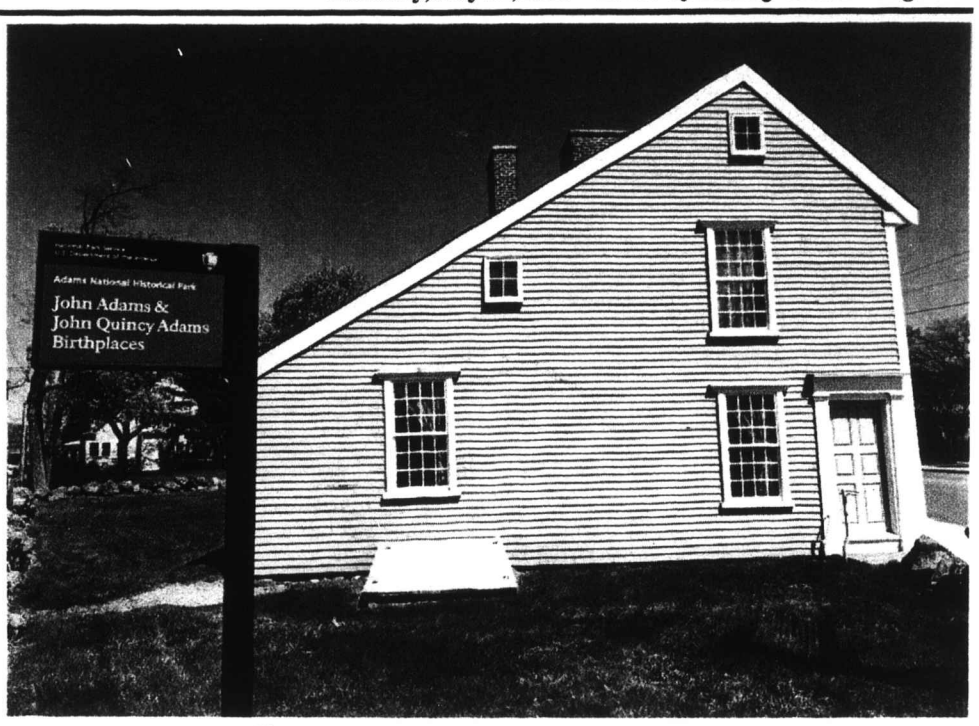
Tying all of this together is the Adams Green. Major work will continue throughout the summer on a transportation project that will make the area around City Hall and the First Church more accessible to pedestrians and welcoming to visitors.

I hope you will take the time to visit the Church this summer, and I encourage you to discover all that Quincy has to offer, from our 27 miles of coastline to our award-winning restaurants and of course, to our history.

THOMAS P. KOCH

Mayor, The City of Quincy





THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams (left) and his son, John Quincy Adams (right), the Second and Sixth Presidents of the United States were born, is the only location in the country where two Presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. It is a National Historical Site under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service.

Birthplaces Of John And John Quincy Adams

First Father And Son Presidents

They could be called two of the oldest houses in America, although no one knows exactly when they were built and they have been restored and patched so many times in the past 300 or so years that it's doubtful how much of the original material remains.

When the cottage at 133 Franklin St. was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the one at 141 Franklin St. as early as 1663 when it was little more than a one room shack with a fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

Together, the modest buildings are the birthplaces of John Adams, the Second President of the United States, and John Quincy Adams, his son, the Sixth President of the United States.

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and shoemaker, and his wife, Susanna, 26, residents of what is now 133 Franklin St.

He was a pillar of his rural community, a deacon in First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia, a town constable and hard-working farmer who worked in leather in the wintertime and was acknowledged as the maker of the best cider in town.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door, now 141 Franklin St., along with its 9 1/2 acres of farmland from the Billings brothers, for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the Sixth President of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that office. George H. W. Bush was the 41st. The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service on May 1, 1979.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill but research launched by the National Park Service turned up the fact that Abigail wanted them "stone" and white in color and what Abigail wanted Abigail got.

In the summer of 1980, during a six-year, $175,000 reconstruction project, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white, mixed especially from a late 18th century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The houses are furnished with precise reproductions of those that were in the them when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historical Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution on which the U. S. Constitution was modeled.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $5 for adults and children 16 and over. Also included is admission to the Old House at Peace field within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour leaves the Visitors Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was, in his boyhood, a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

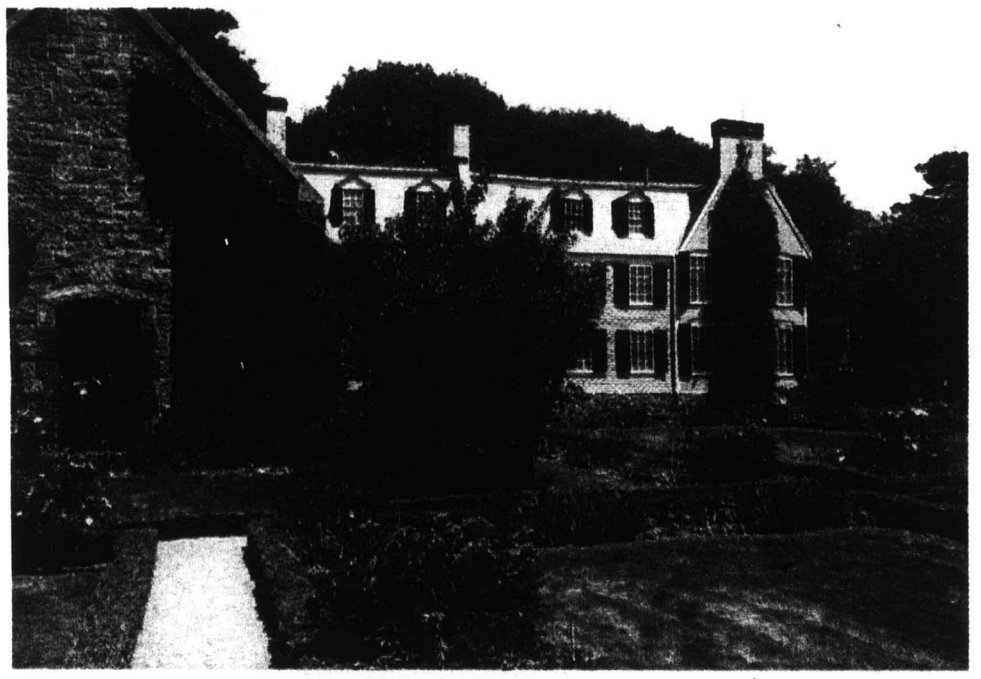
"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peace field," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

The Old House at Peace field,135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour at the Old House at Peace field is 4:05 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and youth 16 and over, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour of the park leaves the Visitors Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first-come, first-serve basis.



ADAMS NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK also features the Stone Library (left) with over 14,000 volumes that belonged to the Adamses, and an 18th century style formal garden containing thousands of annual and perennial flowers.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as the summer White House for two Presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams National Historical Site at Peace field.

The Adams Family

1. HENRY ADAMS (1583-1646) emigrated from England in 1638 and was granted 40 acres in Mount Wollaston (later Quincy).

2. JOSEPH ADAMS (1626-1694), son of Henry, farmer and maltster of Old Braintree.

3. JOSEPH ADAMS (1654-1737), son of Joseph, who married Hannah Bass, a granddaughter of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins.

4. JOHN ADAMS (1691-1761), son of Joseph, farmer and selectman of Old Braintree, known as Deacon John.

5. JOHN ADAMS (1735-1826), son of Deacon John and second President of the United States.

5a. SAMUEL ADAMS (1722-1803), revolutionary firebrand; great-great-grandson of Henry and cousin of President John.

6. JOHN QUINCY ADAMS (1767-1848), son of John, sixth President of the United States.

7. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS (1807-1886), son of John Quincy, minister to Great Britain during the Civil War.

8. JOHN QUINCY ADAMS II (1833-1894), son of Charles Francis, state legislator and thrice candidate for governor of Massachusetts.

8a. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS II (1835-1915), son of Charles Francis, historian and founder of the Quincy school system.

8b. HENRY ADAMS (1838-1918), son of Charles Francis, author of "The Education of Henry Adams."

8c. BROOKS ADAMS (1848-1927), son of Charles Francis, the last Adams to live in the Old House in Quincy.

9. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS III (1866-1954), son of John Quincy II, mayor of Quincy and Secretary of the Navy under President Hoover.

10. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS IV (1910-1999), chairman of the board of Raytheon Co.

Quincy is a city of history.

A city that played a critical role in the foundation of our state and country. A city that has provided the granite for countless buildings; a city that built the ships necessary to defend our country in time of war; a city that has been the home to entrepreneurs that have fueled business innovations international in scope; a city that was one of the birthplaces of organized labor and home of the original International Laborers Union; a city that has answered the call in times of crisis by our sons and daughters serving in our armed forces; a city that has contributed to the arts through persons who have been successful in music, film and other media, and a city that has welcomed all regardless of faith or ethnicity. There are so many things to be proud of about our community.

John And Abigail: A Unique Historic Team

The note from the young housewife, struggling to survive with her four children on the farm in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy), to her husband participating in momentous events so far away, was both playful and serious.

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make," she wrote, "I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could.

"If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, no representation."

The husband, of course, could not fulfill his wife's desires for it was the nature of the times that the woman was destined to be subordinate to the man. Nor did his feisty wife foment any rebellion.

But, on a personal level, the husband and his young wife were to be caught up as equal partners in one of history's most significant turning points — the American Revolution and the founding of the first great and lasting republic.

They seemed to be mismatched at first, the lady and her would-be tyrant.

Abigail Smith, known to friends as "Nabby," the unschooled but well-read minister's daughter from nearby Weymouth, granddaughter of Col. John Quincy, selectman, speaker of the Massachusetts House and commander of the local militia.

John Adams, the son of a Braintree farmer and shoemaker, grandson of the affluent Boylston family of Boston, Harvard-educated, sometime school teacher and a rising attorney at law.

Yet together they formed a team, each supplying something lacking in the other, a union that propelled John into the role of second president of the United States and produced a son, John Quincy Adams, who became the sixth.

The couple came together, John once said, "like magnet and steel."

They married in 1764 when Abigail was 19 and John was ten years older and just beginning to earn a reputation as a colonial malcontent by arguing against taxation without representation in court before the royal governor.

Later, John, who placed justice above expediency, disappointed the firebrands among them, including his cousin, Samuel Adams, by defending in court Capt. Thomas Preston and the British soldiers charged in what came to be known as the Boston Massacre. All but two of them were acquitted.

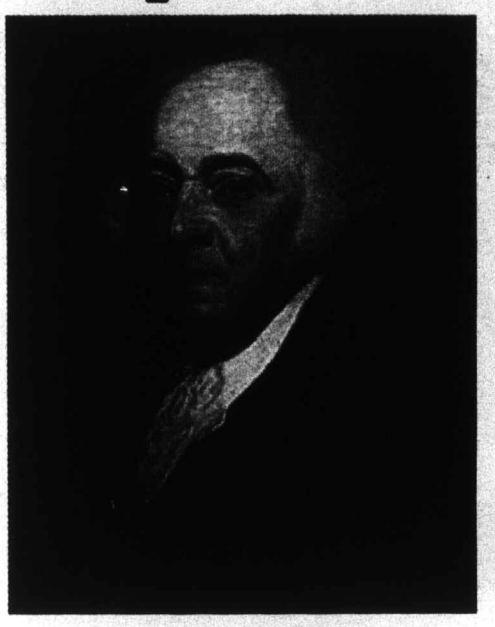
John was called to Philadelphia in 1774 as a Massachusetts delegate to the First Continental Congress and Abigail and her four children, Susannah, John Quincy, Thomas and Charles, were left to run the 100-acre farm at the foot of Penn's Hill. It turned out to be a long job.

For most of the Revolutionary War, John was in Philadelphia helping to found a new nation — it was he who recommended George Washington as commander-in-chief and Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence — or in France and Holland, seeking loans and recognition from foreign governments.

Once, during a prolonged absence in the darkest days of the fighting, the long-suffering Abigail wrote to her husband:

"Difficult as the day is, cruel as this war has been, separated as I am, on account of it, from my dearest connection in life, I would not exchange my country for the wealth of the Indies, or be any other than an American."

At one point in their marriage, after the war was won and John was in Paris seeking to cement relations between the fledgling United States and French court of Louis XVI, he sent for Abigail and she made the exhausting Trans-Atlantic trip to meet her husband.



JOHN ADAMS

They hadn't seen each other in five years.

Even when he was home briefly on the farm, John had things to do and people to see that took him away from Abigail's side. He joined with his cousin Samuel and James Bowdoin in 1779 to write the Massachusetts constitution, a model for the American document, in his home in Braintree. Then it was off again to Europe.

John returned home, for good, he thought, in 1788 after serving a term as the first American ambassador to Great Britain only to find that his country still had need for his talents. He was chosen as the new nation's first vice president, a poor choice on his part.

"My own situation is almost the only one in the world today in which firmness and patience are useless," he poured out his restlessness to Abigail. "(It is) the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."

When the first president, George Washington, decided two terms were enough, John was elected the second president by three electoral votes over Jefferson, who became vice president of a country that was dividing into two political parties, Federalist and Democratic-Republican.

John and Abigail were the first presidential couple to live in the yet unfinished White House, which was known then as the Presidential Palace, and Abigail won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room, where warmth gave it a better chance of drying.

The Adams administration was marked by the threat of war with France, whose bloody revolution had helped divide the nation into pro-French Democratic-Republicans and pro-British Federalists, and passage of the unfortunate Alien and Sedition Acts, drastically curtailing free speech and immigration.

Jefferson, the Democratic-Republican, defeated Adams, the Federalist, the second time around in 1800, and the political rivalry between the two Founding Fathers was so bitter that John refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural.

Finally, John's service to his country came to an end and he and Abigail were able to return to a new and larger home, which they named "Peacefield," in the North Precinct, which had now broken away from Braintree to become the town of Quincy (population 1,081), named for Abigail's grandfather.

When Jefferson left the presidency after two terms, Abigail assumed the role of peacemaker between the two old friends and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents were reconciled in their later years.

Abigail died of a stroke in 1818 after 54 years marriage and it was as if John himself had departed with her.

"The bitterness of death is past," he wrote. "The grim spoiler so terrible to human nature has no sting left for me."

Both John and Thomas Jefferson, his fellow Founding Father and rival, died on July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

John and Abigail, along with their son, John Quincy, and his wife, Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue of Abigail at about the age of 32 and John Quincy at 10 stands beside the church, looking at the statue of John Adams across Hancock Street adjacent to City Hall.

The story of Abigail and John was recounted by HBO television in a seven-part mini-series in the spring of 2008. The mini-series, based on the book John Adams by David McCullough, starred Paul Giamatti (John Adams) and Laura Linney (Abigail). It won 13 Emmys and 4 Golden Globes.

Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there.

So is the Rev. John Hancock, Jr., father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, one of the most intriguing is marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

HANCOCK CEMETERY

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm. St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock Street in Quincy Square, next to City Hall (1305 Hancock St.), is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

FLAGS AND WREATHS adorn the last resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa, in the crypt of United First Parish Church. It's the only church in the United States where two presidents are buried side by side with their wives.

United First Parish

Only Church Where 2 Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56 – which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate – and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

The church is open to the public from April 19 to Nov. 11 daily. Tours begin on the hour from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday through Friday and noon to 4 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Suggested donation is $4 for adults, $3 for seniors and students, and children 12 and under are free. For further information, call 617-773-0062.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family, which settled here at Mount Wollaston, pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Adams Academy Birthplace Site Of John Hancock

Now Home To The Quincy Historical Society

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

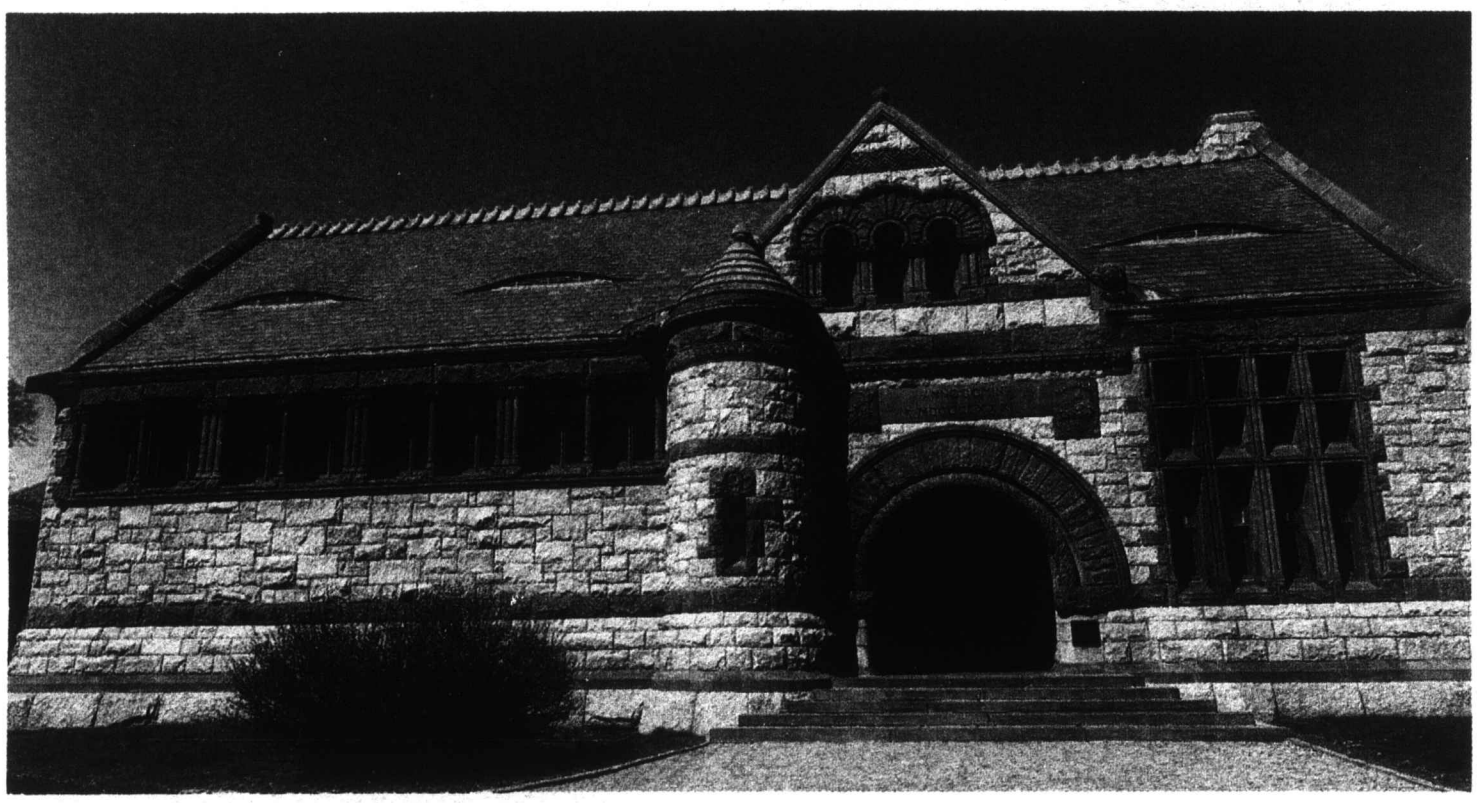
Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty



THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses a periodical reading room and two quiet study rooms, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001. The project was funded by the City of Quincy, with grants from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, the Massachusetts Historical Commission and nearly $1 million in private donations.

The new wing was dedicated in 2005 as the Mayor James A. Sheets Building.

Last Survivor

John Adams, who died only a few hours after Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1825, outlived all but one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Maryland, who died in 1832 at the age of 95. Adams died at 90.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays 1 to 5 p.m. For information, call 617-376-1301.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead: A Grand Mansion

Home For Four Generations Of The Quincy Family

Quincy Homestead, often called the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, is a grand 17th and 18th century mansion sited on almost two acres of tree-shaded lawn.

A National Historic Landmark, the Quincy Homestead is significant for its role in early American history, for its architecture, and for its Quincy family association. The property is located at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road in Quincy. It is part of the original land that Edmund Quincy acquired for a farm in the 1630's.

The present house, dating from 1686, was enlarged and enhanced over a period of more than 200 years. Its majestic Georgian frontispiece and gambrel roof, with distinctive dormer windows, give the building a stately and substantial appearance.

The Homestead served as a home for four generations of Quincys, one of the leading families of Massachusetts. Their progeny include President John Quincy Adams and Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. Leading up to the American Revolution, it was a meeting place for many American patriots including John Adams, Josiah Quincy and John Hancock. The house was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the first First-Lady of Massachusetts and the wife of John Hancock, the president of the Second Continental Congress, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the first governor of the Commonwealth.

The Quincy Homestead represents three architectural periods.

In 1686, the original kitchen area and bedchamber above were built. In 1706, extensive additions were made, and finally in the mid-18th century the current form emerged. It is one of the few houses in Massachusetts in which the elements of a 17th century building are still clearly visible, although they are surrounded by a later style.

The house is an excellent illustration of how architectural styles developed during the colonial period. It is furnished with period antiques and artifacts that provide an intriguing historical record of daily life in a house dating back three centuries.

Quincy Homestead was an early success for historic preservation in Massachusetts and is an on-going example of public-private partnership.

In 1904, The National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts purchased the Quincy Homestead and then entered into a long-term cooperative relationship with the Commonwealth whereby the Commonwealth would own the property and maintain the exterior of the house and grounds. The Dames agreed to furnish and maintain its interior and to interpret its important history for visitors.

This relationship continues today.

Richest Man In The Colony

At the start of the Revolution, Quincy-born John Hancock may have been the richest man in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, having built his fortune on a 400,000-pound estate left to him by his uncle, Thomas, when he died in 1764.

Educating Henry Adams

Henry Adams, the grandson of President John Quincy Adams, recalled in, "The Education of Henry Adams," the day he rebelled against attending summer school when he was a boy of 6 or 7.

He was gradually winning the argument when the former president, then a man of 80 years, came slowly down the stairs, took young Henry by the hand and wordlessly walked him down the dusty road to the Center School.

Only when he was seated in class did his grandfather release his hand and, still without saying a word, walked the same dusty road back to his home.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead, corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road, will be open to the public for tours of the house and gardens from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday, June 14 and July 12. The homestead will also be open on "Discover Quincy Days" Saturday, Aug. 2, Sept. 6 and Oct. 4 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested. Special arrangements may be made for private group tours. For more information, contact: The Colonial Dames Massachusetts Headquarters at 617-742-3190, Monday through Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Fridays 8:30 a.m. to noon. The Wife Of John Quincy Adams Only First Lady Born On Foreign Soil

Louisa Catherine Adams' Adventures As 'A Nobody'

When she was 65 years old and a member of the famous and not always sensitive Adams family for 43 years, Louisa Catherine Adams penned a brief, unpublished memoir.

She called it "Adventures of a Nobody."

Louisa Catherine, the wife of John Quincy Adams and the only first lady born outside what became the United States, never quite fit in with her in-laws until late in life when Abigail finally acknowledged she was worthy to be an Adams wife and John grew to enjoy her letters and his conversations with her.

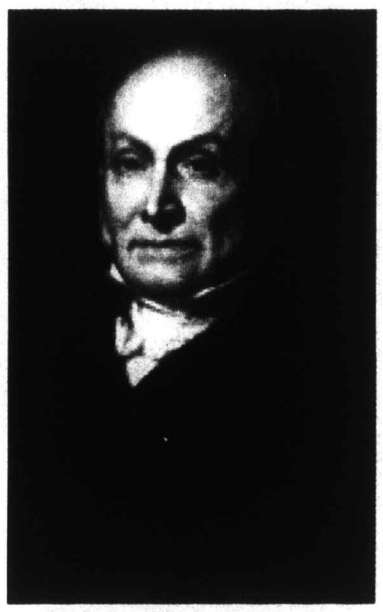
She was born Louisa Catherine Johnson on Feb. 12, 1775 in London to Joshua Johnson, an American merchant from Maryland, and his wife, Catherine, an Englishwoman. The family fled to Nantes, France, when the American Revolution made life untenable for Johnson in England.

In Nantes, Louisa attended a convent school run by nuns and thought of herself as Catholic and French in culture. She spoke French fluently and had to learn English all over when the family returned to London after the war in the colonies ended. Becoming an Anglican confused her so much that she fainted in her first visit to the altar.

Louisa first met her future husband in Nantes when she was 4 and he was 12. They met again at a party in the Johnson home in London and this time John Quincy was old enough to take notice of her literary, musical and conversational skills. They became engaged, much to the consternation of John Quincy's folks back home.

John the elder, now the president, was concerned that his son was about to marry "a foreigner," and Abigail called in to remind her son that the choices he made now might interfere with his political future. She even sent letters to Louisa pointing out the importance of economy and lack of frivolity required of an Adams wife.

LOUISA CATHERINE ADAMS



JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

Nevertheless, John Quincy and his Louisa were married July 26, 1797, in London. The ceremony called for little more than a paragraph in John Quincy's voluminous diary.

"At nine this morning, I went, accompanied by my brother, to Mr. Johnson's, and thence to the church of the parish of All Hallows Barking where I was married to Louisa Catherine Johnson, second daughter of Joshua Johnson and Catherine Johnson, by Mr. Hewlett.

"We were married before eleven in the morning."

They barely had time to set up housekeeping in London before John Quincy was off to the continent as minister to Prussia. Louisa was in her element in Europe. She made friends with the Prussian royal family. But she miscarried their first child and was subject to fainting spells and fevers. Her husband, engrossed in diplomacy, ignored her needs.

She came to the United States for the first time in 1801, landing in Quincy, the very heart of Adams country. John, now an ex-president, found that he rather liked her but Abigail still doubted her qualifications to be an Adams wife.

"To a woman like Mrs. Adams, equal to every occasion in life, I appeared like a maudlin, hysterical fine lady," wrote Louisa.

A year later, John Quincy was elected to the U.S. Senate as a Federalist and the family was on the move again, this time to Washington. Out from under Abigail's thumb, Louisa blossomed, turning her home into a social salon for politicians and diplomats. But all that ended when her husband broke with the Federalist party and resigned his Senate seat.

John Quincy was immediately offered the post of minister to Russia by President James Madison and, without consulting his wife, he accepted. The family included three children by now and it was decided by John Quincy and Abigail that the oldest, George and John II, would remain in the States for their education while the youngest, year-old Charles Francis, would go to St. Petersburg with his mother.

She found the winters in the Russian royal capital cold and dark but there was social life and she became a favorite dance partner of Tsar Alexander I.

A daughter was born in St. Petersburg but died before her first birthday. In all, Louisa was pregnant 14 times with nine miscarriages and one still born. Her oldest, George, drowned at 28 when he fell or jumped from a boat in New York Harbor; John II died of alcoholism at 31; only Charles Francis survived to become a diplomat and author.

For once, John Quincy heeded his wife and asked to come home. Instead, President Madison assigned him to Ghent, Belgium, to help negotiate the treaty ending the War of 1812. When his duty to his country was concluded, he sent for Louisa to join him in Paris, touching off one of the great adventures of her life, even impressing her mother-in-law, Abigail.

For 40 days and nights in the dead of the fierce Russian winter she and Charles Francis, age 7, accompanied by a small escort, were driven by a carriage on a sled, thawing their frozen food over candles, crossing frozen rivers on quaking ice, hurrying past old battle fields still littered with dead soldiers. It was in relief that they arrived in friendly Berlin. But there were still perils ahead.

Napoleon had escaped from exile on the isle of Elba and was in Paris collecting his Grande Armee to confront the Duke of Wellington and the Prussian General von Blucher at Waterloo. There were French troops everywhere. A group of them spotted Louisa's obviously Russian carriage and surrounded her, shouting: "Kill her! Kill her!"

Louisa's escort convinced them she was Napoleon's sister. She addressed them in fluent French and they allowed her to proceed, cheering her as she went.

John Quincy was next assigned as minister to London and Louisa spent two happy years in her old hometown. Better yet, her oldest boys, George and John II, were permitted to join her. She hadn't seen them in more than six years. Neither parent recognized their sons, now 14 and 12 respectively.

The peripatetic Adams clan was on the move again when President James Monroe named John Quincy his secretary of state. Back in the states, Abigail greeted her daughter-in-law with new respect. Louisa enjoyed life in Washington, too, turning her home into a social center for diplomats and others with an open house every Tuesday night.

When it was apparent that her husband would be a candidate for the presidency in 1824, Louisa threw a ball honoring Andrew Jackson on the 10th anniversary of his victory over the British at New Orleans. She tried and failed to get the popular Jackson to support John Quincy. Instead, the war hero ran against him.

Jackson actually won the election with 99 electoral votes to 84 for Adams, 41 for William Crawford of Georgia and 37 for Henry Clay of Kentucky. But he failed to get a majority, throwing the election into the House of Representatives. After some wheeling and dealing, Clay threw his support to Adams and John Quincy became president. Clay became his secretary of state.

Louisa was depressed by the bitterness of the election and disappointed in her husband's backroom maneuvers to win the election. Son George fathered an illegitimate child by a chambermaid. Son John II was thrown out of Harvard. Son Charles became "addicted to depraved habits." She spent much of her White House years in seclusion, eating chocolates and writing poetry.

But when John Quincy asked Congress to appropriate funds for a billiard table in the White House and pro-Jackson newspapers suggested it was for Louisa because "gambling furniture is common in the castles of the European rich and great," it was Louisa herself who answered back in the pro-Adams press.

She was relieved when John Quincy's single term ended in defeat by his old nemesis Jackson and they could retire to a quiet life in Quincy. But it was not to be. It took a year for her husband to catch his breath, then once again duty called and he ran and was elected to the House of Representatives, first as a candidate of the National Republican Party and then as a Whig.

John Quincy's great cause was anti-slavery and Louisa worked closely with her husband for the cause, even branching out to women's rights, equating the status of American women with that of American slaves and keeping up a lively correspondence with advocates of women's rights.

John Quincy served in the House for 17 years before he was stricken on the floor of Congress and died Feb. 23, 1848. Louisa remained in Washington, suffering a stroke a year later. She died May 15, 1852 at the age of 77 and was buried along side of John Quincy, John and Abigail in the United First Parish Church in Quincy.

Congress adjourned in mourning, a first time tribute for the First Lady who thought of herself as a nobody.

Whaling In Quincy

Although it never attained the status of New Bedford or Nantucket, the town of Quincy played a role in the whaling industry in the early and middle 19th century.

It is recorded that the top-sail schooner Cambria sailed from Quincy on an 18-month whaling voyage in 1839 and returned with 420 barrels of sperm oil.

However, reports for 1845 show that only one Quincy vessel was engaged in whaling and by 1855 the industry was viewed as so insignificant that it was not recorded.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

JOSIAH QUINCY HOUSE in Wollaston – a National Historic Landmark – looks like how it appeared in the 1880s when historian Eliza Susan Quincy began to organize historical information on the house.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, former President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a conversion to beige to more accurately reflect how it looked in the 1880s when another Eliza Susan Quincy, a historian, began to chronicle information pertaining to the house and family.

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a museum of Quincy family history. Her work initiated the process that led to the preservation of the house by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA).

The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, is open to the public on Saturday, June 7, July 5, Aug. 2, Sept. 6 and Oct. 4. The house is open from 1-5 p.m. on June 7 and July 5. On Discover Quincy Days – Aug. 2, Sept. 6 and Oct. 4 – the house is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tours start on the hour; the last tour is at 4 p.m. Admission is free for Quincy residents and Historic New England members; $5 for adults, $4 for seniors, and $2.50 for students. The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams Cairn

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

John Adams And Sons

Politics, war and sons were on John Adams' mind in a letter written to his wife, Abigail Adams, in 1780.

"I must study politics and war, that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy.

"My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture in order to give their sons the right to study painting, poetry, music, achitecture, statuary, tapestry and porcelain."

We are continuing a very proud tradition in Quincy... Please let us host your next event...

City Hall: Seat Of Government For 170 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 170 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

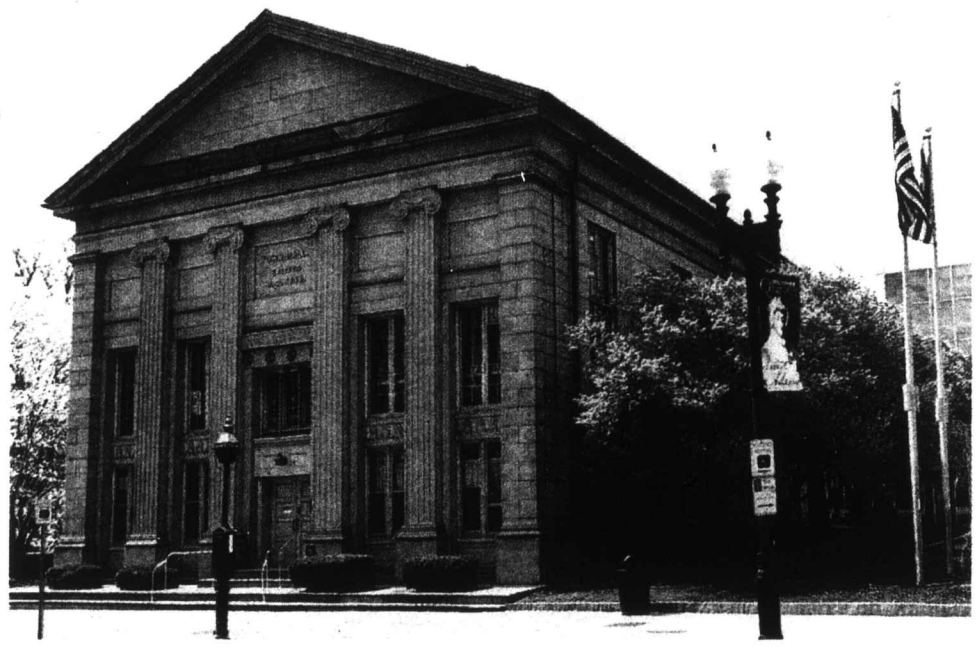
One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.



CITY HALL - dedicated as the James R. McIntyre Government Center in memory of the city's former mayor and state senator in 1984 – has served as the center of Quincy government since 1844. The structure - made of Quincy granite – was designed by architect Solomon Willard who also drew up plans for the Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown.

Ancestry Traced To Magna Carta

The first member of the Quincy family, for whom the city is named, came to Boston from England in 1633, claiming descent from Baron de Quincy, one of the noblemen who forced King John to sign the Magna Carta at Runnymede in 1215.

Quincy Capital Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

First Significant Restoration Of 170-Year-Old Quincy Granite Landmark In 100 Years

Monumental Makeover For Quincy City Hall

By JIM EDWARDS
Quincy Historical Society

Quincy City Hall was built in 1844 and constructed of Quincy granite. The architect for the project was Solomon Willard (1783-1861) who is considered one of the fathers of the Quincy granite industry. Mr. Willard was also the architect for the Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown. Old City Hall is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and is at the heart of the historic district. Mr. Willard is buried in Hall Place Cemetery in Quincy.

Old City Hall was erected at the time as a Town Hall and is described by scholars as being an excellent example of academic Greek Revival architecture. One of the more distinguished architects of the early 20th century, Ralph Adams Cram, described Old City Hall as "one of the outstanding specimens of mid-century classical American design in the country." As far as current records are able to corroborate, this building is the oldest functioning City Hall in the United States.

Despite its stature, Old City Hall has come onto hard times in terms of its physical condition. With the exception of the restoration work performed in the City Council Chamber in the mid 1990's, relatively few improvements have been made to the building in approximately 100 years. The slate roof leaks badly and must be replaced. The granite blocks comprising the exterior walls are in reasonably good condition; however the mortar joints in these walls are either in poor condition or missing entirely. New mortar must be installed in all stone joints. The wood windows and trim are also in poor condition and require replacement. Further, the unattractive and not original to the building, stucco-clad addition at the rear of Old City Hall is in extremely poor condition. It is also of inadequate size and should be replaced with a more appropriate building addition.

The interior of Old City Hall is in a decidedly decrepit condition. Many issues require attention. It should also be noted here that because of the building's significant historic status, all restoration work will have to be accomplished in concert with the requirements of the Massachusetts Historical Commission.

All egress stairways within the building are of an older vintage and not enclosed in a manner that would prevent smoke or a fire from moving to the various floor levels of the building.

Electrical wiring within the building is old with much of it in poor condition and of a potential hazard.

The fire alarm system is old and undependable and therefore presents a potential danger to workers or others visiting the building.

The steam heating system is in terrible condition and delivers uneven and inadequate heat to the various rooms in the building. There is also no ventilation of spaces, as required by law.

There is no fire protection system (automatic sprinklers) within either Old City Hall or City Hall Annex.

Plumbing systems are of ancient vintage, are inadequate in number and provide no toilet facilities for the public.

Hazardous materials exist within the building.

There is little legal handicapped access to or within Old City Hall and there are no handicapped accessible toilets located in the building.

Insect infestation is also a problem. Powder post beetles and termites are damaging the building's roof and floor framing structural systems.

ARTIST RENDERING of the refurbished City Council Chamber into a 181-seat "Great Hall" on the second floor of the historic building.
Renderings Courtesy Holmes & Edwards, Inc. Architects

With the exception of the Council Chamber, the finishes in all rooms in Old City Hall are worn, unsightly and unfitting for a municipal building representing the seat of Quincy City government.

Remedial efforts will be significant and careful consideration of building code issues critical. All egress within Old City Hall must be made safe. New electrical and state of the art fire alarm systems will be installed. A new fire protection system for Old City Hall and City Hall Annex will be a very important part of the upgrades. A revised structural system must take seismic design into account. Updated energy efficient heating, ventilation and air-conditioning systems will be installed to provide comfortable and healthy conditions for workers and visitors alike. All mandates of the State's Architectural Access Board will render the building user-friendly to all handicapped individuals.

One of the primary objectives of the restoration effort is to restore the City Council Chamber to its original "Great Hall" configuration which before the 1920's ran the length and breadth of the building. Included in that work will be the recapturing of the Great Hall balcony, parts of which remain entombed in other walls, ceilings and finishes. The prospect of returning the Great Hall to its original, majestic proportions, with heroically proportioned windows to allow light to enter the space on two sides as originally designed is exciting to consider. And with historically appropriate interior finish upgrades, the entire 1844 structure will be transformed into a first class City facility, one which echoes its exceptional past history within a more modern framework.

Old City Hall is a wonderfully prominent building for the City of Quincy and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. It is directly across the street from another historically significant treasure, the United First Parish Church, also constructed of Quincy granite. This architectural masterpiece also designed in the Greek Revival style was constructed in 1828 mainly from funds donated by John Adams, second President of the United States. Within the Church is the crypt where President Adams, President John Quincy Adams and their wives Abigail and Louisa Catherine are entombed.

Old City Hall, constructed when Quincy was still a "Town", is an extremely important building to the City, in its function as a continuous seat of government for 170 years, and for the citizens of Quincy who recognize this architectural icon as a symbol of "their" City. For many in the City, the presence of historical buildings in the downtown is one of the reasons Quincy is such an interesting and inviting place to live and work.

It is past time to begin work to revitalize the great Quincy treasure that is Old City Hall. Mayor Koch and the City Council deserve credit for addressing this important restoration project at this time.

First To Sign Declaration Of Independence

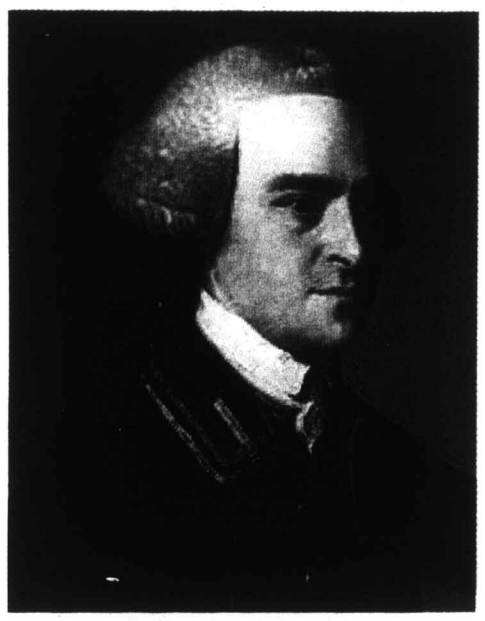
John Hancock's Bold Signature Symbol For Liberty

He was the least likely of all the Founding Fathers to revolt against the status quo of the late 18th century, the last man expected to affix a bold signature to a declaration of independence that has become a symbol for defiance to totalitarian rule everywhere.

His folks were certain he would be a minister, following in the footsteps of his grandfather, who was called "the Bishop of Lexington," and his father, the gentle minister of the First Parish Church in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy.)

When Patrick Henry's call for "liberty or death" went out, he was said to be the wealthiest man in the wealthiest town (Boston) in the 13 colonies, a man who owned a Beacon Hill crowned by his mansion, whose merchant ships plied the seas, whose warehouses bulged with the world's treasures.

John Hancock was born in Quincy on Jan. 12, 1737, on the site of what became the Adams Academy, now the headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society, little more than a stone's throw from the church served by his father, the Rev. John Hancock, Jr.



JOHN HANCOCK

When he was 7, his father died, leaving his mother, Mary, with three children under 10 to raise, a formidable task in those days. Fortunately, his uncle, Thomas Hancock, the Merchant King of Boston, childless and yearning for a son, adopted John as his own and his future was secure.

When Thomas died in 1764, young John Hancock, then 27, became head of the House of Hancock, a colonial conglomerate of real estate, shipping, warehousing, banking and anything else that could be converted into cash to fill the Hancock coffers.

John was living the good life of a merchant prince when taxes imposed by a far away parliament began cutting into his profits, the Hancock sloop Liberty was seized when most of its cargo of wine from Madeira slipped in untaxed and Hancock was accused of smuggling.

With the aid of his attorney, John Adams, Hancock was able to beat the smuggling rap but the court ordered Liberty forfeited and a short time later her former owner emerged as a member of the Sons of Liberty.

A newspaper of the time, The Massachusetts Spy, in its report of the Boston Tea Party, suggested that John Hancock "was the first man that went aboard the vessel to destroy the tea," but the claim is doubtful and the men who, disguised as Indians, threw the tea into the sea have never been identified.

By 1775, Hancock was so deeply involved in the spirit of revolution that the British attempt to arrest him and Samuel Adams in Lexington and confiscate the rebel arms and munitions in Concord erupted into the first battles of the American Revolution at Lexington Green and Concord Bridge.

He was chosen one of five delegates from Massachusetts to the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia but he preferred to stay behind in Boston to lead the local patriots and, not incidentally, mend his political fences while his rivals were away.

He did attend the second Continental Congress, however, and with the support of George Washington himself, he was chosen its president. According to popular legend, Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence first in script so large that King George "can read my name without his spectacles."

But historians believe Hancock actually signed an engrossed copy of the Declaration of Independence. There was no ceremonial signing of the Declaration on July 4, 1776 so after Congress approved the wording of the text on July 4, a copy was sent to be printed. As the president of the second Continental Congress, Hancock could have signed the document that was sent to the printer. However, no one seems to know for sure since that document was lost. Some think the document was ruined in the printing process.

According to historians, the printer produced the first published version of the Declaration in the familiar broadsheet size. Hancock's name is the only delegate to appear on this document. A second broadsheet was issued six months later with all the signers listed.

Hancock's iconic signature does appear on a different document: a sheet of parchment that was carefully handwritten sometime after July 19 and signed on Aug. 2 by Hancock and those delegates present. This document - known as the engrossed copy – is displayed at the National Archives in Washington, D.C.

Since he was president of the Continental Congress when the Declaration was adopted and signed and that created the United States and there was no other president at the time, some say Hancock can be referred to as the first president of the United States.

In his one display of military prowess, Major General John Hancock and his Massachusetts Militiamen, 3,000 strong, suffered a humiliating defeat in their attempt to capture Newport, R. I., from the British and Hancock went back to doing what he did best.

And he was at his best in January, 1788, as president of the Massachusetts state convention called to ratify the U. S. Constitution, a process that was stalled in several states for want of adequate protections for the individuals, which the Revolution was all about.

Hancock, suffering from the gout and carried into the hall by servants, proposed and guided to a 187 to 168 victory a series of nine "conciliatory amendments" which later evolved into the Bill of Rights and assured ratification of the Constitution by all.

Hancock was elected the first governor of Massachusetts in 1780 but he resigned five years later. He was elected again in 1787 and was still in office when he died in 1793 at the age of 56, the end of his line.

Unlike the Adams and Quincy clans, he left no direct descendants. His marriage to Dorothy Quincy, produced two children, a daughter, Lydia, who died in her first year, and a son, John George Washington Hancock, who was killed in a skating accident when he was 8.

He had spent most of his fortune financing the Revolution.

Hancock's Grandfather A Rebel Leader

The Rev. John Hancock, Sr., grandfather of the future first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was a rebel leader in his own right.

He was the minister of the Congregational Church in Cambridge's North Precinct in 1713 at a time when church and state were one in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

The Rev. Hancock was in the forefront when the North Precinct successfully revolted against the taxes levied by Cambridge town, 10 miles away.

The North Precinct eventually became the town of Lexington and the good reverend ruled his little community with such an iron hand that he became known as "the Bishop of Lexington."

Wake Up Call

Two of the most important town officials in Quincy (then Old Braintree) in the last days of the 17th century were the constable and the tithingman.

The tithingman was appointed and paid by the town selectmen to keep order in church on Sunday morning and see to it that pewholders stayed awake during the sometimes three or four hour sermons.

He was provided with a two-foot long staff with a brass tip on one end to rouse sleeping male parishioners and a feather on the other end to do the same for female.

Among the duties of the constable was to apprehend Quakers and "attend funerals of any that died with the small pox, and walk before the corpse to give notice to any, who may be in danger of infection."

Welcome To Quincy: 'The City Of Presidents'

'THE GAZING BALL,' a shining sphere of Quincy granite, is a reminder that the famous Quincy stone was once one of the world's most cherished building materials. The Bunker Hill Monument is among the many structures built of it. For 69 years, the ball was half-hidden in the shrubbery at the Fore River Rotary but was returned to its original site in 2007 next to City Hall. Last fall, workers from Shaughnessy & Ahern Rigging Co. (above) moved the ball about 30 yards to a temporary location in McIntyre Mall. The relocation was necessitated by renovation work at Old City Hall. Near the Gazing Ball is a bronze statue (top right) of John Adams (notice the granite ball's former location in the background of the statue photo). The statue was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership civic group and is the work of noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie. Located across the street from the Adams statue is another bronze statue of Adams' wife, Abigail and their son, John Quincy (depicted as a 10-year-old boy). A photo of that statue appears on the front cover of this supplement.

JQA And The Crucial Year In The War Of 1812

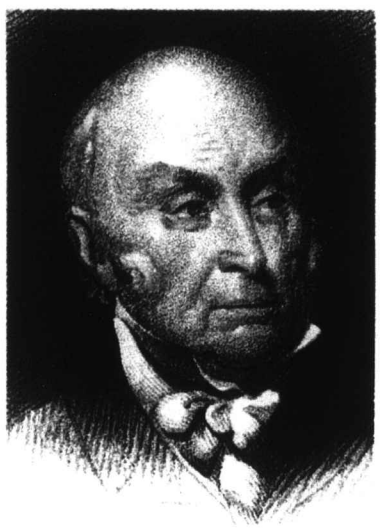
By ED FITZGERALD
Quincy Historical Society

Historian Donald Hickey has called the War of 1812 "America's forgotten war." Certainly, in Massachusetts at least, the bicentennial of this war has received far less public attention than have many other historic anniversaries.

This year, however, we mark the bicentennial of events in which Massachusetts and Quincy were vitally concerned. In 1814 John Quincy Adams led the American delegation negotiating a peace with Britain. And coastal Massachusetts felt the dangers of war at first-hand.

Massachusetts largely remained cool to the war in 1812 and 1813. The Federalist Party – who still held significant power in the state – opposed the war because they saw it as unnecessary, disliked President Madison and the Democrat-Republicans, admired Britain, and feared Napoleon's France. In addition, despite British interference with American merchant ships and impressment of American sailors, seafaring Massachusetts enjoyed a profitable trade with Great Britain that it wanted to continue.

When the war began, Massachusetts governor Caleb Strong refused to make the state militia available for national service. Josiah Quincy – the future mayor of Boston, president of Harvard, and builder of Quincy market – became the Federalists' leading spokesman against the war in Congress. Britain enforced its naval blockade very lightly in New England. Naval ships would be stopped, if possible, but merchant ships were able to continue to trade with Great Britain.



JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

In contrast, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, unlike many Federalists, supported national over regional ideals. Back in 1807, in fact, John Quincy Adams had supported President Jefferson's Embargo policy at the cost, it seemed, of his political career. Many ordinary Massachusetts citizens enlisted in the United States Army and Navy. There was universal pride in the success of the U.S.S. Constitution, and she was welcomed into Boston Harbor.

In 1814, the situation of the war fundamentally changed. With Napoleon defeated and in exile, Britain could bring its full force to the war in America, and it was determined to teach America a lesson. The British extended the full blockade along the New England coast. During the summer, Britain invaded and occupied the eastern half of Maine, which was still a part of Massachusetts. British ships harassed the Massachusetts coast. An invasion seemed likely. The people of Massachusetts now rallied to defend their state. Governor Strong activated militias state-wide and sent them to defend the coast. Particular concern was given to Boston, as the capital and the site of the Navy Yard. A Quincy militia company of 40 men, under the command of Captain Thomas Tirrell, served, guarding Boston Harbor, from Sept. 10 to Oct. 30.

Meanwhile, peace negotiations were taking place in Ghent, Belgium. John Quincy Adams, who had been serving as American ambassador to Russia, headed the American delegation. This was the one phase of the war in which the British were clearly overmatched against the Americans. In addition to Adams the American delegation included Henry Clay, Albert Gallatin, and James Bayard, according to one historian, "as fine a diplomatic team as ever represented the United States."

Adams' brilliance in the negotiations lay in his calm and his patience – not qualities that we always associate with him. As the British delegates, full of confidence, made proposals that would have seriously limited the United States' future, Adams and his colleagues simply waited them out. In time, British military success stalled. The British were unable to capture Fort McHenry and Baltimore, and a British invasion fleet was soundly defeated at Plattsburgh on Lake Champlain. The British public now wanted the war to end as soon as possible.

Adams' second brilliant move was not pressing for American advantages that might have again sunk the negotiations. The treaty of peace, signed on Christmas Eve, settled none of the issues about which the war had been fought and did not even mention many of them. It returned borders to the way they were before the war began. But for the United States, this was enough. Historian Gordon Wood has called the War of 1812, "the strangest war in American history," because of its many ambiguities and contradictions. However, in the peace negotiations – as historian Donald Hickey points out – Adams and his colleagues achieved what the United States could not achieve on the battlefield. The Treaty of Ghent effectively gave America what Gordon Wood believes was the underlying goal all along: Britain's "unequivocal recognition of the nation's sovereignty and independence."

150 Years Ago: Quincy And The Civil War

By ED FITZGERALD
Quincy Historical Society

At Quincy Historical Society, we have spent much time during the 150th anniversary period of the Civil War trying to understand Quincy's experience of the war and how the war changed Quincy. This year, we will mark the anniversary and look at the events of the final year of the war. It will also be an opportunity to try to sum up some of what we have learned.

Many of the best-known events and actions involving the Quincy people who have been best remembered took place well before the final year.

Charles Francis Adams, like his father and grandfather before him, was Ambassador to Great Britain and is credited with having ensured that Britain never recognized the Confederacy. Early in the war he calmed British outrage at perceived insults by the United States, when Secretary of State Seward sent an intemperate message early in the war and when an American Navy ship seized two Confederate agents from on board a British mail steamer. In a more active vein, in 1863, Adams repeatedly urged the British government to prevent the delivery of the Laird Rams, two powerful warships being built for the Confederacy, under false identity, in Liverpool. When the British appeared reluctant to intervene, Adams' language turned uncharacteristically sharp. But he succeeded: on September 5, 1863 the government refused permission for the ships to sail. In 1864 and '65 relations with Britain had grown much more cordial.

Adams' son, Charles Francis, Jr., served in the Union Army, entering as a Lieutenant in December, 1861. The younger Adams always insisted that he did nothing notable during the war. However, he was present at the Battles of Antietam and Gettysburg.

Paul Joseph Revere, the grandson of the Revolutionary hero, was an adopted son of Quincy. Revere married Lucretia Lunt, daughter of Rev. William Parson Lunt, minister of Quincy's First Parish Church. An officer in the 20th Massachusetts Regiment, Revere was taken prisoner at the Battle of Ball's Bluff in October, 1861 and was sent to Libby Prison in Richmond. Eventually exchanged, Revere returned to service. He was wounded at the Battle of Antietam and was fatally wounded at Gettysburg.

Francis Souther, the best known of Quincy's enlisted men, was a member of the Hancock Light Guard, Quincy's militia. In the first days of the war, members of the Light Guard responded to President Lincoln's call for 90-day volunteers to put down the insurrection. They became part of the 4th Massachusetts Regiment, which was sent to join other Union troops at Fort Monroe on the Virginia coast. On June 10, 1861 the Union troops made an ill-conceived advance on Confederate forces at nearby Big Bethel and were badly beaten. The Union lost 76 men killed or wounded. Souther was shot in the chest and died that night. He was the first Quincy man to die in the war and the first Massachusetts soldier in the war to die from wounds in battle.

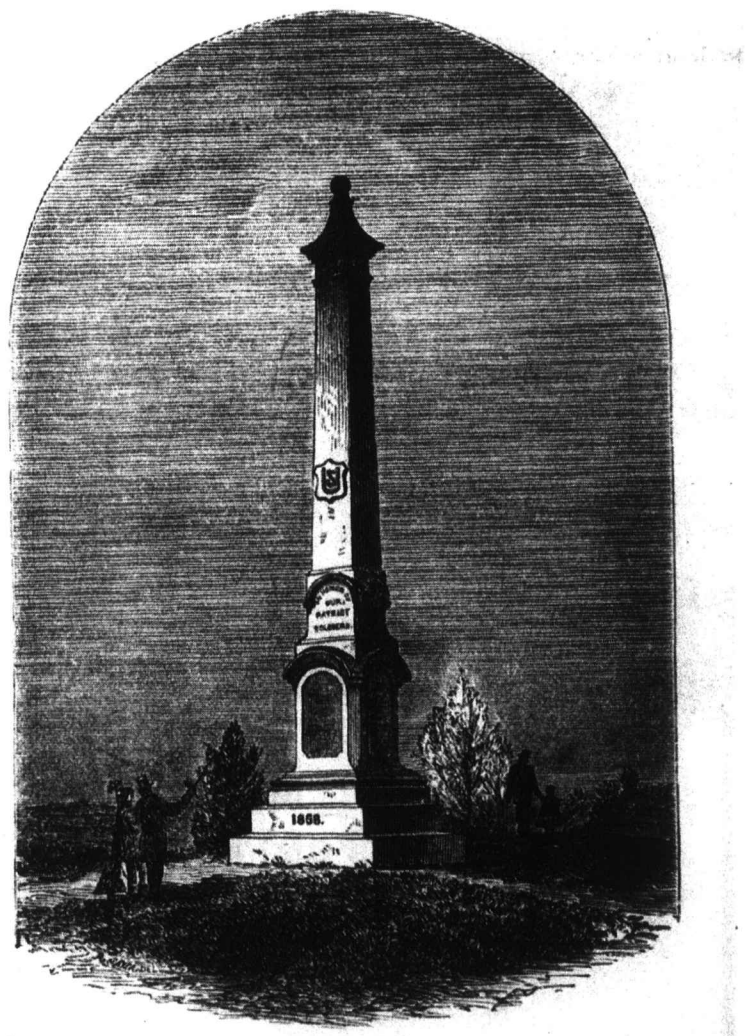
The war in 1864-65 was far less about the scions of the great Revolutionary families or about individual sacrifice or heroism and much more about ordinary men working collectively and about collective sacrifice. Quincy men served in the terrible major battles of Grant's advance towards Richmond: the Wilderness, Spottysylvania, Petersburg More than a hundred Quincy men in the army either died in battle, were wounded, were captured, or died of disease in 1864-65.

Back in Quincy, enthusiasm for the war and rhetoric about heroism and military glory was replaced by recognition of the many losses and by a growing sense of war-weariness. As 1864 began, the local newspaper asked, how long can this war go on? The town also felt the pressure of the revised draft law in effect since June, 1863 and of the need to fulfill its enlistment quota. Some one hundred Quincy men entered military service in 1864. Of these, about half joined the 60th regiment, a short-term regiment that saw service as guards at a POW camp in Indiana.

Significantly, however, during the long frustrating months of spring and summer 1864, when demoralization swept many parts of the north and even President Lincoln seemed despondent about the chances for victory, it appears that Quincy's war-weariness never turned into defeatism. Men continued to enlist. Women continued to organize themselves into committees to send packages of food and clothing and supplies to the troops. If the early enthusiasm was gone, the townspeople had forged a grim determination that the war must be won. Most significantly, a town that could have been perceived in 1860 as ambivalent about anti-slavery was now committed to slavery's complete demise. In the darkest months of 1864, the Quincy press declared with urgency that slavery must cease to exist.

In the summer, when many parts of the North at least contemplated voting for the conciliation-minded George McClellan for president, Quincy remained committed to President Lincoln.

The commitment of Quincy, both leading families and ordinary citizens, to its best ideals gets summed up in one symbolic moment: On April 3, 1865, a scion of Quincy's Revolutionary family had a final role to play in the war. The Fifth Massachusetts Cavalry, a regiment of African Americans, commanded by Colonel Charles Francis Adams, Jr., became the first mounted Union troops to enter Richmond, Virginia, the surrendered capital of the Confederacy.



QUINCY'S CIVIL WAR Monument was dedicated June 25, 1868 in the city's Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Some 115 residents died as a result of the war - including 29 who were killed in action and 12 who perished from wounds received in battle. Others died in Confederate prison camps or from disease contracted in service.

Distinguished Service From Age 14 To 80

John Quincy Adams: 6th President And A Lot More

When he was 14 years old, John Quincy Adams was dispatched to St. Petersburg, Russia, to translate the official French spoken at the court of Czarina Catherine the Great for the American ambassador, Francis Dana.

In a way, the eldest son of John Adams was already a veteran diplomat, having served two tours of France and Holland with his father and Benjamin Franklin as they sought European aid for the American colonies in rebellion.

The Revolution was won by the time he returned home to old Braintree and the fractured education he received in France, Holland, Russia and England allowed him to enter Harvard as a junior and graduate in 18 months.

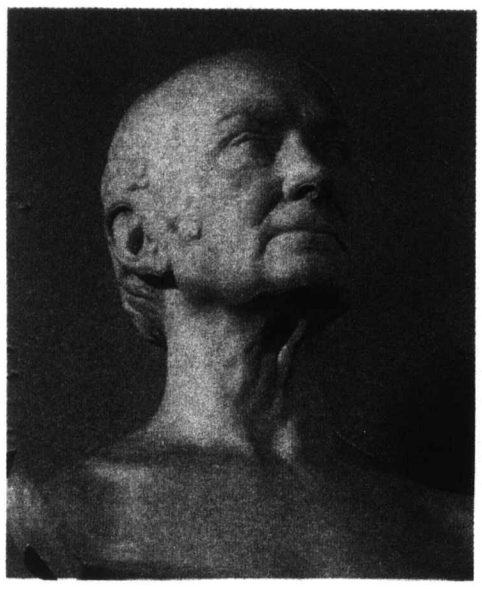
He was named minister to the Netherlands by President George Washington in 1794, beginning a long career in public service that carried him through the presidency in 1825-29 to his death on the floor of Congress in 1848.

Like his father before him, John Quincy Adams was defeated for a second term as president, each having the misfortune to represent the Old Guard at a time when American democracy was embracing the new.

One of John Adams' first moves as president was to name his son to the more important post as minister to Prussia amid cries of nepotism that embarrassed the 30-year-old John Quincy dreadfully but he took the post anyway.

And he took a bride, too, Louisa Catherine Johnson, the vivacious and highly educated daughter of an American father and an English mother, his second choice, after his mother, Abigail, had torpedoed his first love, Mary Frazier of Newburyport.

His father fired him as minister to Prussia to spare him another embarrassment of being fired by his successor, Thomas Jefferson, and John Quincy was able to return home to a new town named for his great-grandfather.



JOHN QUINCY ADAMS life-size marble bust created by famed sculptor Hiram Powers in 1841. The sculpture is located inside United First Parish Church, Quincy Center.

He ran for and won a seat in the state legislature as a Federalist, his father's old party, but he showed such a strong streak of independence that his fellow Federalists urged him to stand for the U.S. Senate to be rid of him.

Since it was the legislators themselves who voted for senators in those days, John Quincy was elected and promptly alienated both Federalists and Democrat-Republicans by speaking up for the Louisiana Purchase and voting against creation of the Louisiana Territory.

He finally emerged as a Democrat-Republican in 1808 after the British frigate Leopard attacked the American frigate Chesapeake in search of what the Brits thought were deserters from his majesty's navy and the Federalists sought to appease them.

Federalists were outraged and even John and Abigail, living in retirement in Peace field, their estate in Quincy, found the words to chastise their son, who responded, "I could wish to please my parents — but my duty must do."

Rather than face dismissal by his home state, John Quincy resigned his Senate seat but the ink was hardly dry before President James Madison nominated him to be minister to Russia and he liked it so well that he turned down a Supreme Court appointment to keep it.

In fact, he and Tsar Alexander I, the one who halted Napoleon's march on Moscow, hit it off so well that the Russian ruler offered to be godfather to John Quincy's first daughter, Louisa Catherine, but the offer was refused.

Always available, Adams the ultimate negotiator was next called on to chair the American delegation to Ghent in Belgium where the final peace treaty with Britain was drawn up ending the War of 1812, what some call the second American Revolution.

A new president, James Monroe, meant a new job for John Quincy, who was named secretary of state in 1817 at a time when their colonies in Latin America were declaring independence from Spain and Portugal.

When President Monroe delivered to Congress on Dec. 2, 1823, the message that those Latin colonies can no longer "be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power" he was speaking Adams' words and it became the Monroe Doctrine.

The Americans' ace negotiator also worked out the so-called Adams-Onis Treaty, under which Gen. Andrew Jackson's attacks on the Seminole Indians in Spanish Florida were justified and the whole peninsula ceded to the United States in exchange for a settlement of the boundary between Mexico and the Louisiana Purchase.

Five strong candidates — all Democrat-Republicans — emerged for the 1824 presidential race.

There was Henry Clay, speaker of the House; William Crawford, the secretary tary of the treasury; John Calhoun, the secretary of war; Adams; and Jackson, the Tennessean hero of the Battle of New Orleans and the spokesman of the great unwashed.

Jackson won the popular vote, 155,872 to 105,321 for Adams and the electoral vote with 99 to 84 for Adams, 41 for Crawford and 39 for Clay but, since no one had a majority, the election was thrown into the Congress which selected Adams.

Reaction to his first message to Congress, a bid to expand the presidential powers far beyond what some saw as their Constitutional limits, showed clearly that the so-called Era of Good Feeling in the Madison and Monroe Administrations was over.

His most virulent opposition came from the South whenever one of his proposals was thought to impinge upon the "peculiar institution" of slavery and his early opposition to the removal of the Creek Indians to land west of the Mississippi,

By the time the four years of his administration had passed, the Democrat-Republicans had split into Democrats and National Republicans and Jackson, "the people's president," had trounced Adams in the electoral college 178 to 83,

Although Adams tried to steer clear of the worst parts, the 1828 campaign was so dirty, chiefly in its attacks on Jackson's wife, Rachel, that the president-elect refused to meet with the outgoing president before his inauguration.

Consequently, Adams, like his father before him, refused to attend his successor's inauguration, the only two presidents to do so.

He took a year to rest, then ran for the House from the South Shore District. Now running as a Whig, he easily defeated a Democrat and a Federalist for the post, which rejuvenated his interest in public service.

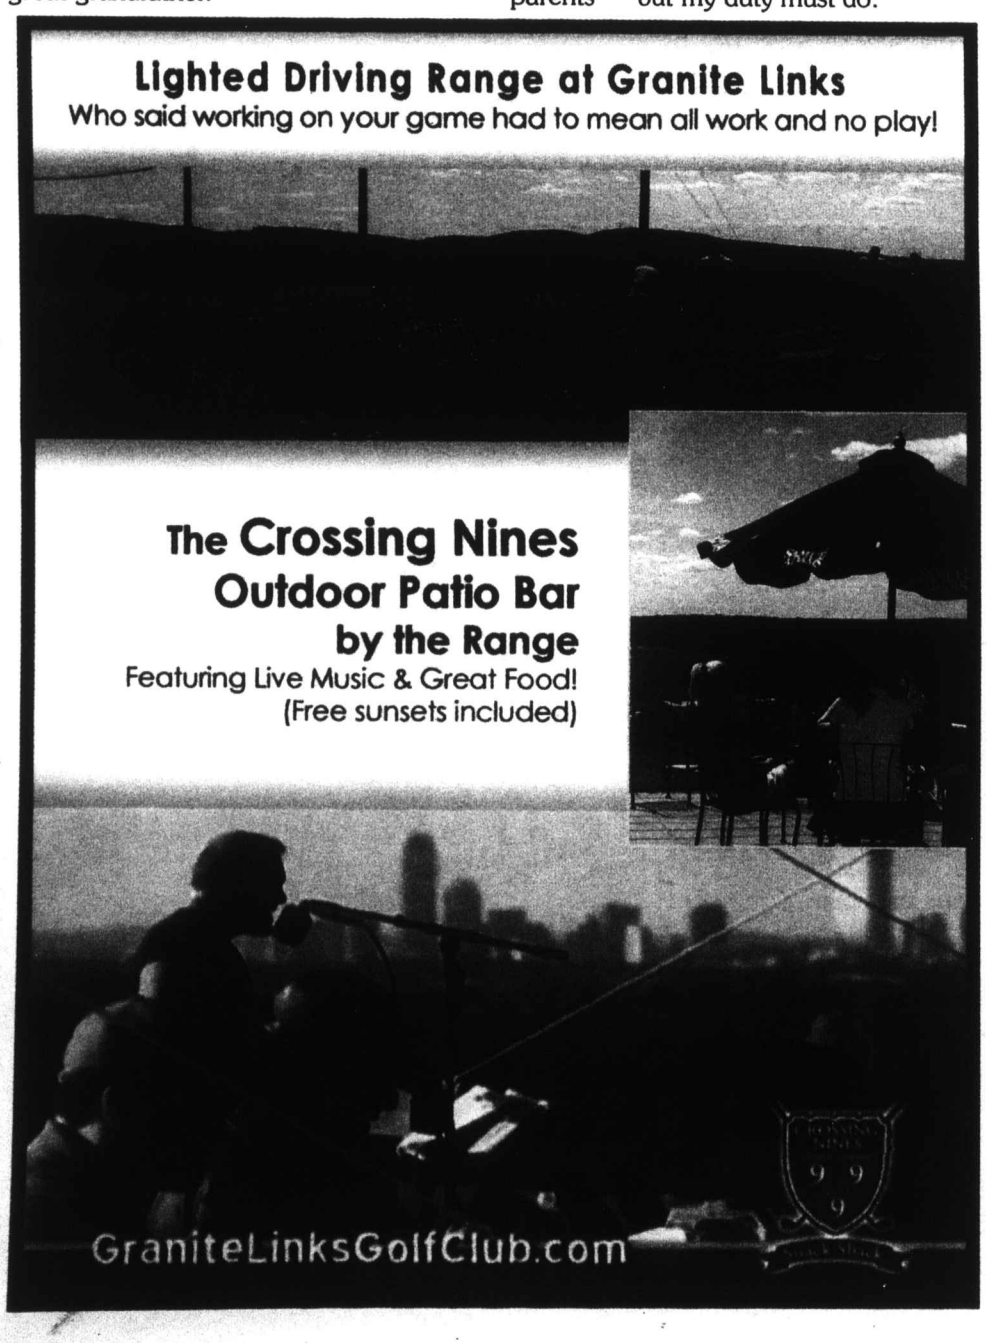
Some say John Quincy's best work was done in the interests of human rights after he left the White House in 1829. It included a vote of censure in the House of Representatives, which was defeated by a vote of 105 to 80.

At the age of 74, he took on the case of 35 Africans, kidnapped in their homeland and bound for slavery in Cuba, and waxed so eloquent before the Supreme Court that they were freed and sent home over the protests of the new president.

His particular target was known as the Gag Rule which said that "all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating . . . to the subject of slavery shall be laid upon the table and that no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

It was passed in 1836 and he fought it tooth and nail until it was rescinded in 1844.

On Feb. 21, 1848, as he rose to his feet to speak against a commendation for those who had won the war with Mexico, which he opposed, 80-year-old John Quincy Adams suffered a massive stroke. He died two days later in the Capitol.



City Named For Him But:

Col. John Quincy Something Of A Mystery Man

Few men have served the public good longer or as well as Col. John Quincy.

He was Speaker of the Massachusetts House, a governor's councilor, a selectman and perennial moderator of the town meeting in Old Braintree, commander of the local militia regiment and guardian of the rights of the few Ponkapoag Indians who survived the plague.

And through his granddaughter, Abigail Adams, nee Smith, he was the grandfather-in-law of the second president of the United States and the great grandfather of the sixth.

Small wonder then, that when the North Precinct broke away from Old Braintree in 1792 they named the new town "Quincy."

Col. John Quincy is something of a mystery man, even in the city that bears his name. It is not known for sure when he came to Old Braintree. Nor is there a picture of him extant or even a physical description of him in the words that have been left to us by his contemporaries.

During celebration in Quincy in 1908, the main speaker, the Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, noted that "in his day, he was one of the most trusted and influential public characters of the province; but for a hundred years or more, he has now been buried in oblivion.

"For example, I once mentioned John Quincy to a lifelong resident, a man of affairs and influence in the town. The response was: 'John Quincy? John Quincy? I never heard of him before!' Another in the group then exclaimed 'You mean John Quincy Adams, don't you?'"

John Quincy was born in Boston. His father, Daniel, died when he was a year old and his widowed mother, Anna, married the Rev. Moses Fiske, minister of the First Parish Church in Braintree.

He graduated from Harvard in 1708, obtained a master's degree in 1711 and inherited, through his mother, a good-sized farm in Mount Wollaston and lived there for the rest of his life.

John Quincy's rise in public life was meteoric.

He married Elizabeth Norton, the daughter of a Hingham minister, in 1715 and was named justice of the peace the same year, moderator of the town meeting a year later and began 22 years of service in the House a year after. He was Speaker of the House for 12 years, starting in 1729.

In 1741, he was manipulated out of his posts as commander of the Suffolk militia regiment by a wealthy Boston lawyer named Joseph Gooch, who is described by some as an "opportunist," and by others as an "unsavory demagogue."

Gooch arrived in Old Braintree determined to launch a political career. Beer and cider, supplied by Gooch, flowed freely in the taverns. The strategy prevailed and Quincy was dismissed as militia commander.

But his banishment was short-lived. Captains and lieutenants refused to serve under Gooch. They would serve only under Quincy. Demoralized, the people of Braintree turned Gooch out and returned command of their militia to Quincy.

Quincy's reputation was such that he was named by the legislature to be trustee of the funds of the Ponkapoag Indians, survivors of a devastating plague. He held the post for 20 years at the insistence of the Indians themselves.

Whenever there was a civic job to be done, it was the practice of the people of Old Braintree to appoint Col. John Quincy to do it. Thus it was that he was called on to chair the committee that first recommended the North Precinct become a separate town. That was in 1728.

It took 64 years but finally it was done, and when it was, they named it for John Quincy.

JOHN QUINCY TANKARD is on display in the foyer of Quincy City Hall glass annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Colonel John Quincy, for whom the City of Quincy was named, was the grandfather of Abigail Adams and the great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams. Quincy attorney and former City Council President George Burke paid $200,000 for the tankard at auction in 2001. It was the only piece in a collection of colonial silver put up for auction by United First Parish Church to remain in Quincy. Burke has provided in his will to gift the tankard to the city.

Final Resting Place Of City's Earliest Settlers, Generations Of Adams And Quincy Families

History And More At Hancock Cemetery

It may not share the same well-profiled status of some of the city's renowned historical sites like the Old House, Adams Birthplaces and United First Parish Church.

But Quincy's historic Hancock Cemetery should be a must-stop on any visitor's list to the "City of Presidents."

In fact, you might even say the Cemetery located on Hancock Street adjacent to City Hall is a blueprint to many of the city's historical figures. There's a story of the living associated with every grave marker that provide a perspective of not only local history but our nation's history, too.

The cemetery is the final resting area for some of the city's earliest settlers as well as generations of the Adams and Quincy families, including Rev. John Hancock, the father of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

There are also lessons to be learned from some of the monuments themselves. The artwork on the markers are examples of colonial winged skulls and cherubim, to Federalist classical motifs and representatives of Quincy's 19th century role as the national center of granite quarrying and carving, says Edward Fitzgerald, a leading authority on the Hancock Cemetery and executive director of the Quincy Historical Society.

There are many notable graves but there's one that may leave some visitors a bit perplexed.

That would be the tomb marked "J.Q. Adams" located to the left of the front gate. And there's an interesting story behind this tomb.

The tomb is the Adams family vault, the original resting place of John and Abigail Adams and John Quincy and Louisa Catherine Adams, who are all now entombed in the Presidential crypt in United First Parish Church – located just across the street from the cemetery.

The vault remains the grave of numerous family members including John and Abigail's daughter, Nabby, and John Quincy and Louisa Catherine's sons, George and John.

According to Fitzgerald's research, when Nabby died in 1813, she was evidently buried in the family tomb in Hancock Cemetery. Her mother Abigail was buried there in 1818 and then John Adams was buried there after he died on July 4, 1826.

"In the ensuing weeks, John Quincy Adams came up with the idea of the crypt beneath the planned new church building," Fitzgerald says. "The new church opened in 1828 and John and Abigail's remains are moved" (to the crypt.)

ADAMS FAMILY VAULT at Historic Hancock Cemetery has an interesting history all its own. Other photos on Page 31.

By 1834 – over the next five years – three more Adams are buried in the family tomb: John Quincy Adams's brother Thomas and his sons George and John.

In 1848, after JQA died in Washington, he was returned to Quincy and buried in the family tomb.

It is JQA's son, Charles Francis, who gets the idea to expand the crypt so that his father can be buried next to his father and mother. But JQA is not moved right away, Fitzgerald points out.

"His widow, Louisa Catherine, died in 1852 in Washington. Over the next few months, Charles Francis arranged preparation of the crypt. Louisa's body remained in Washington. On Dec. 15, 1852, the bodies of the Sixth President and First Lady Louisa Catherine are moved to the crypt in a coordinated ceremony."

After Louisa's body arrives by train, she is moved directly from the train station to the church.

A few other facts about the Adams family vault:

In Paul Nagel's book, Descent from Glory, Four Generations of the John Adams Family and John Quincy Adams, he describes the sequence for JQA's and Louisa Catherine's burials:

- JQA dies on Feb. 23, 1848. His body is brought back for burial and is in Quincy on March 11, 1848. A funeral service takes place in First Parish Church. "At 5 p.m. the coffin was taken across the road and placed in the crowded family vault. . . For four years John Quincy rested in the old burying ground with many relatives, his brother Thomas, his sister Nabby, his two sons, and others nearly so dear."
- Louisa Catherine Adams dies May 15, 1852 in Washington. Her son Charles Francis Adams "hastened back to Quincy, leaving his mother's coffin behind until he could arrange for his parents to be placed next to his grandparents."
- John Quincy Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams are placed in the crypt, Dec. 15, 1852. "JQA's casket, draped with velvet, was brought to the church as Louisa's was delivered from the railway depot, where it had arrived from Washington. The interment may not have been completed until the 16th, because JQA's granite tomb was not big enough for his coffin and had to be enlarged."

There are many other notable graves in Hancock Cemetery. Among them:

Henry Adams (1646) – the great-great-grandfather of John Adams – who emigrated from England in the first years of the Massachusetts colony. How different local and the nation's history may have been had Henry not "emigrated for reasons of conscience."

Rev. John Hancock (1744) – father of the future Patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Rev. Hancock served as minister of United First Parish Church from 1726 until his death in 1744. It is widely assumed that the cemetery came to be named for Rev. Hancock but some local historians believe the cemetery took its name from its location on Hancock Street.

Col. John Quincy (1767) – served more than 30 years in the colonial legislature, including 12 as speaker. The grandfather of Abigail Adams, the town of Quincy was named in his honor in 1792.

Abner Packard (1902) – commander of the town militia unit that responded to President Lincoln's first call for volunteers in the Civil War in April, 1861.

On any given afternoon, you'll find cemetery visitors meandering throughout the cemetery, reading markers and pausing in silence. Some graves are decorated with American flags, identifying the deceased as veterans of the Revolution, the War of 1812 and the Civil War.

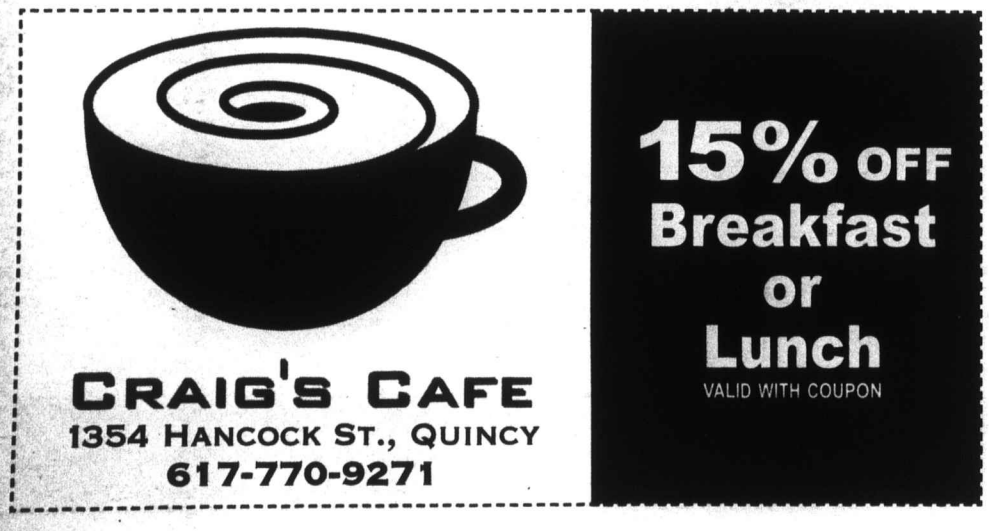
Hancock Cemetery is a must-stop along the city's historic trail. Visitors will learn more about Quincy and its early history.

Adams' Crucial Nominations

John Adams, the farmer's son from Old Braintree, not only had a hand in writing the U.S. Constitution but he made two nominations to posts that proved to be critical to the future of the new republic.

As a member of the Continental Congress, he eschewed intercolonial rivalries and nominated George Washington, a Virginia planter, as commander in chief of the Continental army.

As president, he nominated John Marshall as chief justice of the United States, where he served 34 years and established the basic principle that the Supreme Court can invalidate an act of Congress.



$113K Restoration Project At Hancock Cemetery

A $113,000 project to restore 259 gravestones at the historic Hancock Cemetery is now underway.

The site, located next to the old City Hall building, was first used as a burial ground in the 1620s when English settlers first arrived in what is now Quincy. More than 1,000 are buried in the site, including the Rev. John Hancock (father of the signer of Declaration of Independence) and Josiah Quincy. Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine, were also buried in the cemetery before they were moved to the United First Parish Church (the Church of the Presidents).

The restoration project, which will take place this summer, will see 259 of the gravestones in the cemetery repaired. The project is being undertaken by Historic Gravestone Services of New Salem, Mass. The company's owner, Ta Mara Conde, has restored gravestones in cemeteries through the U.S. and Canada, including local historic cemeteries in Newton and Malden. Quincy's Hancock Cemetery, she explained, contains numerous unique images worth preserving.

"It's not just the important people – for me it's the stones. I like the important people too, don't get me wrong, but these were hand-carved and they were hand-carved by certain people," Conde said.

"You have some really unique images over there. For Quincy it's important but for the rest of the nation it's important, too. These are images that are gone. These are important Puritan images that were brought about."

The project will involve removing growths from the stones, creating new bases to set the headstones in, and repairing broken stones using Jahn, a special restoration mortar made in Germany that can match the original color of the grave markers. Some of the cemetery's slate gravestones that have began to delaminate, or peel apart, will be repaired as well.

"It's a beautiful cemetery. It's not in bad shape," Conde said. "It won't take too much to bring that back around and really make it look good."

The cemetery, she noted, still contains a number of original footstones. Unlike most modern cemeteries, graves in the Hancock Cemetery include two markers, one on each end of the body.

"Almost all the graves there would have been laid out in an east-west orientation with the headstone facing west and a footstone facing east. This would be like your bed, with your headboard and your footboard, and the body is in between," Conde said.

"These footstones would be at the end. There are a lot of some still over there, which is wonderful. Some cemeteries lose their footstones, they just grow feet and walk away or something."

The restoration project began earlier this spring. Officials held a special ceremony at City Hall to commemorate the beginning of the project.

"For the city of Quincy it's another great day," Mayor Thomas Koch said at the ceremony. "It's another page in the chapter in recent years of the city's recommitting to its historical sites, historical buildings, which are so, so important and vital to our history but also to our future."

The project is being funded by an allocation of $80,000 from Quincy's Community Preservation Committee and a $33,000 Massachusetts Historical Commission grant. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said the city's adoption of the state's Community Preservation Act, which established the CPC, has proven beneficial.

"History is very integral to the identity of the City of Presidents. We are privileged to be home to the Adams National Historical Park, the Church of the Presidents, and many other cultural and historic organizations," Laforest said.

"As a city, having the Community Preservation Act allows us to support those organizations and to showcase the depth of our city's history at other sites like the Hancock Cemetery. This first period cemetery is notable for the prominent people buried there and the gravestone art to be shown."

Quincy's Planning Department helped secure the Mass. Historic grant that is partially funding the project.

"It's a wonderful thing to be able to restore these historic places," Planning Director Dennis Harrington said. "It's amazing we have wonderful historic sites in the city of Quincy and it's wonderful we have a lot of interest in preserving them and enhancing them."

Chris Cassani, the executive director of the Parks, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments, said Hancock Cemetery and the grave markers inside it tell a story of what life was like centuries ago.

"It tells us so much about what life was like in Quincy all those years ago," he explained. "If you look when people were born and when they died, many people died very young. It tells a story. You just need to fill in the gaps a little with some of our historical knowledge just to see how different life was then."

Planning for the restoration work began a dozen years ago. At the time the city's Board of Cemetery Managers identified a plan to upgrade the cemetery, including work on the gravestones and eventually landscaping the site, city historian and cemetery board chairman Tom Galvin noted.

"I can't believe that here we are, after 12 whole years of working on that, that we're on step one," Galvin said. "Speaking for the cemetery board, we look forward to the enhancement there and we hope this is only the beginning of upgrading our cemeteries."

INTERESTING DESIGNS on some gravestones includes this one for John Cleverly (1703). The gravestone was carved by John Noyes of Boston. This headstone is considered the earliest in New England to feature birds which represent phoenixes (immortality) and peacocks (incorruptibility).

MARBLE MONUMENT for Josiah Quincy, Jr. (1775) and Abigail Phillips Quincy (1798). Josiah Quincy was a colleague of John Adams in the early patriot causes and his co-counsel at the Boston Massacre trial. He died at age 30 while returning from pleading the American cause in England. The monument to him and his wife was erected and composed by their son, the third Josiah, who served as mayor of Boston and president of Harvard College.

THIS INTERESTING GRAVESTONE is for Edmund Quincy (1698) who built the original portion of the Dorothy Quincy Homestead located at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road. Note the headstone's hallowed space. Tradition has it the space housed a lead engraving of the family seal but it was removed during the American Revolution and made into bullets.

TOMB OF John Briesler who died in 1836. A veteran of the Revolutionary War, he later served on the household staff of John and Abigail Adams for nearly 20 years, including the Adamses' time in the White House.

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

John Adams 'Father'

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

Battlefields Of Quincy

Although it furnished fighting men and leaders in the Revolution, Quincy (Old Braintree then) escaped without a pitched battle being fought on its shores.

The Minutemen of Quincy, however, did take part in a number of local skirmishes, harassing the Redcoats even after most of them had left Boston by March 17, 1775.

On Sunday morning, May 21, 1775, three British sloops dropped anchor in the Fore River not far off Germantown.

The Quincy company, under the command of Elihu Adams, John Adams' brother, drove them off as they raided Sheep Island in nearby Weymouth.

On the night of July 9, 1775, a Quincy company of 300 men put out in whaleboats from Germantown and seized cattle, sheep and enemy soldiers from Long Island, under the noses of the British troops.

A few days later, another company of men, leaving Moon Island off Squantum in whale-boats, set fire to a house and barn on Long Island under fire from the British fleet.

On Sunday evening, July 29, 1775, a group of men left Squantum in whaleboats, overpowered a guard and burned Boston Light, the beacon that guided ships into Boston Harbor.

The British fleet left Boston Harbor Oct. 10, 1775.

USS Lexington Led Search For Amelia

When Amelia Earhart, once the part-owner of Dennison Airport in North Quincy, vanished over the Pacific on the around-the-world flight in 1937, it was the Quincy-built carrier Lexington (the first) and its 90 planes that led the three-week search for her.

She has never been found.

Thomas Morton's Merry Time At Merrymount

COPYRIGHT 1898 BY IMRE KIRALFY. THE REVELS OF MERRY MOUNT. THE STROBRIDGE LITHO. CO. CINCINNATI, O.

It was a strange tableau that took place that May day in 1627 on the hill overlooking Boston Bay in a land where the righteous Pilgrims ruled.

There were the English adventurers (don't ever call them colonists) from across the sea, and the local Indians, or what was left of them after a visit from the plague, curious to witness this strange white man's way.

Together they stripped an 80-foot pine tree of its bark, hauled it to the top of the hill, attached a rack of buckhorn to its peak and raised it on the hill called Ma-re Mount (hill by the sea) or more commonly Merrymount.

Then they broke out the beer and cider and, Englishman and Indian together, they danced around their Maypole in a hedonistic ritual that was guaranteed to leave the Pilgrims, 40 miles away in Plymouth, aghast.

"Drinke and be merry, merry, merry boyes," wrote their leader.

"Let all your delight be in hymen's joyes...uncover thy head, and fear no harme, for here's good liquor to keep it warm."

"Lasses in beaver coats come away. Ye shall be welcome to us night and day."

The leader was Morton of Merrymount, a man whose name, rightly or wrongly, has lived on in infamy.

Thomas Morton of Clifford's Inn Gent., as he signed himself, first arrived in the area that became known as Old Braintree and later Quincy in 1622 as secretary to Andrew Weston, founder of the Wessagusset colony in nearby Weymouth.

The Wessagusset colony did not survive but Morton, a lawyer and sportsman as well as a merrymaker, could not forget the clear streams that teemed with fish and the forests that abounded with game in the new land.

He was back again in 1625 as a minor partner in a trading venture led by a Captain Wollaston, a man so obscure that his first name has been lost in nearly 400 years of history, although modern research by historian Hobart Holly has indicated it was probably Richard.

Captain Wollaston was so disappointed by the lack of business opportunity in New England that he packed up his partners and most of their indentured servants and left for greener fields in Virginia, leaving Lieutenant Fitcher in charge.

Morton stayed behind, too, and it wasn't long before Fitcher was ousted and Morton, who was described by the Pilgrim's Governor William Bradford as a man with "more craft than honesty," became The Man, and immediately proclaimed himself "Lord of Misrule."

In the words of Governor Bradford, he maintained "a school of atheism," his people spent their time "quaffing and drinking – in great excess" and they were "inviting Indian women for their consorts, dancing and frisking together – and worse practices."

And, worst of all, Morton and his men were trading guns and rum to the Indians in exchange for pelts and were training said Indians in the use of firearms so they could hunt for more pelts, a move that frightened the wits out of the Pilgrims.

Could it be that, far from the "Lord of Misrule" as he claimed, Morton was just a sharp businessman, the Sam Walton of his day, who cut into Plymouth's profits by treating the Indians more or less like equals and joining in their fun and games. Either way, it was plain that Morton had to go.

Thus is was that in the spring of 1628, Captain Myles Standish – an angry little man of unimposing stature whom Morton derided as "Captain Shrimpe" – and an army of eight men were dispatched to Merrymount to solve the problem once and for all. It turned out to be an easy task.

Morton knew they were coming and prepared to resist. But the night-long preparations soon turned into a party and when Standish and his soldiers arrived at dawn, the defenders of Merrymount were too drunk to resist and surrendered without firing a shot.

That was the Pilgrims' version. In his memoirs, Morton insisted he was ready to fight but his men turned out to be a cowardly lot and he had to give up the struggle in order to avoid bloodshed and was beaten up for his pains by the victorious Pilgrim army of eight.

Whatever, Morton was arrested and taken to Plymouth where Standish wanted him hanged. But gentler heads prevailed and he was put aboard a ship for England, an action that so enraged the captain that he had to be restrained.

Back in London, Morton was charged with disturbing the safety of the Plymouth colony but the charges were dropped when he presented himself to the Crown as a good Anglican who was persecuted by those dissenters from Plymouth.

The trading post at Merrymount was allowed to remain but, in 1629, a sterner opponent arrived on the scene in John Endicott and the Puritans, who established the Massachusetts Bay Colony in Boston, a scant 10 miles from the hill beside the bay.

Endicott ordered Morton's Maypole cut down, which it was, and the name of his trading post changed from Merrymount to Mount Dagon after the Biblical sea god of the Philistines, which it wasn't.

Morton's brief episode of saturnalia is recalled today in a section of Quincy and a park called Merrymount.

Captain Who?

The original settlement of Quincy was made as a trading post in 1625 by an all-male company led by a Captain Wollaston, who was so obscure that his first name has been lost to history.

But after exhaustive research some years ago by Hobart Holly, the city's late historian, he concluded that Capt. Wollaston's first name was probably Richard — but, still, nobody knows for sure.

Nation's First Commercial Railroad Was Here

The Granite Railway

(Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

It was the darnedest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

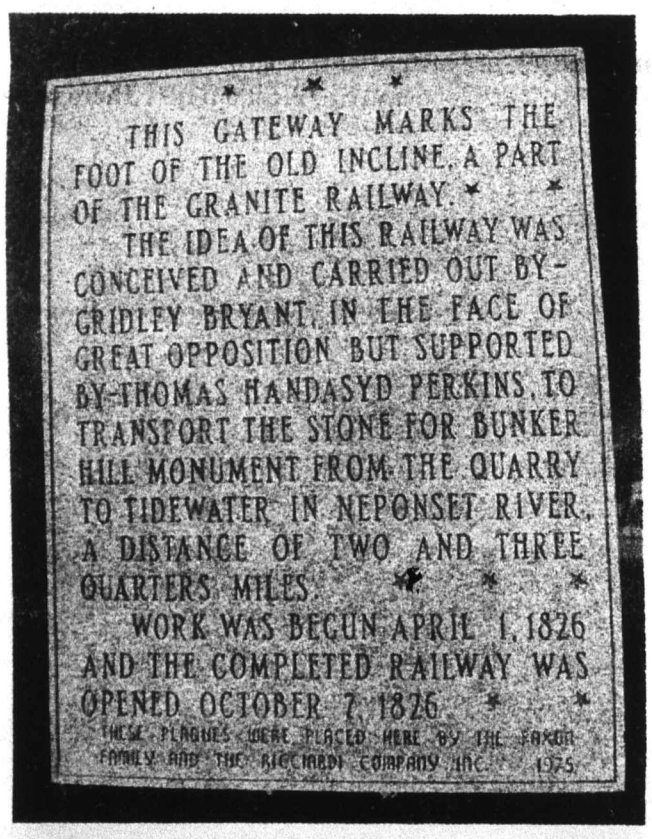
The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

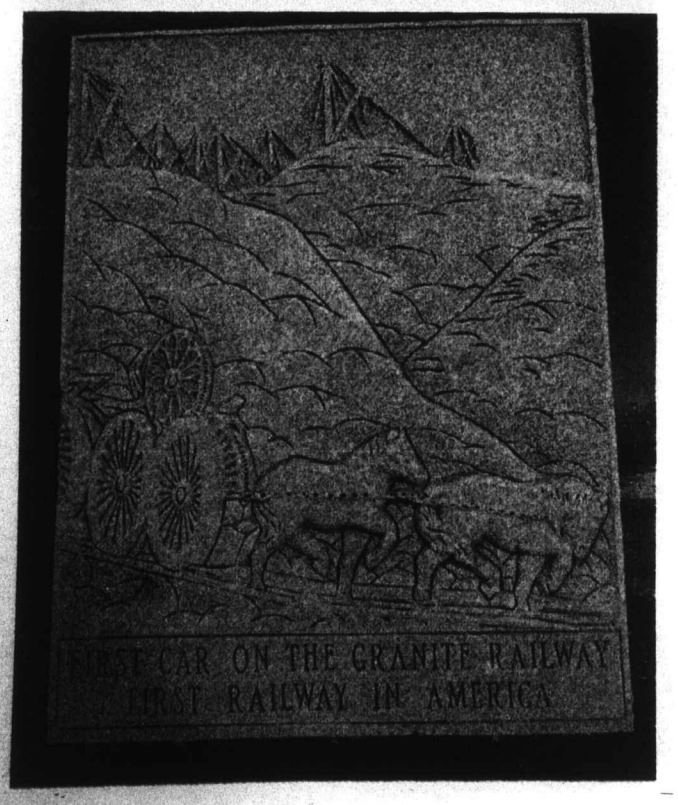
The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.





Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the South-east Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Avenue in West Quincy. It is open to the public until dusk year round. There is no admission charge.

Quincy Granite Famed The World Over

There was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the old Quincy granite quarries – many of them filled today – swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy "just growed."

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries.

The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

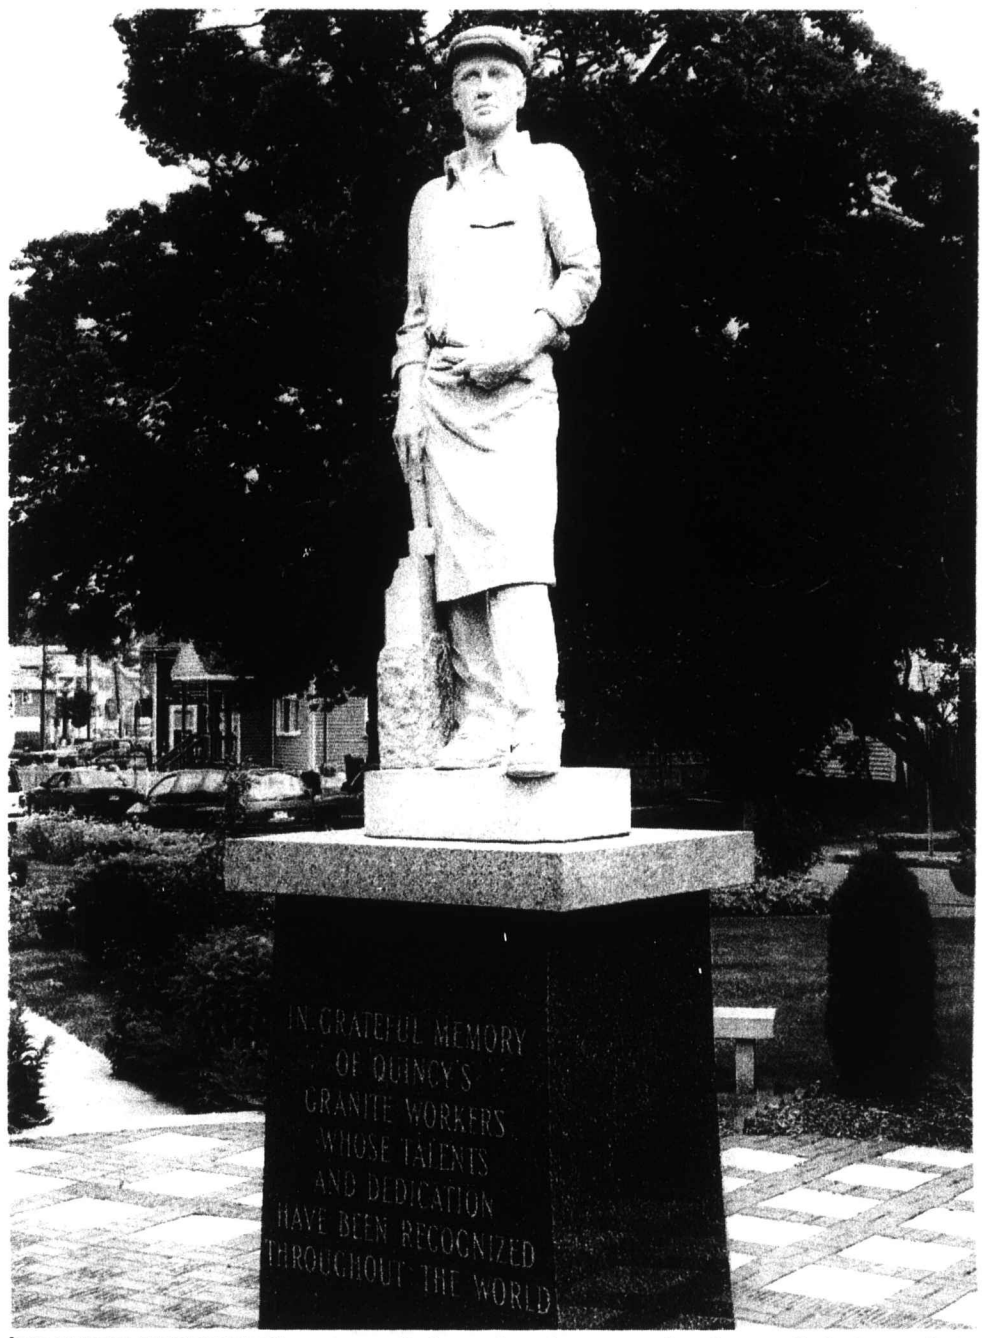
The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as "the Stone Age" of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names "Quincy Light." "Quincy Dark," and "Quincy Extra Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.



GRANITE WORKERS, many of them immigrants who learned their craft in Italy and the Scandinavian countries, are memorialized with a statue of Quincy granite in the Granite Workers Park on Copeland St., West Quincy. There were as many as 4,000 working in the Quincy quarries during the "Stone Age" of American architecture. Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble

SOLOMON WILLARD GRAVE SITE (right) is located in Hall Place Cemetery, off Crescent Street in West Quincy. The monument made from Quincy granite reads: "A public spirited and patriotic citizen, an accomplished architect whose memory will always be associated with the monument on Bunker Hill." Willard designed the Bunker Hill Monument in 1825, and construction began in 1827. Willard discovered satisfactory granite quarries for the stone in Quincy, and the granite for the monument came from there. Willard revolutionized the techniques to cut and handle the slabs of stone in what became known as the Bunker Hill Quarry, which evolved into a major industry for the town. Willard was also the architect for Quincy's "Town Hall" which today is the Mayor James R. McIntyre Government Center or Old City Hall. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

QUARRY – For over 100 years, beginning early in the 19th century, Quincy's leading industry was centered on its vast deposits of very unique and high-grade granite. The granite was prized for use in building and large structures and later for monuments. Over 50 quarries were opened – this one provided granite for the Bunker Hill Monument.

Quincy Quarry And Granite Workers Museum

By AL BINA
Quincy Quarry And Granite Workers Museum

For years it has been talked about having a museum to preserve the rich granite history of Quincy and the surrounding towns, which also had quarry operations. There have been several attempts, but all have faded in the past. There was a glimmer of hope to establish a museum when the capping operation of Quincy's land fill and the construction of Granite Links Golf Course moved forward. A portion of the tipping fees for allowing Mass Highway to bring in fill from the Big Dig Tunnel Project was to be set aside to construct a museum. Unfortunately these funds evaporated into the construction of Ricciuti Drive and the golf course project.

In 2009, the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum was formed and incorporated in Massachusetts and received its 501c(3) designation from the Internal Revenue Service as a non-profit organization and has received all the state required certificates for a non-profit. What started as a small group of Quincy residents has grown to a membership of over 175 – all dedicated to saving the history of the granite industry. Membership ranges from Maine to Florida and west to Ohio, with most having a connection through generations of family members who had some part in the granite industry.

The Museum has received many family artifacts connected to the granite industry including tools, equipment, photos, drawings, maps, books, granite salesman samples, and extensive written information and family photos of individuals who worked in the industry.

At the turn of the century a large portion of the inhabitants of Quincy worked in the granite industry or worked supporting the industry in transportation, in tool making and in the manufacturing of machinery for the industry. The granite industry played a large role in the growth of Quincy bringing many ethnic groups to the city. The first group of immigrants who worked in the granite industry were the Irish followed by the Finnish and Swedish and then the Scottish and finally the Italians. The ethnic history, cultures and customs that were brought to Quincy will be an important part of the Museum.

Many descendants of these granite workers have donated family photos related to the granite industry. These photos are not found in any collection of historical photos of Quincy. Two examples are shown here. The first is an original photo of the Clark & Pearce Granite Company stone shed, owned by George Clark, far left. The photo was donated by George Clark's granddaughter, Marion Colclough of Quincy. The second photo is another original photo of the Sampo Granite Company stone shed that was owned by Andrew Nisula. Photo given by his grandson Paul Nisula formerly of Quincy. The two donated photos are examples of individuals who want to save our rich granite history.

The goal of the Museum is to construct a 3,200 square foot museum adjacent to the historic Lyons Turning Mill on Quarry Hill Drive, West Quincy. The mill site was chosen because of its historical building remains and also the site has one of the few remaining quarries that has not been filled in.

For more information contact the Quincy Quarry Museum at P.O. Box 690724, Quincy, MA 02269, or at quincyquarrymuseum@verizon.net, telephone: 617-472-1322, or visit their website quincyquarrymuseum.org.

MARKER COMMEMORATES the John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace as the first commercial blast iron furnace in the United States. The remains of the blast furnace – located near Hall Cemetery at 61 Crescent Street in West Quincy – has been designated an Historical Landmark by the American Society for Metals and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The blast furnace produced iron from bog ore dug from the bottom of brooks and swamps. Photo below shows the historic site from Crescent Street.

First Iron Works

America's Steel Industry Born Here In 1644

It failed after nine years of effort and since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River in a section of Old Braintree called "the Woods." It left its name on the river, now Furnace Brook in West Quincy.

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Unfortunately, iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony (Did someone cry "Nepotism?"), went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworkers in New England." He, of course, was the local agent.

The Company gave Winthrop a 1,000 pounds in capital and a work crew of indentured servants, many of who ran away when they heard they were going to the wilds of America.

Jail was better than that!

When, after a search from Maine to Plymouth, he decided to locate in Quincy, Winthrop was also granted 3,000 acres of land, with subsidiary land rights elsewhere in the colony, and a 21-year monopoly.

The operation was deemed of such importance that the ironworkers were given exemption from militia duty, this at a time when war was imminent with the Narragansett Indians and with Ninigret, sachem of the Niantics.

The first iron was turned out in 1644, but young Winthrop was fired the next year, to be succeeded by Richard Leader. It is interesting to note that one of America's earliest industrial magnates toiled for a salary of 100 pounds a year.

The ore from which iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook came from the swamps and bogs. It was not a high quality product. Water power from a dam thrown across the Brook was inadequate. Quincy Iron proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured by Oliver Cromwell at the Battle of Dunbar. They suffered the fate common to most 17th Century prisoners of war.

Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England; cheap labor in an effort to make the Quincy iron works a paying proposition. It didn't work. The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works on the North Shore in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650 it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

Remains of the John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace are located at 61 Crescent St., West Quincy. The site is open and free to the public.

John Adams' July 4th Toast:

'I Will Give You Independence Forever'

The centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House is John Adams' favorite armchair in which he was stricken with his final illness and offered his last testament as a Founding Father.

On June 30, 1826, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Rev. George Whitney and his Quincy Committee of Arrangements called on Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the Declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

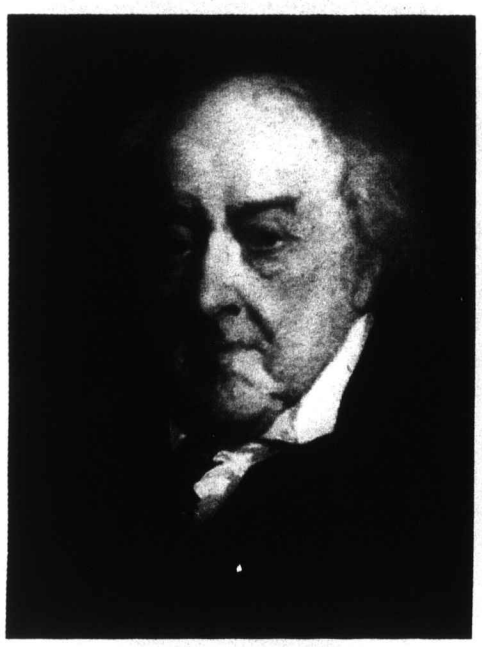
Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give you: 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, at 6:20 in the afternoon, as cannons roared and bells rang out to celebrate a half century of independence, John Adams was dead.



JOHN ADAMS

On the morning of July 4, a letter went off to John Quincy Adams in Washington that his father was at death's door but, due to the slow communications of the day, he did not get the message for several days.

The Sixth President of the United States was en route home to Quincy July 9 when he got word of his father's death.

Thomas Watson Wins New Shipyard Bridge

The narrow wooden bridge that spanned the Fore River at its mouth proved to be an early impediment to building large ships at Thomas A. Watson's Quincy yard.

So Watson not only lobbied for a new bridge but won the contract to build it in 1902 in time for the cruiser Des Moines to get out for her sea trials.

Quincy 'Capital' Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 20,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast-developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the Duchess."

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she gained a real title, the Duchess of Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Later, Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant, became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

" . . . Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a Naval Reserve Training Base where, for the next seven years, thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

The national ensign was hauled down for the last time on the morning of Dec. 23, 1953, and the training of Weekend Warriors moved to the South Weymouth Naval Air Facility, home base of anti-submarine blimp patrols since 1942.

Reserve Capt. Harry Sartoris, the last commander of the NAS Squantum, flew the last plane out of the old base and landed the first plane at the new NAS South Weymouth, where he was to become the first commander.

The NAS South Weymouth was an operational U.S. Navy airfield for 55 years. It closed in 1997.

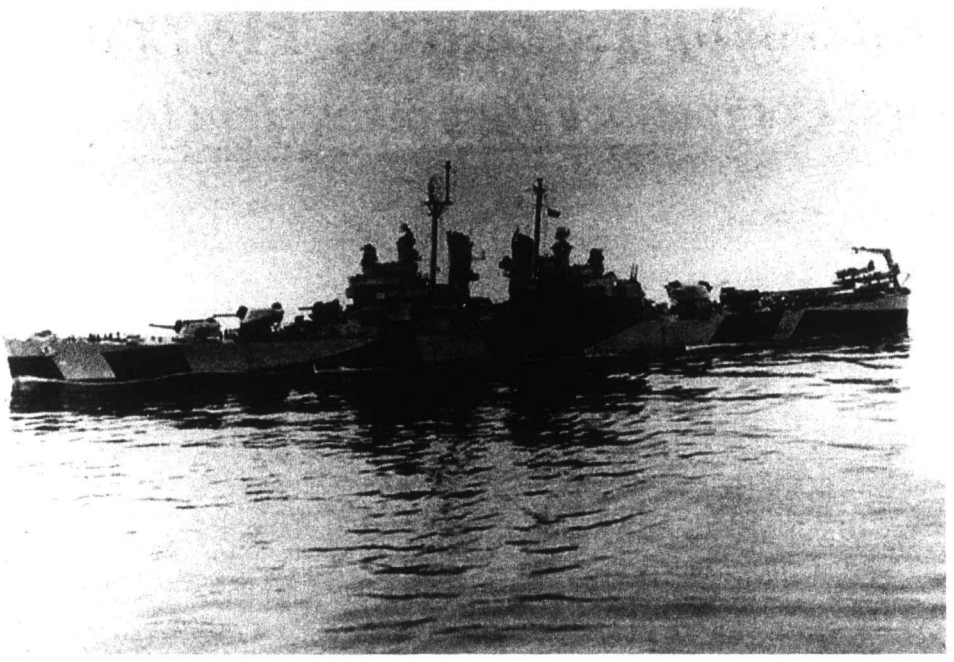
Newlyweds Pass Up Quincy

Dennison Airport had a plane ready to take Charles Lindbergh and his bride, Ann Morrow, to Maine on their honeymoon in 1929.

But the newlyweds' 35-foot-yacht Mouette docked in Provincetown instead of Quincy and they flew to Maine from a Cape Cod airport.

BETHLEHEM'S FIRST GREAT vessel was the battleship "Nevada," launched in 1914, which survived badly damaged both the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946.



BETWEEN PEARL HARBOR and V-J Day (Aug. 14, 1945), Quincy's Fore River Shipyard launched 92 ships. Three of them, including the light cruiser "Pasadena" (above) were delivered in one day (June 8, 1944).

Quincy Shipyard: Thomas Watson's Other Invention

7-Masted Schooner To Nuclear And Super Ships

It began with a 50-horsepower marine engine painstakingly constructed by the new firm of F.O. Wellington & Co. for a small passenger steamer out of Damariscotta, Maine, in the early 1880s.

In the 1970s, the yard produced 939-foot super tankers built by General Dynamics Quincy Division for Burmah Tankers Ltd of England, capable of transporting 125,000 cubic meters of liquefied natural gas across the Atlantic Ocean. In the intervening 90-odd years, more than 1,000 ships, including one of the mightiest battlewagons of them all, USS Massachusetts, were built at what was known locally as the Fore River Shipyard.

Quincy, with its more than 27 miles of waterfront and deepwater channels, had been in the forefront of American shipbuilding since 1696 when the ketch "Unity" was built at Ship Cove, the site of the present shipyard.

The 116-foot "Massachusetts," in its time the largest merchant vessel built in North America, was launched for the China trade in 1789 at the shipyard of Daniel Briggs in Philip's Head at Germantown.

Unfortunately, she started a life as a jinx ship when a soothsayer, Moll Pitcher of Lynn, forecast that the ship and all her crew would be lost. It took three tries to fill her complement for her maiden voyage.

Massachusetts reached Canton without mishap, Moll Pitcher notwithstanding, and was sold for $65,000 to the Danish East India Co.

Deacon George Thomas turned out 32 clipper ships over 23 years from this shipyard at Quincy Point, the last of them the graceful 2,200-ton "Red Cloud," launched in 1877 when Thomas was 82 years old.

It was in the early 1880's that Thomas A. Watson, relaxing from his labors with Alexander Graham Bell on the telephone, began making marine engines in a little machine shop on the Fore River in Braintree in partnership with Frank O. Wellington.

It was struggling along as the Fore River Engine Co. until the USS Maine blew up in Havana Harbor and the Spanish-American War of 1898 placed a premium on naval vessels.

Fore River Engine Co. landed contracts to build the torpedo boat destroyers "Lawrence" and "MacDonough" and, late in 1899, the 3,100-ton cruiser "Des Moines."

In order to launch "Des Moines," the Fore River Engine Co. moved two miles north on the river to Quincy Neck where the stream was wider and deeper. That's where the shipyard remained until it closed in 1986.

It became the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. in 1901, the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. in 1904, and a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Co. in 1913.

Bethlehem's first great vessel was the battleship "Nevada," launched in 1914, which survived badly damaged both the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946. She had to be sunk by naval gunfire.

At the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. during World War I, the Yard and its affiliate, the Victory Plant in Squantum, turned out more destroyers than all the other shipyards in the country combined.

But it was in World War II that the Fore River Shipyard won its international spurs.

On a visit to Quincy in the summer of 1941 as war clouds gathered on the Atlantic and Pacific horizons, Admiral Ernest J. King exhorted workers at the Yard: "You build 'em and we'll fight 'em!"

And build 'em they did!

Between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day (Aug. 14, 1945), the Fore River Shipyard launched 92 ships. Three of them, including the light cruiser "Pasadena," were delivered in one day (June 8, 1944). HMS Reynolds was built in a record 24 ½ days.

At its peak of wartime employment on Jan. 15, 1943, the shipyard employed 32,000 men and women in Quincy and its auxiliary yard in Hingham. The U.S. Navy gave it five consecutive "E" (for excellence) awards.

THE 35,000-TON battleship Massachusetts was launched Sept. 23, 1941 – a full 15 months ahead of schedule. The Quincy-built battleship sank the French giant Jean Bart at Casablanca in her first action; logged 225,000 wartime miles and 35 engagements without losing a man.

Among the ships launched at Fore River:

The battleship Massachusetts, 35,000 tons, launched Sept. 23, 1941, a full 15 months ahead of schedule; sank the French giant Jean Bart at Casablanca in her first action; logged 225,000 wartime miles and 35 engagements without losing a man.

The aircraft carriers Lexington II, Wasp II, built in 20 months from keel to launch; Bunker Hill, John Hancock, built and delivered in a record 14 ½ months; and Philippine Sea, which went to Antarctica with Admiral Richard E. Byrd in 1947.

The cruiser Quincy II launched June 26, 1943, which supported the invasions of Normandy on D-Day, 1944, and southern France, and transported President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the summit conference at Yalta in 1945.

The Yard also claimed to have originated that most mysterious of World War II graffiti, "Kilroy was here!"

Seems there was a checker named Jim Kilroy, whose job it was to go around and count the number of holes filled by each riveter, who was paid by piece work. Each rivet Kilroy counted was checked off so that it would not be counted twice.

Some wily riveters discovered that if they erased Kilroy's check mark, the counter on the next shift would credit them again. So, instead of a mere check, he would scrawl on the ship "Kilroy was here!"

The Yard was turning out ships so fast that there was no time to paint over the words and Kilroy's name began popping up in the most unlikely places all over the world, to the delight of soldiers and sailors everywhere.

After the war, the Fore River Shipyard turned out an amazingly diverse number of ships.

There were the twin passenger and cargo vessels, Constitution and Independence, for American Export Lines; the nuclear subs Sunfish and Whale; the Apollo tracking ships Vanguard, Redstone, and Mercury.

There was the world's first nuclear-powered surface vessel, the Long Beach; and the 108,500-ton super tanker, SS Manhattan, the largest merchant ship built in the United States, capable of carrying 38 million gallons of oil at 18 knots.

The Shipyard was purchased by General Dynamics in 1964 and, after a brief slump in the shipbuilding market, began a comeback with the recent launching of the first LNGs designed to transport liquefied natural gas from Algeria to the States.

General Dynamics ceased shipbuilding operations in the mid-1980s and closed the yard in 1986. Today, several non-shipbuilding businesses operate at the location which is still referred to as the Fore River Shipyard.

Quincy-Built Ships Played A Major Role In World War II

USS Quincy Took FDR, Churchill To Yalta

The President and the Prime Minister met on the ship's deck and went on from there to the conference that would decide the future of a world at war.

The President was Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Prime Minister was Winston Churchill and the ship was the Quincy-built heavy cruiser USS Quincy, the second of that name to perform heroically in World War II.

The first time was 69 years ago – Feb. 2, 1945 – and the place was the island of Malta in the Mediterranean, where the President met the Prime Minister and together they flew on to the Yalta Conference in the Russian Crimea.

After that brief respite for diplomacy at Yalta, it was back to war for Quincy, supporting carrier strikes on Okinawa and the Japanese home islands, finally entering Tokyo Bay on Sept. 1 in time to be present when the Japanese surrendered aboard the battleship Missouri, ending World War II 68 years ago.

The second Quincy, launched June 23, 1943, with great fanfare, was one of scores of warships built by Bethlehem's Fore River Shipyard, which employed 32,000 men and women in its Quincy and Hingham locations at their peak Jan. 15, 1943.

The first Quincy, launched June 19, 1935, was on peacetime convoy duty between Capetown, South Africa, and the Caribbean island of Trinidad, when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and virtually destroyed America's Pacific fleet.

She was dispatched to the South Pacific in the summer of 1942 to shell Japanese installations on the Solomon Island of Guadalcanal and offer protection to the Marines who landed there in the first American offensive of World War II in August.

She was on patrol in the channel off Guadalcanal in the early morning hours of Aug. 9 when she was attacked by a large enemy force and sunk after taking many direct hits in what became known as the Battle of Savo Island.

The final message from the stricken ship was one of defiance:

"We're going down between them – give 'em hell!"

News of the sinking struck hard at the men and women of the Fore River Shipyard, who had just begun work on a heavy cruiser to be called St. Paul. They petitioned Washington to change the name to Quincy and it was done.

The historic shipyard in Quincy Point was founded two miles up river in Braintree in 1884 as the Fore River Engine Company by Thomas A. Watson, the same man who heard Alexander Graham Bell's first words on the first telephone: "Watson, come here; I want you."

The company was formed to make marine engines but the demand for private yachts was so strong that Watson was forced to move downriver in 1900 to Quincy where the river was wider, the channel deeper and more suited to launch ships.

As early as 1898, the yard began building ships for the U.S. Navy, with keels laid for the destroyers Lawrence and MacDonough, a contract in hand for the cruiser Des Moines and two more pending for the battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey.

Another one of those early ships was Nevada, delivered in 1916, which fought its way through two world wars, survived Pearl Harbor and the A-Bomb test at Bikini Atoll, and finally had to be sunk by a friendly torpedo.

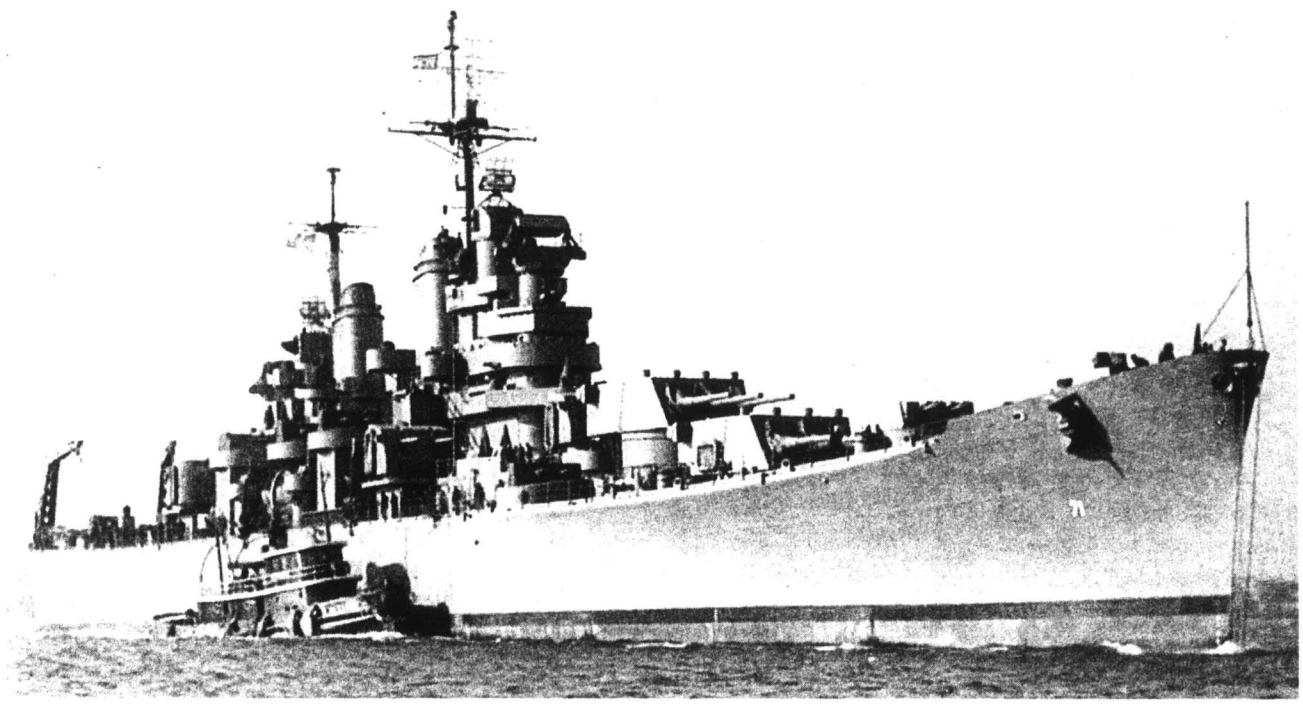
An adjunct facility, called the Victory Plant, had to be built to handle the U.S. Navy's overflow during World War I and together the yards turned out 35 destroyers in 27 months, more than all the other shipyards in the country combined, including USS Reid, built in a record 41 and a half days from keel-laying to delivery.

A Naval officer named Chester Nimitz was briefly a resident of Quincy in 1913 while waiting for his submarine to be fitted at the yard. He remained long enough to marry a Wollaston girl – Catherine Vance Freeman – daughter of a former city councillor.

When, shortly after Pearl Harbor, Nimitz was named commander of all American naval forces in the Pacific, Catherine congratulated him on taking over the fleet.

"But, my dear," he replied. "The fleet's at the bottom of the sea."

That was the Quincy shipyard's cue once again to roll up its collective sleeves and get busy.



THE USS QUINCY, built in 1943, the second heavy cruiser to bear the name, had a prominent role in World War II, including shelling the Normandy coast during D-Day in 1944 and bombarding the Japanese homeland. In between, she took President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Yalta Conference in 1945. The first USS Quincy was sunk in the Battle of Savo Island in 1942.

Starting on Dec. 7, 1941, for the next three years, its workers turned out 88 ships, ranging from LSTs (landship ships tanks) to CVs (aircraft carriers), an average of one every 12 and a half days.

It was in a shipyard annex in Hingham, five miles away down the coast, that workers set the world records by building the destroyer HMS Reynolds in 24 and a half working days and delivering five ships to the Navy in 50 hours.

The battleship USS Massachusetts, "Big Mamie," delivered May 12, 1942, took part in some 35 engagements during the war, including the sinking of the mighty Vichy-French battleship Jean Bart at Casablanca before she could be turned over to the Germans.

The aircraft carrier Wasp, launched from the Fore River ways April 4, 1939, was escorting transports of Marine reinforcements to Guadalcanal on Sept. 16, 1942, when two torpedoes from the Japanese submarine I-19 struck her in the vicinity of her gas tanks and magazines.

Another carrier, already abuilding at the Quincy yard and designated USS Oriskany, was renamed Wasp and sent off to war Nov. 24, 1943, taking part in the Battle of Leyte Gulf and the assaults on the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Japanese home islands.

The carrier Lexington, laid down as a battle cruiser but completed as the U.S. Navy's second aircraft carrier in 1925, was at sea when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor but, less than six months later, she fell to an enemy torpedo in the Battle of the Coral Sea.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

WINSTON CHURCHILL

CHESTER NIMITZ

As with Wasp, a carrier already on the ways in Quincy and ready to be dubbed USS Cabot, was renamed Lexington and commissioned Feb. 17, 1943, in time to fight through the central Pacific and launch its planes into the action that became known as "The Great Marianas Turkey Shoot."

From the heights in World War II, the once busy Fore River Shipyard fell on post-war hard times, building mostly tankers and freighters with an occasional Navy contract for a submarine, destroyer or frigate. But every now and then it was called on to construct something new and interesting.

Like the world's heaviest ship – the 106,500-ton tanker Manhattan – launched in 1962, the fastest and most powerful supertanker, which was later converted into the world's largest ice-breaker for a trip through the Canadian Arctic with one barrel of oil to prove that oil from Alaska's North Slope could be transported by sea.

Or the fleet oilers Redstone, Vanguard and Mercury, converted into instrumentation ships in 1966 to track missiles on the firing range, but also used to follow the progress of the Apollo spacecraft as they circled the earth in orbit and raced to the moon.

Or the world's first nuclear-powered surface combat ship, the cruiser Long Beach, launched in 1961, and the world's second, the frigate Bainbridge, in 1962. They were among the last ships built by Bethlehem at the shipyard before it was sold to General Dynamics.

The most notable ship construction contracts undertaken during the 13 years General Dynamics operated the shipyard were the ten 436-foot liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers with their great bulbous tanks that were built elsewhere and hoisted aboard the ship by the Goliath Crane that became a landmark at the yard, but was dismantled in 2008.

For the record, the last ship built by General Dynamics at the 86-year-old Quincy shipyard was the maritime prepositioning ship Sgt. William R. Button. That was in 1986. Then General Dynamics shut the door.

'Kilroy Was Here' At Quincy Shipyard

World War II Famed Figure

"Kilroy was here!"

It seemed like the words were everywhere 68 years ago.

They greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in war-torn Tokyo in the late summer of 1945 and they mystified Stalin in the men's room at Yalta.

"Kilroy was here!"

He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It all began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job it was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

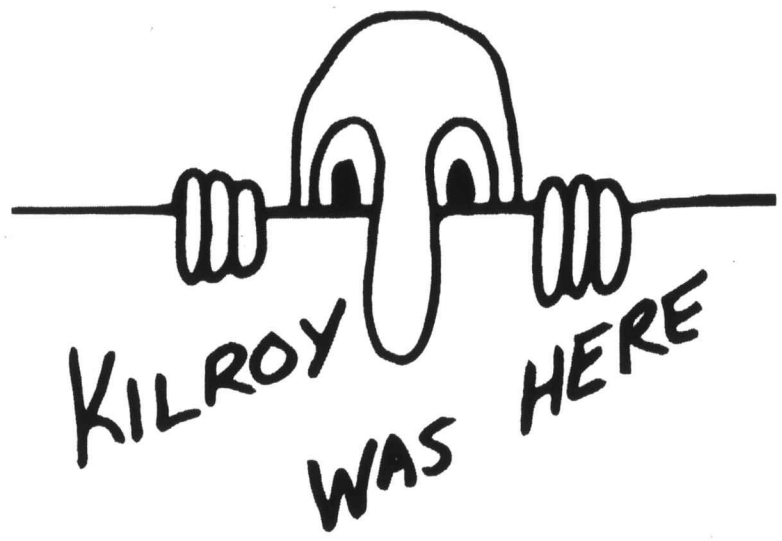
Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the last chalk mark. Another checker would count the rivet a second time and the riveter would get paid twice for the same work.

One day, Kilroy overheard his boss ask a riveter if Kilroy had checked a certain rivet. No, said the riveter. That made Kilroy mad because he knew he had checked that particular rivet.

He grabbed a piece of chalk, went over to where the two men were standing and scribbled "Kilroy was here!" in large, bold letters right next to the check mark. It soon became his standard practice.

Ordinarily, the chalk mark would be covered up by paint. But this was wartime and some ships left the Yard too fast to be fully painted.

The enigmatic "Kilroy was here!" began appearing all over the world, joined by a drawing of a long-nosed character peering over a wall.



The mysterious message fascinated GIs. Soon they began writing it themselves on walls in the most unlikely places, like the Imperial Palace in Tokyo and the men's room at Yalta.

"Who is Kilroy?" asked Stalin as he came out wiping his hands.

Eventually, as "Remember Pearl Harbor" stood for America's fighting men in World War II and the men and women who built the war machines for them, so did "Kilroy was here!" come to stand for them, too.

Some believe Kilroy never got the credit that he deserved.

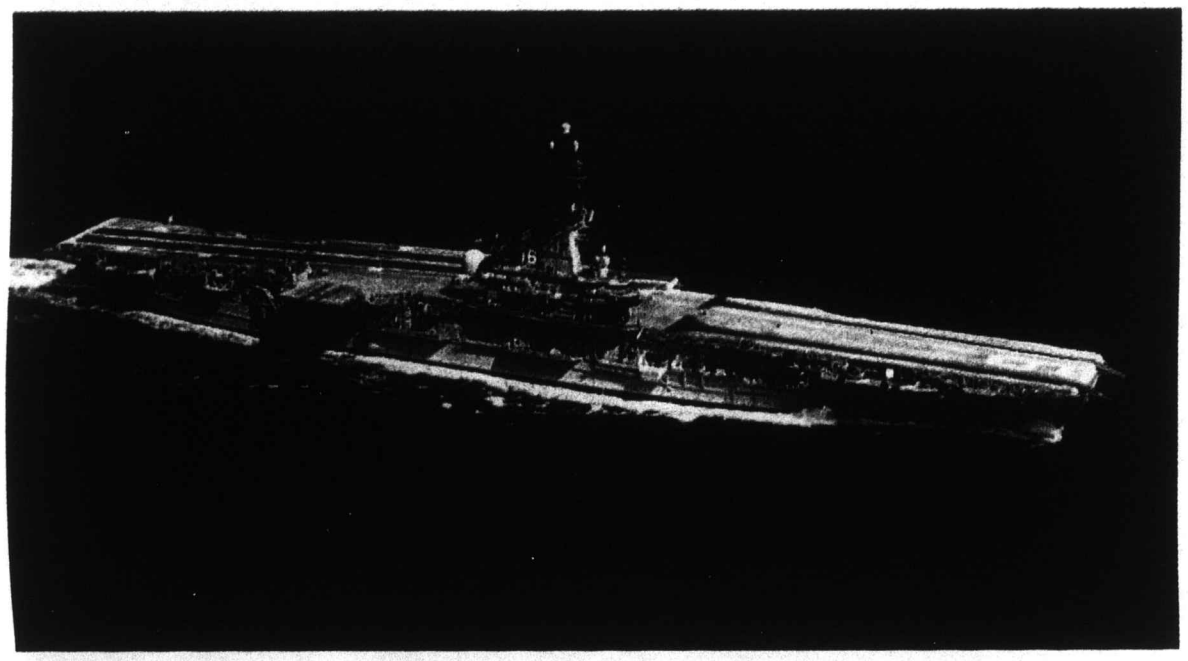
Frank and Kathy Hogan of Quincy have just the solution to honor the famous shipyard checker.

The Hogans have been been working tirelessly over the past nine years for the expression to get its just due on a stamp.

"Let's hope it's soon because there aren't that many (World War II) veterans left," said Frank. "It's not Army. It's not Navy. It was shared by every person, every branch, in the military.

"All the Allies shared in it. It's an icon now. It's amazing; it ties soldiers from World War II together, from the lowest grunt to a four star general. It ties them from the bottom to the top. This is for the veterans. In the war it broke down every barrier.

"Why shouldn't Kilroy have a stamp?"



USS LEXINGTON (CV/CVA/CVS/CVT/AVT-16) was an Essex-class aircraft carrier built at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy during World War II for the United States Navy. The ship - nicknamed "The Blue Ghost" – was the recipient of 11 battle stars. She was the fifth U.S. Navy ship to bear the name Lexington in honor of the Revolutionary War Battle of Lexington. The aircraft carrier was decommissioned in 1991 with an active service life longer than any other Essex-class ship.

Quincy Won Bet

Shipyards in Quincy and San Francisco made a $10,000 bet in 1918 on which could build the most destroyers in that year.

Quincy not only won, building 18 destroyers to San Fran's six, but added 10 submarines and six merchant vessels as well.

Moswetuset Hummock: 'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

It was only a tiny spot of land no bigger than a football field on the Quincy shore but it gave its name to the state of Massachusetts.

As the historian Daniel Neal recalled it in his History of New England, published a hundred years after the Pilgrims landed in 1721 . . .

"The Sachem or Sagamore who governed the Indians in this part of the country when the English first came hither, had his seat on a small hill, or hummock, containing perhaps an acre and a half, about two leagues to the southward of Boston, which hill or hummock lies in the shape of an Indians' arrow-head, which arrow-heads are called in their language Mos, or Mons, with the O nasal, and hill in their language is Wetuset; hence, this great Sachem's seat was called Moswetuset, which signifies a hill in the shape of an arrow-head, and his subjects, the Moswetuset Indians, from whence with small variation of the word, the Province received the name Massachusetts."

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickataubut, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, once a great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with a neighboring tribe. Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plague.

In two years, the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatawbut fled his home on a hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Pilgrims from Plymouth that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum) whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay. They called it Squantum.

The tragic Chickatawbut died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The land included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a stone marker (left) and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public. There is no admission charge. It is located near the junction of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive.

'Discover Quincy Days' Aug. 2, Sept. 6, Oct. 4

Discover Quincy, the tourism agency of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, will offer its "Discover Quincy Days" program on three Saturdays this year.

On Aug. 2, Sept. 6 and Oct. 4, visitors and residents can experience Quincy and all of its rich history for one admission price.

Participants may purchase a Discover Quincy wristband for $5 that gives them admission for the day to the Adams National Historical Park which operates the birthplaces and summer White House of U.S. Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, the Adams Crypt at the United First Parish Church, Quincy Historical Society Museum, Josiah Quincy House, and Dorothy Quincy Homestead.

"Many visitors to Quincy are familiar with the Adams story and the National Historical Park tour of the birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field," said Margaret Laforest, director of Tourism for the Quincy Chamber. "Fewer are familiar with the 'Quincy' story, one of Massachusetts' leading families, and the Dorothy Quincy Homestead and Josiah Quincy House. We wanted to bring that inclusive experience to all visitors and residents alike and make it easy and affordable for them to enjoy more of Quincy's rich history this summer."

With the purchase of a wristband, visitors can visit one, two, three, four, or all five historic sites on Discover Quincy Days. They may use their own transportation and travel from location to location or they may take advantage of a shuttle that will depart from the Quincy Historical Society and run on a continuous loop between the sites from 10 a.m. – 4 p.m.

In addition, participants can explore Quincy's history by walking in the footsteps of John Adams. A Walking Tour map provides a self-guided tour for visitors from the Adams Academy/Quincy Historical Society down Hancock Street. Along the way, a variety of statues and markers, such as the John Adams and Abigail Adams/John Quincy Adams statues and Granite Ball are highlighted. At the Hancock Cemetery, located across the street from the United First Parish Church, a historical interpreter will be on hand to guide visitors through the town's earliest cemetery.

Discover Quincy wristbands will be sold at all of the participating historic sites on Discover Quincy Days and in advance at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St. or the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, 180 Old Colony Ave., Suite 300.

Discover Quincy is also offering a similar combined admission valid until Nov. 10. For $10, visitors will receive a ticket and can tour each attraction when convenient for them. These tickets can be purchased online at DiscoverQuincy.com or at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

For more information, visit DiscoverQuincy.com or call the Quincy Chamber of Commerce at (617) 471-1700.

Duchess Of Windsor A Former Resident

The Duchess of Windsor was not a Quincy girl but she lived here for a time long before King Edward VIII gave up the British throne "for the woman I love."

She lived in Wollaston in 1917 while she was married to her first husband, a young lieutenant stationed at a Naval air school in Squantum, which later became the Squantum Naval Air Station.

The Massachusetts Naval Militia maintained a training field in what is now the Marina Bay area which was taken over by the First Naval District as a school to train young aviators to fly the new-fangled airplanes

Assigned as head of the school was Lt. Earle W. Spencer.

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR

He was married to the former Wallis Warfield, the Baltimore belle who later, as a twice-divorced woman, became the Duchess of Windsor when she wed the king who abdicated his throne for her love.

The match touched off a crisis in English royalty. Some thought the king should be allowed to marry her and keep his title as long as she did not become queen. But stronger opposition prevailed and he stepped down.

They were married on June 3, 1937,

While living in Quincy, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer resided in a second floor apartment on Davis Street in Wollaston.

Legend has it that her neighbors in 1917 thought she was somewhat stuck up and snobbish.

In fact, they nicknamed her "the Duchess."

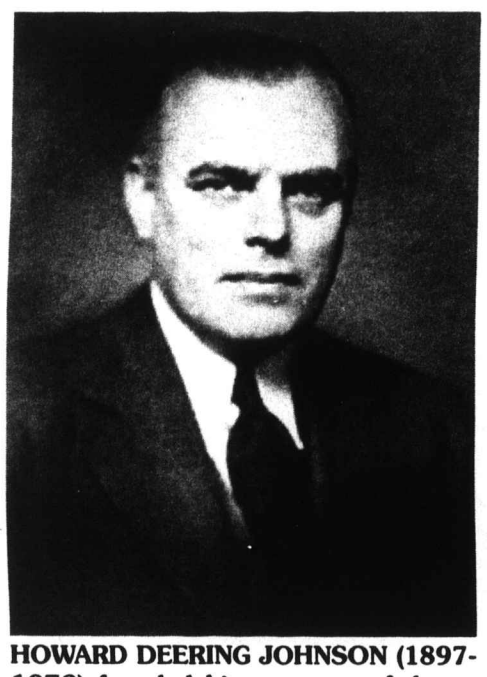
Howard Johnson's Empire Began In Quincy

'Father Of The Franchise Industry' Opened First Restaurant In Quincy Square

By ANTHONY SAMMARCO

Howard Johnson created an orange roofed empire of ice cream stands and restaurants that following World War II would stretch from Maine to Florida and from the East Coast to the West Coast. Popularly known as the "father of the franchise industry" he would revolutionize the restaurant industry in the United States and thereby ensure the delicious foods and quality prices that brought appreciative customers back for more.

Howard Deering Johnson (1897-1972) lived as a young man on Belmont Street in Wollaston, a neighborhood of Quincy, Massachusetts and was the son of John Hayes and Olive Belle Wright Johnson. John Johnson owned a small cigar store and manufacturing company in downtown Boston, and Howard Johnson would leave the Wollaston Elementary School in the eighth grade to work with his father. He would enter World War I, serving in the American Expeditionary Force in France, popularly known as the Yankee Infantry, and return following Armistice Day to resume work with his father as a cigar salesman. His father's untimely and unexpected death in 1921 left his cigar business heavily in debt to the sum of $30,000, which Howard Johnson assumed without question. With a $500 loan from his widowed mother and another loan of $2,000 from Dr. George Dalton, a well-known internist and a close family friend, Howard Johnson would purchase from Dick Simmons in 1925 the Walker-Barlow drugstore at 89 Beale Street in Wollaston, where he had been working. The store had a marble soda fountain and sold newspapers and magazines, cigars and three standard flavors of ice cream: vanilla, chocolate and strawberry. In the mid 1920s Johnson began producing a rich, creamy ice cream that had double butterfat and was flavored with all natural ingredients with the important fact that the quality and taste of the ice cream never varied. This ice cream brought a steady stream of loyal customers to the store, which was later augmented by grilled frankforts and fried clams. His ice cream stand on Wollaston Beach in Quincy, a small stand attached to a house which he leased for $300.00 for the summer, proved so successful that the next summer he was able to open an ice cream stand at Nantasket Beach in Hull, Massachusetts and at Revere Beach in Revere, Massachusetts. It was said that Howard Johnson "sold $60,000 worth of ice-cream cones that [first] summer – 14,000 cones on one Sunday – and there's good reason to suppose that when the summer visitors went home they kept up the argument about the flavors, and thus word-of-mouth publicity spread compliments on his business.



HOWARD DEERING JOHNSON (1897-1972) founded his orange-roofed restaurant chain in 1925 and was to become one of the most successful self-made businessmen of the 20th century.

In 1929 he was to open his first restaurant in Quincy Square's Granite Trust Building, the only high rise building in the city at that time, and strategically located at the busy intersection which faced Quincy City Hall and the famous Church of the Presidents. Here, he opened an elegantly appointed restaurant that served traditional New England fare throughout the day, with daily specials that attracted business people at lunchtime, diners in the evening as well as families. Howard Johnson's restaurant was strategically placed and well located at the junction of Chestnut, Granite and Hancock Streets in the thriving shopping and business district of Quincy Square. In 1929 Eugene O'Neill's infamous play "Strange Interlude" had been banned in the city of Boston by Malcolm Nichols, the mayor, and the no-nonsense New England Watch & Ward Society, and was moved by the Theatre Guild to Quincy, in the Quincy Theatre on Hancock Street directly opposite Howard Johnson's new restaurant. As the play was extremely long, averaging just over five hours, there was a scheduled dinner break that allowed the hungry theatre-goers to flock across the street to Howard Johnson's new restaurant where dinners were served at a dollar a plate. The restaurant was immediately a great success with thousands of people from Boston coming to see the play that season but the impact of the Great Depression in the fall of 1929 caused severe problems with both patronage and the credit line his business depended upon, which was severely restricted by his bank. The concept of franchising his name was a fairly new business idea but Johnson reasoned that if he let a franchisee use the now recognizable Howard Johnson name, and they purchased all food and supplies from him provided from a central supply commissary, he could charge a fee in exchange of the use of his brand or the logo, "Simple Simon and the Pie Man." The franchise concept was immediately successful and Johnson has been justifiably thought of as the "Father of the modern restaurant franchise" in the United States.

THE RESTAURANT in the Granite Trust Bank building in Quincy Square was opened in 1929, and was a popular place for both businessmen and those stopping for a meal or light snack after a day of shopping.

Howard Johnson restaurants, in attractive Colonial Revival buildings sporting colorful and eye-catching orange porcelain tile roofs, projecting dormers, illuminated cupolas and turquoise blue shutters, which were said in Readers Digest in 1949 to be the epitome of "eating places that look like New England town meeting houses dressed up for Sunday," began to be franchised throughout the New England area. The aspect of franchising was a sort of licensing in which the franchiser agrees to provide to the franchisee with the use of the name, logo, standardization of the operation and products for a sum of money or a percentage of the net profits. Not only did he franchise restaurants, but also ice cream stands that were opened throughout the metropolitan Boston area. By the late 1930s, Howard Johnson recognized the ascendency of the automobile and the ability of the public to travel longer distances for both pleasure as well as business and these newly franchised restaurants and ice cream stands began to be opened on major roads – preferably at major intersections – and interstate highways where the travelling public would be assured of consistently high quality foods that was the same served locally or in Maine or Florida. These franchised restaurants sprang up as if by magic along the eastern seaboard serving the same delicious Ipswich fried clams, butter grilled frankforts, grilled chops and steaks and the now standardized 28 flavors of his famous ice cream. In 1949. Reader's Digest published an article that was entitled "Who is Howard Johnson?" So well known had his name actually become through his successful franchise concept, yet there were people who really knew nothing of his accomplishments. The public had come to expect quality service, affordable prices and family friendly service and the rapidly multiplying restaurants became known as the "Landmark for Hungry Americans."

Opened in the summer of 1935, the restaurant in Orleans on Cape Cod was the first of the franchises and was opened by Reginald Heber Sprague, a lifelong friend, former school chum and confidante of Howard Deering Johnson. This franchise was strategically located at the prominent intersection of Route 6A and Route 28 on a portion of the Sprague Estate and was seen by the travelling public using either road as they passed; the opening of this franchise was almost immediately followed in the next few weeks by the restaurant opened in Dorchester.

Located on the Old Colony Parkway (now known as the William T. Morrissey Boulevard) at the foot of Pope's Hill near Neponset Circle, those travelling south from Boston in the two decades before the Southeast Expressway was built in the mid 1950s passed the orange porcelain tile roofed restaurant, and with ample parking spaces and a solid tradition of quality foods and ice cream and family friendly service, was a major attraction for the travelling public. These restaurants were said to have "roomy table stalls of natural wood matching knotty-pine walls, [where] the travelers eat inexpensive Yankee-style meals and one or more of 28 flavors of ice cream." By the end of 1935, Johnson had franchised twenty five roadside restaurants and ice cream stands throughout eastern Massachusetts, and by 1940 he opened the first toll road restaurant on the Pennsylvania Turnpike and was to see further expansion so that he had the majority of turnpike restaurants in the country, all of which catered to America's increased highway travelers who sought good food at all hours of the day, clean facilities and a reliable standard of quality. Howard Johnson was quoted as saying as he reviewed potential franchisee applications that "This is what I like to do best—help a good man to make a go of it himself."

Howard Johnson's business had expanded tremendously over the decade since he opened his first restaurant in Quincy Square in 1929, as it was reported that "Thirty-nine new agents opened stores in 1936 alone. In addition Howard Johnson owned 13 roadside and beach stands himself. In all, 61 establishments bore his name." However, World War II was to be a severe trial to his business. With the implementation by the federal government of gas rationing, the driving public was forced to curtail all unnecessary automobile travel and as a result his restaurants and ice cream stands suffered an immediate set-back by a dramatic decrease in patronage. Second, a labor shortage of chefs and line cooks who had been drafted into the war service meant that he had to radically change his daily operation in that he became a leading "pioneer in the development of the fast food industry, shipping standardized and pre-portioned food from company-operated central plants to restaurants for final preparation, ensuring consistent quality throughout the chain." Though it was said that ninety percent of the restaurants and ice cream stands closed directly due to gas rationing, Howard Johnson was able to survive these business reversals by cementing contacts that supplied prepared foods for government workers in large industrial plants as well as for universities training student officers. Following World War II, Howard Johnson was able to regroup and began at once by planning expansion and by opening new restaurants and ice cream stands so rapidly that his business was perceived as the world's largest food chain with hundreds of restaurants serving standardized but highly delicious fare such as fresh roast turkey, grilled steaks, chops and chicken, the newfangled clam strips known as "Tendersweet," as well as whole-bellied clams, and 28 flavors of delicious ice cream that the public had come to love.

"With identical menus, ice-cream containers, doilies and napkins lent uniformity of appearance throughout the Howard Johnson chain." The diligent and impressive business acumen of this astute and savvy man was incredible and he was once quoted as saying that "I think that [building my business] was my only form of recreation. I never played golf. I never played tennis. I never did anything after I left school. I ate, slept, and thought of nothing but the business." Howard Johnson was to retire as president of his far-flung and successful company in 1959, becoming chairman of the board and treasurer. His son, Howard Brennan Johnson, assumed his father's position with a nationwide company that had 675 restaurants, 175 motor lodges and annual sales of $127 million dollars. When the company went public in 1961, it had a proven track record of success and was consistently well received by the public and the sale of Howard Johnson stock on the New York Stock Exchange was brisk and inclusive of both major investors as well as the customers who purchased just one share of stock. Having franchised motor lodges as early as 1954, the first being in Savannah, Georgia, the restaurants were now often paired with motor lodges that had comfortable rooms, private telephones and a pool. It has been said that "Howard Johnson's was the first [chain] to fully package motels, tying exterior and interior motifs into a total design concept launched in the 1950s; the rooms were at once decorative and easily duplicated, leading to prefabricated construction, which revolutionized the motel-chain industry." Operating close to one thousand restaurants and five hundred motor lodges throughout the United States, "Howard Johnson's did more business than McDonald's, Burger King and Kentucky Fried Chicken combined." The company was successful with the Red Coach Grill restaurants that opened in the 1960s with a red stagecoach in front of its charming rustic, red-roofed restaurants, and in 1969 created the popular Ground Round chain, which appealed to the younger public with its hip, modern interior décor and appealing foods.

However, the founder of this very American restaurant empire never really retired, as he "continued to monitor his restaurants for cleanliness and proper food preparation. He would be chauffeured in a black Cadillac bearing the license plate HJ-28 [his initials and the now standardized 28 flavors of ice cream] while performing unannounced and thorough inspections of the restaurants." He created an orange roof empire that attracted the public to dine at the restaurants on a daily basis and thereby would ensure repeat business. "His contribution to the restaurant industry was the idea of centralized buying and a commissary system to prepare menu items for distribution to his restaurants. This helped to insure a uniform consistency and quality, as well as lower costs." The American public would repay him in kind, as the Howard Johnson name will forever be remembered by referring to him and his restaurants as the uncontested "King of the Road."

In 1979 the Imperial Group Limited bought the Howard Johnson Restaurant Chain. Known as a highly successful British food conglomerate that had thousands of pubs and hotels in the United Kingdom, they were well aware of the chain's popularity throughout the United States, but they were said to have "squeezed it for profits," and shortly thereafter sold it to Marriott Corporation five years later. Marriott Corporation tried to stem the tide of intensely competitive fast food restaurants, and sold off the motels and lodges to Prime Motor Inns, while remodeling the restaurants to adhere to the standardized design concept of Marriott restaurants. The franchisees of the Howard Johnson chain strongly reacted to the changes taking place and incorporated themselves as the Franchise Associates, continuing the use of the long respected name as well as the original 28 flavors of ice cream as standardized by the founder.

Today, only two Howard Johnson's restaurants survive in Lake Placid, New York and Bangor, Maine but occasionally one still comes across prepackaged frozen foods and ice cream in larger grocery stores.

As Howard Johnson said in a brochure he published in 1939 "The success of the Howard Johnson's Ice Cream Shops and Restaurants has been built upon high standards... in food, in cleanliness and in service. I appreciate your patronage and pledge myself and my entire organization to a continuation of these same standards." And so he did!

Quincy's Celebrity Claims Are Famous

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Too bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth G. Jones.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as an actress on the Broadway stage and the Hollywood movie studios and as a writer of short stories and plays with her husband, Garson Kanin.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as a Satanist in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one-time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic in movies on TV.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67, he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session. "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect, Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

For years, her father, Frank, ran an upscale men's clothing store in downtown Quincy but it remained for his daughter, Lee Remick, to spread the family name far and wide.

She burst into Hollywood as the nubile drum majorette with Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed it up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmary but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School later gained a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, 'Jose Jimenez.'

Dick Dale was born in Boston but spent much of his youth in Quincy. When he was in the 11th grade, he and his family moved to Orange, CA where he learned how to surf and play guitar.

Dale also learned to play of instruments, including drums, the trumpet, ukulele. But it's the guitar that brought Dale stardom.

Today, Dale – born Richard Anthony Monsour – is also known as The King of the Surf Guitar. He's considered the brainchild of the surf music guitar genre. He has also been a strong influence on musicians including Jimi Hendrix and Eddie Van Halen.

His music has been popular on the big screen and professional sports teams, too. Dale's song "Scalped" is the theme song for the NHL's Colorado Avalanche. And his "Misirlou" was featured in the 1994 film "Pulp Fiction."

In 2011, Dale was inducted into the Surfing Walk of Fame in Huntington, Beach, CA.

Quincy Adams Yacht Yard

The Fore River Shipyard was not the only shipbuilding facility in Quincy that helped to win World War II

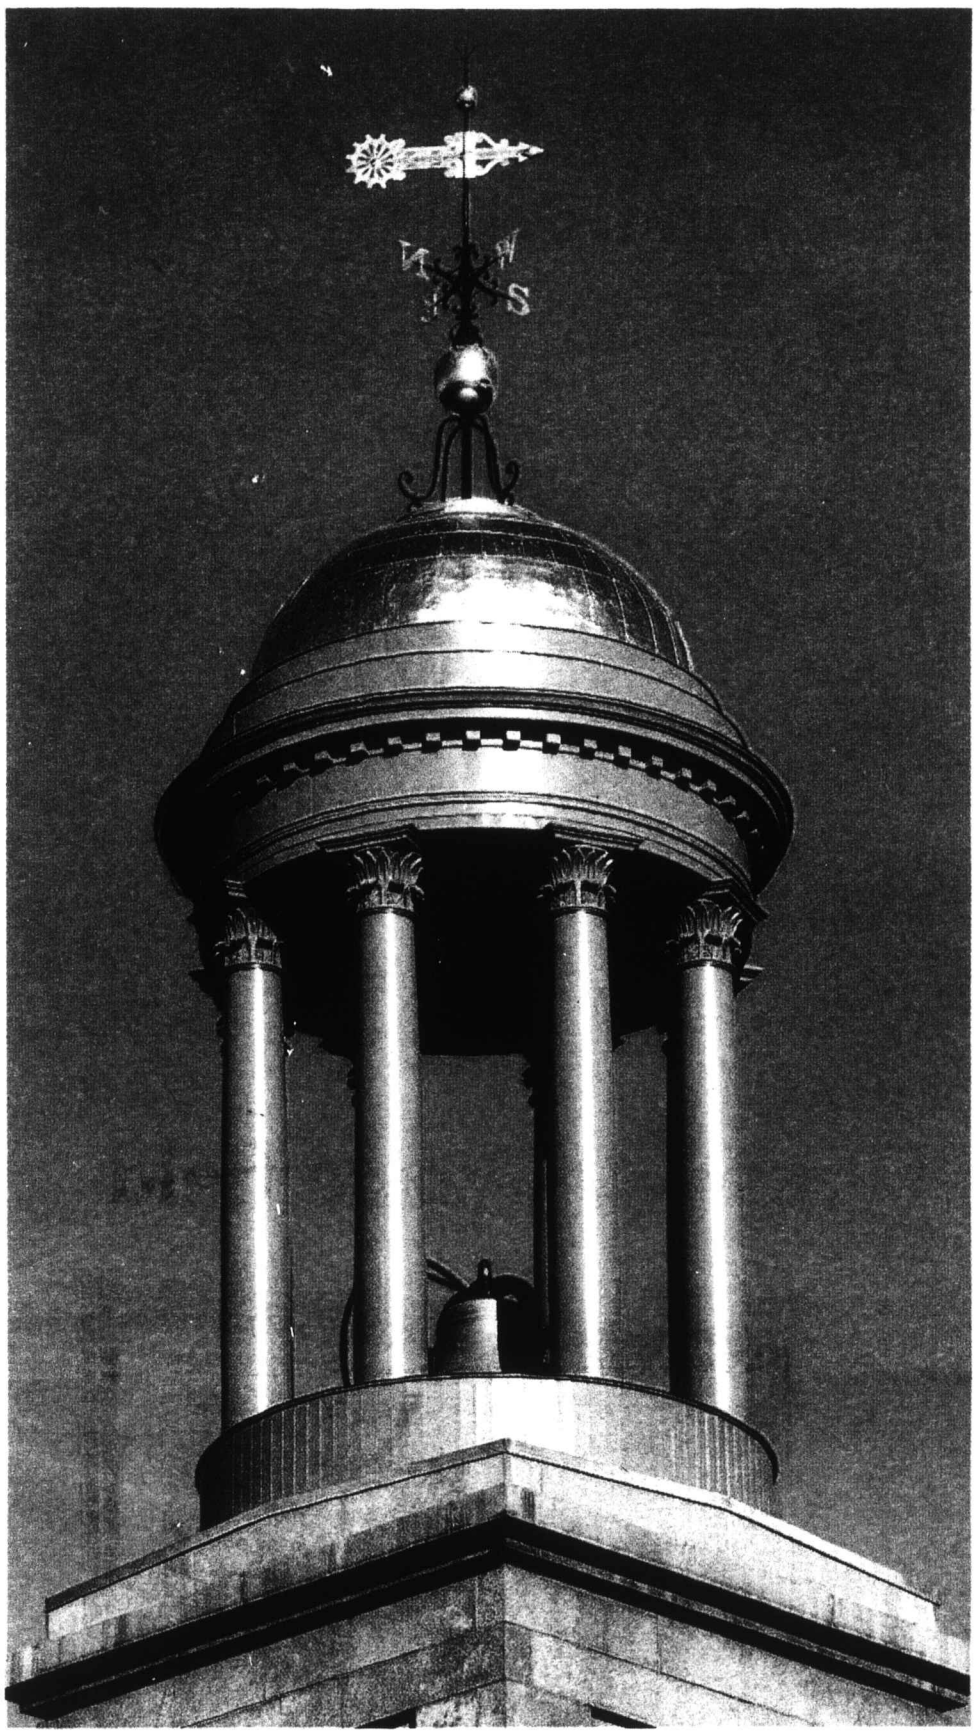
There was also the Quincy Adams Yacht Yard on the Town River in Germantown, which turned from building private yachts when war broke out to constructing wooden-hulled submarine chasers,

At one time, the yacht yard was turning out SC-boats at the rate of two a month to help destroy the German U-boat menace and win the Battle of the North Atlantic and preserve the supply line to Britain.

The yard won the coveted Navy "E" for excellence six times.

$600,000 Restoration Project Also Restored Bell Tower, Gilded Dome, Weather Vane

United First Parish Church Bell Tolls Again



UNITED FIRST PARISH CHURCH Bell Tower $600,000 restoration project was completed in 2012. The project included new mahogany columns, restored capital columns, and a fresh coat of gold leafing gilded to the copper cupola and weather vane of the historic church. A refurbished bronze bell – owned by the City of Quincy – was also placed in the bell tower. The bronze bell that was installed in the church in 1859 was replaced because of an 18-inch crack. The 3,000-pound replacement bell was cast in 1856 for a church in Chicago. It is from the same famous foundry – Henry N. Hooper of Boston – that cast the original bell in the church. Hooper was an apprentice of Revolutionary War hero and famed American silversmith Paul Revere. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

One Notable Church Visitor

UNITED FIRST PARISH Church has attracted visitors from all the world, including historical figures. On July 25, 1951, General Douglas MacArthur visited the church and placed flowers on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine. While stopping by the Adams family pew in the church, MacArthur said: "I am certain that John Quincy Adams must have prayed in this pew for divine guidance before he wrote the Monroe Doctrine." Charles Flagg Photo

City Urged To Tap Excess Levy Capacity

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city's outside financial advisor said Quincy should consider tapping into its excess levy capacity.

At Monday night's City Council meeting, Cinder McNerney of First Southwest presented an update on Quincy's credit rating and outstanding debt. During her presentation she noted the city has left more than $114 million in property tax revenue off the table in the Council Allows Sale Of Land At 20 Furnace Ave.

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council unanimously approved making a portion of the city-owned parcel at 20 Furnace Ave. available for disposition during Monday night's meeting.

The city purchased the 43,480 square foot West Quincy lot in April 2012 from developer Daniel Flynn for $485,000 and planned to use it for flood control related projects, including a pump station. The purchase was controversial at the time – Councillors Joe Finn, Doug Gutro, and Brian McNamee voted in favor of having the state's inspector general investigate the purchase, as no specific council order was approved authorizing the sale. That resolution was rejected in a 6-3 vote.

Monday's vote allows the city to make a 4,250 square foot portion of the parcel available for sale. According to City Solicitor Jim Timmins, the owner of the neighboring property at 24 Furnace Ave. is interested in buying that piece of land so he can construct a building to house construction equip-

Councillors Question Legality Of Proposed 398-Unit Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council heard details of a proposed 398-unit residential development on Quarry Street for the first time on Monday night, but several councillors want to know if the developer can legally build on the site before deciding whether or not the project can go forward.

AvalonBay Communities is proposing to develop a 25-acre parcel of land at 109-217 Quarry Street, on a site next to the Highpoint apartment complex. The proposed 398-unit residential development, known as Avalon Quincy, would include three six-story buildings and two five-story buildings. The six-story buildings would each feature one level of street level parking, also known as podium parking, with five stories of residential units on top. The five-story buildings would not have parking on the ground level. All the

35th Settled Minister And First Female

Rev. Rebecca Froom New Settled Minister At United First Parish Church

United First Parish Church of Quincy, (Unitarian-Universalist) also known as the Church of the Presidents, unanimously voted Monday to call Rev. Rebecca Froom as their settled minister.

Rev. Froom accepted the call and her ministry will begin in July.

Members and friends celebrated Rev. Froom's acceptance. She is the 35th minister to serve and the first female settled minister in its 375 years of existence.

Rev. Froom was born in New York and spent her formative years in Pennsylvania; she has lived in Tucson, Chicago and Boston.

She is a graduate of Vassar College and Harvard Divinity School. At Vassar she majored in anthropology and religion graduating with general honors, as well as honors in anthropology.

Rev. REBECCA FROOM

She was the recipient of the Lucille K. and Jerome P. Gallon Scholarship, Unitarian Universalist Association and the Stephan and Wanda Jones Grant, Committee on General Scholarships of Harvard University.

Rev. Froom served as a hospital chaplain at Jefferson University Hospital in Philadelphia and she was ordained in 2010 following her Ministerial Internship at Arlington Street Church in Boston, MA. Most recently she served as Assistant Minister at First Universalist Society in Franklin.

Rev. Froom was selected following a yearlong search process led by the Ministerial Search Committee and included an eight-day "candidating" period where Froom attended several meetings to join in conversation with the congregants and friends of UFPC, give two sermons at the church, and explore Quincy.

Rev. Froom was chosen because of her intellect, spirituality, integrity, intentionality, and deep commitment to community, and social justice, as well as her desire to draw from the past and adapt to the future.

Six Companies Submit Bids

Mayor To Select Downtown Consultant

By SCOTT JACKSON

Six companies, including three with ties to the city, submitted bids to serve as a consultant for future development in Quincy Center.

The companies all responded to a request for qualifications for a development earlier this spring. The bids were opened Thursday at City Hall.

The companies that submitted bids are RKG Associates of Dover, N.H.; Boston-based Redgate Real Estate Advisors; Jones Lang LaSalle of New York City; Abraham and Associates of Newton; Philadelphia-based Stantec Consulting Services; and Davenport Companies of Boston.

RKG Associates was responsible in assisting the city with its development plans for the downtown. Redgate planned a mixed-use residential and retail project at Marina Bay, which is set to begin construction soon. Jones Lang LaSalle is the parent company of LaSalle Investment Management, the Chicago-based investment firm that pledged to invest more than $50 million in Street-Works' Merchants Row project.

Mayor Thomas Koch is expected to select one of the developers in the coming weeks to serve as consultant. That consultant would help the city move forward on Quincy Center redevelopment following the termination of the master agreement with Street-Works earlier this year.

The city will pay the developer using funds forfeited by Street-Works. The developer forfeited some $850,000 when the agreement was terminated in March.

Council Allows Sale Of Land At 20 Furnace Ave.

ment. There is no set sale price for the land yet, but Timmins said the price will likely exceed the $11.15 per square foot the city paid for the lot in 2012.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said the owner of the property, Peter Lavin, purchased 24 Furnace Ave. in 2012 and paid $125,000 for 8,270 square feet, or about $15 per square foot. Palmucci said Lavin may submit a bid to purchase the sliver of land at 20 Furnace Ave. for a similar price, meaning the city would receive more than $60,000. Palmucci urged his colleagues to make the land available for sale.

"For me it boils down to there is the ability of the city to sell some land to a business owner who wants to expand his business operations in Quincy," he said. "He can't expand the business at this location without this additional 4,000 square foot purchase and he's going to have to move his operations that he'd like to move to Furnace Ave. to a site he located in Hyde Park."

Palmucci also noted selling the land to a private owner will allow the city to once again collect property taxes on the lot. The city's tax rolls would also benefit if the owner improves the site by building anything on it.

Timmins said engineering firm Woodard & Curran determined that the portion of land made available sale isn't needed for flood control projects. Drainage improvements have already been made on site and the planned pump station would be located elsewhere on the property.

McNamee asked Timmins whether the portion of land made available for sale would be paved over, making the surface impermeable to rain water. Timmins said the sale could be conditioned on the new owner agreeing to not pave that portion over. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest also noted Planning Board and Conservation Commission approval would be needed before any work could take place on the site, since it sits in a flood plain, and that would be considered by those boards.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery Historical Walking Tour May 31

Quincy City Historian Tom Galvin will lead a historical walking tour of Mount Wollaston Cemetery Saturday, May 31 at 1 p.m.

Participants should meet at the Greenleaf Street gate on the Southern Artery.

THE CONTEMPORARY CHOICE

Not only does silver provide a contemporary look, it also has great appeal to value-conscious consumers. The words "silver" or "sterling silver" describe a piece of jewelry that contains 92.5% silver. Silver products sometimes may be marked 925, which means that 925 parts per thousand are pure silver. Silver-plate jewelry has a layer of silver bonded to a base metal. The mark "coin silver" is used for compounds that contain 90% silver. According to law, quality-marked silver must also bear the name of a U.S. registered trademark of the company or person that will stand behind the mark. Vermeil, a special type of gold-plated product, consists of a base of sterling silver that is coated or plated with gold.

Sterling silver is the whitest of all of the precious metals and has been celebrated for centuries for its highly lustrous finish and versatile applications. Although sterling silver is harder than gold it is still thought to be one of the more pliable and supple metals. Select the perfect silver or gold jewelry to fit your taste for rings, earrings, or pendants at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On June 4, 1754, 22-year-old Lt. Colonel George Washington begins construction of a makeshift Fort Necessity, near present-day Pittsburgh. The fort was built to defend his forces from French soldiers enraged by the murder of Ensign Joseph Coulon de Jumonville while in Washington's custody.

• On June 3, 1800, President John Adams becomes the first acting president to take up residence in Washington, D.C. Unfortunately, the White House was not yet finished, so Adams moved into temporary digs at Tunnicliffe's City Hotel near the also half-finished Capitol building.

• On June 5, 1922, George Carmack, the first person to discover gold along the Klondike River, dies in Vancouver, British Columbia. In 1896, near the confluence of the Yukon and Klondike River, Carmack stumbled across a deposit of gold so rich that he needed no pan to see it: Thumb-sized pieces of gold lay scattered about the creek bed.

• On June 2, 1935, Babe Ruth, one of the greatest players in the history of baseball, ends his Major League playing career after 22 seasons, 10 World Series and 714 home runs. The following year, Ruth was one of the first five players inducted into the sport's hall of fame

• On June 8, 1945, President Harry Truman issues Executive Order 9568, permitting the release of scientific information from previously top-secret World War II documents. Executive Order 9568 was a stepping stone to future transparency-oriented legislation, including the Freedom of Information Act, passed in 1966.

• On June 6, 1971, after more than two decades of weekly productions, "The Ed Sullivan Show" airs for the final time. The show is now remembered most for providing so many iconic moments in the history of televised rock and roll.

Airman Michael Lethin Graduates Basic Training

U.S. Air National Guard Airman Michael G. Lethin recently graduated from basic military training at Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland, San Antonio, Texas.

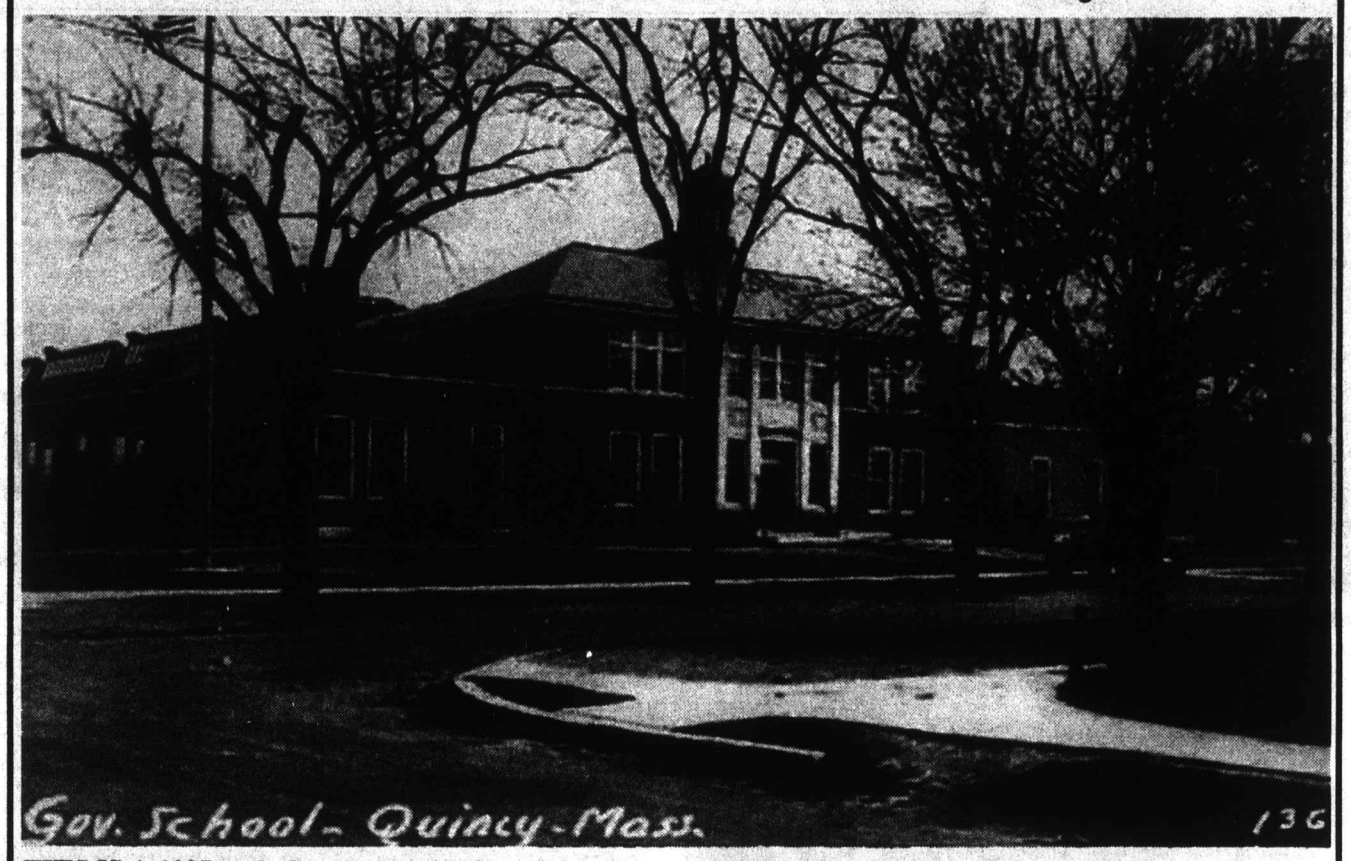
The airman completed an intensive, eight-week program that included training in military discipline and studies, Air Force core values, physical fitness, and basic warfare principles and skills.

Airmen who complete basic training earn four credits toward an associate in applied science degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

MICHAEL LETHIN

Lethin, the son of Gerard and Maureen Lethin of Quincy, is a 2013 graduate of Boston College High School.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1925 real photo postcard view of the Government Elementary School built by the U.S. Housing Corp. on the corner of Fifth Avenue and North Street in Quincy Point. It was opened in 1920 for the children of the Fore River shipyard workers who lived in the housing built by the U.S. government throughout this neighborhood. Six years later, it was bought by the City and renamed the Pollard School in honor of the beloved Thomas W. Pollard who for many years had been the principal of the Washington and Daniel Webster Schools in the Point. About the same time, North Street was also renamed when it became part of the then newly built Southern Artery that passes through here. This school served Quincy Point youngsters for 62 years until Proposition 2 1/2 forced the city to close it in 1982. After the school closed, fires ravished it until finally in 1984 it had to be demolished. The city sold the land and residential condominiums have been built here. But the school's copper cupola, behind the tree in the center of this picture, survives; it was salvaged from the fire ruins, refurbished and serves today as the centerpiece of the Granite Street Marketplace on the Daniel Webster Highway in Hooksett, New Hampshire. City Council Votes For Parking Project

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said that he will expedite the half million-dollar Quincy Center Development project authorized by the City Council.

By a vote of 7 to 2 the council approved taking and loan orders that will provide for both the expansion in off-street parking facilities and the opening up of the traffic bottleneck at the easterly end of Granite Street at the northerly approach to the Ross Parking area.

Only Councillors George Burke and Richard Barry voted against the proposal.

The project included the addition of 161 parking spaces between Granite St. and the Hancock Cemetery as well as the widening of Granite St. between Hancock Street and Upland Road. (Editor's note: The parking area would be named after Walter Albert Della Chiesa, Mayor Della Chiesa's son, a graduate of West Point, who was lost when his plane crashed off Okinawa on the first day of the Korean War.)

COUNCIL APPROVES CHANGES IN PARKING REGULATIONS

Changes in parking regulations recommended by a special parking meter committee headed by Councillor George Burke and including Councillors Carl Anderson and James McCormack, were passed by the city council and sent to the mayor.

The committee recommended that parking meters be retained in the parking areas for the time being.

Other recommendations included increasing the cost of all day parking in the Upland Rd. and Adams Academy lots from 25 to 50 cents, as well setting up the 100 meters in the Hancock Parking lot for three hour limits to assist shoppers.

Says City Is On A Fast Track To Bankruptcy

Will someone remind our city councilors, who put them in those chairs?

I just read in The Quincy Sun, that our representatives at City Hall, voted to give themselves a raise, on our pay check. I do believe that we need a whole new crew in the council, as the ones we have now lost all concept of who they work for.

From what I read, Brian McNamee is the only one with a conscience, as he was the only one to vote against the raise. Thank you Mr. McNamee, from all the voters of Quincy.

Joe Shea better have a good supply of nomination papers for the next elections, as we need to remove the current crop of councillors. I do believe our councillors just put this city on a very fast track to bankruptcy, thanks to this mayor of ours.

The home owner can't afford another tax increase.

Favors Parking Meters In Quincy Center

There is concern that revenues from parking fines have fallen off. This is wrong headed.

Restrictions on parking should not be considered a revenue stream but a means to an end. That end being creating a viable business district.

The development of Quincy Center is, in part, based on retailing. Customers want easy parking near their intended shopping. The present mode of parking control officers marking tires to determine those who overstay their allotted parking time is surreptitious and devious.

Parking meters should be installed to give drivers a fair chance to carry out their business and then move on to give other drivers the opportunity to park.

Quincy Choral Society To Sing In Washington, D.C.

Concert At JFK Center To Honor Veterans

The Quincy Choral Society has been invited to participate in the National Memorial Day Choral Festival this weekend in the nation's capital.

The only choral group in New England to be chosen, the chorus will join with other choral groups from across the country to sing at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., Sunday. On Monday, Memorial Day, the chorus will participate in the National Memorial Day Parade, singing in front of the National Archives as part of the opening ceremonies.

Conceived as a joint venture by the American Veterans Center and Music Celebrations International to attract greater attention to the true meaning of Memorial Day, this annual festival gathers choirs from across the United States to sing as a group in honor of America's heroes, past and present.

Dr. Craig Jessop is the Festival Artistic Director. Dr. Jessop is a former music director of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir; Lieutenant Colonel in the U.S. Air Force music programs, where he served as director of the U.S. Air Force Singing Sergeants in Washington, D.C.; commander and conductor of the Band of the U.S. Forces in Europe at Ramstein, Germany; and commander and conductor of the Air Combat Command Heartland of America Band.

An uplifting and inspiring program of patriotic music has been selected. Among the pieces chosen for this year's concert are "Hymn to the Fallen" from Saving Private Ryan by John Williams, "An American Hymn" by Lee Holdridge, and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" arranged by Peter J. Wilhousky.

The Quincy Choral Society was founded in 1981 for the purpose of bringing musical excellence to the South Shore and the world. Members sing with music in their hearts, performing diverse, professional quality programs designed to entertain, enlighten, and enrich the human spirit.

Maestro John Nichols has been music director of the Quincy Choral Society since 1988. Nichols has been involved with the musical life of Greater Boston for more than 35 years as a conductor, composer, arranger, performer, adjudicator, and educator.

Virginia "Gingy" Grimes has been the accompanist for the Quincy Choral Society since 1993. Grimes received her piano accompaniment degree from Duke University and accompanies various ensembles and soloists throughout the Boston area.

QHS Students Collaborate On Film Challenge

The Quincy High School Broadcasting and Design and Visual Communications classes collaborated this year on The 10 Day Film Challenge.

The 10 Day Film Challenge is an intense and invigorating event in which teams of students make a movie—write, shoot, edit, and score it—in just 10 school days. Quincy High School competed in this multi-state event, which includes Massachusetts, New York, Delaware, and Florida.

Quincy High was very successful. John Green's Broadcasting students took second place overall and was awarded first place for screenplay, cinematography, and editing for their movie, "The Identity Parable." The film was directed by Amanda Flores and starred Connor Dane and Ellis Hampton. Liam Fitzmaurice was the cinematographer, and Ellis Hampton and Sheila Debonis wrote the screenplay.

Aileen McGinnity's Design and Visual Communications' students created the posters for the movie. Liam Mahoney, Graphics 2, took first place in the poster design.

This was a very successful collaboration between these two Career and Technical Education majors. The students worked well together to come to this very successful end.

'America's Romance With English Garden' Program At Historical Society Tonight

Quincy Historical Society will offer an encore of author Thomas Mickey's presentation, "America's Romance With the English Garden," on Thursday, May 22 at 2 p.m.

The program tells the story behind America's continuing fascination with lush gardens and rich, green lawns. Drawing on his recent book on the subject, Mickey will show how the beginning of mass-marketing in the 1890s sold the attractions and the status of English-style lawns and gardens to a growing American middle class, through beautiful, elaborate illustrations.

Mickey will illustrate the talk with examples of these ornate advertisements from the 1890s.

The program is free. A book signing will follow the lecture.

Mary Reed Receives Lifetime Achievement In Early Education Award

Leading early childhood education and care advocate Mary Reed of Quincy recently received the Lifetime Achievement in Early Education Award from the Massachusetts Association of Early Education & Care (MADCA).

Reed has spent more than 40 years in the early education field, growing up working with her mother, Bessie Tartt Wilson, who opened the first black-owned day care center in Boston's Roxbury neighborhood. In 2002, Reed founded the Bessie Tartt Wilson Initiative for Children (BTWIC) in honor of her mother and developed it into one of the most effective advocacy organizations on behalf of early education and care in Massachusetts.

"I am humbled to have been selected to receive the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Massachusetts Association of Early Education & Care," said Reed, who retired as president of BTWIC last fall. "I'm honored to be recognized by an organization that shares my life-long commitment to ensuring that all children deserve access to high-quality early education and care and provides crucial leadership on this issue."

MARY REED

By being named a recipient of MADCA's Lifetime Achievement Award which is awarded on rare occasions, Reed joins a select list of pioneering advocates on behalf of early education and care, including Doug Baird, Sue Todd and Karen Frederick.

"This award is well deserved. A generation of Greater Boston children and their families have led a far better life due to your tireless efforts on their behalf," said MACDA Executive Director William Eddy. "We're proud to recognize all that you have done to advance the field of early education."

Founded in 1972, MADCA is the trade association for child care providers in Massachusetts, representing the public policy and advocacy interests of more than 600 child care centers, school age providers, and 2,200 family child care providers.

A mother-of-five herself, Reed led BTWIC in its effort to convince legislators and state officials that all children, regardless of gender, race or social class, are entitled to high-quality early education.

Thanks to Reed's leadership, BTWIC has changed the early education landscape for families and children throughout Massachusetts, particularly in cities and rural areas beset by poverty.

Reed's work has been recognized by several organizations. Last November, Reed received a Lifetime Achievement Award from the National Association of Social Workers. In 2011, she was named an Outstanding Advocate by the Urban College of Boston. In 2010, Reed was honored as a Purpose Prize Fellow. In 2008 she was chosen as the Ruth Batson Advocate of the Year and received the Women of Justice Award from Lawyers Weekly.

Reed also serves on the Board of Trustees at the Thomas Crane Library as well as the John F. Kennedy Library and Foundation.

Sarah Minton Presented Higher Ed. Award

Sarah Minton of Quincy was recently presented a Massachusetts Department of Higher Education's "29 Who Shine" Award at a ceremony held at the State House.

One student from each of the state's 29 public universities and colleges are selected each year for their outstanding academic achievement, student leadership and community service.

Minton is the 2014 class president of Fitchburg State University. As class president, she launched the Fitchburg Anti-Violence Education Club, building on FSU's own efforts to combat dating violence and sexual assault. She also organized an ongoing campaign to make Fitchburg State a smoke-free campus.

A future RN, Sarah mobilized her fellow student nurses to create a day-long health fair for underserved populations in the city of Gardner. Her educational training has included clinical rotations as a diabetic educator and school nurse in community hospitals and schools.

A 2010 graduate of North Quincy High School, Sarah hopes to work in the fields of oncology or neurology.

She is the daughter of Dan and Joanne Minton.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Chicken Thighs & Bow Pasta

The combination of chicken in tomato sauce has always been a family favorite. Sometimes it makes the sauce a bit watery, but today's recipe eliminates that problem and comes out so good.

I used Farfelle (bow shaped pasta) in this recipe.

CHICKEN THIGHS & BOW PASTA

6-8 chicken thighs (bone in)
2 (two) 16 ounce cans tomatoes (I used crushed)
2 garlic cloves (cut)
1 small onion
2 tablespoons basil
2 tablespoons parsley
3 tablespoons olive oil

In a 350-degree oven, season the chicken with salt and pepper and bake the chicken thighs (skinned) until done. Set aside.

While the chicken is cooking, make the sauce by heating up the oil and sautéing the garlic and sliced onion until lightly browned. Add the tomatoes and spices and cook for 20 minutes.

Add the chicken thighs in the sauce and cook for another 20 minutes or so.

Boil the pasta according to directions and place in a shallow bowl. Pour sauce and chicken over the top and sprinkle with a favorite grated cheese.

Delicious Molasses Cookies

I think most everyone enjoys having a cookie with a cup of tea or coffee.

When I bake them, I usually make them a little bigger than what the recipe calls for.

Last week I found the most delicious recipe for a molasses cookie that came out so wonderful, and was the easiest recipe that I had ever done.

MOLASSES COOKIES

¾ cup melted butter
2 cups flour
1-cup sugar
¼ cup molasses
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 egg beaten
1 ½ teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon

In a bowl, mix the butter, molasses, sugar and egg until smooth.

Add the baking soda, flour and spices and blend well. Roll into small balls the size of a nickel or a quarter, which is what I did to make a bigger, thicker cookie.

Place on a cookie sheet lined with parchment paper, and bake in a 350-degree oven for 10-12 minutes.

Uche Onwunaka To Attend Girls State

Uche Onwunaka of Quincy, a junior at The Woodward School, will attend the 69th annual Massachusetts Girls State sponsored by The American Legion Auxiliary June 14-20 at Stonehill College in Easton.

Onwunaka, the daughter of Eugene and Stella Onwunaka, was selected by American Legion Auxiliary Morrisette Post 294 to be their representative. More than 27,800 Massachusetts girls have participated in this citizenship program since its inauguration in 1945.

Some 350 girls from all parts of the state will participate in the week's study of local and state government.

UCHE ONWUNAKA

They will establish and operate their own city or town, form two political parties, nominate candidates for office, conduct campaigns and hold elections.

Invited speakers include state officials as well as leaders in government and other professions. Speakers from the American Legion and The American Legion Auxiliary will also participate.

The girls state delegates will learn about the responsibilities of the various branches of Government and the qualification and benefits of many of the leading professions.

Girls State will be held by every state. At the Girls State Sessions, two girls will be selected to represent their respective States at Girls Nation to be held in Chevy Chase, Maryland July 18-26.

Three Residents Take Part In Canoe, Kayak Race

Three Quincy residents were among the more than 1,000 paddlers who recently competed in the 32nd Run of the Charles Canoe and Kayak Race, the signature event of the Charles River Watershed Association (CRWA).

Some 150 volunteers and thousands of spectators lined the riverbanks to cheer on racers from Dedham to the Finish Line Festival at DCR's Artesani Park in Brighton.

Participating from Quincy were:

Max Hecho who finished 52nd in the Corporate Category of the Rec OC-2 24-Mile Race with a time of 6:17:10.

Jeff Mui finished 38th in the Corporate Category of the Rec OC-2 24-Mile Race with a time of 5:37:51.

Melanie Magnan finished 21st in the Corporate Category of the Rec OC-2 0-Mile Race with a time of 5:18:34.

The Run of the Charles Canoe and Kayak Race is the largest canoe and kayak event in New England.

Coyotes Topic At Crane Library May 27

Local expert Jonathan Way will discuss coyotes at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, Tuesday, May 27 at 7 p.m.

Coyotes have been spotted in multiple parts of Quincy and throughout the Metro-Boston area. Sometimes considered pests, others are working to protect them with the first ever state Carnivore Conservation Act.

Dr. Way, author of "Suburban Howls," an account of his experiences studying eastern coyotes in Massachusetts, is a research scientist at Clark University. He runs runs the Eastern Coyote/Coywolf Research organization, works seasonally for Cape Cod National Seashore, is a part time post-doctoral researcher with the Yellowstone Ecological Research Center, and frequently travels to the Yellowstone area.

The program is part of the library's "Your Big Backyard" series. It is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Public Invited To Tour Renovated Josiah Quincy House

Open House At Historic Home June 7

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The public will be invited to see renovations made over a three-year period to artifacts and the interior of the historic Josiah Quincy House during an open house on June 7.

Over 100 items have been treated in the country estate located in Wollaston including lacquered pieces, silver, baskets, ceramics, and wooden artifacts such as tables, upholstered chairs, and frames. Reproduced textiles and wallpaper were also created to maintain historical accuracy.

The Josiah Quincy House was home to six generations of Quincys and produced three Boston mayors; Josiah Quincy III who was also appointed as Harvard University President on June 2, 1829, Josiah Quincy, Jr., and Josiah Quincy.

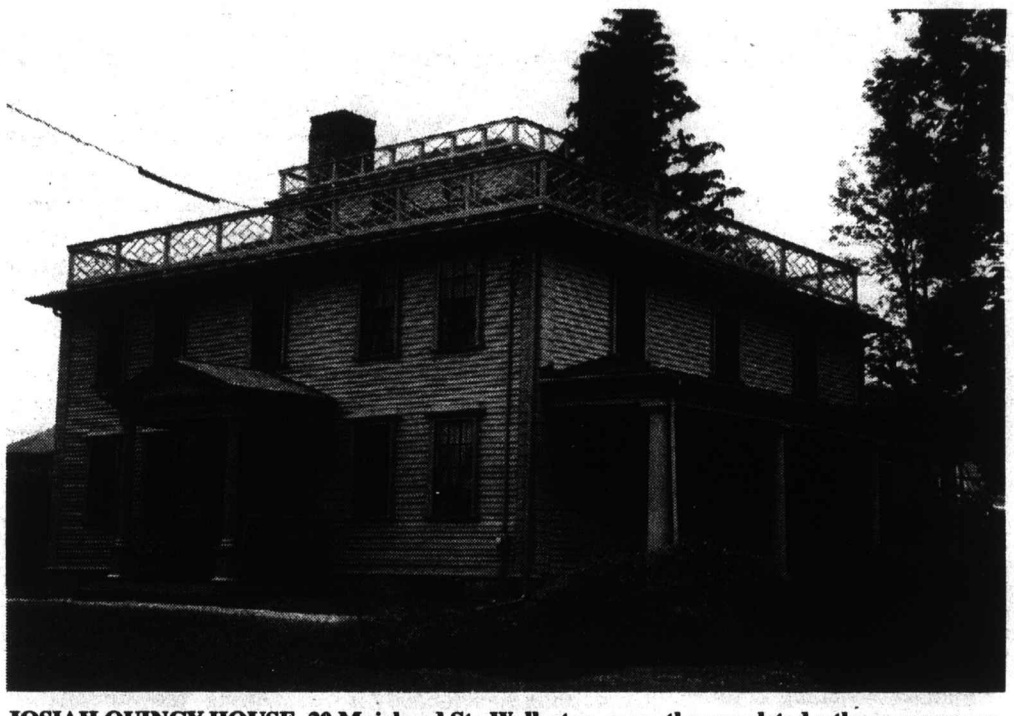
Early English settler Edmund Quincy originally acquired the land in the1630s for farming and called the area Lower Farm. What is now the Josiah Quincy House was built for descendent Josiah Quincy in 1770 by Dorchester carpenter Edward Pierce.

The home is notable for its Georgian frontispiece, gambrel roof, dormer windows, and its most unique feature: a monitor, which is a half-story space atop the home's pitched roof with small windows on all sides. Colonel John Quincy, grandfather of Abigail Adams, frequently tracked shipping lanes coming in and out of Boston Harbor as a way to anticipate troop movements in the months leading up to the Revolutionary War using the monitor as the perfect vantage point.

Conservator and decorative painter Marylou Davis, intern Margaret Kean, and Historic New England staff undertook the huge task of restoring a c.1860 canvas floorcloth by delicately stenciling and repainting the original design onto the ten-by-forty-foot canvas by hand. Once work was completed at Historic New England's Haverhill collections facility, it was installed in the home's downstairs hallway. In total, the process took six weeks.

All items in the home were inventoried and recorded by Eliza Susan Morton Quincy—who lived in the home 1855-1884 and was the daughter of Josiah Quincy—beginning in the early 1880s in the form of journals and commissioned photographs of the interior. She urged her relatives to return heirlooms to the home in a bid to preserve the estate and her family's history.

The home was purchased by descendants of the Quincy family and was presented as a gift to Historic New England in October 1937 for the expressed purpose of being maintained as a house museum.



JOSIAH QUINCY HOUSE, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, recently completed a three-year renovation project. The historic home will be open to the public June 7.

Amanda Flores Career, Tech Ed Student Of The Year

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy High School Senior Amanda Flores is the Career and Technical Education Student of the Year and was recognized for her dedication and excellence as a broadcasting student at a recent meeting of the Quincy school committee.

Her passion for media production started young. "I remember when I was nine or ten, my dad lived in Puerto Rico for a while and he, my aunt, and my uncle came over one day and they had this copy of a film they had done," she said. "It was kind of a mock horror film and I remember watching it as a kid and me and my brother, we wanted to do a sequel to it so I remember writing one of my first scripts after seeing my dad and aunts and uncles do it."

With her 4.3 GPA, she boasts an impressive list of accomplishments such as being a member of the National Honor Society and as a Girl Scout, receiving a Bronze Award; the highest award that can be given to a Junior Scout.

As if she wasn't busy enough, she also participates in Quincy High's Philosophy Club, Crew Team, took part in the History Bowl, and was also recently awarded the Community Service All-Star Award.

Her responsibilities during school hours include producing and performing the morning announcements with the the help of eight of her fellow classmates. "We have to get it out at 7:45 in the morning so somebody is working sound, somebody is directing. We do kind of everything," she said. She also interns at Quincy Access Television where she shadows and assists during tapings. "We helped with camera work and we worked in the back room where we helped with sound and the character generator."

The QHS broadcasting program is available starting in a student's sophomore year and can become their major. "In the first year you just kind of learn the basics and in your junior and senior year it becomes a two period class and becomes your major," she said. "It teaches you the three parts of any kind of media production so pre-production, which is where you learn how to write a script and how to schedule things and the second one is production where you actually learn how to use Mac computers and edit shorts, and then the final is when you kind of learn how to export [a film] and make DVDs."

One of her broadcasting school assignments was to direct a documentary on the Quincy Symphony Orchestra. "I interviewed the conductor and then I interviewed a few of the musicians and it got shown during intermission." Flores said that once she gets her website up and running, she'll post the documentary for all to see.

During the summer of her sophomore year, she participated in a three-week film program at Columbia University with a handful of students from all over the world. She and her peers were told to create their own, unique short film. "Muse," the piece that she wrote, directed, and pitched, details the life of a film student in New York who suffers from writer's block and finds inspiration by visiting different parts of the state. The four-minute short was completed in two days using fellow group members as actors. "It always sounds so much shorter but it was hours of editing," she said. "Three hours of editing is like a minute of film."

To qualify for the program, Flores had to submit her grades and had to write an essay detailing why she wanted to participate. She credits the experience with giving her the opportunity to expand on her production skills by practicing film grammar, story development, script writing, and music and sound scoring.

The "10 Day Film Challenge," a nationwide event in which students are tasked with writing, editing, scoring, and filming a short piece in ten days during designated class periods only, gave Flores the opportunity to work in a fast-paced, realistic film production environment. Quincy High participants took second place overall and received the most individual awards. She described the entire process as being "amped up."

Also on her resume is her work as an assistant on the feature film "Higher Power" which was partially shot at Quincy High School. "It was cool because we got to see how the professionals did it and we got to help set up the lights," she said. "We were more key grips." She described it as a great learning experience. "It's one thing to do it in the classroom but it's another to see the next level." The film will be available for viewing on Netflix in the near future.

Flores said she was thankful to all of her teachers, in particular to the entire Quincy High School English department. "All of my teachers have helped me in different ways but I have to say the English department also because a large part of broadcasting is being able to write so I think all of my English teachers have been able to shape me as a writer."

She will be attending Emerson College in the fall to study film production with a focus on directing with a possible minor in writing.

last decade.

"It's important to look at your future, consider what your needs are over the next 10 and 20 years, and then reconsider how much of this is being left on the table because you never get back the same $110 million," McNerney told the council.

One potential use for that money, she explained, would be paying off the city's unfunded liabilities. According to McNerney's report, the city has $320 million in unfunded pension liability and $563 million in unfunded OPEB (other post employment benefit) liability.

"It's something that's not going to go away. It's something the city does need to consider moving forward. It's an ascending number and it's growing," McNerney said. "There is an opportunity for the city to take a look at what's happening with unfunded pensions and funding it and unfunded OPEB and funding that."

McNerney noted Quincy's outstanding liabilities are significantly higher than other community's with the same AA+ credit rating assigned by Standard & Poor's, even when considering Quincy's annual revenue. The city had $267 million in annual revenue in FY13, meaning Quincy's outstanding pension liability represents 120.2 percent of annual revenue and its unfunded OPEB liabilities represent 210.8 percent of annual revenue.

Braintree, for instance, has $83 million in unfunded pensions and $190 million in outstanding OPEB liabilities. The town's FY13 revenue was $118 million, meaning Braintree's outstanding pension liabilities represent 69.9 percent of annual revenues and its outstanding OPEB liabilities represent 159.9 percent of annual revenue. Over the past 10 years, Braintree has left just $1.2 million untaxed.

"It's a big, huge elephant in the room," McNerney added, referring to the unfunded liabilities. "It's something to think about."

McNerney also presented information detailing the city's general fund debt service payments through FY43, including debt for the proposed new Sterling Middle School and school window replacement projects this summer. The payments increase from $12 million in FY14 (the current fiscal year) to more than $17 million in FY16, when they would decline, assuming no more debt is added.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee expressed concern over the rising debt payments, noting they are projected to increase by about 13.5 percent from FY14 to FY15, and asked if the city should continue to add to its debt. McNerney responded that the city needs to maintain its infrastructure.

"One of the things the city has to be sure the city doesn't do is defer or not maintain its infrastructure," she said.

'Click-It Or Ticket' Kickoff At NQHS

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Students at North Quincy High School got an eye-opening view of what can happen when driving while not wearing a seat belt during a rollover simulation presented by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) last Thursday.

The crowd of mostly seniors were invited to watch as a dummy was tossed around the cab of a car as it was spun over and over again, illustrating what can happen to the unrestrained human body in such accidents.

"That was crazy!" said Senior Vinny Tran after he watched the simulation. Classmate and fellow senior Jane Minton, who has been a member of Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) since her freshman year said she hoped the message to always wear your safety belt was heard loud and clear by her peers that day. Driving can be fun but remaining vigilant and being properly restrained is necessary. "Be safe about it," she said. According to Minton, events such as the rollover demonstration are a good way to bring students together to discuss and reflect on underage drinking and seat belt usage.

The Click It or Ticket (CIOT) high-visibility enforcement campaign, which began on Monday and will last through June 1, is one of the most successful seat belt reinforcement programs to date—markedly increasing national seat belt usage rates

250 Clinicians, Pharmacists Attend Morrissey's Safe Prescribing Conference

Doctor shopping by addicts, overprescribing of opiate pain medication and the current lack of counseling for patients on the safe storage and disposal of powerful prescription drugs are all contributing to the supply of narcotics on the street, according to Norfolk County District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey.

More than 250 doctors, nurses, pharmacists and substance abuse prevention leaders from across Norfolk County joined Morrissey Wednesday at Lombardo's conference facility in Randolph for a "Safe Prescribing Conference," to try and change that.

"Every clinician with a prescription pad and everyone in a white coat behind the pharmacy counter is a potential target for addicts trying to parlay fake injuries or forged prescriptions into pill bottles of prescription narcotics," District Attorney Morrissey said at the close of the 5-hour conference, which also drew a number of area police and fire chiefs and lieutenants, legislators and local substance abuse coalition leaders.

"What we hear from physicians and pharmacists alike is that the problem is huge and the amount of available training for them to learn to deal with it is limited," Morrissey said. "With the help of the DEA, Boston University, Northeastern University, Quincy Police, Dr. Daniel Alford and experts from my own office, we were able to fill that need for a good number. This can only help us."

Morrissey said that State Police detectives from his office had responded to 61 apparent drug overdoses in 2013 from heroin and prescription opiates, and Norfolk County is not alone is seeing a steep rise in such deaths. "Opiate addiction is also driving an inordinate amount of our property crimes, armed robberies and violence," he said.

Using funding from a federal grant, Morrissey was able to partner with Boston University School of Medicine and Northeastern University Bouve' College of Health Sciences School of Pharmacy to offer Continuing Education Credits to the professionals who attended. "Clinicians and pharmacists have a vital role to play in the front end, in the prevention of overuse and abuse of these drugs," Morrissey said. "I am personally grateful to every pharmacist and every clinician who attended, and am hopeful they will share this message within their practices and organizations."

Councillors Question Legality Of 398-Unit Project

buildings would be wood-framed, except for the cement parking structures on the ground floor.

Ed Fleming, an attorney representing AvalonBay, explained that the site was improved substantially during the construction of Highpoint. That includes environmental remediation, installation of new paving and building pads for four of the five proposed buildings, and installation of utilities, sewer and water lines, including fire hydrants. After that work was completed, in anticipation of future construction by Highpoint's developer, the proposed AvalonBay site has remained untouched for several years and Fleming described it as an eyesore.

"The site has remained essentially untouched and unkempt. Weeds and scrub brush have grown on the site. There's been no landscaping or other maintenance done on the site. The pavement that was initially installed has not been maintained or cared for," Fleming said.

"Essentially the site has become an unattractive eyesore for the community."

The proposed buildings were designed to contrast with the all-white buildings at neighboring Highpoint, according to architect Ed Bradford. The exteriors will feature a variety of different materials and varying rooflines. Most units will also feature balconies.

"Our goal is to create a design that has a lot of variation, visual interest, and probably most importantly, has a strong residential scale," Bradford explained. "That's important on every project and especially here – we want to make sure we contrast the existing buildings that, as many people know, are quite monotone in their design and scale and to create a friendlier building, a livelier building."

Half of the 25-acre parcel would remain as open space, according to Fleming, including one acre of already paved area that will be converted back to open space. Seventeen different species of evergreen trees and 40 varieties of plants will be installed on site.

The proposal also includes a fenced-in outdoor pool area, which would be located next to a lounge area and pool building. The lounge area would include built-in kitchens, fireplaces, and lounge seating. A fitness center would be located on the ground floor of one of the five-story buildings.

Design Consultants, Inc., completed a traffic study for the project. The study showed the Avalon Quincy site would add 151 vehicle trips during the weekday morning peak hour between 7:45 and 8:45 a.m. and 155 during the afternoon/evening peak hour between 6:15 and 7:15 p.m. In total the site would generate 1,579 vehicle trips on an average weekday.

"What we found is the new trips from the proposed Avalon Quincy will not have a specific impact on the roadway network," said Design Consultants, Inc., President David Giangrande.

"There is some mitigation we are recommending in our report on some intersections and we will be working with your consultants to go over those intersections and make sure they're satisfied."

One potential piece of mitigation could be a new traffic light leading into the development from Quarry Street, according to AvalonBay development director Lars Unhjem.

Residents did not have a chance to voice their opinions on the proposal Monday night. The council will hold public hearing for residents to do so on Sept. 23 at 7 p.m.

The issue of whether or not AvalonBay can develop the site involves a settlement reached in 2000 between Highpoint's developer, Congress Group Ventures, the city, and a group of residents living near the site. The agreement allowed Congress Group Ventures to construct up to 10 eight-story buildings with 1,040 total residential units. Only five buildings with 520 units were ultimately built.

Part of that settlement set a 2007 deadline for construction on site, including the portion AvalonBay is now hoping to develop. The developer later received a five-year extension on that deadline, which passed in 2012.

Several councillors, including Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, raised concerns about the settlement Monday night after AvalonBay presented its proposal. Palmucci asked City Solicitor Jim Timmins if the settlement would bar AvalonBay from developing the site. Timmins said such a determination would need to be made by a Land Court judge.

"The fact is the applicant has the right to come forward and present a permit application. The only party that can stop that is a judge. We can't prevent them from applying. Once they apply, we're obliged by the provisions of Chapter 40A to react to that application," Timmins said, adding either the neighbors or developer would need to seek a judgment from the court on the issue.

In response, Palmucci asked if the city could ask for declaratory judgment as a party to the initial settlement. Timmins said doing so would have an effect on the permit process going forward and that the city generally stays out of such matters.

"The problem with that is if you take a position in this that becomes a factor in how the permit process plays out," the solicitor said. "You have two private parties that are involved here that have an interest. Whenever we having zoning cases the typical practice is that if an abutter files an appeal on a granted permit then we let the abutter and their attorney work it out with whoever the party is and the city kind of stays out of that. We stay out of disputes of that nature."

Timmins also noted the city's interests in the settlement, such as installation of utilities, have already been addressed.

Palmucci responded that the council, as the special permit granting authority, has the obligation to determine whether or not a developer can follow through on permit if one is granted.

"Don't we have to take some cursory inquiry to make a determination as to whether or not the permit seeker has the ability or is lawfully allowed to execute on the permit?" he asked. "Arguably we could get up here and grant permits to build an elevator up to the moon, but if you don't have the legal right to do it it's not worth the paper it's printed on."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who represents both the Highpoint complex and the proposed project site, said the issue should be resolved before the council considers the development in the fall. He compared the situation to matters of jurisdiction and venue the courts consider before taking up cases.

"I see this as a threshold issue that I would love to see resolved before we continue to engage in this process," Coughlin explained.

"My hope is before we spend a lot of time and effort and engage all of the folks are here – no matter what they're interests are in this process – that we can get an answer to what I see as a threshold issue…We need to get that answer. It's only fair to everyone, including the residents, the applicant, and ultimately to those of us that are sitting in this well that are going to engage in hopefully a concerted effort to come up with the right answer."

Councillor Doug Gutro also said more clarity was needed before the process moves forward.

"To me it's a cloud, in essence, that's hanging over this," Gutro said. "Some clarity would be helpful, I think, for both the folks involved as well as the City Council before we move forward."

In response to those concerns, Timmins said he would provide the council with his opinion on the situation prior to the public hearing in September.

'Ship Breaking At Nut Island' Illustrated Presentation June 3

The Thomas Crane Library and the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program are offering a two-part program on "Ship Breaking at Nut Island (1885-1903).

Patti Williams and Peter Sault will give an illustrated presentation Tuesday, June 3 at the library at 7 p.m. On Saturday, June 7 they will lead a walk (up a steep hill) to Nut Island beginning at 10:30 a.m. at the Houghs Neck Public Landing parking lot on Sea Street at Bayview Avenue.

There will be an optional pay your own way lunch at Louis with the tour guides following the walk.

Between 1885 and 1903, 18 steamships were broken up at Nut Island in Houghs Neck to recycle their iron, copper and other metal. In Houghs Neck many were recycled into cottages. Today, homeowners may find tongue-in-groove sheathing and large timbers from these ships incorporated into their homes.

Participants will learn about the ships, the ship-breaking process and see photos of some of the cottages made from parts of these ships.

For more information and rain date rescheduling of walk, call 617-472-0799.

By SCOTT JACKSON

With less than four weeks to go until the state's Democratic convention, gubernatorial candidate Joe Avellone is confident he has support to appear on the ballot for September's primary election.

Avellone, a Wellesley resident, made an appearance in Quincy Monday morning when he was endorsed by five county and city officials – Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, county Register of Probate Pat McDermott, City Councillors Kevin Coughlin and Doug Gutro, and School Committeeman Noel DiBona.

Avellone is one of five Democrats and two Republicans vying to replace outgoing Gov. Deval Patrick, a Milton Democrat who opted not to run for a third term. Each party will chose its nominee for governor during the primary election Sept. 9. Candidates hoping to appear on the Democratic ballot must receive votes from at least 15 percent of all delegates at next month's Democratic convention. The convention is being held June 13 and 14 in Worcester.

In a phone interview following Monday morning's event in Quincy, Avellone said he remains optimistic about receiving enough support to land a spot in September's primary.

"I'm very confident I'll be on the ballot," Avellone said, noting he has received endorsements from the mayors of Worcester and Taunton and has the support of officials in Brockton, Fall River, and Boston as well as the five endorsements he received Monday.

Avellone – a surgeon and Navy reservist who went on to work as the COO of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts for seven years then served as CEO of Veritas Medicine and is now a corporate senior vice president for PAREXEL International – said the next governor will need to focus on helping cities across the state deal with problems such as job losses, addiction, and education.

"My candidacy has really been focusing on problems cities are facing," Avellone explained. "The next governor has to focus on issues on older cities that were for years on the decline."

Quincy, Avellone noted, can serve as an example for other communities across the Bay State to follow.

"We've got great leadership in Quincy – Quincy's leaders have done a good job," Avellone said. "It can be a model for how other cities can reach the prominence they once had."

Avellone's first foray came as a selectman in his hometown. He served on the Board of Selectmen in Wellesley for six years, including two years as the board's chairman. Because of that experience, Avellone said he is familiar with budget issues facing municipalities.

"I understand the cities' and towns' budgets and stresses and strains it causes," he said, noting he has additional experience in collective bargaining new contracts with municipal employees' unions.

The Wellesley Democrat said in the phone interview he was proud to earn the endorsements from the five county and city officials Monday.

"Today is a very good day for our campaign and I'm proud to have the support of these leaders," Avellone said.

At Monday's event, held on Hancock Street, McDermott and Gillis both called Avellone the party's best chance to beat GOP frontrunner Charlie Baker in November's general election.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, May 11, 2014, at approximately 11:25 p.m., numerous Officers were dispatched to Murdock Avenue on a report of a robbery that just occurred. QPD communications stated that two suspects fled on bicycles.

Upon arrival, Officer Steve Kelly made contact with the 19 year old victim, who was upset, yelling that he was just robbed. The victim was wearing shorts and there were fresh scrapes and cuts on his knees, along with a bloody elbow. The victim stated that there were four suspects, described as teens on bicycles, and they fled east toward Washington Street and Southern Artery. He said that two of the suspects beat him up while the other two suspects watched.

Descriptions of the suspects were broadcast to all Officers. The victim said that he did not know any of the suspects and first saw them when he went to Dunkin Donuts by Washington Street and Southern Artery. He said he then exited Dunkin Donuts and headed home, walking on Southern Artery. The victim said the four suspects followed him and he grew concerned that "something might happen."

As the victim approached Quint's Flowers on Southern Artery, the four suspects rode up to him and asked him if he had any "weed" to sell. The victim said he did not have any weed. One of the suspects gave him his cell phone number, so the victim entered it into his cell phone. Officer Kelly asked him why the suspect would give him his cell phone number and secondly, why he would enter it into his own phone. The victim said, "I just went along with it so nothing would happen."

When asked by Officer Kelly why he just wasn't robbed at that point, the victim thought that being on a main street delayed the robbery. The victim said that the suspects drove off and he continued walking. The suspects continued to follow him at a distance, so he kept an eye on them. As the victim reached Murdock Avenue, two of the suspects drove up to him and attacked him from behind, while the other two suspects watched. The victim said he was punched in the head and knocked to the ground. He fought back in fear of his life, especially when he heard one of the suspects yell out that they were going to stab him, followed by another suspect saying that he had a hammer and was going to hit him with it.

LT. DAN MINTON

The victim's back pack was ripped off and his cell phone torn away from his pocket. The victim said that the two suspects who did not assault him were acting as look-outs, adding that he did not see a knife or a hammer.

Officer Kelly made note of the crime scene, which included a spilled coffee cup, a Dunkin Donuts bag, a hat, and a black back pack strap. He gave a description of the back pack, the phone and phone charger.

At this time, a witness exited his home and told the Officer that he saw "two guys beating that guy on the ground." The witness said it appeared to be a robbery so he called "911.". He also described seeing two other males on bicycles watching the incident. At this time, Officer John McGowan reported that he had two males on bicycles stopped at 55 Sea Street and they fit the general description.

Meanwhile, QPD Dispatcher Mike Bowes broadcast that he was viewing live video surveillance located inside QPD communications. He said that he was observing two other males on bicycles near the Stop and Shop gas station located beside the police station at the corner of Southern Artery and Broad Street. He then stated he observed the two males "high tail it out of there." He then directed any available unit to search the area near the intersection of Southern Artery and Coddington Street, focusing on the gas station across the street.

Officers Steve DesRoche, Matt Patten and Paul Foley stopped these two suspects near the gas station. Officer Foley immediately asked them if they had any weapons for officer safety reasons. One male said he had a knife in his pants pocket. Officer Foley took control of the 3 inch folding knife. Officer DesRoche pat-frisked both males and felt a large hard object in one of the male's pockets, which turned out to be two cell phones. After conferring with Officer Kelly, it was determined that it was the same phone that was stolen.

After the victim declined medical attention, he was brought to the gas station where he said he was 100% sure that these two males were involved in the beating and robbery. Both male suspects were placed into custody and transported to the station for booking. Officer Kelly then drove the victim to where the other two suspects were on Sea Street.

Again, the victim said he was 100% sure that these two males were lookouts during the robbery. These two suspects were taken into custody and transported to the station for booking. The victim identified the phone found by Officer DesRoche as his phone. All four suspects, ranging in age from 12 to 23, all from Dorchester, were charged with Armed Robbery. The folding knife was placed into evidence. Small bags of marijuana were found on two suspects and they were to be destroyed. The back pack was never found. Nice Work!

Snapchat: has agreed to settle FTC charges that it deceived its users when it marketed the app's central feature as the ability to send photos or "snaps" that would "disappear forever" after a set time. According to the FTC, users could save snaps simply and indefinitely. The FTC case also alleged that Snapchat's failure to secure its "Find Friends" feature resulted in a security breach that enabled attackers to compile a database of 4.6 million Snapchat usernames and phone numbers. The settlement prohibits Snapchat from misrepresenting how it maintains the privacy and security of users' information and requires the company to implement a comprehensive privacy program that will be monitored by an independent privacy professional for the next 20 years. Registry Of Deeds Shelves 32,000th Deed Book

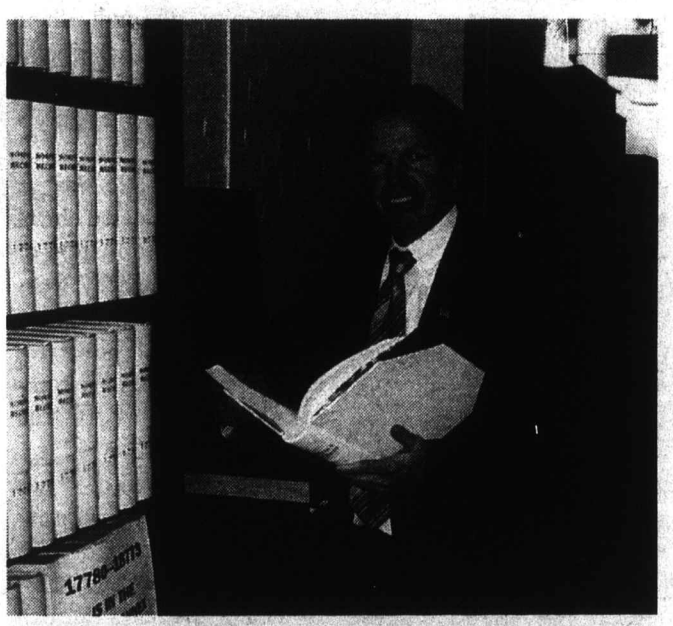
Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces that Book 32,000 has been placed on the shelf in the Registry's Burdakin Record Room representing the 15,000th volume to be bound and made available to the public since he took office in 2002.

"During the first 200 years of Norfolk County history from 1793 to 1993, the Norfolk County Registry produced 10,000 volumes. The fact that in only eleven years' time there have been 15,000 volumes bound is truly impressive and I believe a real testament to the hard work of our staff," said Register O'Donnell.

O'Donnell also noted that not only are 32,000 books available for public viewing during business hours, but that all of the Registry's land records dating back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are also available for online viewing at www.norfolkdeeds.org. Additionally the Registry's online data is indexed by name from 1900 forward and is currently available for viewing and continues to expand to include earlier records.



NORFOLK COUNTY Register of Deeds recently shelved Book 32,000 in the Registry's Burdakin Record Room representing the 15,000th volume to be bound and made available to the public since Register William O'Donnell (above) took office in 2002. Photo Courtesy Norfolk County Register Of Deeds

"As one of the few Registry of Deeds in the Commonwealth still binding books we feel that it provides both a unique service to our customers as well as increased security for our records, and that our extensive online access really brings the Registry of Deeds into the homes and businesses of Norfolk County" O'Donnell added.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Department via telephone at (781) 461-6101, or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Salvation Army Honors Local Leaders At Civic Dinner

200 Attend Event To Benefit Needy In Quincy Community

The Salvation Army Quincy Corps honored three community leaders at its first annual Civic Dinner and Silent Auction May 14 at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

Two hundred guests attended the event that raised money to support the Salvation Army's mission of helping and assisting the needy in the local community.

Honored at the dinner were:

Mayor Thomas Koch, Quincy attorney and former Norfolk County Dist. Atty. George Burke and Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth. The three were recognized for their continued commitment to serving those in the Quincy community.

Koch was presented the Salvation Army's "Others' Award; Burke received the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board's Emeritus Award; and Bosworth was presented The William Booth Award, named for the one of the Salvation Army's co-founders.

Burke, a longtime member of the Salvation Army Advisory, was honored as a longtime community philanthropist who has given generously to a multitude of worthy causes.

Burke received his award from Don Uvanitte, president of the Salvation Army Advisory Board.

"Atty. George G. Burke is one of the City of Quincy's most respected local philanthropists," Uvanitte said. "Every year Atty. George "Trigger" Burke donates $10,000 in scholarships to graduating seniors from Quincy High and North Quincy High who attend the University of Massachusetts.

"George Burke was also a significant donor to Quincy Medical Center when he served on the Quincy Medical Center Foundation Board. The new fitness center at Quincy High School is also named after George for providing all the equipment and weight training needs for that facility. Most recently Atty. George Burke donated $50,000 to the new South Shore YMCA facility on Coddington Street.

"George is probably best known for rescuing the Colonel John Quincy silver tankard that was auctioned off by the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center in 2001. The UFPC needed to raise capital for repairs to the historic church and was forced to sell off some of their most cherished silverware including the silver tankard.

"George did not want to see that treasure leave the City of Quincy and he was the successful bidder at $200,000 assuring that the prized tankard stay within the confines of the City of Quincy. That tankard is now on daily display in the lobby of Quincy City Hall for all to see and appreciate.

"George continues to make many numerous and generous charitable gifts throughout the City of Quincy to those in need. George certainly epitomizes the "human capital" of Quincy residents that Mayor Thomas Koch often refers to, and those who truly make a difference in many of the lives of the residents of the City of Quincy.

Mayor Koch was presented The Salvation Army's "Others" Award by Captain Nicole Ross. Capt. Ross and her husband, Capt. Timothy Ross, are Corps Officers and Administrators of The Salvation Army Quincy Temple.

Capt. Nicole Ross pointed out the "Others" award is rooted in the history of the Salvation Army, dating back to the early 1900s when General William Booth, the Army's co-founder, wanted to send a word of encouragement and direction to his officers around the world.

"Wanting to be thrifty yet make his message clear, the general sent this one word telegram: 'Others.' Following that history, The Salvation Army honors an individual or organization exemplifying an extraordinary spirit of service to 'others,' not only through support of The Salvation Army but the broader community as well.

"Mayor Koch is extremely committed supporter and cheerleader for others," Capt. Nicole Ross said. She then quoted part of the mayor's Fourth Term Inaugural Address last January when Koch emphasized the city's "Human Capital."

"A city is more than bricks and mortar, more than infrastructure. A city is made a community by its people, people that care deeply about their neighborhoods."

Capt. Nicole Ross said Mayor Koch has embodied this vision in his daily life.

"Mayor Koch is a man of character, faith and integrity. We are privileged to have the support and commitment of outstanding individuals such as Mayor Koch.

"Every year, many special people and organizations step up to help us as we work to meet the needs of those in our community. Indeed, it's challenging to select just a few to recognize at one dinner and I'd want each and every supporter to know we are grateful and deeply blessed by their engagement with us.

"It is my privilege to invite Mayor Koch to join me and accept this award becoming the first Quincy Salvation Army recipient of the 'Others' Award."

Capt. Timothy Ross presented Bosworth with the William Booth Award. The award, named in honor of the co-founder of The Salvation Army, is one of the highest awards conferred upon an individual by The Salvation Army. It is given to a deserving individual for outstanding service to the community through their donation of time, talent and energy, as well as dedication to The Salvation Army's goal of service.

"William Booth was as man who dedicated himself to the transformation of lives," Capt. Timothy Ross said. "This year's recipient is a man who has shown tremendous care for this community as well as for The Salvation Army.

"Bob Bosworth has served the Quincy community for more than 20 years by striving to keep people informed of the news through his time as a reporter and now as editor and publisher of The Quincy Sun. He has shared countless stories and captured great pictures of what makes the city of Quincy great, which is its people.

"This attitude of service was modeled to him by his father, the late Henry Bosworth, founder of The Quincy Sun. Henry was very active in service to our community of Quincy and played a pivotal role for the Advisory Board of The Salvation Army for many years.

"It was Henry Bosworth who spearheaded the Community Leader kettle outside City Hall over 17 years ago. Henry passed away suddenly in February 2009 and Bob has carried on the work that his father left behind.

"Bob has actively served on The Salvation Army's Advisory Board since 2009. He has continued to spearhead the Community Leader Kettle each Christmas season, which has helped raise thousands of dollars for The Salvation Army over the past 17 years.

"Bob has also served as past president of the Kiwanis Club of Quincy and has helped various charities raise awareness of their missions and services through The Quincy Sun. He indeed has been a valuable contribution to the city of Quincy.

"It is my distinct honor to present to Bob Bosworth the William Booth Award."

Bosworth dedicated the award to his father and offering an inspirational quote from William Booth:

"Your days at the most cannot be very long, so use them to the best of your ability for the glory of God and the benefit of your generation."

The evening also featured other highlights, including a video of testimonials for individuals who have received assistance from the Salvation Army.

The Pledge of Allegiance and a medley of patriotic songs was led by the children of the Salvation Army Quincy Sonshine Preschool and After School Programs.

Major David Kelly, Divisional Commander, Salvation Army, gave the invocation.

The benediction was given by Gary Piercey, Corps Sergeant Major, The Salvation Army.

The dinner also featured a silent auction featuring donated items ranging from Red Sox tickets and restaurant gift certificates to lunch with Mayor Koch.

All of the proceeds will be used to assist needy individuals in the communitv.

Quincy Nips North, 10-8

Boys Lacrosse

By JOE REARDON

Mark Nutley didn't have to lock himself in a room and pull an all-nighter, meticulously dissect the game film of Thursday's showdown against Quincy to figure out the deciding factor in his North Quincy squad's tough 10-8 loss to the Presidents.

The Red Raiders' head coach knew immediately that the Presidents' three goals, coupled with a trio of penalties at the start of the second half, were the backbreaker.

Mitchell McGowan, Tom Pugsley and Steve Ross took advantage of Quincy's man-up positioning and fired home three goals to turn a 5-4 deficit into a 7-5 lead on the way to a much-needed 10-8 win at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The victory put the Presidents at 7-8 and still in tournament contention after destroying Dedham 13-3 earlier in the week.

"It was a must win for us," said Quincy head coach Martin Bowes. "At this late stage in the season we're making a run for the playoffs. This was a huge one. This was one of our short term goals to come out of this week 2-0. It's a big win."

The much-improved Red Raiders' team was competitive the entire 50 minutes, but couldn't keep Quincy in arrears after the shaky third-quarter start. "We started the third quarter with three quick penalties and that just killed us," said Nutley. "They scored on all three of them. I told them that they weren't good enough to play a man down and we gave them three quick penalties in the first three minutes. We came out 5-4 and then it's 7-5 and we're chasing them. We can't chase from behind like that."

Both defenses were aggressive from the start and the Presidents got an amazing game from their goaltender Andy Johnson. The quick goalkeeper finished with 13 saves, many of them in the spectacular category.

"I think Andy was the all-star of this game," said Bowes. "From the beginning I think North Quincy could easily have gone up three or four goals. It's a good thing we have a goalie playing on his head."

Nutley agreed that Johnson was on the very top of his game. "I was talking to these guys in the first quarter and told them they should be up 11-4, 11-5," he said. "We hit three posts and he had three unbelievable point-blank saves."

By BILL GRIFFIN

The story from Quincy's 10-0 victory over North Quincy last week at Adams Field was not that the Presidents clinched their first state tournament berth since 2011.

It was not that Kenny Sorensen threw strikes the way that Larry Bird shot free throws in delivering a two-hit, no-walk gem which dominated the game.

It was not that the Presidents rapped out 14 hits, turned two crisp double plays and backed Sorensen with clean, errorless defense.

It was not that David Cooper had a single, double, a triple and three RBI. It was not that Robbie Munroe had a triple, single, and three runs scored.

It was not that North's Andrew Currie laced a single to run his his hitting streak to 11 games.

It was none of this.

The image that will remain frozen forever for the large crowd who ringed the field on a cool, humid night will be of pinch runner Ben Bardon, a special needs student with the nickname of Swiper, running home with Quincy's final run. The story will be of the smile on his face and his teammates who swarmed him as if he had just won the whole world.

"When I think back to tonight, it will about Swiper. It has to be Swiper," smiled Quincy senior catcher Johnny Marsinelli. "He's such a great kid. He comes to the practices. Everyone talks and jokes with him. All of us love him. He's one of us. The tournament and beating North are important, but this will always be Swiper's night."

Quincy led, 9-0 entering the bottom of the sixth. Colin Evans walked and Seamus Hill reached on an error. Cooper clubbed a long shot to left which bounced off the fence on one hop. Evans could easily have scored, but coach Pat Bryan held him at third.

"I told Swiper I would get him in a game and this seemed like the perfect opportunity," said Bryan.

Bryan put Bardon on third as a pinch runner. Marsinelli lofted a bloop which landed safely on the outfield grass. Bardon ran home. His teammates jumped and danced and raced to home plate. They circled him with laughs and back-slaps and open arms. The crowd cheered. The game was over because of the ten-run rule. The perfect ending had been written.

"It's all about Swiper," said Bryant "He comes to all the practices. He helps out. He talks to the players. All the players love him. I wanted to give him a chance to experience a great moment on the field. It worked out just right tonight."

For Sorensen, it was a brilliant night in a brilliant season. There is no better pitcher in the league. He is 4-1 with an ERA of under 1.00, and he has walked only two batters in 42 innings of work. He needed just 59 pitches in six innings against North. He retired the first nine and didn't give a hit until Currie singled with one out in the fourth.

He struck out three, but strikeouts tell little about Sorensen. He knows how to pitch. He changes arm angles and speeds. He throws harder than it appears. He is sneaky fast and his curve has bite and drop to it. His con-

Johnson thwarted McGowan in close early and came up with another big stop on a Quincy rush three minutes later. Nolan Greene scored to make it 1-0 with 6:48 left in the first, coming around from the side of the net and stuffing a shot in. The Red Raiders proceeded to go up just 38 seconds later.

Tom Pugsley got the Presidents on the board with 4:16 left in the opening quarter with a sharp shot to cut the lead to 2-1. Despite the one-goal difference Quincy wasn't getting the high-percentage scoring chances the Red Raiders were putting on Johnson, who thwarted two more scoring attempts inside his crease.

Ross finally knotted the game at 2-2 with a blast from 10 yards out with 1:26 left and Aidan Pugsley gave Quincy its first lead of the game, 3-2, with 14 ticks remaining on the clock.

Greene, who was around the Quincy net the entire game, started the third by bouncing a shot of the crossbar behind Johnson. Finn evened the score up at 3-3 with a shot in traffic around the net. Greene added another tally with 8:10 left in the half, weaving through defenders and hammering home a shot to put North Quincy back into the lead at 4-3. Just over three minutes later it was Greene again, working to make room in front as he poked home another tally for a 5-3 North Quincy advantage with 5:59 remaining in the half.

Johnson continued his solid play in net by making back-to-back saves on Chris Gorman and Rob Hines. But the save of the game came with 4:37 when Johnson plucked a Mike Finn shot heading to the corner out of the air. Finn was denied twice more in the next two minutes and Quincy got a goal back with a tally from Aidain Pugsley with 1:21 left in the first half.

The Presidents' surge in the third quarter began just 20 seconds in when sharpshooter McGowan rifled in a shot to tie it 5-5. Tom Pugsley was the second President to take aim at the man advantage, grabbing a loose ball five yards out and whipping home another tally for a 6-5 lead 2:36 into the third. Just over two minutes later Ross pushed Quincy's lead to 7-5 with a strong shot.

North Quincy appeared unfazed by the Presidents' scoring spree and continued to swarm the Quincy net, trying to get shots past Johnson. Tim Glynn finally made it a one-goal contest with 4:40 left to put things at 7-6 and Corey Hernandez tied it at 7 with 3:58 left in the third.

The teams traded goals in the first 1:10 of the fourth with the always-dangerous McGowan dashing from the side to score and Finn bouncing home a bid to tie it 8-8.

Brian O'Callaghan pushed the Presidents home for good with 7:26 left when his low shot found the back of the North Quincy net from 20 yards out to make it 9-8. McGowan added a laser with 4:23 for the Presidents' 10th goal of the game.

Bowes was happy with Quincy's intensity from the opening minute and its ability to make adjustments as the game continued. "I'm very happy with the effort. I think we got away from what we do well sometimes," said Bowes. "Credit North Quincy. They came out and played a very, very hard-fought game. They went on a couple of runs and luckily we went on a couple of runs of our own.

"I was pretty frustrated at halftime because the level of play, I thought we played down a little bit and the message was simply to trust your teammates. Some guys would make plays on their own and it would look good for a moment, but it needs to be a team effort. You have to trust yourself and trusty that your teammates are going to do their jobs. I think they did more of that in the second half. When we do have problems it's a lack of communication. With their teammates talking I think it gives them all a little extra confidence and they're more on the same page. Communication is huge, especially on the defensive end."

McArdle, Phelan Power Quincy Girls Past North Quincy

By JOE REARDON

Tournament implications put a quicker step in any team looking to make it to the promised land of the high school postseason. So when Alisa Arakelian's 8-10 Presidents took the field last Thursday evening against North Quincy at Veterans' Memorial Field, Quincy was focused on keeping its bid for the playoffs alive and getting some city bragging rights along the way.

This one was never really close as the Presidents built a 4-0 lead and feasted on the Red Raiders' defense with a 17-7 rout of North Quincy.

The Presidents needed to win both its games against Dedham and Silver Lake to reach the magic .500 mark to stamp their ticket into the postseason for the first time in school history.

Arakelian kept the pressure on her players to continue to keep working against the 6-12 Red Raiders, even as the score began to escalate.

"I never want them to ever let up because I don't want them to make a habit of it," said Quincy's first-year coach. "I think when we get a lead like that I actually try to push them a little bit harder."

Arakelian made it a point to try to slow Quincy's main offensive threat, Marissa McGue, by having defensive specialist Emily Hatfield shadow her the entire game. McGue still wound up with four goals to lead the Presidents, but Hatfield made it difficult for her to get close to the Quincy net.

"We prepared well for North Quincy," said Arakelian. "We knew our game plan going in. They really have one major player (McGue). We put Emily Hatfield on her. She plays solid defense and is one of our best defenders in terms of speed and stamina. Emily's the whole package. It really worked out well."

Co-captains Kayla McArdle and Kerry Phelan torched the North Quincy defense with five goals apiece and Gabby Zorkers added a pair to lead the Presidents, who were comfortably ahead 9-3 at the half. Quincy had a myriad of scorers as Dominique Lucier, Nicole Lee, Courtney Ryan, Gabriela Jerahian and Riley McLaughlin all found the back of the net. Goaltender Maddy Kamb came up with the big saves between the posts - turning away 15 shots - for the Presidents.

The game was expected to be a tight one after Quincy took the first contest by seven tallies. "I was hoping it to be closer," said North Quincy head coach Megan Therrien. "We played well the first half especially because we had a lot of possession in their area. I give credit to their goalie Maddy Kamb. She played very well. She had great position all the time and had an outstanding game. It was close for a while. We didn't accomplish what we wanted with the opportunities on the offensive end. The second half kind of got away from us. The ball was in our defensive end a little more. But again, they're a great offensive team."

Kiera Clifford, Katie Burke and Molly Brown all had tallies behind the four McGue netted for the Red Raiders.

Arakelian was especially pleased that eight different players figured into the Quincy offense and sees that as a good sign moving forward. "We started to flow more as a team," she said. "Our offensive game has really started to come together. We're starting to use everybody and rely on different people scoring and putting more than two goals in. If they decide to mark out one or two of our players we can still contribute and score goals for ourselves.

"We're still working on our defensive ride. We were locking the ball in pretty well, but a couple of times we got a little lazy with our feet. We have to move our feet a little more and get there on defense so that we don't even give them a chance to get the ball transitioned down. If we can lock that in and control the pace of the game I think that'll push us forward."

Arakelian is confident the team has the right mentality in its push towards the tournament. "I think we're trying to take it one game at a time," she said. "I think they're excited and nervous. I think it (the tournament) is absolutely doable for them. We just want to take it one step at a time It would be good to make a splash and see how far we go. We want to score enough goals and get our seed up. You don't want to come out in the first round and face a Notre Dame Academy."

trol is pinpoint. He works quickly. The outfield and infield stay in the game. When the ball is hit, the fielders are ready, alert, and they make the plays.

"The big thing is that he can throw strikes with all of his pitches," said Marsinelli. "As a catcher, it lets me call anything. Tonight I called back-to-back curves, and he threw both for strikes."

"He beat Middleboro, 2-1 with 70 pitches and he only needed 59 tonight. He just pounds the zone," said Bryan.

Quincy scored one in the second, six in the third, two in the fourth and one in the sixth. The Presidents had five extra-base hits. Cody Desmond went 3-3 with two singles, a double, two runs scored and an RBI. Hill had a double, a single, an RBI and a run scored.

Marsinelli had two hits, two RBI and a run scored while Padraig Geaney had a sacrifice fly and an RBI. Tyler Beach had a single and walked twice. Mike Pugsley chipped in with a single while Bobby Salvucci had a run scored.

"We had our best practice of the year Wednesday and it showed in the way we swung the bats tonight," said Bryan.

The defense was excellent. Pugsley made a fine play charging a tapper and just getting Matt McDonald at first on the opening play of the game. Sorensen, Beach, and Hill turned a 1-6-3 double play in the fourth. Beach, Pugsley, and Hill clicked on a 6-4-3 DP in the fifth.

Pitching, hitting and defense. It's a combination that almost always is a good thing.

"I liked the way we played in the field. We came ready to play tonight," said Bryan.

For North, Currie and Sean Egan had singles. McDonald played a fine game at shortstop, handling five chances. Junior Matt Monahan threw well in 2 1/3 innings of relief.

"I was happy to see John Ross McEvilly experience starting the Quincy game as a senior," said North coach Matt Edgerly. "Andrew Currie has had a great year for us at the bat, in the field, and as a senior leader. All of our seniors have been great."

North's Trevor Carey, Robbie Cameron, McEvilly, and Currie were honored along with their families in Senior Night ceremonies before the game.

Quincy ended last week at 10-7 and finishes its regular season at home against Archbishop Williams in a makeup game Friday night at 7 p.m. North hosts the O'Bryant School Friday at 3:45 p.m. and finishes the season at home against Melrose Saturday at 11 a.m.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

TAKING THE NATURAL PATH

As the FDA warns that even small overdoses of acetaminophen can lead to liver damage, many consumers may be rethinking their use of drugs to treat symptoms. Chiropractic foregoes the use of drugs and surgery in the belief that these approaches may be avoided altogether by maintaining the body at its optimal function point. This is accomplished by correcting abnormal structural relationships. The focus of this conservative approach to health maintenance is the spinal column and adjacent tissues because of their relationship to the nervous system. By removing impediments that stand in the way of the nervous system's proper functioning, the chiropractor sees to it that this control mechanism can exert proper influence over the entire body to ensure health.

Chiropractic care has been shown to be extremely effective in maintaining improved health and well-being through its ability to integrate several approaches to health which can easily be adopted into one's lifestyle. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, your good health is our main concern. Call us at 617.472.4220 today to schedule an appointment. We are educated and trained in the detection and care of problems of the spinal column and in maintaining the delicate balance of the neck and spine. Our office is located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Chiropractic is a scientifically sound and time-proven natural way to health. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

Quincy Bows To Bishops

By BILL GRIFFIN

The best way to look at the afternoon was that when the tournament arrives, it is most unlikely that Quincy will face a tougher opponent than Archbishop Williams.

The Bishops rapped out 10 hits and senior Kiley O'Donnell pitched an impressive four-hitter to defeat the Presidents, 11-0 in a non-league game at Mitchell/McCoy Field Monday afternoon.

"They are an excellent team," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers whose club fell to 11-6 with the defeat. "They put the bat on the ball and their pitcher was excellent."

O'Donnell struck out 10 and walked just one. After Quincy threatened in the first when Saxon Bresnahan doubled and Angelina Avitabile drew a walk, O'Donnell only allowed four base runners over the final six innings. She threw hard, mixed in a few changeups, and was right on the corners of the plate all day.

"She knew what she was doing. She did a good job moving the ball around," said Sommers.

Quincy native Katryna Veasey, a sophomore shortstop, led the Bishops' attack with three hits, a grand slam home run and eight RBI. Williams scored three in the second, three in the fifth and five in the sixth.

QUINCY THIRD BASEMAN Bethany Walker catches a pop-up in the infield to retire an Archbishop Williams batter. The Presidents bowed to the Bishops Monday, 11-0, at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

Bresnahan had a good day at the plate for Quincy with a single and a double.

QUINCY CATCHER Angelina Avitabile also made a fine defensive play in the fith inning grabbing a low foul popup for the Presidents. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

The double was a shot to right center and the single was a hard ground ball into left. She has been a powerful hitter out of the No. 3 slot for the Presidents all year.

"She hit the ball hard," said Sommers. "She played a lot of softball growing up and has developed into a good hitter. She's worked hard at it. We'd like to work on getting runners on base in front of her when she comes up."

Sophomore Nicole Jorgensen added a single, and Leann McColgan drilled a double for the Presidents. Jorgensen hit well in the tournament for the Presidents last year, and McColgan has been dependable at the plate, especially in clutch situations, for Quincy all season.

"With the tournament coming up, it's nice to see both of them getting good at-bats. This is the time of year when it's good to be hitting your stride at the plate," said Sommers.

Junior catcher Angelina Avitabile, who has been excellent on defense all season, was quick and sure moving out from behind the plate to grab a popup that had little height to it in fifth. Bresnahan made a fine play on a hot shot back to the mound by O'Donnell for the final out of the seventh.

"Angelina knows how to play the position. She's done a good job for us all season," said Sommers.

Quincy has qualified for the post-season for the sixth straight season. The final week, beginning with Archbishop Williams, is important for the Presidents who would like to get a home game in the opening round

"We'd like to finish strong. The pairings should be out Tuesday and we'll probably open up Thursday," said Sommers.

In other action last week, Dana Varmahmoodi had two hits and a pair of doubles to lead the Presidents to a 7-4 Patriot League Keenan Division win over Duxbury.

Kelsey Tucker and freshman Danielle Parry split the pitching duties. Tucker was excellent over the first four innings and Parry pitched the final three to earn the victory.

Quincy meets North Quincy Friday night at 3:30 p.m.

Homecoming A Hit For AWHS's Katryna Veasey

By BILL GRIFFIN

For most of the cloudy, showery afternoon, it looked like a Quincy City Softball All Star Game.

There was a distinct Quincy flavor to Archbishop Williams' 11-0 non-league win over the Presidents at Mitchell/McCoy Field Monday afternoon. Five of Williams' starters are from Quincy and one of them, sophomore shortstop Katryna Veasey, had the game of her lifetime.

Veasey had three hits, a grand slam home run and drove in eight runs in the victory for the Bishops. There is a strong connection between Veasey and many of the players on the Quincy High team. They played together in youth leagues and on traveling squads. They are good friends. It made a wonderful afternoon just a bit more special.

"Any time we play against Quincy, it's a big deal for the players from Quincy on our team," said Veasey. "It makes us more motivated. I know a lot of the girls on the Quincy team personally which makes a day like today especially exciting. It's the best day I've had playing softball."

It certainly was. Veasey had the barrel of the bat on the ball all afternoon. In the third she drilled a two-run double. In the fifth, she laced a two-run single. In the sixth, she caught up with a fastball with the bases loaded and drove it over the left field fence for a grand slam.

"My first gland slam in high school," she smiled. "Sometimes I'm nervous at the plate and I swing at pitches I shouldn't. I felt calmer today. It was one of those days when everything felt right. I had faced the Quincy pitcher before and I knew what to expect."

Veasey is more than just a dangerous hitter.

"She is a vacuum cleaner at shortstop. She's also had some big RBI for us," said coach Bill O'Brien whose team went to 11-8 with the win.

Veasey had plenty of help from her friends from Quincy. Senior Molly Meehan had a double and made an excellent running catch in right of a sinking liner near the foul line. Her sister Katie, a freshman, had a single, a walk and scored twice out of the cleanup slot.

"Molly is a four-year starter, and she is the best tracking outfielder that I have," said O'Brien. "Katie has hit the ball well for us. She produced some big hits which is why we have her batting cleanup."

Leftfielder Kailin Bell had a walk, a single, a run scored, and made a terrific catch at full speed ranging close to the foul line. Second baseman Julie Bloomer snared a line drive and made a nice play on a popup.

"Julie is four-year starter and she's been a defensive ace for us," said O'Brien. "Kailin is a sophomore, a two year starter, and she can play any of the three outfield positions."

Lauren Carter is a sixth Quincy native on the squad. She hasn't played regularly this year, but O'Brien is looking for good things from her for the future.

"It's Lauren's first year as a full-time varsity player," said O'Brien. "She got caught in a numbers game this season. We have good depth in the outfield. She'll see a lot of action for us next year."

Five starters. One reserve. The sophomore shortstop had a game she will always remember. Not a bad day for the Quincy players from Archbishop Williams. Not a bad day at all.

Keohane Funeral Home Donating Free Vegetable Seedlings

Free vegetable seedlings are being distributed today (Thursday) through May 30th to volunteers who agree to raise them and donate the produce to Interfaith Social Services' food pantry or the Weymouth Food Pantry.

When you plant your garden this spring consider planting a little extra for your hungry neighbors. Keohane Funeral Home, Interfaith Social Services, and the Weymouth Food Pantry are kicking off the fourth annual Harvest Helpers program by distributing free vegetable seedlings to area residents. Between May 22nd and May 30th, free seedlings will be available to anyone willing to raise them and then donate the produce to either pantry once harvested.

"These two food pantries feed thousands of South Shore residents every year," said John Keohane, funeral home co-president. "Everyone here at Keohane wanted to do something to help. So we planted a vegetable garden at our location in Quincy three years ago and we started this seedling giveaway. This year we're adding a garden in Weymouth as well. Each year more and more people are participating. It's great to see fresh, healthy produce going to those who need it the most."

Interfaith Social Services operates a variety of programs designed to help the community. Each year their food pantry serves over 18,000 local residents. "Our food pantry wants to do more than feed our clients, we want to nourish them with healthy food," said Interfaith Social Services' executive director Rick Doane. "It doesn't matter to us if the vegetables from Harvest Helpers go to Interfaith's food pantry in Quincy, the Weymouth Food Pantry, or any other emergency food program. The important thing is that fresh local produce is being donated to feed our hungry neighbors who live right here on the South Shore."

The National Garden Writers Association estimates there are 84 million backyard gardeners in the United States. "We're hoping the Harvest Helpers program will inspire backyard gardeners living here on the South Shore to mobilize around this issue and provide hungry area residents with locally grown food," adds Cas Casados, director of the Weymouth Food Pantry which provides food to 350-600 families each month. "Hunger is a community issue and this is an opportunity to get involved in a way that's fun for the whole family."

To receive free seedlings, stop by either food pantry now through May 30th. Interfaith Social Services' food pantry is located at 105 Adams St. in Quincy and seedling pick-ups are from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. weekdays.

Seedlings at Weymouth Food Pantry, located at 1189 Commercial St. in Weymouth, are ready for pick-up between 8 a.m. to noon Tuesday through Friday.

Seedlings will also be available at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St. in Quincy and the McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, 809 Main St. in Weymouth from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. until May 30th.

If you don't have the room to grow a garden at your home or apartment you can help by volunteering to help tend the Interfaith Social Services' Food Pantry garden or the new garden Keohane Funeral Services is planting for the Weymouth Food Pantry at their South Weymouth location.

You can also make a donation to support the Harvest Helpers Food Program at www.interfaithsocialservices.org or www.weymouthfoodpantry.org.

To volunteer, or for more information, contact Rick Doane at 617-773-6203, rdoane@interfaithsocialservices.org; Joe Reardon, 617-773-3551, joe@keohane.com; or Cas Casados at 781-331-7682, cas@weymouthfoodpantry.org.

Kids' Walk To Cure Diabetes May 31 At Beechwood Knoll School

The third annual JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes will be held Saturday, May 31.

The 3K walk will kick off at 10 a.m. from the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School and wrap up approximately 45 minutes later with family fun including healthy snacks, a DJ, dancing and face painting.

Walkers should arrive at the school prior to the walk by 9:30 a.m.

The Walk is a partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation and many Quincy Public School students, friends, and family.

The money raised will go toward funding for research, treatments, and eventually a cure for Type 1 Diabetes, a disease that affects more than 18 million Americans, with 15,000 children diagnosed each year. JDRF spends more on research from its fundraising than any other nonprofit, with 80% of monies raised going directly to research and development, and just 20% to administrative costs. JDRF is also the largest organization that funds Type 1 Diabetes research in the world.

One of the fundraising tools is the sale of "Quincy Strong" T-shirts and Quincy walk bracelets.

The bracelets can be purchased at many of the walk participating schools including: Beechwood Knoll Elementary, Bernazzani Elementary, Merrymount Elementary, Montclair Elementary, Lincoln-Hancock Elementary, Squantum Elementary, Parker Elementary, Sterling Middle School, Central Middle School and Atlantic Middle School.

For more information about the walk or sales of fundraising items contact walk committee members Stephen and Jennifer Golden at 617-786-8738.

Recreation Department Summer Clinics, Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department announces the Summer Schedule and Registration Information for the "Sports and More 2014."

Recreation Director Barry Welch said the highly anticipated summer school vacation programs are of great value to local residents and by utilizing the great wealth of local leadership and taking advantage of Quincy's outstanding municipal facilities, the department can offer a myriad of programs at an affordable price.

"Due to the clinics and workshops ever growing popularity, we are excited to announce once again this year that there will be three ways to require to register," Welch said.

• The brochure has a registration form, which will be mailed back to the Recreation Department.

• Online registration is underway at www.QuincyRec.com and will continue throughout the summer as long as openings exist. Instruction on how to register online can be found at www.QuincyRec.com.

• Walk in registration for any remaining space begins on Monday, June 2nd at 9 a.m. and continues throughout the summer.

For additional information visit the Recreation Department's website www.QuincyRec.com or call the Recreation Office at 617-376-1394.

Welch in announcing this schedule said that the growth of these low cost programs is a tribute to the directors and staff who provide the finest quality of skill development in an atmosphere of fun.

The schedule, age requirements, and program offerings are listed on this page on the right:

according to the NHTSA website—which in turn decreases the probability of death or serious injury following a crash by up to fifty percent. Also involved with the initiative is the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security (EOPSS)/ Highway Safety Division (HSD), the Massachusetts State Police Department, and local police and school officials who hope to promote Massachusetts' zero tolerance seat belt policy.

State Police Sergeant William Robertson of the Traffic Programs Section has been helping with the demonstrations for roughly six years and said since the inception of seat belt initiatives which began in the 80s, compliance has increased from 11 percent to roughly 50 percent nationally. "We're actually doing better in the state," he said.

Since Massachusetts enforces secondary safety belt laws, drivers can't be pulled over strictly for seat belt noncompliance. Robertson said he and his department rely on nabbing distracted drivers as they either text or talk on the phone, and then issue the driver or passenger citations for being unrestrained. "Next time you're driving, look around," he said. "Everyone is on their phone. They're texting, they're reading... how can you drive and do that? You can't."

The Border to Border program, which began Monday and places troops along Massachusetts state borders with dedicated patrols in the evening from 7 to 11 p.m., catches drivers for various offenses, sometimes resulting in safety belt citations, hopefully promoting and encouraging safety belt usage.

According to materials distributed by the EOPSS, unrestrained driving in 2006 resulted in 216 fatalities, thousands of incapacitating injures, and billions in economic costs paid for by citizens.

"Six cars a day, someone is getting ejected," said Robertson. "Most of them, thank god, they don't die; they don't even get injured but they do come out of the car."

"A lot of times people get ejected in the middle of the street and they may still be alive," he said while noting that this increases the probability of other drivers striking the ejected person, causing further accidents. "During this time of year for the teenagers it's kind of important because they've got prom and their graduation and with everything going through their mind they forget to just put their seat belt on...I hate to see those accidents after graduation and prom; the kid didn't put his seat belt on. He did nothing else wrong."

Sharon Hambarian, 58

A funeral Mass for Sharon Hambarian, 58, of Rockland and formerly Abington and Quincy was celebrated Monday at St. Bridget's Church, Abington.

Ms. Hambarian died May 15 in Brigham & Women's Hospital, Boston, after a brave battle with cancer.

Born in Boston and raised in Quincy, she was the beloved daughter of Leona (Dresselaers) Hambarian of Rockland and the late John Hambarian. Ms. Hambarian was a longtime resident of Abington and a graduate of Abington High School. She moved to Rockland 13 years ago.

She had worked several years for Rockland Trust before becoming a claims processor at NHIC for the past 23 years. She was also a familiar face waitressing many years at Ted's Place in Whitman.

She enjoyed her Zumba classes and loved to travel, returning many times to her favorite spot, the island of St. Martin. Ms. Hambarian made friends where ever she was, and will be remember by those who loved her for her

Fore River Replacement Bridge Project Begins Third Shift

A third shift has been added to the Fore River Bridge replacement project running from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m., putting the project into 24-hour operation for several weeks.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, a third shift is required install the micro-piles associated with the foundations of the Quincy approach to the new bridge. To ensure that these micro-piles can be installed without impacting commuting traffic, work will take place overnight and work crews associated with the installation will be off the road by 4:30 a.m.

As has been noted for this project to date, certain critical aspects of the bridge replacement require 24-hour operation. It is anticipated that the current third shift will last until approximately June 7.

Throughout the installation of the micro-piles, noise monitoring will be in effect to ensure that night-time noise levels are not exceeded. A noise blocking curtain will be in place throughout the micro-pile installation process. No other work is scheduled for the third shift and as such, noise levels will be below what abutters experience during the first and second shifts in accordance with the project's noise control plan. Motorists moving through the area during the overnight hours may experience lane restrictions but the bridge will remain open to traffic. Further, no deliveries will be scheduled during the third shift and no additional trucks are required for the installation of micro-piles.

For any immediate questions or concerns regarding third shift or any other construction activities at the Fore River Bridge site, please call 617-504-2924. This telephone number is operated by a member of the White-Skanska design/build team and is live at all times when construction activities are underway. All comments and questions are logged and reviewed weekly by MassDOT.

Motorists are reminded that during this phase of construction, bridge openings associated with the passage of ships and maintenance of the temporary span will continue as normal.

Replacement of the Fore River Bridge is taking place under the Commonwealth's historic Accelerated Bridge Program, an eight-year, $3 billion effort to repair or replace structurally deficient bridges across Massachusetts.

For more information about this job, contact Trish Foley MassDOT Legislative Liaison at trish.foley@state.ma.us or 857-368-8907. More information about the Fore River Bridge Replacement Project can be found at www.mass.gov/massdot/foreriverbridge.

5 Quincy Elected Officials Endorse Avellone

"For the last 15 months, Joe's dedication to Quincy and Norfolk County has never ceased to impress me," McDermott said. "He takes every opportunity given to him to talk to the citizens of this Commonwealth about their quality of life and what he can do to give back.

"As Democrats, we need to make sure we can beat Charlie Baker in the fall, and Joe is without question our only chance. His pragmatic approach to solving our issues is the type of leadership that we need in our next governor and I am proud to support him wholeheartedly."

"I am proud to endorse Joe Avellone to be our next Governor. We need someone like Joe in the Corner Office," added Gillis, a World War II Veteran, who served as Quincy's city clerk for 33 years before being elected as county commissioner in 1992.

"What attracted me to Joe's candidacy is his pragmatic solutions to our real problems and the fact that he understands veterans issues having been in the U.S. Navy Reserves. Joe is the only candidate in this race that can go head-to-head with Charlie Baker and come out on top. As governor, he is going to be a great partner to Norfolk County."

The three city officials cited Avellone's tenure as a selectmen in Wellesley, his private sector experience, and his platform on education for their endorsements.

"As a former selectman, Joe understands the issues that happen on a local level," Coughlin said. "His background and experience creating jobs is what is needed in our Commonwealth. He is the right man for the right time and I am proud to support him."

"Joe is on the forefront of the issues facing Quincy," Gutro added. "He is the only candidate who has created thousands of jobs and lowered health care costs, and his plan for an Office of Recovery is exactly what is needed to combat our substance abuse problems."

"As a member of the Quincy School Committee, I want our next Governor to focus on education," DiBona said. "Joe's plan to close the achievement gap in our poor performing schools shows me his dedication to the children of this Commonwealth. We will be in good hands with Joe as governor."

In addition to Avellone the Democratic field for governor includes two current statewide office holders – Attorney General Martha Coakley and Treasurer Steve Grossman – and two former staffers who worked under President Barack Obama – Don Berwick, the former administrator of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services and Juliette Kayyem, a former assistant secretary in the Department of Homeland Security. A sixth candidate, state Sen. Dan Wolf of Harwich, withdrew from the race previously.

McMahon, McGolgan Lead Quincy Softball Past North Quincy

By BILL GRIFFIN

Junior Sam McMahon pitched six innings of outstanding relief and Leann McColgan led the offense with a pair of hits to lead Quincy to an 8-1 win over North Quincy in a Patriot League softball game Thursday night at Mitchell-McCoy Field.

McMahon allowed five hits and struck out two. She moved the ball well around the strike zone and pitched with poise to earn the victory,.

"Sam isn't overpowering, but her control was excellent," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers. "She let them put the ball in play and her defense played excellent behind her. It was great to see her get her first win."

Angela McDonald was the defensive star of the game with six assists and a putout at third base.

"Angela was outstanding. She is an excellent third baseman. She almost ran through the fence trying to get the final out of the game," said Sommers.

McColgan had a single, double, and scored twice for the Presidents.

"We have her in the No. 5 spot in the order because she has hit well all year. She's had a good season, and she had a good night against North," said Sommers.

Along with playing fine defense, McDonald had a single, a run scored and an RBI for the Presidents. Dana Varmahmoodi had a double and scored a pair of runs for Quincy. Emma Kelly also scored a pair of runs.

Senior captain Madison Hally had three hits, a walk, and scored a run for North. Catcher Sarah Franklin had a single and an RBI for the Red Raiders.

North and Quincy meet in a rematch at Mitchell McCoy Friday at 3:30 p.m.

Theresa Barbadoro Honored By Mass. Lawyers Weekely

Theresa Barbadoro of Quincy, an associate at Baker, Braverman & Barbadoro P.C., was recently honored by Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly at its Excellence in the Law event banquet at the Fairmont Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston.

Barbadoro, along with 24 "up and coming" attorneys in the greater Boston area, was recognized for their outstanding accomplishments in the legal community.

"As a partner at the Firm, we're proud of any of our attorneys, particularly the younger ones, who receive this kind of accolade. As the father of the attorney who received this honor, I'm beyond ecstatic and proud to call my daughter a colleague," said Paul Barbadoro, a partner at Baker, Braverman & Barbadoro, P.C.

Kathy Kelly of First Trade Union Bank recommended Barbadoro for her work with the bank's clients. The firm has worked with Kelly on commercial lending transactions over the past six years.

"I really enjoy how organized Theresa is and I know that I can count on her every time," Kelly said.

Dean Rizzo, president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, also recommended Barbadoro for the award.

As an honoree, Barbadoro received a trophy from Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly's Editor- in-Chief Susan Bocamazo.

"This is quite an honor on several counts. First, having a client recognize your work and then being honored among your peers in the legal community. My thanks to Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly for including me among the extremely talented lawyers also recognized as up-and-comers in our community," said Theresa Barbadoro.

A graduate, magna cum laude, from The College of William and Mary in Virginia, Barbadoro received her law degree, magna cum laude, from The American University, Washington College of Law where she received the Gillette-Mussey Scholarship for Excellence in Legal Education and was selected to the American University Law Review and the Order of the Coif.

Barbadoro advises clients in all areas of corporate law, including, asset purchases, contract negotiation, commercial finance, secured transactions, mergers and acquisitions and joint ventures. She also counsels clients on corporate compliance and intellectual property matters.

She lives in Quincy with her husband Munil Koppanati.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There's nothing an Aries Lamb likes less than having to tackle a humdrum task. But finding a creative way to do it can make all the difference. A more exciting time awaits you this weekend.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Finishing up a job on time leaves you free to enjoy your weekend without any Taurean guilt pangs. A romantic attitude from an unlikely source could take you by surprise.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Moving in a new career direction might be seen by some as risky. But if you have both the confidence to see it through and the facts to back you up, it could prove rewarding.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Holding back on a decision might be difficult, considering how long you've waited for this opportunity. But until you're able to resolve all doubts, it could be the wiser course to take.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) You still need to move carefully where financial matters are concerned. Better for the Lion to move slowly than pounce on a "promising" prospect that doesn't keep its promises.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A rejection of an idea you believe in can be upsetting. But don't let it discourage you. Get yourself back on track and use what you've learned from the experience to try again.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The early part of the week could find you looking to balance your priorities between your family obligations and your career responsibilities. Pressures begin to ease by week's end.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An associate's problem could cause unavoidable delays in moving ahead with your joint venture. If so, use the time to look into another project you had previously set aside.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Although a financial problem could be very close to being resolved in your favor, it's still a good idea to avoid unnecessary spending for at least a little while longer.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Support for some unwelcome workplace decisions begins to show up, and continues to build, so that by week's end, the gregarious Goat is as popular as ever.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Congratulations. Deciding to attend a social function you might have earlier tried to avoid could turn out to be one of the best decisions you've made in a long time.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Getting into a new situation could prove to be a more difficult experience than you expected. Don't hesitate to ask for advice in coping with some of the more irksome challenges.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your strong sense of duty makes you a valued and trusted member of your community. Have you considered a career in law enforcement?

Quincy Kiwanis Club Hosts Pancake Breakfast

KIWANIS CLUB of Quincy recently hosted a pancake breakfast at 1000 Southern Artery. Proceeds from the event will help support the Club's mission of serving children and other needy individuals in the city. Among the Kiwanians taking part were (from left) Tina Tuggle, Maralin Manning and Kathleen Giannandrea-Whalen. Also lending a hand at the event were members from Quincy After School Care and other local students. School Budget Would Rise $3,638,558 Over FY'14

Spending Plan Calls For 37 New Positions • Public Hearing Set For June 4

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Public Schools' FY 2015 proposed budget of $97,306,723 would increase $3,638,558 over the 2014 budget and would create the equivalent of 37 new, full-time academic and non-academic support positions.

Further discussion was set for Wednesday night's School Committee meeting.

A public hearing on the proposed spending plan will be held June 4.

The funding for Quincy Public Schools' budget is coming from two sources: Mayor Thomas Koch's appropriation of $94,106,723 – an increase of 3.23 percent over FY 2014 – and projected circuit breaker funding of $3,200,000 with an increase of $690,000 over FY 2014, according to a presentation given by School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro and QPS Director of Business Affairs James Mullaney at the May 21 school committee meeting.

The budget calls for the addition of one psychological staff member to address growing student needs and special education state requirements. An increase of two members of the information technology department will assist school sites and restore technology instruction in middle schools.

Two English Language Learner (ELL) teachers will join QPS because of Quincy's rapidly growing English Second Language (ESL) population in addition to one English Language Arts teacher.

Three part-time literacy teachers will be hired at the Bernazzani, Atherton Hough, and Beechwood Knoll elementary schools to ensure that each QPS school and site is adequately staffed and that student needs are met. "That will certainly meet the needs of the students at those buildings," said DeCristofaro.

The foreign language department will add one part-time and two full-time staff members in a bid to restore French instruction for eighth-graders.

A decrease of two academic classroom teachers at the elementary level will occur due to the anticipated reduction of two classrooms because of changes in open enrollment policies and staff shifts. This decrease does not conflict with school committee guidelines according to DeCristofaro. "We shift, we increase, we decrease to come up with a budget that's the very, very best," he said, noting that the reduction in force is widely considered minimal.

The number of full-time kindergarten aides will be increased by 10 staff members, allowing for an aide to be in each classroom throughout the school day. The addition of ten special education aides will address a FY 2014 staff deficit and will satisfy statewide requirements. Two special education teachers will also be added in 2015. This will assist in lightening the load of current staff who face upcoming kindergarten student assessments such as ELL, developmental reading, and kindergarten entry testing.

The QPS music program will see improvements with an increase of $2,500 for musical instrument repairs, an additional $5,000 for the purchase of musical instruments, and the hiring of one, full-time instrumental music teacher. "Most of our [music] teachers do multiple, various buildings and this will allow us to service more of our students in the instrumental program; a tremendously successful program," he said.

In subsidized support, one member of custodial staff will be added at a cost of $35,000.

In total, additional staff increases will add a total of $1,675,500 to the FY 2015 proposed budget.

Non-academic expenses include an increase of $8,000 for student furniture, a $275,000 increase in special education transportation to address special student situations and state requirements, and a decrease of $85,000 for the purchase of new transportation vehicles. An estimated 554 students will use school transportation with 125 paying a $200 bus fee, bringing in a projected total of $25,000 over FY 2015. Students receiving free and reduced lunch or who reach the $400 family cap will be exempted from paying for transport. One large bus and two mini-busses will be purchased.

The athletic department will continue to be funded by three major sources; gate receipts, user fees, and an operating budget. FY 2015 calls for 75 percent—or $769,827—of costs to be taken from the QPS budget with an additional $250,000 coming from a revolving account. Athletic user fees will not increase in the upcoming fiscal year.

Lunch at the elementary and middle school levels will see a price increase of five cents. Lunch for elementary school students will cost $2.25 and lunch for middle school students will cost $2.50. School lunch rates are set by the school committee but the minimum cost is established by the National School Lunch Program and use of the funds is limited strictly to school lunch programs.

An increase in funding for testing, data collection, and reporting will total $20,000; something beneficial since the advent of Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers (PARCC) testing according to committee member Anne Mahoney. "I think that's a good use of our budgetary items," she said. "That's a big change in our system and we really didn't hear from the teachers. I know we don't get the results back in regards to the field test but any information we could get and share to be knowledgable about how the testing went…it's just important."

Funding for professional development will see a decrease of $13,000.

Due to the high number of retirements this year, less retirements are anticipated for next year. As such, longevity and sick time funding for retired teachers will be decreased by $73,000.

DeCristofaro said the process of determining a school budget begins by identifying areas of consideration by his leadership team working with school principals, academic classroom teachers, and academic program staff. "We're making sure we have the very best quality class size possible," he said.

"We're building a budget; not reducing a budget… this is really a look of where we were and where we are and where we think we should be."

Late Delivery Slows New School Windows

City 'Regrouping' With School Building Authority

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The installation of new windows at North Quincy High School and the Wollaston and Merrymount elementary schools is behind schedule and over budget despite following Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) protocol according to a presentation given by Walter MacDonald of the Building Department at last Wednesday's meeting of the School Committee.

In total, the replacements are over budget by $652,820. This amount will not be eligible for the MSBA reimbursement rate of 69.74 percent established at the start of the project.

North Quincy High alone is over by $430,000. Wollaston Elementary is over budget by $87,200, and Merrymount Elementary by $135,620.

"We're regrouping with the MSBA, with the architect, and the project manager and we're going to value engineer this project. Under no circumstances will we sacrifice quality on anything related to this project," said MacDonald, who attributed the miscalculated totals to an addendum being placed on the bid, and incorrectly calculated price estimates established by architects hired by the city and the project manager and commissioning agent assigned by the MSBA.

He said late delivery was a habitual problem with window manufacturing companies because many schools throughout the country are dealing with the same manufacturers and are submitting their Statements of Interest (SOIs) at the same time. "They promise you dates and they don't fulfill them," he said.

"The lead time on the windows is substantial. It's 14, could be 16 weeks, and when we get approved into the system with MSBA it doesn't give us much time to place an order for win-

'Every Moment We Live In Freedom We Owe To Vets'

Army Major Jason Oberton's Memorial Day Message At Mount Wollaston Cemetery Ceremony

By KRIS KALABOKAS

America is free and remains free because of the service and sacrifice of veterans, decorated U.S. Army veteran Jason Oberton said in his keynote address Monday at the annual Memorial Day observance at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

"As the famous quote reads, 'All Gave Some, Some Gave All.' We remember the service members that paid the ultimate sacrifice on battlefields throughout the world, but also those that are no longer with us. Every moment we live in freedom we owe to them," Maj. Oberton told the crowd gathered at the cemetery near the World War II Memorial following the city's annual Memorial Day Parade.

Born in Boston, Oberton currently resides in Quincy with his wife and children and served three tours in Iraq and Afghanistan in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, Operation Iraqi Freedom, and Operation New Dawn where he held the positions of Platoon Leader, Task Force Operations Officer, Battalion Support Operations Officer, and Battalion Executive Officer.

He recalled attending Quincy's Memorial Day ceremony as a child. "I look out at this crowd and remember standing in a very similar one while growing up," he said. "It feels like yesterday, even though I just celebrated my 19th year of service last month."

Oberton's Decorations include two Bronze Star Medals, two Meritorious Service Medals, the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, the Army Good Conduct Medal, the National Defense Service Medal, the Afghanistan Campaign Medal, the Iraq Campaign Medal, the Global War on Terrorism Expeditionary and Service Medals, the Army Service Ribbon, two Overseas Service Ribbons, the Armed Forces Reserve Medal, the Combat Action Badge, and the Army National Guard Recruiter Badge.

He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Military Academy, Officer Candidate School Class 65 and was commissioned in June 1998 in the Army National Guard following three years of enlisted service.

U.S. Army Major Jason Oberton, a Quincy resident, was the keynote speaker at Monday's Memorial Day ceremony held at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. "We remember the service members that paid the ultimate sacrifice on battlefields throughout the world, but also those that are no longer with us. Every moment we live in freedom we owe to them," Maj. Oberton told the crowd gathered at the cemetery near the World War II Memorial. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Memorial Day, originally called Decoration Day, arose from the ashes of the Civil War, he said. "Following the Civil War, at least 620,000 Americans—both Union and Confederate—had been killed. In those dark times, it was the families that were honoring their dead that began to bring the light of reconciliation."

He described how Memorial Day was thought to have started with families informally decorating the graves of soldiers with flowers and wreathes—hoping that others would do the same for their loved ones lost far from home— leading to the first official observance of Memorial Day in Waterloo, NY on May 5, 1866, and eventually becoming a federal holiday in 1887.

"I find it fitting that we should also honor our police officers, firemen, EMTs, and many others," he said, extending his gratitude to the families of those serving as well. He requested that those with friends and family members in the military raise their hands so they could be acknowledged for their sacrifice. "We know you have lived through difficult times and have a tougher job back home while our loved ones are gone," he said. "Thank you for your commitment to those service members and our nation. It is your love and support to us that serves as a beacon for us to focus on when we are so far away from home."

Service members come from all walks of life and all share several fundamental qualities; loyalty, respect, personal courage, pride, honor, selflessness, dedication to duty, and integrity said Oberton. "Millions of Americans have fought and died on these battlefields to defend our freedoms and way of life. Today as I speak, our troops continue to make the ultimate sacrifices…due to injuries and effects of war." He called these troops "men and women built for others," not knowing what their future holds during combat but still stepping forward and following the footsteps of previous generations.

He reminded spectators that nobody asks to leave the comfort of their homes to fight violent battles in distant countries. Many could not avoid being drafted and

Stansbury Steps Down As Veterans Services Director

By SCOTT JACKSON

Tom Stansbury has retired as the city's director of veterans services after more than five years in the position.

Stansbury became the veterans services director on March 9, 2009. He replaced Henry Bradley, who spent nearly 20 years in the position. Bradley has returned to the department as acting director until a permanent department head is appointed.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said Tuesday there is no timetable for the appointment of a new full-time director but it should take place in the near future. Under Massachusetts law, the new department head is required to be a veteran.

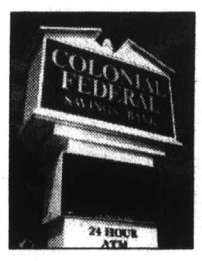
A better way to get money from your house



A good idea … from Colonial Federal Savings Bank

You have a house with lots of equity. Good cash flow. Investments you don't want to touch right now. And you have something you want money for. What's the best way to get it? How about a 15-Year refinance from Colonial Federal? With fixed monthlypayments, it's more predictable than an adjustable-rate home equity line. Way less expensive than credit cards. And you'll have it all paid off in 15 short years… quicker if you make extra payments along the way. Would a 15-Year refinance be good for you? Call Angela Blanchard, VP/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

DIGITAL WIDEBAND

Whether it is an oversized cocktail ring featuring a huge colored gemstone, a wrist adorned with a cascade of shimmering bracelets, or the latest in chandelier earrings, women are constantly searching for the piece(s) of jewelry that will set them apart from the crowd. The pieces that are currently garnering the most attention in this category of eye-catching bling are bold, diamond-encrusted rings with wide bands. How wide are they? They are so wide that they can take up the entire space between the knuckles and first finger joint (or the proximal phalanx, for those with medical degrees). Whether the sides are convex, concave, or straight-sided, these rings sport plenty of gold, platinum, and diamonds.

When customizing a wide band ring to complement your personal taste, consider which precious metal and which gemstones are perfect for you. Another way to achieve a wide band design is to blend a variety of interchangeable rings that can be stacked to create a sparkling and colorful fashion statement. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find an amazing selection of unique rings, watches and earrings. many felt the need to be part of something bigger than themselves. These people were and are "ordinary people," and are our friends and neighbors who selflessly defend our homeland for the future freedoms of their children, grandchildren, and beyond he said.

While the fallen have been recognized for their bravery or have had their names engraved on monuments, "nothing can replace the hole left behind by a fallen service member," said Oberton. "No number of medals and ribbons can comfort the ones left behind."

He quoted Abraham Lincoln who said, "I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom."

In closing, he asked that the the fallen not be forgotten. This, he said, can be done by teaching children what the American flag stands for and why we remove our hats when we are in its presence. "God bless you and your families, God bless our troops and God bless the United States of America," he said.

Mayor Thomas Koch thanked the crowd for attending and said their presence was much appreciated by the men and women currently serving in uniform. He praised the city for its treatment of its veterans who always rise to the call of duty. "We continue to be proud as a city as we serve our veterans," he said. "We have a great tradition here in Quincy where the veteran has always responded to our nation's call."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, chairperson of the City Council's Veterans' Committee, urged Quincy residents to be proud of the veterans in their families, remembering her two grandfathers who served in WWII, and to not forget why we celebrate Memorial Day.

"Let us all remember the true meaning of this holiday," she said. "To humbly reflect on the memory of those who have sacrificed their lives for our country's freedom and security," Hughes said.

Robert Mullen, who served in the Army for 10 years doing three tours in Iraq, was visibly moved by the address and said he attended the event in honor of those who lost their lives.

"I think it's important to remember the people that served," he said. "It's hard to hear some of it. It's good to remember the troops."

Oberton said being asked to commemorate the memory of soldiers that have been lost to war and being able to speak to the people of Quincy was "an honor," and that he never thought as an 18-year-old private going into the Army that he would be speaking at such a solemn event.

• On June 14, 1789, English Capt. William Bligh and 18 others, cast adrift from the HMS Bounty in a mutiny seven weeks before, reach Timor in the East Indies after traveling nearly 4,000 miles in a small, open boat. Bligh would fall prey to a total of three mutinies in his career.

• On June 13, 1895, Emile Levassor drives a Panhard et Levassor across the finish line in Paris to win the world's first automobile race, completing the 732-mile course in 49 hours -- an average of 15 mph. His car was powered by a two-cylinder, 750 rpm, four-horsepower Daimler Phoenix engine.

• On June 15, 1904, more than 1,000 people taking a pleasure trip on New York City's East River are drowned or burned to death when a fire sweeps through the boat. The onboard fire hose did not work, and life preservers had been filled with a weighty, non-buoyant material that sank.

• On June 10, 1935, two recovering alcoholics, one a New York broker and the other an Ohio physician, found Alcoholics Anonymous (A.A.), a 12-step rehabilitation program. Today there are more than 80,000 local groups in the United States.

• On June 9, 1973, Secretariat wins the Belmont Stakes to become the first Triple Crown winner since Citation in 1948. Secretariat's heart was later found to weigh 22 pounds, more than twice that of a typical thoroughbred.

• On June 11, 1989, in the wake of the Tiananmen Square massacre on June 4, China issues a warrant for Fang Lizhi, a leading Chinese dissident, who had taken refuge in the U.S. embassy in Beijing. The diplomatic standoff lasted for a year before Fang and his wife, Li Shuxian, were given free passage out of the country.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1936 postcard showing the art nouveau styled Alhambra Theater that was at 1373 Hancock Street in Quincy Square. The 800-seat theater was built in 1917 by Quincy businessman and state Sen. Henry Kincaide who also built the Capitol Theater at the other end of the Square. Originally opened for vaudeville and burlesque, the Alhambra soon became a movie theater operated by Fred Murphy who also ran the Stand Theater on Chestnut Street as advertised on this marquee. Also in this building on the right side was the Alhambra Candy Shop and on the left Heffernan's Shoe Store. In 1945 the Alhambra's name was changed to the Art Theater which continued to operate here until it closed in 1961. The building on the left was the Norfolk County Trust Company. This site on Hancock Street is now a driveway to the Stop & Shop office building and home to the Della Chiesa Family Memorial Plaza. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Expect $308,000 In Hurricane Relief Aid

The city expects to receive $308,053 during the first half of June as part of the federal and state reimbursement for damage caused by Hurricane Gloria last fall. But it will be very likely beyond the September 27 anniversary of the storm before all of the money is reimbursed.

Principal Planner Richard Meade said there was $645,000 in total damage from the storm.

"We anticipate all of the work to be completed by September or earlier," said Meade.

FUNDS MAY HELP RENEW KINCAIDE SITE

A portion of the more than $2 million the city received after the sale of 200 Newport Ave could be used to revitalize the site of the former Kincaide Furniture company destroyed by a recent five-alarm fire.

The money has to be used for community development purposes said Arthur Foley, administrative assistant to Mayor Francis X. McCauley.

Future plans for the site were discussed at a meeting attended by Foley, some Quincy Square merchants, Planning Director James Lydon and Principal Planner Kevin Shea.

HEALTH COMMISSIONER PETITION ON GOVERNOR'S DESK

A home rule petition dropping the requirement of an MD degree for Quincy's health commissioner is expected to be signed by Governor Michael Dukakis.

The city council voted unanimously Jan. 21 to approve the home rule petition introduced by McCauley after he had difficulty finding a medical doctor to take the job for a salary of over $40,000 that the city was offering.

An Alternative To Grades 4-8 At New Sterling School

I was surprised to read a month or so ago that Quincy Public Schools has decided that when constructing the new Sterling Middle School the grade arrangement could change from its current 5-8 model to a new 4-8 model.

After reading this I was determined to attend a school committee meeting to hear further discussion on the topic. I attended the May 7 school committee meeting where I heard little discussion about the 4th-8th grade Sterling Middle School configuration. One only School committee member spoke up to voice the concern a lot of parents and parents to be have in regards to the new Sterling Middle School configuration.

I currently reside in the district of the Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School and Sterling Middle School. If and when this new Sterling Middle School is constructed my 4th grader would be going to a "middle school." The school committee says that the 4th and 5th graders will be kept separate from the middle school students. The 4th and 5th grade would have different starting times from the middle school student, among other items.

Though these plans sound effective it's only a matter of time before these separation methods become relaxed. After a time, the separate entrances will be reduced to one to save money or for security reasons having just one entrance will be safer. The elementary students will be grouped with middle school students during specialist periods because the specialist teachers at the school will not be able to work from the start and ending times of both the elementary and middle school grades.

This all brings up another point. Why is the district administration spending so much time informing the school committee about how they are going to keep the 4th and 5th graders from the middle schoolers? The reason why is because the administration knows as well as I do that these two groups should not be mixed. Another question to ask is why would parents want to send their children to go to a school where they are being separated from other students in the school and how will our children feel about being separated?

In the school committee meeting the superintendent said that on May 13 he would be meeting with the Massachusetts School Building Authority and informing them that Quincy Public Schools would be interested in putting in for either a 5-8 or 4-8 Sterling Middle School. It was at that time that the superintendent also informed School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney that once he put in the grade sequences to the MSBA the Quincy Public Schools would be locked into one of the two sequences.

All of this was done without notifying residents that reside in the Lincoln-Hancock/Sterling district. The only notification I received about the school district's plans was what was published in The Quincy Sun. At the school committee meeting Vice Chair Kathryn Hubley stated the head of the Lincoln-Hancock PTO had done a great job of reaching out. Reaching out to whom exactly I don't know. She certainly hasn't reached out to me.

Right now I am against a 4-8 Sterling Middle School. There is no "plan" in place for how the school is going to function. Will the 4th and 5th graders run on a middle school schedule? Currently the 5th graders at Point Webster and Sterling do run on a middle school schedule and I can say with first hand observation the 5th graders are not ready to run on a middle school schedule so how can the 4th graders be ready?

I think the residents who live in the Lincoln-Hancock/Sterling district of Quincy should be notified by mail about what is going on with the Sterling Middle School sequence. The school district should hold a public meeting where residents can attend and ask questions about the district's plans for the physical structure of the building as well as how the school will function. If a grade 4-8 school is found to be the best decision for the students in this district then I think it should be considered that the school not be called Sterling Middle School. Rather, it should be changed to Sterling School.

Also at the meeting the superintendent said to committeewoman Mahoney that the reason he was putting in for the 4-8 and 5-8 grade structures was because he hadn't been given any other viable alternatives. One alternative I have in mind would be to move the middle school to the Lincoln-Hancock School and construct a new elementary school that would be large enough to house students in K-5.

JFK Library Honors Two Broad Meadows Students

Michaela O'Gara-Pratt, Caroline Bloomer Recognized For Volunteer Service

Two local students were among 100 middle school students from across Massachusetts honored recently with the John F. Kennedy Make a Difference Award at a ceremony held at the JFK Presidential Library and Museum in recognition of the volunteer work the students have performed in their communities.

Among the recipients are two students from Quincy's Broad Meadows Middle School: grade 7 student Michaela O'Gara-Pratt and grade 8 student Caroline Bloomer. Presenting the awards were JFK Library Director Tom Putnam and State Treasurer Steve Grossman.

Michaela was honored for her research into the first people of the land now known as Quincy. Michaela is leading classmates in extensive before school research into the 3500 year old indigenous people's artifacts recently discovered in Quincy in 1999 at Caddy Park. She has organized meetings with experts to interpret and possibly display in Quincy those artifacts or replicas of those artifacts.

Michaela and classmates have met with Mayor Thomas Koch, State Archeologist Ellen Berkland, sachem of the Massachuset Tribe Feather on the Moon, Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, former Plimoth Plantation teacher and Native American Annawon Weedon, Quincy Historical Society Director Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, the Quincy School Committee, the Quincy Park Department Board and others.

Michaela proposes signage at the Caddy Park artifact site as well as signage in and around the Broad Meadows marsh (once called Passanageset Knoll) to educate the public about the people who lived there before first contact with Europeans.

For example, in the early 1600s the Sachem of the first people of Quincy was Chickatawbut. Chickatawbut had one of his seats at Passanageset Knoll. After a plague devastated Chickatawbut's people, he moved his surviving people to Moswetuset Hummock. It is likely that for hundreds of years before that, the Massachusetts Tribe lived at Passanageset Knoll. For more information, contact Michaela and The History Girls at passanageset@gmail.com

Caroline Bloomer, grade 8 Broad Meadows Middle School student, was honored for her after school global humanitarian work over the past four years. Four years ago, Caroline joined her sister Julie at after school meetings of the Broad Meadows global service project known as Operation Day's Work-USA. Over the past four years, Caroline and other members of ODWUSA-BMMS have voted to form partnerships with outstanding international charities to create and deliver education, healthcare, safety and hope to vulnerable, poor children in Nepal, India, Zimbabwe and Kenya.

Under Caroline's leadership, ODWUSA members successfully funded aid to poor children by partnering with GoodWeave (featured on CNN), The Kenyan School House Project and The American Foundation for Children Affected by Aids. As a result, hundreds of vulnerable, at-risk children, mostly girls, have had the chance to go to school, many for the first time ever. Caroline organized the community to launch several fundraisers including several community Yard Sales.

Operation Day's Work was co-founded 16 years ago by students of the Broad Meadows Middle School. Caroline also led her school's drive to raise funds for victims of the typhoon which decimated much of the Philippines. Caroline's empathy and action have earned her a 2014 JFK Award. The John F. Kennedy Make a Difference Award is given annually to students nominated by a principal or a teacher for an outstanding contribution they have made to their school, neighborhood, city or global community.

"President Kennedy believed that every person can make a difference. His wife Jackie Kennedy added, 'And all of us should try,'" said Library Director Tom Putnam. "These students are an inspiring example of JFK's timeless call to service."

The John F. Kennedy Make a Difference Award program s sponsored by the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum.

Many parents, friends and other family members, teachers and principals attended the awards ceremony.

'Ship Breaking At Nut Island' Illustrated Presentation June 3

The Thomas Crane Library and the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program are offering a two-part program on "Ship Breaking at Nut Island (1885-1903).

Patti Williams and Peter Sault will give an illustrated presentation Tuesday, June 3 at the library at 7 p.m. On Saturday, June 7 they will lead a walk (up a steep hill) to Nut Island beginning at 10:30 a.m. at the Houghs Neck Public Landing parking lot on Sea Street at Bayview Avenue.

There will be an optional pay your own way lunch at Louis with the tour guides following the walk.

Between 1885 and 1903, 18 steamships were broken up at Nut Island in Houghs Neck to recycle their iron, copper and other metal. In Houghs Neck many were recycled into cottages. Today, homeowners may find tongue-in-groove sheathing and large timbers from these ships incorporated into their homes.

Participants will learn about the ships, the ship-breaking process and see photos of some of the cottages made from parts of these ships.

For more information and rain date rescheduling of walk, call 617-472-0799.

Kids' Walk To Cure Diabetes Saturday At Beechwood Knoll School

The third annual JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes will be held Saturday, May 31.

The 3K walk will kick off at 10 a.m. from the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School and wrap up approximately 45 minutes later with family fun including healthy snacks, a DJ, dancing and face painting.

Walkers should arrive at the school prior to the walk by 9:30 a.m.

The Walk is a partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation and many Quincy Public School students, friends, and family.

The money raised will go toward funding for research, treatments, and eventually a cure for Type 1 Diabetes, a disease that affects more than 18 million Americans, with 15,000 children diagnosed each year. JDRF spends more on research from its fundraising than any other nonprofit, with 80% of monies raised going directly to research and development, and just 20% to administrative costs. JDRF is also the largest organization that funds Type 1 Diabetes research in the world.

One of the fundraising tools is the sale of "Quincy Strong" T-shirts and Quincy walk bracelets.

The bracelets can be purchased at many of the participating walk schools including: Beechwood Knoll Elementary, Bernazzani Elementary, Merrymount Elementary, Montclair Elementary, Lincoln-Hancock Elementary, Squantum Elementary, Parker Elementary, Sterling Middle School, Central Middle School and Atlantic Middle School.

For more information about the walk or sales of fundraising items contact walk committee members Stephen and Jennifer Golden at 617-786-8738.

Quincy Girl Scouts Honored By City Council

By SCOTT JACKSON

Twenty-one Girl Scouts received commendations from the City Council recently for receiving one of the organization's three highest awards.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest presented the commendations to recipients of the Girl Scouts' Gold, Silver, and Bronze Awards.

Lindsay Schrier received the Gold Award for organizing the 'Find Your Voice' initiative at Quincy High School. She founded a model United Nations club at the school; the club has been able to attend a conference on the UN at Harvard University and attended a session at UN headquarters in Manhattan.

"Your project is an outstanding example of a scout who sets goals and achieves them to the benefit of the whole community," Laforest told Schrier.

Schrier is only the third Girl Scout from Quincy to receive the Gold Award, which is the equivalent of the Boy Scouts' Eagle Award. She explained that she founded the model UN club after a field trip to see Harvard's model UN two years ago as a sophomore.

"I was really inspired by seeing all the students there and how educated they were about global issues," Schrier said. "I wanted the students at Quincy High School to also be advocates for change and aware of what was going on the world."

Quincy High's model UN club, which meets weekly on Mondays, has raised funds for girls' education in the developing world and has advocated for the passage of the Girls Count Act, a proposed bill in Congress that would make girls' education in the developing a priority of U.S. foreign policy.

Five recipients of the Silver Award received commendations. They included Shelby Maze, who received her Silver Award for the 'Cheer for Years' project, which aimed to teach younger girls about cheerleading; Margaret Powers and Brianna Cristiani for their 'Summer Story Hour' project, in which they travelled to free lunch sites over the summer to read to children and handed out library card applications; and Lucia Buzzell and Clare Doherty for their 'Getting Kids Active' project, a sports program for children at the YMCA's Germantown Neighborhood Center.

Commendations were also given to two groups of Girls Scouts for their Bronze Award project.

Aisling Manning, Alison Cahill, Denise O'Donovan, Gabi Popa, Julieanne Stones, Kasey O'Mahoney, Molly Cronin, Olivia Herman, Sarah Baker, and Alessandra and Serena Krejci-Papa, all members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 74125, each received a commendation. They received a Bronze Award for volunteering at, and collecting items for, the Quincy Animal Shelter.

Jessamine Bearchall, Amanda Powers, Jennifer Small, and Sabrina Soto, members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 74154, also received commendations. They received Bronze Awards for organizing and leading a troop of Daisy Scouts who didn't have a leader.

Zucchini Parmesan

Zucchini is such a versatile vegetable and one that can be sautéed, stuffed, fried and frittered-just about any way.

Today's recipe is for zucchini Parmesan and equally delicious-and for me it was the first time that I had prepared it this way.

ZUCCHINI PARMESAN

2 medium zucchini
1 large loaf of Italian or French bread
2-3 cups tomato sauce
Grated Parmesan cheese
Shredded mozzarella cheese

First blanch the zucchinis in hot water for a few minutes. When cooled, slice them long ways. Set aside.

Slice the bread slices at an angle. In a baking dish, add a little of the sauce. Then layer the slices of bread, a little sauce, then the zucchini, grated and mozzarella cheese, and top it with more of the two cheeses.

Bake in a 350-degree oven until cheese is melted-30-40 minutes.

Swedish Apple Pie

When I was reading today's recipe for Swedish apple pie, I wondered what the difference was from the usual apple pie. And the difference was it was made with a batter rather than a crust. Also the apples are diced, not sliced

For this pie, I used Granny Smith and a Courtland with good results, but any preferred apple will do.

SWEDISH APPLE PIE

6 apples, peeled and diced
1 cup flour
1 egg
1 stick melted butter
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Prepare the apples. Add a tablespoon of lemon juice and a half-teaspoon of salt to the apples and set aside.

In a bowl, put the melted butter, the egg, flour, sugar and vanilla and mix well.

Fill a cake pan ¾ full with the apples and then spread the batter over the apples. Bake for 30-40 minutes until top looks lightly browned. Cut when cooled.

Senior Self Defense At Kennedy Center

The Quincy Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit, in cooperation with the Quincy Council on Aging, will sponsor a free two night self defense program at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St. Quincy on Wednesday, June 11th and Thursday, June 12th from 6-9 p.m., for seniors, both male and female.

Attendance is required for both nights.

The training is progressive, advancing from one technique to the next. There is considerable physical interaction, however, participation in any event is optional. The purpose of the program is to teach citizens how to protect themselves using awareness skills and to be on guard for any potential threats.

Registration is required for this demonstration. To register, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

CPR For Seniors June 18

Ruth Jones, nurse educator for the Quincy Health Department will teach a CPR class for seniors at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy on Wednesday, June 18 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The certification includes Adult, Child and Infant CPR as well as AED. This is a great opportunity to learn these life saving skills. Certification cards will be provided for those completing the class. Registration is required as space is limited. To register please call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Tai Chi Class Tuesdays

The Quincy Council on Aging is offering a Tai Chi class at the Kennedy Center, 400 East Squantum St. Quincy, on Tuesdays at 10 am.

Tai Chi is a form of Chinese martial arts practiced for defense training and health benefits.

Tai Chi improves balance, general psychological health and has significant health benefits for older people.

Vince Jornales leads the weekly class.

For more information, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

State Senate Approves $36.38 Billion Budget

Keenan Secures $200,000 For Public Safety

The Massachusetts State Senate has passed a $36.38 billion state budget for fiscal year 2015. The spending plan, which passed by a vote of 39-1, continues the state's investment in education, public safety, and human services programs, through a balanced budget that does not rely on any increased taxes or fees.

State Senator John Keenan (D – Quincy) focused on securing significant increases in local aid for cities and towns. The Senate's final budget proposes significant increases to local aid, including increases to local school district funding for the third year in a row.

"As a former city councillor, I understand how critical local aid funding is for our communities," said Keenan. "One of the most important jobs we have as legislators is to deliver the funding and resources necessary for our cities and towns to protect, educate and provide essential services to residents."

Keenan secured $200,000 for public safety funding for the Norfolk and Plymouth district. Other amendments that Keenan supported and pressed for include an additional $10 million towards the Community Preservation Trust, a fund that provides matching grants to help cities and towns preserve open space and historic sites, affordable housing, and outdoor recreational facilities; and increased funding to "Disproportionate Share Hospitals" including Quincy Medical Center.

Other local programs supported through the Senate budget include funding for public libraries, and support to Elder Affairs and Council on Aging programs throughout the district. The Senate proposal would also increase Shannon Grant funding – relied upon by Quincy and other towns in the district for programs that combat youth violence – by $2.5 million above last year's funding.

For statewide initiatives, Keenan also successfully fought against cuts to a state Department of Developmental Services transportation program, which supports disabled persons by providing transportation services to medical appointments, job sites and day programs. Keenan's amendment restored funding to this program to match FY14 levels. Keenan also led the effort to increase funding for the Head Start Program, which supports children from birth to age five and their families in areas such as education, health, nutrition, family support and parent involvement.

The Senate budget also took significant steps towards supporting mental health and substance abuse services – a priority that the Quincy senator has championed as co-chair for the Joint Committee on Public Health. The Senate voted to allocate additional funding towards specialty courts and diversion programs that move substance abusers away from incarceration and towards treatment, and to invest an additional $10-million in community mental health resources.

The budget also adopted a bill that Keenan filed earlier this session to create and fund a certification and quality assurance program for sober housing, and an amendment to expand the capacity and scope of the prescription monitoring program, which allows healthcare providers to identify signs of risk for prescription drug addiction and abuse.

Keenan said the Senate "can be proud of this budget, which balances prudent financial decisions, with the basic responsibility of government to provide for a strong economy, support local leadership, and help citizens."

The Senate and House budget proposals will now go to a conference committee, which will reconcile the differences and send a final budget proposal to the Governor.

School Committee Tightens Athletic Eligibility Policy

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy School Committee voted 6-1 to tighten the athletic eligibility policy at its May 21st meeting.

The revised policy stipulates that in order for students to be eligible for school sports, a student may not have more than one failing grade in a core subject during the marking period prior to the start of their sports season.

School Committeeman Noel DiBona said he supported the policy change but voted against it because he wants the policy to take effect starting next school year.

"I suggested to the committee and my colleagues to make the policy change starting September first, the beginning of next fall so it would be a clean slate," DiBona said. "I 100 percent agree with not allowing a student athlete to fail more than one class. However, the timing was too late into the year.

"At the end of the day this is not fair for the kids. Therefore I have to vote no."

Under the revised policy, students must earn a total of 25 academic credits per semester. All incoming freshmen are eligible for fall sports despite their grades coming into high school.

Prior to the rewording, students could fail two core classes, only earning 20 credits while still being allowed to participate in team sports.

"I'm very strong with the fact that we're going for 20 credits to 25 credits. However, we were supposed to vote on this on April 9th and if we voted on it on April 9th it would have given every child athletic eligibility; an entire last grading period to bring up their grades," said DiBona.

Committee member Paul Bregoli, who also chairs the policy subcommittee, said that parents were "taken aback" by the old policy and that's why he originally brought it to the attention of the school board. He said that revising the policy would bring Quincy up to the academic standards of surrounding school systems. "This is not meant to be punitive," he said. "This is meant to be helpful for our student athletes."

"When I played…we had to pass everything."

According to DiBona, the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) rule of earning a minimum of 20 credits had been been in place since 1991 and had not been changed over the past 23 years.

He said he is worried that excluding kids from playing sports, in particular football, could shrink North Quincy High School's already small team. "Quincy has 76 returning players but North Quincy has only 47. North can't afford to lose any more players," he said.

While a student's grades can be brought up in summer school, some won't get the push to attend from their parents, he said. "Not every kid is going to get the direction from their parents that they're going to have to go to summer school.

"I'm worried about that sophmore, junior that doesn't play. They don't play that year, they don't end up playing ever again," he said. "Bottom line for me is keeping kids off the streets. I know for me…the motivation for me was sports."

QCA Coin Drive Supports Cystic Fibrosis Foundation

Raise $2,500

With the month May being Cystic Fibrosis Awareness month, Quincy Catholic Academy (QCA) recently sponsored a coin drive to benefit the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Students were asked to donate pennies, nickels, dimes, and quarters and raised $2,500.

Cystic Fibrosis is a life-threatening genetic disease that primarily affects the lungs and digestive system. An estimated 30,000 children and adults in the United States have CF (70,000 worldwide).

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation funds more CF research than any other organization, and nearly every CF drug available today was made possible because of Foundation support.

Based in Bethesda, Maryland, the Foundation also supports and accredits a national care network that has been recognized by the National Institutes of Health as a model of care for a chronic disease.

Community Service Celebration Honors Students

At the 17th Annual Community Service Learning Celebration held recently at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks, students from the Quincy Public Schools were recognized for their committment to their schools and the greater community.

Over the course of this school year, students raised funds for Quincy Track Club scholarships, Project Smile, the Make a Wish Foundation, Project Bread, and many other organizations. Students served as peer mentors, tutors, volunteered at food banks, and were a part of Cleaner Greener Quincy at sites all over the city.

Manet Community Health Receives $100,000 Grant

Awareness, Education, Screening Colorectal Cancer

The American Cancer Society today announced that a $100,000 grant has been awarded to Manet Community Health Center to provide awareness, education, and screening for colorectal cancers to individuals on the South Shore.

The grant is part of a $6.4 million gift from the Walgreens Way To Well Commitment program that engages Walgreens customers in supporting the American Cancer Society's Community Health Advocates implementing Nationwide Grants for Empowerment and Equity (CHANGE) program. Funding for the CHANGE grants comes from Walgreens customers nationwide, who choose to donate to the American Cancer Society as they pay for their purchases at checkout. The CHANGE grants help promote health equity and ensure that communities with a higher burden of cancer have equal access to education and screening resources.

"We are excited to receive this important grant because it will give us a great opportunity as a community to see what we can do to prevent colorectal cancer," said Ayotomide Oyelakin, MBChB, MPH, CPHQ, Director of Performance Improvement for Manet, who noted that Quincy's older adults (ages 60 and up) die of colorectal cancer at 6.2 times the federal Healthy People 2020 target rate.

"Colorectal cancer is the second-leading cause of cancer deaths in the United States - and one of the most preventable cancers - so we feel we can really make a difference in our patients' lives."

The grant, $50,000 a year over a two-year project period, will fuel efforts by the Manet Community Health Foundation to increase primary, preventive and wellness programs for Manet patients. The Foundation formed in 2013 with the transfer of charitable dollars from the Quincy Medical Center Estate and Foundation.

"Having such dedicated partners as Walgreens and the American Cancer Society gives us a powerful advantage in our efforts to promote health equity and break down barriers to care," said Joseph M. Reardon, president of the Manet Community Health Foundation.

Manet's expanded awareness campaign will reach out to patients via letters and phone calls, along with reminders at medical appointments, to encourage everyone 50 and above to get screened for colorectal cancer, preferably by having a colonoscopy.

In addition, Manet's certified, multi-lingual navigators will take the message out to the community, with information tables at libraries, career and community centers, malls, food pantries and various community events. Part of the grant also has been set aside to underwrite transportation vouchers for patients who might otherwise have difficulty getting to a screening appointment.

New School Windows Delayed

dows and have them come in on time. We want them to come in the summer and with these lead times it's almost impossible to meet," he said.

The ideal time to begin replacing the windows would be over the summer and April vacation while students are off campus according to MacDonald, however this may be impossible to complete in such a short time at North Quincy High School due to its large size in comparison to the elementary schools.

He said discussion has focused on restarting the process in the fall at the suggestion of the MSBA so windows could go out to bid for a price estimate and be in Quincy by either by January or February. These plans have not been finalized.

"You just get in line and we feel that's raising costs because we're beginning at the premium time and we have to work while school is in session or after hours," he said. "There's a huge cost associated with working after school vacation."

Mayor Thomas Koch, who opposes window repairs during class time, said he would rather rebid the project in the fall leading to a projected June 2015 implementation. "I don't want to get into a situation where we're interrupting things in the classroom," he said.

Money could be saved by using existing frames, lighter gauge screen materials, and sun screens according to MacDonald, however these cost saving measures won't alter the integrity of the windows themselves which he described as a "Cadillac quality" model.

"We don't want to skimp on quality to get something done on time," said committee member David McCarthy.

Koch said delaying the NQHS, Wollaston, and Merrymount projects would not delay anticipated window replacements at Parker Elementary and Lincoln-Hancock, provided they are approved by the MSBA in the first place. "That wouldn't happen," he said. "The other project will stand on its own...it does not have an impact on the other project."

Quincy officials adhered to MSBA protocol according to Koch, who said the current condition of the windows was not "an emergency situation" and that they are operating properly for the time being. "We followed the process they prescribed; it was their architect, it was their owner's rep, it was their rules," he said.

Quincy Public Schools will not suffer any monetary penalties due to the hold up according to MacDonald who said he hopes to ultimately have the windows manufactured and delivered by Sept. 1.

Mosquito Spraying Begins This Week

Nighttime spraying in the Norfolk County Mosquito Control District will begin this week, weather permitting.

Applications in Quincy will take place on Thursdays. Not all areas of the city will be entirely treated on a given night. Attempts will be made to treat as large an area as is deemed necessary and as weather permits.

The fogging operations will happen between sunset and midnight, only if mosquito populations warrant an application. In the event of inclement weather – such as high winds, rain, and low temperatures – or equipment failure, the application will be added to the next scheduled day.

The purpose of the spraying is to control the population of nuisance and virus-carrying adult mosquitos. The product being used is DUET applied in ultra-low volume (ULV) sprayers at an approximate rate of one half ounce per acre of finished spray. DUET breaks down rapidly in the environment and is expected to pose little risk to people when used at low concentrations for mosquito control, according to the EPA.

For more information, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project via telephone at 781-762-3681 or online at norfolkcountymosquito.org. Maps of the spraying area can be found online at the project's website. The planned spray zone for each night is usually posted around 3:30 p.m. that day.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday May 14, 2014, at approximately 11:38 p.m., Officers were dispatched to a house on Burns Avenue for a Breaking and Entering that just occurred.

QPD communications stated that there was also a possible break into a car in front of the house and the suspects were described as two tall males.

As Officer Steven Kelly drove down Charlesmount Avenue en route to the address, he asked a female walking her dog if she saw anyone suspicious. She said that she just saw two males walking fast northbound on Quincy Avenue. She added that, "They were not running but moving fast as if up to something."

Upon arrival at the address, Officer Kelly interviewed the victim, an elderly lady who was at her neighbor's house. He learned that the victim went to the neighbor's house as soon as she realized that the males were in her house. When they looked out the window awaiting the Police, they saw two males inside the victim's unlocked car parked in front of her house. The victim told the Officer that she was in her second floor bedroom when she heard her door bell ring about five times. She then heard what she believed to be two males walking and talking around her house. She left her bedroom and from the top of her stairs she saw two tall men walking up the inside steps. When she asked them what they were doing, the two males fled out the door.

Officer Kelly noted that the front and back doors were open and the side door was unlocked. Although there were many drawers and cabinets open, nothing appeared to be missing and there was no one inside the house. Officer Scott Smith arrived with his K-9 unit to begin a track. There was no sign of forced entry.

Numerous Officers searched the area for the suspects. Officer James Goldrick, who was working a road detail at McGrath Highway and Washington Street, notified Officer Parisi that he just saw two males carrying back packs headed North on Washington Street. He said that as soon as the two males spotted the parked police car, they made an abrupt 90 degree turn onto McGrath Highway.

Officer Parisi, joined by Officer Bruce Tait, located the two males on Spear Street. Officer Parisi exited his marked cruiser, greeted them and asked if he could talk to them. The two males stopped walking, turned toward the Officer and replied "Yah." The Officer informed both males that they were investigating a crime and asked them where they were coming from, where they were headed, the route they took, and if they had observed anyone fitting the description in the area. The Officers separated the males to see if their stories would match.

Officer Parisi spoke to one of the males, who appeared to be very nervous. He stated that they were coming from Tedeschi's (a store close by) and were headed home. When asked several times where they were prior to the store, he simply repeated, "Tedeschi's" and appeared to be searching for an answer. When asked for his ID, the male said he did not have one.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Parisi conducted a pat-frisk for weapons and felt a cell phone in each jacket pocket. As the Officer moved toward the male's right front pocket, the male began to turn his body away, but not before the Officer felt several shapes that were consistent with the shape of a driver's license. Believing that the male was intentionally trying to hide his identity, the Officer removed the items, which turned out to be 4 credit/debit cards. The male said he found a wallet on the ground in the area of Tedeschi's and kept the cards, adding that the student ID belonged to a friend. The Officer then found a pair of black night gloves in his rear pocket (the weather at this point in time was approximately 65 degrees), and 2 cell phones. When asked where he got the phone, the male said, "My friend put it in my hands and took off." Upon further questioning, the male could not identify his friend's true name or the reason why he gave him the phone. Officer Parisi informed the male suspect of his Miranda rights.

At this time, one of the phones began to ring, so Officer Parisi answered it. The man on the other end told the Officer his cell phone was just stolen and he was calling it to see if someone would answer it.

The caller told Officer Parisi that he was robbed about a half hour earlier at 1055 Southern Artery. The victim said that he lives in the apartment complex and left a friend's apartment in an adjacent building. As he was walking back to his building, he was attacked from behind by two males, who repeatedly punched him, leaving him briefly unconscious. When the victim regained consciousness a few minutes later (he believes) he made his way to his apartment and sought help from his roommates.

The victim and his roommates returned to the scene to look for his 2 cell phones, glasses and house keys, finding only the glasses and keys. His friends drove him to the Quincy Police station to report the crime. Stolen from the victim was approximately $250.00 in US currency, a large amount of Indian Rupees, a Dell Laptop, his passport, a work ID, 2 gold rings, 2 cell phones, his wallet and a small blue tri-fold case holding several pictures and credit cards. Most of these items were contained inside a black back pack.

Officer Parisi told the victim to go to Spear Street where the suspects were being held for the break-in offense. Officer Parisi examined the names on the credit card, which matched the name of the victim on the cell phone. The victim arrived on scene but told the Officers that he could not identify his attackers because they came up from behind him and he was left unconscious. The two male suspects were placed under arrest.

A more thorough search of the suspects revealed the following in his pockets; 2 gold rings, $130.00 in US currency, $1910 in Indian Rupees and a small blue tri fold picture holder containing several pictures. Inside the back pack was a Dell lap top computer, a passport from India in the victim's name with his picture on it and a photo ID from a private company with both his name and picture. The victim was also treated on scene by Fallon Ambulance for a swollen cheek but refused EMS treatment.

The two suspects, a 19 year old from Mattapan and a 20 year old homeless person, were charged with "Unarmed Robbery and Receiving stolen property." The Officers believed that the two suspects, who were tall, were the same two who broke into the elderly victim's home and car. The two incidents happened in close proximity and in the same time window. Detectives will continue the investigation. Nice Work!

PROTECT YOUR INTERNET PASSWORDS:

Here are a few principles for creating strong passwords and keeping them safe:

- The longer the password, the tougher it is to crack. Use at least 10 characters
- 12 are ideal for most home users.
- Mix letters, numbers, and special characters. Try to be unpredictable – don't use your name, birth date or common words.
- Don't use the same password for many accounts. If it's stolen from you – or from one of the companies with which you do business – it can be used to take over all your accounts.
- Don't share passwords on the phone, in texts or by email. Legitimate companies will not send you messages asking for your password. If you get such a message, it's probably a scam.
- Keep your passwords in a secure place, out of plain sight.
- Keep the passwords on a sheet of paper in a file that is saved to a disk. You can make changes to the disk as you change your passwords, but hackers won't have access.

QHS Students Volunteering At Blue Hills Clean-Up

Anne Comber from Friends of the Blue Hills recently met with Meg McMillen's 10th grade history class at Quincy High School to talk about the Civilian Conservation Corps or "Roosevelt's Tree Army."

Few people know that the CCC lived and worked in the Blue Hills from 1933 to 1937 and were instrumental in building two stone observation towers, miles of trails and many other features in the Reservation. The class was so intrigued by the history of the Blue Hills that they volunteered to help with the June 8th Green Up-A Day of Stewardship and Fun which takes place on Sunday, June 8, at Ponkapoag AMC Cabins.

Volunteers should park at Temple Beth David, 1060 Randolph St., in Canton. It is a short, scenic walk to the cabins. The event is rain or shine, and while some gloves will be available for weeding, volunteers are encouraged to bring their own gardening gloves if they have them. 'Chasing Ice' Film Screening, Discussion Tonight

"Chasing Ice" will be the featured film at a screening tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In the spring of 2005, acclaimed environmental photographer James Balog headed to the Arctic on a tricky assignment for National Geographic: to capture images to help tell the story of the Earth's changing climate. Even with a scientific upbringing, Balog had been a skeptic about climate change. But that first trip north opened his eyes to the biggest story in human history and sparked a challenge within him that would put his career and his very well-being at risk. Chasing Ice is the story of one man's mission to change the tide of history by gathering undeniable evidence of our changing planet.

This screening will be followed by a question and answer session with members of the Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary and the Quincy Climate Action Network.

It was directed by Jeff Orlowski and theatrically released in 2012. It is 80 minutes long.

This special screening is sponsored by Sustainable South Shore, MA Audubon, North and South Rivers Watershed Association, the South Shore Natural Science Center, and the Quincy Climate Action Network (Quincy CAN).

Other film screenings are:

- June 5, 7:00 p.m. - Gloria
- June 12, 6:30 p.m. - Her
- June 19, 7:00 p.m. - Veronica Mars
- June 26, 7:00 p.m. - The Monuments Men.

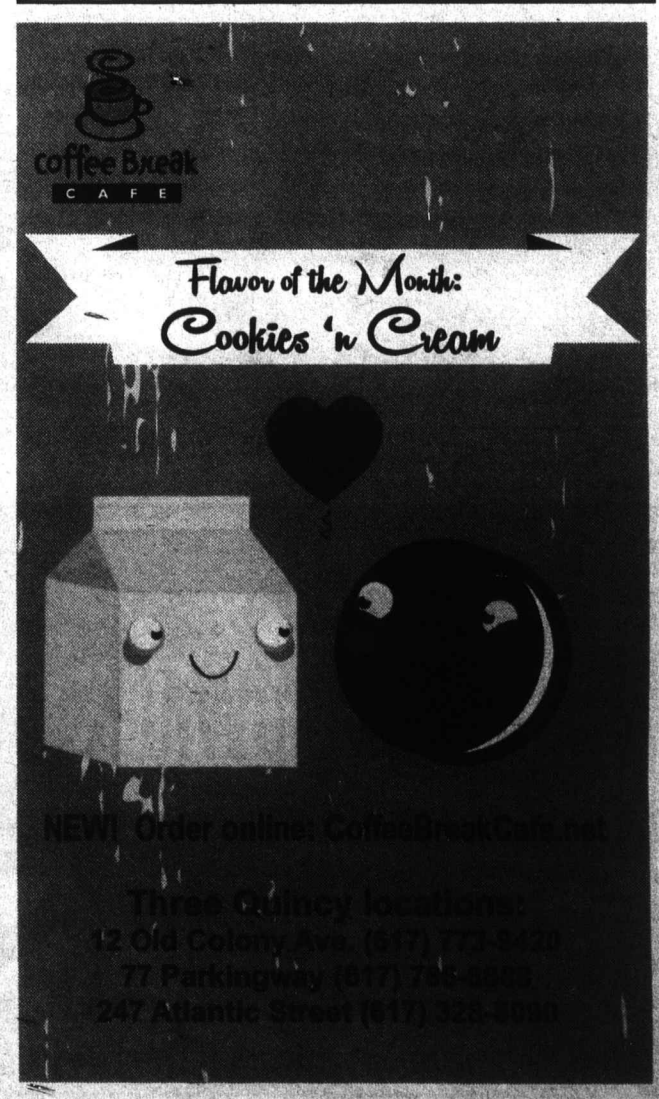
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
THE OTHER TYPE OF TOOTHBRUSH
While most people find it simple and easy enough to brush their teeth at least twice a day, some lack either the dexterity or discipline needed to floss daily. This is understandable considering the fact that it takes some time and effort to correctly loop the ends of the floss around the fingers and guide it gingerly between teeth. While there are some flossing products available that help with the process, not everyone gets the hang of them. If so, it should be pointed out that there are small, easy-to-use, pointed brushes known as "interdental brushes" that are nearly as effective as flossing. They not only remove bacterial buildup (plaque) between teeth, they also stimulate gums.
Our dental team is focused on superior care, personalized treatment and patient comfort. We are prepared to help you achieve the smile you have always wanted. Like other medical sciences, the dental profession is constantly changing. We stay informed about the latest techniques and scientific advances in dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we will gladly answer any questions about treatments and procedures. Call us at 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com
P.S. Interdental brushes not only lend themselves to cleaning hard-to-reach areas, but they also reach concavities on tooth surfaces that floss may not be able to reach.



Quincy-NQ Softball Showcases Best Of Rivalry

KELSEY TUCKER pitched six strong innings as the Quincy Presidents defeated the North Quincy Red Raiders 10-7 in the regular season finale for the teams last Friday at Mitchell/McCoy Stadium. Story on Page 18.

North Quincy Softball A Season To Remember

Support, Friendship, Teamwork More Important Than Record

The best of sports is not measured by wins and losses.

There is playing for the love of the game. There is the singular closeness of being a teammate. There is the satisfaction of a player looking back and knowing well that she gave her full effort and stayed with her team in difficult times. There is the joy of learning, teaching, improving, and making new friends.

And there are those bus rides. There are those bus rides of loud and noisy fun, of singing and dancing when jokes are told and bonds are formed which will hold true long after wins and losses have faded.

In many ways, it was the best of times, not the worst of times, for North Quincy's softball team and its captains, senior Lauren Gambon and junior Madison Hally. The Red Raiders did not win any games. However, there were victories. The victories were not shown on scoreboards in runs and hits. But there surely were victories.

"I think we all knew at the beginning of the season that we needed to put in a lot of work," said Hally. "We did and the improvement was amazing. When I think about the season, that's what I remember: How much we improved."

"Everyone stayed positive and close," said Gambon. "The attitude was great. We supported and cheered for each other. We enjoyed ourselves. I'll remember that we stayed together. We stayed together as a team. That's my best memory."

Gambon is a pitcher and a third baseman. She batted .320 and gave the Red Raiders a huge lift when she took over pitching full-time in the last half of the season. She is a two-year starter in softball and is also on the swim team. She will attend Framingham State in the fall and major in early childhood education.

"Lauren stuck with it," said coach Jim Connor. "She made us a better team when she pitched. She led by example and by the way she supported her teammates. Everything she did was friendly and positive."

Hally is a three-year starter at shortstop. She hit.305 and played crackerjack defense. She is a starting center for the hockey team and is a member of the National Honor Society.

"Maddy always has a smile on her face," said Connor. "She is an excellent shortstop. She could play short for anyone. Maddy was a big help with the underclassmen. She is such a sweet kid that she kept morale up while we all learned together."

From the beginning, it was clear that this would not be an easy ride for North. Turnout was down. Veterans did not return. There was little experience. Connor had to recruit players to fill out his lineup card. For several games, North had only nine players dressed. There was no room for injuries. It would have been easy to walk away. Gambon and Hally stayed with their team.

Pickleball Latest Recreation Sensation For Seniors

100 Attend Exhibition At Quincy Senior Olympics

By JOE REARDON

Move over lacrosse with your sticks, gloves and helmets - pickleball is the hottest new sport in the country and it's gaining momentum.

The sport that was founded on a lazy, summer afternoon day back in 1965 by Congressman Joel Pritchard and businessman Bill Bell in Bainbridge Island, WA, has swept across the United States and made its mark in Maine and New Hampshire, into the Merrimack Valley section of Massachusetts and on Cape Cod.

A cross between badminton, ping pong and tennis, pickleball got its name from Pritchard's dog "Pickles" who would chase after the ball while he was playing. The game made its first visit to the South Shore last Wednesday at the Kennedy Center. "Ambassadors" from the United States of America Pickleball Association (USAPA) put on a clinic for nearly 100 seniors in the center's gym.

New England Pickleball Ambassador Peter Sullivan pointed out to the seniors gathered that the game is far less stressful than tennis, while at the same time providing excellent exercise for those looking for an alternative to other activities. And all ages can play. He estimated that there are currently 175,000 people playing pickleball in the United States, two-thirds of which are senior citizens. There is a community in Florida, he pointed out, called The Villagers where there are are 140 pickleball courts.

"What's great about this game is that seniors can contest with their children, because it's a game where strategy overcomes power and that's why it's such a popular game," said Sullivan. "It's really popular among seniors because we have the time to play. It doesn't demand as much as tennis does on us. The serve is underhanded so there's no shoulder action."

The key to the game is mastering the serve because that's where the points are scored. The ball has holes in it, similar to a wiffleball, but far less bounce than a tennis ball and travels one-third of the speed. Tape marking the boundary lines can be put down on tennis courts both indoors and out.

Sullivan, who likens pickleball to "ping pong on steroids" said the clinics and word of mouth have helped spread the game's popularity and is confident the same will happen on the South Shore. "There in nowhere on the South Shore where they are playing pickleball," said Sullivan. "You have to go all the way to the Cape. Quincy and the South Shore are one of the last places where pickleball hasn't caught on yet. It's only a matter of time before people learn how to play the game and find places to play. It's the fastest growing game in the United States.

"We hope that Quincy will lead the way in providing a place where people can play pickleball," said Sullivan. "Nowhere are we playing on the South Shore until today."

Quincy Recreation Director Barry Welch said there will be a place for pickleball in the 33rd Senior Olympics and deemed the clinic a huge success. "It's a great turnout," said Welch. "It's one of the best turnouts we've had. Good people like him (Sullivan) go around and volunteer their time. It's our hope in the recreation department that the game catches on."

Fellow pickleball ambassador Camille Power was enormously surprised by the number of seniors who packed the gym for the clinic. More than an hour later several seniors were getting the feel for the game by working on their serves across the net.

"We are totally overwhelmed," said Power. "We thought maybe there'd be 10 people here. We can't believe the turnout. This is the best turnout yet. I wish we had all day to teach these people because they're so eager - they're catching on fabulously. I've taught people with no racket experience at all and all of a sudden they're hitting the ball and they're serving. It's not only the game it's the social part. - friends having a good time. They're very fortunate to have this venue. This is amazing. You guys in Quincy are amazing to have this."

Power continued to observe the seniors as they got used to the paddles and ball used in the game. "Just watching the people now, hitting the ball back and forth - they're having a blast," she said. "I think we got the word out. I think people like it."

Senior Games Accent Sportsmanship, Camaraderie

By JOE REARDON

Pam Sawyer has been on the go ever since her basketball days at North Quincy High so it's hardly a surprise that the fitness level she has maintained over the years - coupled with her overall athleticism - earned her a pair of medals in the recent 32nd Annual Quincy Senior Olympics.

Sawyer saw the opportunity to compete in a plethora of events and she took full advantage. She put on her game face and went to battle in bowling, basketball shooting, bowling, horse shoes, long jump, half-mile walk and the javelin in the popular competition. The two field events proved to be Sawyer's best this year as she leaped to a gold-medal performance in the long jump and clinched bronze in the javelin.

As proud as she was of her medal efforts, Sawyer was equally moved by the overall sportsmanship and camaraderie of her peers as they put their best foot forward working toward personal best performances. It's an offshoot of the games that stays with Sawyer and one she savors.

"The great part of all these events is the socialization, camaraderie and everyone getting together," said Sawyer. "It's just so great."

Sawyer, who also tap dances and frequently takes Zumba classes, was getting her first look at the ever-growing sport of pickleball Wednesday at the Kennedy Center where members of the national organization were putting on a clinic for a packed crowd in the center's gym. The game, which is best described as a cross between ping pong, tennis and badminton, is a new challenge Sawyer would like to take on when it becomes an event for the first time at the Senior Olympics.

"It's great," said Sawyer as she watched several Quincy seniors get a feel for the game, volleying the ball back and forth across the net. "I'm going to sign up for it definitely. It's something I'd like to do. It doesn't look too strenuous, but you still get a good workout back and forth. I think it's good for your balance and your dexterity - that sort of thing. I've heard of it being played a lot in Florida. I'm hoping this will spark interest locally because it's something I'd really like to do. I'm thrilled that they presented it. "

Sawyer believes it's time for pickle ball to take hold on the South Shore. "We need something new," she said. "All the other things have been done."

Retired Massachusetts State Police Officer George Mallett competed in several events this year and expects to add pickle ball to his events, which include the half-mile walk, one-mile walk, three-mile walk, shot put, discus, softball throw, javelin and golf putting.

Mallett, who was an avid tennis and handball player, sees pickleball presenting a new challenge apart from other sports. "This sport is a little different," he said. "The ball doesn't bounce the same way. It looks like fun. I'm going to sign up and have some fun this winter. I want to compete next year and be sure to find a partner with a good lefty swing."

Quincy's Mary Fitzpatrick didn't let a hip replacement deter her from competing in the Senior Olympics and she was as strong as ever in more than a couple of events. Fitzpatrick put together a solid walk in the half-mile event and was even better in the mile, where she sliced off two minutes from her best time.

Add Fitzpatrick to the list of athletes who will be in the pickleball competition in 2015.

"I'm definitely going to sign up for it.," said Fitzpatrick. "I knew it was somewhere between tennis, badminton and ping pong, but on a smaller scale. I went online and got an idea of what to expect. Reading about it and actually doing it are two different things. The hardest thing transitioning from tennis is that the ball doesn't bounce as high. You gotta get down and bend those knees."

Quincy's Jack Kelly has hip surgery coming up, but he didn't let his impending operation slow him from being a part of his eighth Senior Olympics. Kelly, who competed in track and field at Archbishop Williams, picked up gold medals outside the track events. Kelly was victorious in basketball shooting and bowling and is already looking ahead to next year's games. He knows, though, that some events will be harder than others.

SENIOR OLYMPIAN Becky Coburn competes in the 55-59 year-old competition for the horseshoe throw at Merrymount Park.

"You get to be a certain age and there are things you can do others you can't do," Kelly said.

Kelly took in the pickleball clinic from the sidelines and it took him no time at all to realize it was a sport he'd like to participate in.

"It looks like a fantastic thing to keep you in shape," he said. "You've got to be in shape to play this particular game. Everyone seemed to enjoy it. I haven't seen a crowd here like this in a long, long, long time. People seem really enthusiastic. I think this thing is going to take off really well.

"This is a game that is more or less made for seniors. I think it's great. We have friends who live in Florida who said that pickleball down there is just unbelievable. "I think it will take off. I really do. Look at the crowd now. No one is running out to leave."

Four Teams In Tourney Play

By SCOTT JACKSON

Four teams from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools earned spots in this year's spring sports tournaments, and will begin competing this week.

North Quincy high's boys volleyball squad opened its tournament Tuesday night at home against Braintree after The Sun went to press. The winner of Tuesday's contest will play either top seed Newton South (20-0) or nine seed Wellesley (11-7) in the Division 1 South semifinals at a date and time to be determined.

Quincy High's boys lacrosse team will play in the quarterfinals against the Clippers of Falmouth High School today (Thursday) at 5 p.m. in Falmouth. Falmouth went 13-5 on the regular season, earning a three seed in the tournament. The winner of today's contest will play June 3 at a site to be determined against either second seed Sandwich (12-7) or the winner of Wednesday's match between seven seed Apponequet (10-6) and 10 seed Whitman-Hanson (10-10).

The Presidents' baseball team will host Taunton at 2 p.m. on Saturday at Adams Field. The winner of Saturday's game will advance to the quarterfinals, where they will play either three seed Boston College High School (12-8) or 13 seed New Bedford (9-11). The date and time for the quarterfinal match is to be determined.

Quincy's softball team will host the Plymouth North Eagles today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. at Mitchell-McCoy Field in Quincy.

NQ Softball A Season To Remember

"I never thought about not playing," said Hally. "It's such a good feeling to be part of team, to have the chance to help others who have just started playing. I keep getting back to improvement. Seeing how much we improved individually and as a team is the biggest reward."

"It was the best softball season of my life," said Gambon. "My coach was fantastic. My teammates are like sisters. One thing I love to do is cheer. I did a lot of cheering this year."

North was unlike most varsity teams. They had not played with and against each other since youth league. There were fresh and different faces. Many were new to the team, new to softball. Players were making their softball debut on the varsity level.

There was the fine rush of making new friends with new teammates. There was also the need for the captains to lead and teach. Skills were raw. Basics needed to be taught. Hally and Gambon helped with the teaching and as they taught and encouraged, the friendships grew close and and strong.

"There was more teaching than for most captains, but I loved it. I learned too, from my coach and teammates. We were teachers and learners," smiled Hally. "We got closer as we improved ourselves. The difference in our play over the season was amazing."

"Because many of us were new to each other, I think we bonded more," said Gambon. "That's what made it such an enjoyable season. As a senior, I got the chance to make new friends, to play with kids I never played with before."

There is also playing for love of the game.

"What I like best about softball is that I can block out everything else," said Hally. "All I think about is what I have to do next. I enjoy that focus, that concentration."

"I like being part of a team and I love to compete. Softball gives me that chance," said Gambon.

And there were the bus rides. Every team since the first batter hit the first rock with the first stick remembers the bus rides.

"They are my best memory of the season," said Hally. "We drew on pictures of each other on Instagram. We sang and told jokes. We talked about the game. We didn't talk about it all the time, but we did talk about it."

"The bus rides to away games were a show," laughed Gambon. "There was a lot of noise. We danced and sang and had a great time. It's one of the best parts of being a teammate."

Some of the early losses came with ugly numbers. As the season moved along, the scores grew closer. It ended with their final Quincy game, a gray afternoon they will long remember. North led early, the Red Raiders were even in the fifth, and they rallied for four in the seventh.

The tying run came to the plate. They ran and they hit and they never quit. They laughed and they shouted to the skies. They jumped up and down, they cheered and rooted for each other. They were a team.

"They did it more for themselves," said Connor. "Younger kids from North will look at the way they played against Quincy and realize they can compete too."

"Improvement. That's what it was all about. We stayed together as a team, we helped each other and we got better," said Hally.

It is the stuff that goes beyond wins and losses. It is far more important. It always has been and it always will be.

Quincy Softball Wins Game, North Quincy Gains Respect

By BILL GRIFFIN

The Stadium was not packed on Thanksgiving. The gym was not bursting with fans for a basketball showdown in the tournament. The hockey rink wasn't shaking with noise for a Saturday night classic.

It was a cloudy and cool Friday afternoon at Mitchell-McCoy. The crowd was small, there was little anticipation and fewer expectations. Yet it was a day when Quincy and North Quincy played out the very best of their rivalry in a game of softball.

Winless North jumped to an early lead, played tournament-bound Quincy even through five innings and staged a stirring four-run rally in its final at-bat of the season which brought hope and the tying run to the plate.

Quincy richly deserved its 10-7 victory. Kelsey Tucker pitched six strong innings. Taylor Parry, Leann McColgan, and Rachel Papile highlighted an 11-hit attack which produced plenty of offense, but when it was over, there was great respect for the team from North Quincy which dressed only nine players, but played with effort and joy that far outweighed its numbers.

"This game is the pinnacle for us," said North coach Jim Connor. "We played with guts and effort. To compete against a good team like Quincy means something. To come back like we did means something. The kids may not realize it yet, but take it from someone who has coached six different sports, what we did today means something."

North led 2-0 after one and 3-2 in the fourth. Tucker settled into a groove at this point and Quincy scored two in the fourth, five in the fifth and two in the sixth for a 10-3 lead. Surely it was over. Surely North would go quietly. Surely a winless team would not care enough to come back from down seven runs with its last three outs of the season.

But this is North Quincy and Quincy. Kids care in packed stadiums, in crowded gyms and in sold-out hockey rinks. And they care on a softball field in May. North fought back, the bench rose up with noise, and the two rivals battled to a fine ending.

Sarah Franklin belted a double, Lauren Gambon singled. Lindsay Delaney laced a base hit to drive home two and cut it to 10-5. Rachel Dunphy brought home a run with a ground ball and Tristine Thong singled for another to cut it to 10-7. The Red Raiders had two on base. The tying run was at the plate. The place was alive with sound. The count went to 3-2.

Quincy reliever Sam McMahon put an end to it by striking out the final batter. Each side had something to celebrate. The Presidents had a win which brought them to 13-6 and could well have nailed down a home playoff game. North had a golden memory of a game well-played and the words of their coach who gave them an emotional appreciation of their effort in the post-game huddle.

"We stepped up and fought back. You can't ask for more," said Connor.

"It was a good win for us. I was happy with the way the girls came back and scored after being down early. Kelsey pitched well for a win in her senior-year game against North," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers. "But all credit to North and coach Connor. To stay in a game when you haven't won and you're that far behind is not easy. Their bench was loud. They stayed in the game until the last out."

Tucker was excellent for Quincy. She threw hard. She walked two and struck out eight in six innings of work. She battled out of early trouble and grew stronger as the game went on, retiring the last seven batters she faced.

"She had a good fastball and kept her poise after the early innings. She got better and better," said Sommers.

Papile had a pair of hits, a run scored and drilled a two-run single which highlighted the five-run fifth. McColgan stayed smoking hot with a double and a single. Parry had two hits, two RBI, scored a run and used her speed well on the bases.

"Taylor has done a great job getting on base all year," said Sommers. "Leann has hit well all year, but lately, she is really driving the ball. Rachel had the biggest hit of the game for us."

Nicole Jorgensen had a walk, single, an RBI and scored twice. Emma Kelly had a single and an RBI. Bethaney Walker singled and scored twice while Dana Varmahmoodi added a single and a run scored. Angela McDonald chipped in with two walks, a run scored and an RBI. Kate McGahey and Lucia Buzzell each scored a run for the Presidents.

"I liked our balance. I liked the way we swung the bats through our whole lineup," said Sommers.

For North, catcher Sarah Franklin had two doubles, a walk, an RBI, two runs scored, and played a terrific defensive game. Delaney had two hits, two RBI and two runs scored while Gambon and Nancy Aimola each had two hits, an RBI and a run scored.

Dunphy had a single, an RBI and a four-star defensive game at second base. She handled five chances cleanly, including a pair of hot smashes and a catch of a popup at full speed which saved a run in the first.

"Sarah is a complete player, a league all star and that's the way she played today," said Connor. "Rachel's defense has improved steadily all season."

Thong added a single and an RBI for the Red Raiders while Madison Hally had a single and played well at shortstop. Remy Aucoin walked and scored a run.

When it was over, there were smiles, songs and happy faces. There were nothing but winners. Quincy won the game. North won respect. And the rivalry won. The rivalry won big-time.

Quincy High placed four players on the Patriot League All Star softball team.

Bethaney Walker, Saxon Bresnahan, Taylor Parry and Angelina Avitabile made the squad.

Catcher Sarah Franklin of North Quincy was also selected to the all-star team.

OFF YOUR ROCKER

There seems to be no end to the number of products aimed at consumers that promise to make them slimmer and healthier and increase their fitness levels. Among these are shoes with "rocker" soles that feature highly curved soles that are designed to give wearers better posture and tighten muscles. However, a recent British study reveals that these shoes, with their thicker-than-normal soles, are no better at alleviating chronic lower-back pain than regular flat-soled athletic shoes. In fact, flat sneakers were found to be more effective than rockers for people whose lower-back pain was aggravated by walking or standing. Instead of relying on gimmicks, back-pain sufferers are encouraged to consult with a chiropractor, who is expert in such matters.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are interested in detecting, reducing, and preventing the source of your discomfort. By wearing the correct foot-ware you too can enjoy the benefits of walking, which does what most other sports can't do. It gives space to explore your whole self, body, mind and spirit. Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. So-called "toner shoes" can lead to a painful injury if worn for long periods or if wearers are not careful to watch their steps.

Four Local High School Seniors Honored As Scholar-Athletes

Two Quincy High and two North Quincy High seniors were recently honored as Patriot League Scholar-Athletes at a year-end ceremony held at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Both high schools compete interscholastically in the 10-team league comprised of eight other South Shore communities. Their selection represents the tremendous amount of dedication put forth by these student-athletes over their four years on and off the field.

For Quincy High, the male scholar-athlete is Elio Daci. The female recipient is Marlena Forrester. Daci is a member of the swimming and sailing teams, also serving as captain for both teams. He finished number two in his class and will attend Worcester Polytechnic Institute next year. He has plans to study aerospace engineering.

Forrester is a member of the cheerleading and swimming teams. She too served as captain for her teams. She finished number 12 in her class and will attend Providence College. She has plans to study elementary education.

Receiving female scholar-athlete honors for North Quincy is Carolyn Schwartz. Schwartz was captain of the girls' volleyball and sailing teams. She was selected to the Mass. Girls' Volleyball Coaches' Association All State Team and finishes her four years at North ranked number eight in her class. She will be attending Cornell University in the fall.

The male scholar-athlete for North Quincy High School is Vinny Tran. Tran was captain of the football team and recipient of the prestigious POSSE Foundation Scholarship, given to students with outstanding academic and leadership potential. He will be attending Hamilton College in the fall.

Quincy Bald Eagles Mass. Senior Games Hockey Champs

The annual Mass. Senior Hockey Games were held recently in Worcester. Six teams entered the 70's age division and the Quincy Bald Eagles were declared the winner.

Four teams had identical records of two wins and one loss. The deciding factor to declare a winner was the number of goals scored against. The Eagles edged out the Moby Dicks with eight goals while the Moby Dicks had nine. This was the first time in 18 years that the Moby Dicks lost the tournament.

The Bald Eagles lost their first game to the Rusty Blades (white) by a score of 5-3. They won their next two games with a 3-1 victory over the Rusty Blades (red) and a final victory of the Moby Dicks by a score of 4-2 – their first loss in tournament history.

For the Bald Eagles, goalie Bill Brady played two strong games making many outstanding saves in the final win. Bob Priestly led the Eagles with six goals. Other scorers were Ralph Gibbs, Pat Crowley and Joel McGrath.

Providing assists were Captain Fred Cashman, Josh Hunt, Dan Hoag, Phil Gibbs, Joel McGrath, Tom Gorman and Bob Priestly. The team was coached by Dick Lyons.

The Bald Eagles were sponsored by McKay's Restaurant and the Quincy Youth Arena.

Quincy Youth Softball Season Underway, Game Highlights

The Quincy Youth Softball season is underway with the first few weeks of the season already played in the Mary Pratt division which is for 13-15 year old girls.

The following is a brief summary of some game results:

Mary Pratt Division

Quincy Credit Union played Graeber Davis to open the season and won 12-1. In that game Mia Sapienza pitched a complete game with 10 strikeouts for Quincy Credit Union while also having two hits. Brielle O'Malley led the hit parade with 3 hits, Hannah Bell contributed with 2 hits bases loaded double knocking in 3 runs. Additionally Carolyn Schaaf, Journey Strouble, and Shauna Grehan all had hits. Strong defensive play by Kathleen Saverse, Meghan Greene, Jesse Caldwell, Carrie Hannon and Carly McMorrow helped in the win. Jordan Currie, Samantha Smith, Caroline Bloomer, Kailee Manton and Kelsey Dunn all played well for Graeber Davis.

In a tight game throughout Mansfield Nolan defeated Quincy Credit Union 12-9. Cam Burgio was strong on the mound for Mansfield pitching a complete game and added a walk and hit. Quincy Credit Union had no starting pitchers due to injuries but Meghan Greene and Jesse Caldwell both did a fine job on the mound filling in for their injured teammates. Lauren Saccoach, Sophia Baldino, Alana Sullivan, and Kelsey Dwyer led a strong hitting attack for Mansfield while Maeve Keane, Cassandra Davis, Kailee Susinetti, and Rachel Beck chipped in with some fine play in the field. For Quincy Credit Union Shauna Grehan had three hits, while Carrie Hannon, Hannah Bell, and Kathleen Saverse had two hits each. Good defensive play from Carly McMorrow, Carolyn Schaaf, Journey Strouble and Maria Theodore kept the game close throughout.

Wilson Demarini and Quincy Credit Union hooked up for a doubleheader and split the twin bill, with Wilson prevailing in game 1 in extra innings 11-9, while Quincy Credit Union won the second game 11-10. Both games went extra innings and pitchers Mia Sapienza and Brielle O'Malley for Quincy Credit Union and Shannon Foley and Shannon O'Brien all pitched well throughout the day. In game 1 Wilson was led by Shauna McGolgan's 2 run homer in game 1 to win it. Additionally, Katie Dormady, Kelly O'Connor and Shannon O'Brien all chipping in with multiple hits and Meghan Davis and Kelly O'Connor had triples.

Defensively Shannon Foley and Meghan Davis combined on four double plays. For Quincy Credit Union Mia Sapienzia and Meghan Greene homered, while Carrie Hannon, Hannah Bell, Kathleen Saverse, Shauna Grehan, and Ryley McCarron played stellar defense. In game two, Quincy Credit Union rallied to win it in extra innings. Caa Schaff, Journey Strouble, Carly McMorrow, and Hannah Bell led the hit parade with two hits each. Brielle O'Malley pitched and played a strong game in the infield, while Mia Sapienza and Jesse Caldwell had multiple hit games and played strong defense.

Wilson DeMarini team defeated State Senator Kennan team 21-12 last Friday thru five rainy innings. Shannon O'Brien was the winning pitcher with Shauna McColgan catching. Ashley Murphy, Natalie Chenette, Kelly O'Connor, Shannon Foley and Shannon O'Brien all contributing with multiple hits and Riley Driscoll, Oliva McDonnell and Shauna McColgan with hits as well.

Wilson DeMarini defeated Mansfield & Nolan 15-7. Shannon Foley pitched a solid game with Nicole Page and Olivia McDonnell both contributing behind the plate. Meghan Davis, Shannon O'Brien, Kelly O'Connor and Shauna McColgan kept the infield strong while executing several great plays. Hitting highlights for the game were Shannon O'Brien and Shannon Foley both having triples and singles from Nicole Page, Kayla Aherns. Kelly O'Connor had three single hits.

Quincy Credit Union defeated Senator John Keenan in a well played game 9-8. JoHanna Douglas pitched very well and had three hits for Keenan. Grace Dugan, Sarah Ainsley, and Roe Molina all played excellent in the field for Keenan and had multiple hits. Caa Schaaf had a hit and made the play of the game with a great catch of a deep fly ball for Quincy Credit Union. Kathleen Saverse knocked in two runs and played a good left field. Brielle O'Malley and Mia Sapienza combined for the win on the mound while Jesse Caldwell and Carrie Hannon both tripled knocking in 4 runs. Journey Strouble, Carly McMorrow, Shauna Grehan and Meghan Greene all had hits and Hannah Bell played well in the field.

NeighborWorks Mulligan Golf Tournament June 13

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will host its 15th Annual Mulligan Golf Tournament Friday June 13 at the Brookmeadow Country Club in Canton.

The daylong event will begin at 8:30 a.m. and feature 18 holes of golf plus dinner, poker, a silent auction and prizes. Proceeds benefit the Housing First collaborative between NeighborWorks Southern Mass. and Father Bill's Mainspring. Through the Housing First program, individuals and families in need of shelter are able to rent a safe, affordable home or apartment. Participants also receive job training, education and financial counseling.

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. Executive Director Robert Corley noted that the Mulligan Tournament takes its name from the golf term for a "do-over," or second chance.

The registration fee for the Mulligan Tournament is $125 per player and includes golf, use of a golf cart and a sit-down dinner. Tournament sponsorship opportunities are also available.

To register online or become a tournament sponsor, visit http://www.neighborhoodhousing.org/Events-Mulligan-Golf-Tournament.asp or call 617-770-2227 for more information.

First Time Homebuyers Class June 12

A first time homebuyers class will be held Thursday, June 12 from 6 to 8 p.m. in the cafeteria at 500 Victory Rd., Marina Bay, Quincy.

The class is open to the public, free of charge, and attendees will receive a coupon of up to $500 off closing costs.

Light refershments and food will be provided.

The seminar is being hosted by Sara Little of Red Door Real Estate, John Folino of Residential Mortgage Services, Patrick Sullivan of DeForce Law, and Anthony Lallis of Driscoll Insurance. They will focus on guiding consumers through the process of buying their first home.

"The class helps buyers to understand the entire process of purchasing a home, from making an offer, to obtaining a mortage loan, to closing and moving in to their new house," Little said. "As a real estate professional I enjoy walking new homebuyers through that process, starting with the important steps of searching for a home and making an offer."

Folino pointed out the importance of getting pre-approved.

"Understanding what you can afford as well as what you are comfortable spending are crucial pieces of information that will help any first-time homeowner," Folino said.

Those interested in attending the class should contact Patrick Sullivan at 774-219-2563 or Sara Little at 617-842-3411.

Robert P. "Bucky" Jordan, Sr.

A funeral Mass for Robert P. "Bucky" Jordan, Sr., of Quincy and formerly Dorchester was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Jordan died May 21, surrounded by his loving family.

He was a star quarterback at South Boston High School and had a lifelong love of football. He proudly served with the U.S. Navy during World War II on the USS Varuna and worked at Boston Edison as a troubleman for many years. He also helped found the Willis Penny Post in Dorchester.

What Mr. Jordan was most passionate about, however, was his family. Spending time with his family – whether at the cottage in Maine, celebrating special occasions or just singing to his grandchildren – was the delight of his life.

ROBERT P. JORDAN, SR.

Margaret Daniele, 88

A funeral service for Margaret "Peg" (Knight) Daniele, 88, of Quincy and formerly Weymouth, Pembroke, and Middleborough was held May 23 at C.C. Shepherd Funeral Home, Weymouth.

Mrs. Daniele died peacefully May 19.

She and her late husband Ed were married on July 25, 1947. They lived in South Weymouth, where Mrs. Daniele spent the early years of their life together raising her family. She would go on to work at the Tuft's Library, Suburban Propane, and Alvin Hollis. They later moved to Pembroke and eventually to Oak Point in Middleborough.

Mrs. Daniele enjoyed vacationing in Aruba and Florida with her family. She had a real sweet tooth in her later years, with turtles being her favorite candy. She loved her garden, loved to watch the hummingbirds, and enjoyed creating and painting Christmas crafts with her husband. After Mr. Daniele passed last year she moved into assisted living at the River Bay Club in Quincy in order to be closer to her daughter.

She was a devoted wife and mother.

Beloved wife of the late Ed, who died in April 2013. Loving mother of Paul Daniele and his wife Carolyn of Edgartown and FL and Janet Lewis of Quincy. Dear sister of Jeanette Lawler of Weymouth. Cherished grandmother of two, great-grandmother of seven, and great-great-grandmother of one.

She also leaves behind her special 'family' of caregivers: Jill, Lisa, Patty, Kristy, Nadia, Tina and Patricia. Mrs. Daniele's family wishes to thank and recognize these kind, caring and compassionate women not only for their caregiving but also for their friendship and support throughout the past year.

Memorial donations may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 30 Reservoir Park Dr., Rockland, MA 02370.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Try using that Aries charm to warm up the usual set of workplace naysayers, and then back it up with a solid block of facts and figures to sell your idea to your colleagues.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) While nothing can deter a determined Bovine from following a course you believe in, it helps to have some supporting data and statements by trusted colleagues to make your case.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Take advantage of new information that could help make your career transition easier. The weekend is a good time to re-establish relationships with people you haven't seen in a while.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Personal matters demand your attention as once-stable situations begin to shift. Quick action to shore things up is called for in order to avoid more problems down the line.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Although your financial picture begins to brighten, "thrift" and "caution" are still the watchwords for fiscally astute Leos and Leonas to live by. Expect news about a family matter.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Before you try to blame a colleague for a workplace problem, make sure you have the proof to back you up. Make some quiet inquiries on your own to try to solicit more information.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Trying to cheer up a depressed friend or downcast family member can be difficult. But keep at it, and your efforts should soon pay off in ways you might have never expected.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Taking a new look at an old and frequently recurring problem might lead you to consider making some surprising changes in the way you had been handling it up till now.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Despite what the naysayers might say, setting your sights on a new goal could be one of the smartest things the typically sagacious Sagittarian has done in a long time.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Rebuilding an unraveling relationship won't be easy. But you can do it, if you really want to. Just remember to keep the lines of communication open between the two of you.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new friendship could develop into a close relationship. Meanwhile, reassure an old friend who might be feeling neglected that he or she is still an important part of your life.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might be feeling that you're still in over your head as you continue trying to adjust to your new situation. But the pressures ease by week's end, giving you time to come up for air.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for sensing the feelings of others. You might consider a career in some aspect of counseling.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Reluctant Council OK's Flood Maps

Rejecting New Maps Would Make City Ineligible For FEMA Grants

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council Monday night unanimously approved new FEMA flood maps that will add 1,400 properties to flood plains, citing the negative effects rejecting the maps would bring.

The maps will come into effect June 9. In addition to the 1,400 properties being added to the flood plain, another 2,700 currently in flood plains will be re-mapped into higher risk zones. Property owners with federally backed mortgages are required to purchase flood insurance if their building is in a flood plain. The city has retained an engineering firm to appeal those maps; that appeal will be submitted June 10 and it could take up to six months for FEMA to respond.

Despite expressing concerns about the impact of the new maps, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest noted homeowners would no longer be eligible to receive subsidized flood insurance rates from the federal government if the council rejected the maps Monday night. That would affect both new policyholders and those with a policy in place already. In addition, the city and homeowners would lose out on any possible

Gutro, Palmucci Seek Downtown Audit

By SCOTT JACKSON

Two members of the City Council want a full accounting of money the city has spent to date to redevelop Quincy Center before any additional funds are spent.

Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the council's downtown and economic growth committee, and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, chairman of the council's oversight committee, introduced a resolution at Monday night's meeting. It asks city Auditor Susan O'Connor to compile an audit of expenses incurred by the city since negotiations over the land disposition agreement with developer Street-Works began through the end of the current fiscal year on June 30. Mayor Thomas Koch terminated the LDA with Street-Works in March after the firm failed to submit plans for redeveloping the area near the Ross Parking Garage.

"It's basically designed to help the City Council understand how much was invested, how much was spent, from which accounts and sources, and who paid for it," Gutro explained.

"I've had discussions with the auditor and assume she could take the opportunity to go through this during the course of the summer and we will have meetings on this come the fall."

Palmucci added the audit should take place before any new money is spent – including $850,000 in an escrow account forfeited by Street-Works the mayor plans to use to hire a consultant to advise

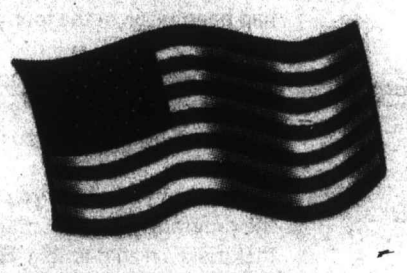
Flag Day Celebration June 14

The City's annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration, a 63-year annual tradition that has grown into one of largest of its kind anywhere, is set for Saturday, June 14 with the 7 p.m. parade and the fireworks display launching at about 9:15 p.m.



"It is truly one of my favorite days of the year – you actually feel like the entire City is together at Pageant Field to watch the fireworks," said Mayor Thomas Koch, who is chairman of the Flag Day Committee and whose dad, Richard, started the event six decades ago.

The parade steps-off on Coddington Street, before making its way to Hancock Street, turning right onto Merrymount Parkway,

Josiah Quincy House: A Hidden Historic Jewel

Open For Public Tours Saturday

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Senior Curator of Collections for Historic New England Nancy Carlisle hopes that this year's $44,000 in renovations to the historic Josiah Quincy House will draw visitors and increase tourism to what she described as one of Quincy's "hidden jewels."

"I think they'll learn about how deeply connected this family was with the nation's history and with Boston's history," she said. "Three mayors of Boston came from the Quincy family and each of them were very influential in the Boston that we live in today."

The public is invited to tour the home during a free open house to take place Saturday, June 7 from 1 to 5 p.m. which is first-come, first-served with tours beginning on the hour.

The home, built 1770, was part of a 250-acre estate known as the Lower Farm that once reached Quincy Bay and served as the part-time residence to Revolutionary leader Josiah Quincy who lived there until his death in 1787. While the Quincy family moved frequently between their seven homes located in Quincy, Boston, and Cambridge, the Quincy House seemed to be their true home.

"This was the house that spoke to their souls. This was the one they wrote about how great it was to get back here," Carlisle said.

The goal of the renovations, according to Carlisle, is to show the home as it appears in a series of photos taken in the 1880s; a time when the interior was heavily photographed and the last Quincy family members lived in the home. She also hopes to tell the story of Eliza Susan Quincy who was the daughter of Mayor of Boston Josiah Quincy III and Eliza Susan Morton. Eliza Susan Quincy not only lived in the home, but made it her duty to heavily document the items contained within through the use of detailed journals and diaries and meticulously painted watercolors.

"She wrote this extensive memorandum of what things were; where they came from," Carlisle said.

Also contained in her writings are accounts of visits by Benjamin Franklin, a Patriot who made such an impression on the Quincys that they prepared a bedroom for him on the upper floor of the home, aptly naming it "The Franklin Bedroom." Other notable visitors include U.S. Senator Daniel Webster and French aristocrat Lafayette.

WEST PARLOR inside the historic Josiah Quincy House was recently upgraded with the help of a generous donation of time and effort from a member of Historic New England's Board of Trustees. The West Parlor honors the Quincy family's ancestors and includes a portrait of Colonel Josiah Quincy by John Singleton Copley hanging above the fireplace.

RENOVATIONS TO the Josiah Quincy House include a new stairwell, new carpet runner and wallpaper to reflect how the house appeared in the 1880s. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

New Flood Maps Approved

Gutro Faults Koch For 'Failed Leadership'; Mayor Claims Councillor Is 'Grandstanding' reimbursement for losses incurred during a flood.

"One of the difficulties here is that our vote is necessary so that our constituency can continue to get subsidized insurance through the National Flood Insurance Program. If a 'no' vote is successful tonight they would be disqualified effective June 10," Laforest said. "If there is a storm that we would need federal assistance [for], we would not be eligible for reimbursement."

On the latter point, Joseph Shea, the Woodard & Curran vice president overseeing the city's appeal of the new maps, noted the city received $1 million in aid from FEMA after flooding in March 2010 that inundated parts of Ward 4. The federal agency awarded an additional $1 million combined to more than 1,000 property owners who filed claims after the storm.

Rejecting the maps, Shea added, would also mean Quincy would no longer be eligible for FEMA grants for flood control projects, such as the one being sought to construct a pump station at 20 Furnace Ave. in West Quincy. Grants for the Fire and Planning Departments would also be placed in jeopardy.

Because of the effects of rejecting the new maps, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin called Monday's vote an example of 'Hobson's choice' – a seemingly free choice in which only one option is truly viable.

"I've had to make a lot of choices in my life. I don't know if there is any one that I can think of that meets the definition of a Hobson's choice more than this one," Coughlin said. "We just heard you (Shea) define what happens if we don't vote for this. We know what we're doing if we do vote for it. And they're both equally unpalatable."

For the second time since March, Councillor Doug Gutro criticized Mayor Thomas Koch's decision not to appeal the maps outright last summer when the city first received them. Gutro noted FEMA delayed the implementation of maps throughout Plymouth County after Marshfield and Scituate filed such an appeal last summer.

"In my judgment, the truth is we shouldn't be here tonight. This vote should not have to happen. It infuriates me," Gutro said. "The maps that have been proposed are suspect and they should have been appealed. Marshfield and Scituate appealed and all of Plymouth County got a reprieve – FEMA announced a one-year delay."

The town of Rockport in Essex County, Gutro added, also appealed their maps and FEMA has already agreed to amend the maps for that community while Chelsea, Revere, and Winthrop recently opted to appeal their maps outright, instead of following a process similar to what Quincy has done. He also noted an NBC News report into FEMA's new maps found hundreds of instances of properties across the U.S. being incorrectly mapped into lower risk zones, leading to an FBI investigation.

Those factors prove Koch should have appealed the maps sooner, Gutro explained. He also noted the council and residents were not consulted before the mayor opted not to appeal last summer.

"The maps are suspect and we should've appealed. Today we have 1,400 new properties that are in the and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field anchored by the annual parade highlight: nearly 2,000 young people from groups across the city marching with American flags.

The parade culminates into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of an impressive 30-foot by 60-foot version of Old Glory, the presentation of the Richard J. Koch Memorial Youth Service Award, and a patriotic performance and sing-a-long.

The evening will be capped off by a spectacular fireworks display over Black's Creek that will kick off roughly around 9:15 p.m

Mayor Koch said that the continued success, and growth, of the Flag Day events would not be possible without the commitment from the City's business community, specifically highlighting major donations from auto dealer Dan Quirk, Keohane Funeral Home, Colonial Federal Bank and Quincy Credit Union.

GREEN GARNET

Much of what you need to know about the green garnet known as "demantoid" is that its name means "diamond-like." One look tells you that this is one of the most brilliant gemstones in existence, a fact that used to be known only to gemstone lovers and collectors. This extraordinarily beautiful gemstone's brilliance and luminosity are largely owed to its relatively high refraction index and light-dispersing ability. Its green color ranges from slightly yellowish green to brownish green with a golden shine. The most prized color is deep emerald green, which is very rare. Anyone fortunate enough to come into possession of such a stone has the best qualities of diamond and emerald in a single gemstone.

The most valuable and expensive demantoid comes from Russia, and is distinguished by unique horsetail-pattern inclusions of byssolite - a fibrous to hair-like crystal or mass of fibers. There is also demantoid that originates in Africa without horsetail inclusions that is less expensive. Shop at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to select the perfect gemstone jewelry that is right for you as well as any other special gift or contact us at 617-773-3636.

A Snapshot Of Preservation

You may have seen her wildlife photos published in The Quincy Sun.

Now, this animal enthusiast and amateur photographer is going a step beyond to give other residents a "birds-eye" view of nature while helping to protect a threatened species.

Her name is Karen Walker and she and her husband, Jim, live in Houghs Neck near Labrecque Field. Earlier this spring, Karen received permission from the city to erect an osprey platform near her neighborhood in the Third Marsh (formerly the Spring Street marsh.)

The platform will rise some 16 to 25 feet later this year. The thick pole is braced by three legs and on top there will be a platform with reinforced steel mesh for birds to build nests.

Karen says she selected this area in Houghs Neck for the platform because the area is open to the ocean on three sides so the birds will have plenty of access to fish in shallow water and return to their nest.

There are other platforms in the city, including several others in Houghs Neck and one in Squantum. All are currently used by osprey, a large bird with a wing span reaching 71 inches.

They are not endangered but they are threatened. That's the main reason Karen initiated this project.

"I think as a society we need to think about the consequences some of our choices will have," she says. "Pesticides nearly wiped out these magnificent birds. When we see an Eagle or an Osprey – or even a fox – in our backyard, our environment is healthy. We are flourishing, we are making good choices.

"When these creatures aren't present, something is wrong."

She has witnessed how bad decisions can lead to dire consequences.

"Someone used a harsh pesticide, possibly rat poison, and a young fox that I had watched grow from an eight-week-old kit to a young adult died a horrible death.

"Maybe we can avoid tragedies like this by using other methods of pest control. It could have been their own pet cat or dog that ingested the poisoned rat instead of the fox.

"I hope the next generation is in as much awe of wildlife as I am, and from their appreciation, better choices will be made, and our environment will continue to be healthy."

The platform has been approved by the city and the Community Preservation Committee that has allocated $1,000 for the project.

"The Osprey platform is a perfect example of how one person can come forward to the Community Preservation Committee with an idea that means so much to them and their community," said CPC Director Lisa Aimola.

"The construction of the platform will provide a safe haven for the birds nesting and an educational opportunity for the residents of Houghs Neck. It will be exciting to see the Osprey make a home there each spring," Aimola added.

The platform is also endorsed by Wellfleet Osprey Project director Bob Prescott. Karen sent Bob a map and a drawing of the platform's proposed location and she asked him if he thought it was a good location.

"He said it was perfect," Karen said. "He's really into preserving the birds and continuing their species."

She's also appreciative of the support from the neighborhood. "I am glad everyone is enthusiastic for the project," she says.

Karen and her husband Jim hope to erect the platform by the fall. The pole will go down about six feet into the ground to keep it secure. Those who would like to participate in the platform rising and/or maintaining the platform can email Karen at thebignest@icloud.com.

Once it's up, it may take up two years or longer for the Osprey to decide if they want to build a nest there. There's also the chance that some other kind of bird could take up residence before an Osprey moves in.

"I've heard that sometimes the hawks or owls will go into their nest and steal the eggs. And I've heard that eagles sometimes use these platforms," Karen points out.

HOUGHS NECK resident Karen Walker has been an aspiring wildlife photographer for 20 years. She's also the driving force behind a new Osprey platform to be located in a marsh near Spring Street later this year. Photo Courtesy Paula McCallum

The platform - once it's being used – will also offer a glimpse into how these birds live.

And when that happens, Karen will be ready to capture them with her camera.

She's been an aspiring wildlife photographer for about 20 years. Equipped with a Nikon D7100 fitted with a 70-300 zoom lens, Karen has taken some beautiful and captivating images of birds and other wildlife in her neck of the woods. Photos of birds include orioles, buntings, egrets, cardinals and Osprey. She's also snapped images of foxes and coyotes roaming her yard. She's heard about deer near her home but so far the four-legged bambies have eluded her photographic prowess.

She tells this amusing story about the day a "congenial" coyote visited her yard for an apparent photo shoot.

"This coyote was probably the full length of the marsh away from my house. I went out to my deck and my dogs were out in the yard. I decided to go to the pool enclosure and get a closer look.

"As I went to the pool enclosure, he trotted right over - from about 200 feet away. I got the dogs in the house and the coyote just laid down.

"He let me take all these photos and when I was done he sat up, looked around, cleaned his paws, looked at me and trotted off.

"It was amazing. It was like he knew I was there to take his picture and he was happy to pose."

Karen has also had a family of mischievous fox kits enjoying themselves in her backyard. The foxes stole all the dog toys intended for her new puppy.

"Everyday something was missing: a ball, a Frisbee, a squeaky toy. My husband saw one of the foxes in the pool enclosure trying to get through the gate with the Frisbee in his mouth. And he couldn't get the Frisbee through the poles. A neighbor told me she saw the fox run away with the ball."

Karen recently joined the South Shore Camera Club to get tips and learn new things while meeting people with the same interests. She can also be a source of knowledge herself.

"To get one good picture, you have to take a lot - maybe a 100. Having a good camera and lens will also allow you to capture detail. Some of the photos I've taken I can really zoom in. I can see veins in feathers. You'll never get that close in real life to that bird."

Setting up a camera shoot around sunrise or sunset - when wildlife tend to be hungry and mobile - can also bring good results.

"I just enjoy photography and I like to share my photos," Karen says. "Houghs Neck is a perfect place for taking photos. There's nature and people and boats. There are lots of subjects.

"It's never ending."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN early 1930's postcard view of Wollaston Boulevard showing the traffic congestion along this popular Beach at the time. On the right is the end of Davis Street. The building on the right was home to Sam's which was a popular summertime refreshment business serving ice cream, fried clams and other seaside favorites to those who could afford them during the Depression years. The building later became Kent's Carpet Land until it was destroyed by fire several years ago. Legendary weatherman Don (Dixon) Kent broadcast his first weather reports over Quincy radio station WJDA from a shack he built as a young man on the roof of the building. The site is now known as Don Kent Park. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

'Quincy Through Time,' Historical Society Meeting June 11

Authors John Galluzzo and Donald Cann will take the audience on a past-and-present tour of Quincy neighborhoods at Quincy Historical Society's Annual Meeting, Wednesday, June 11, at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy.

In preparing their new book, Quincy Through Time, Galluzzo and Cann assembled a trove of historic photos of famous and familiar spots throughout the city, then matched them with photos showing the same locations today. The result is a time-lapse portrait of the city that attests to the many sites that have survived even as the scene around them has changed and also provides a nostalgic look at some local landmarks that have vanished.

In the evening's program, Galluzzo and Cann will share some of the best pictures and the stories that go with them.

The program is free. A book signing will follow the lecture.

Also as part of the Annual Meeting, the Historical Society will elect officers and trustees for the coming year.

Thank You, Cemetery Department

The City of Quincy is very fortunate to have such dedicated employees in the Cemetery Department.

Regardless of the weather, it is obvious to those who walk through or visit Mount Wollaston and Pine Hill Cemeteries every day how hard the employees work to prepare the burial grounds for Memorial Day.

A sincere thank you to all who contributed to the grooming of these places of sentiment for this very meaningful holiday.

Suggests Solar Roadways, Walkways In Quincy Center

Since the revitalization of Quincy Center is on hold for now maybe this would be a good time to consider bringing the area's infrastructure into the future.

Solar roadways would be a good place to start and why not now. With some buildings leveled, holes open in the ground and City Hall being renovated, some of the set up is done.

Walkways made out of the panels that would be used would be long lasting, remove any snowfall and lower energy costs to name a few of the benefits.

There are other ideas to bring the city up to date and into the future and I would welcome the opportunity to speak further about these possibilities.

For now though solar roadways would be a great start.

Quincy's Yesterdays

This Week
1944
70 Years Ago

D-Day Invasion Marked Quietly

Allied (British, Canadian and American) invasion armies landed in Normandy and drove 9 1/2 miles into the vaunted Nazi West Wall early June 6.

There was no organized recognition of D-Day in Quincy, save for some prayer services in churches of all faiths.

"This is no time for celebration," said Mayor Charles A. Ross called out of his bed at 3 a.m. when the news flash of the invasion came.

"This is a time for prayer and hard work," Ross said.

At the great shipyards at Fore River and Hingham it was just another day of toil and sweat. Fathers working at the shipyards, who had sons and daughters in the service, went about their tasks with lumps in their throats and prayers in their hearts.

'Summer On The Hill' Youth Programs At First Baptist Church

The First Baptist Church of Wollaston announces a "Summer on the Hill" outreach program for community youth.

A weeklong workshop "Building Tiny Treasures" will be held Aug. 4th – 8th from 9 to 11:30 a.m. each day. A short program and exhibit will be held on Friday, Aug. 8th at 11:45 a.m.

Light refreshments will be served. All are welcome to the program.

During the week participants in the workshop will create a building and scene in 1-inch equals 1 foot scale, titled "The North Pole Resort." Registration in advance is required as space is limited.

The workshop will be led by Jan Burton of Quincy, president of The Tiny Treasures Society, a local chapter of the National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts. Other members of the Society will assist during the week.

For further information, call the Church office at 617-472-0824. Office hours are Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Benefit For Rich Kenneally June 29

A benefit entitled "You Don't Have To Go Home, But You Can't Stay Here; a Salute to Rich Kenneally, Volume 1" will take place Sunday, June 29 at 8:30 p.m. at Great Scott, 1222 Commonwealth Ave., Alston.

This is the first installment of a collection of benefit performances comprised of current and former students of Rich Kenneally.

Kenneally, the Band Director at Quincy Public Schools, has been an inspirational educator for over two decades, and has recently been battling cancer. While thousands of students have found a home in his band room, they are now rallying around their former teacher as if they were one large family.

Featuring performances by Jon De Lucia Group, Goodwill Tapes, Bundles, The Coalition, 4 Heads Deep, and the debut performance of Art Thieves. There will be an auction and raffle prizes, and all proceeds will go directly to Rich Kenneally and his family.

This event is age 18 and over. Minimum suggested donation is $15. Tickets can be purchased from Ticketmaster:

Fr. Bill's FoodFest, Auction July 29 At Granite Links

Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS) will host the 20th Annual Food Fest & Auction annual fundraiser on Tuesday, July 29, from 6 to 10 p.m. at its new outdoor location: Granite Links Golf Club, Quincy.

Proceeds of the nearly $300,000 fundraising goal will benefit up to 5,000 needy individuals, including families with children, served each year by FBMS. FoodFest is the agency's largest annual fundraiser that helps close the annual 54% funding gap experienced in its individual emergency shelter programs.

More than 42 restaurants, bakeries and beverage distributors from throughout the South Shore will offer samples. The event will also feature entertainment by the band District 21, and East Coast Acappella and appearances by Miss Massachusetts and the New England Revolution cheerleaders.

Tickets are $100 per person, and can be purchased online at www.foodfest20.org. Tickets purchased after 5 p.m. on Wednesday, July 23rd, will be available at the registration table at Granite Links.

Participating vendors from Quincy include:

BistroChi/KamaLounge, The Common Market Restaurants, Father Bill's & MainSpring FoodWORKS, The Fours Restaurant Bar & Grill, Fratelli's Pastry Shop, Fuji 1546, Ginger Betty's, Montilio's Baking Co., Punjab Café, Super Chef Pizza, and River Bay Club.

Festivities will also include a live and silent auction, raffles and door prizes. Among the auction items are sports tickets to the Red Sox, Bruins, Celtics and Revolution.

This year's raffle winner can choose a trip for two to one of three US destinations: Savannah, GA; Napa, CA; or Scottsdale, AZ (air fare included). Tickets are $25 each or $50 for a book of three tickets.

For more information about sponsorships, or to purchase tickets on-line, visit: www.foodfest20.org.

Senior Self Defense Program

The Quincy Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit, in cooperation with the Quincy Council on Aging, will sponsor a free two night self defense program at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St. Quincy on Wednesday, June 11th and Thursday, June 12th from 6-9 p.m., for seniors, both male and female.

Attendance is required for both nights.

The training is progressive, advancing from one technique to the next. There is considerable physical interaction, however, participation in any event is optional. The purpose of the program is to teach citizens how to protect themselves using awareness skills and to be on guard for any potential threats.

Registration is required for this demonstration. To register, call (617) 376-1506.

WHAT'S COOKING
with
Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Quincy Sun readers are well acquainted with our food correspondent, Marie D'Olimpio. Her column "Marie's Kitchen" has appeared for years in the Sun featuring many of her delicious recipes.

Now, Marie is teaming up with one of her daughters, Suzie Falco. Together, they will continue to share some of their favorite recipes with our readers.

Suzie is a holistic nutrition counselor and a mother of six children - just as her mom is – and grandmother of four healthy grandchildren. She is responsible for feeding her family, as well as keeping patients happy with healthy recipes.

This week they share two of their recipes. The first recipe submitted by Suzie is for quinoa pizza. The second recipe is from Marie: Cornbread With Jalapeño Peppers.

Quinoa Pizza

QUINOA PIZZA
Makes 2 thin 8 inch crusts
What You'll Need:
1 1/2c. quinoa, soaked a couple of hours, rinsed and drained.
About 1/2 cup filtered water
3 tablespoons flax meal
1 tsp. sea salt
1/4c. olive oil
1 clove garlic
2 tsp dried basil

Directions:

Preheat oven to 450° F. Place everything in blender and blend until creamy. The consistency will be thick. Not really pourable. (Start with 1/2c. water and see if you need more.)

Spoon and spread onto parchment papered covered cookie sheets. I also put some extra olive oil on the parchment paper also. Using wet fingers helps "shape" the dough nicely so your fingers wont stick. Spread evenly.

I usually make 2 crusts, but you can make mini ones also. Place the pans in the oven for 15 minutes. Flip the crusts over and add toppings. Marinara sauce, cheese , veggies, spinach, whatever you like.

Put in for about another 10 minutes or so until bubbly and cooked. These are great for those who love their pizza.

Rita's Cornbread With Jalepeno Peppers

When you think of corn bread it usually is sweet – but my daughter Rita made one recently, and brought me a sample.

A lot of today's recipes contain jalapeño peppers which seems to be trendy – and that is one of the ingredients that makes this cornbread to different.

Cornbread with Jalapeño Peppers
1 1/2 cups flour
1 cup yellow cornmeal
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup brown sugar packed
3/4 cup corn
1 cup buttermilk
2 large eggs
1 stick unsalted butter, melted and cooled slightly
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese
2 small jalapeño peppers (chopped fine)
2 scallions (finely chopped)

Rita added the last three ingredients -but you can make the cornbread without them if you prefer.

Adjust oven rack to the middle position. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Spray an 8-inch square baking dish with nonstick cooking spray. (Rita used a cast iron skillet.) Whisk flour, corneal, baking powder, baking soda and salt in medium bowl and set aside.

In a food processor or blender, place brown sugar, corn kernels and buttermilk until combined.

Add the eggs and mix until well blended (corn lumps will remain). Make a well in the center of the dry ingredients and pour wet ingredients into the well. Fold the dry ingredients into the wet, and in just a few turns, to combine.

Add the melted butter and continue mixing until just moistened. If you're going to add the peppers, cheese and scallions, you may do so now.

Pour batter into dish and bake until deep golden brown-about 25-30 minutes. Leftovers can be heated either in a 350-degree oven or the microwave and served with honey and butter.

6-3 Vote Approves Raises For Mayor, Council

Gutro, Coughlin, McNamee Dissent • Koch Defends Salary Commission's Report

By SCOTT JACKSON

After more than an hour of debate, the City Council voted 6-3 in favor of raising the mayor's annual salary to $150,000– $10,000 less than Mayor Thomas Koch sought in his budget proposal. The councillors also approved raising their own salaries by the same 6-3 margin.

Koch's proposed FY15 budget called for raising his salary from $122,474 to $160,000, an increase of 30 percent. In his budget, the mayor also proposed raising the salary for each councillor by $5,000 to $22,500. Under a provision of state law, neither of those raises could take effect until Jan. 1, 2015, so Koch's budget proposal gave him an actual FY15 salary of $141,237 and each councillor an actual FY15 salary of $20,033.

During a recent finance committee meeting, Councillor Doug Gutro said he would oppose raising the salary. He noted $160,000 is more than the governors of 44 states earn annually and such a high percentage raise is unusual in government jobs.

"In my 25 plus years of government service, I honestly know of no person – no person – ever who got a 30 percent raise," Gutro said.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin also said he couldn't support the proposed salary increase. He served on a special committee in 2006 that reviewed municipal salaries – including the mayor's – and recommended making gradual increases over a period of several years as opposed to a 30 percent increase.

"I would've preferred to see an incremental increase in the mayor's salary over a period of time. Not to suggest it doesn't merit an increase, but I can't support going 30 percent or the $160,000 level," Coughlin explained. "I would be willing to entertain something less than that setting out a schedule that goes forward that recognizes if you want to get good people you have to compensate them. But I can't support this increase."

Following the comments by Gutro and Coughlin, Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall proposed cutting the mayor's salary from $160,000 to $150,000, which would give Koch an FY15 salary of $136,708. He said he would be in favor of more gradual increases to the mayor's pay and noted the salary for that job hadn't gone up in several years.

"Do I agree with Councillor Coughlin and some of my other colleagues who expressed their sentiments about coming up with some sort of grading scale where it's a gradual salary increase? Absolutely," Croall said.

"For me the toughest part with this whole discussion is sticking to principles and not personalities. What does that job warrant? I think inflation is a pretty good indicator when you consider salary metrics and the position hasn't seen a raise in seven or so years."

Before voting on Croall's proposal, Council President Joseph Finn said he would support raising the mayor's salary to $160,000. He noted directors of non-profits with annual budgets in the $10-25 million range have a nationwide average salary of $174,000; Koch's proposed FY15 budget is $268 million. The increased salary, he explained, makes running for mayor more attractive to strong candidates.

"We are sitting here with a responsibility for a budget that is about $268 million. [The mayor's job] includes responsibilities tied to School Committee as well as tied to the management of the city and the operation of the budget," Finn said. "$160,000 still might not attract some of the best and greatest people we could have."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes said she would've supported raising the mayor's salary to $160,000 but would support Croall's proposal. She also said Gutro's juxtaposition of the mayor's salary and gubernatorial salaries was like comparing apples and oranges.

"This is not a governor's salary. The former mayor of Quincy does not go off into a cabinet position or off into a firm. This – comparing a governor's salary to a mayor's salary – is truly apples and oranges in my mind," Hughes said. "Attracting good talent and folks of ethics and principle does mean raising the bar. It does mean at times raising the salary."

The council then voted on Croall's proposal. The vote failed, however, with Hughes, Margaret Laforest, and Brian Palmucci joining Croall and voting in favor of the $150,000 salary and the other five councillors opposed.

Gutro then proposed level-funding the mayor's salary, which would mean Koch would receive no raise in FY15. That proposal failed 2-7, with only Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee voting with Gutro.

The council then took a vote on approving the budget for the mayor's office – which includes Koch's salary and salaries for several officials such as his chief of staff – as proposed with no cuts. That vote failed 3-6, with Finn, Hughes, and finance committee chairman Michael McFarland voting in favor of passing the budget with no cuts.

Following that, Palmucci a mode a motion to reconsider the budget and proposed the cut to $150,000 – the same one Croall proposed earlier. This time it passed in a 6-3 vote with Finn and McFarland joining Croall, Hughes, Laforest, and Palmucci in favor of the cut. At that time a second vote was taken on approving the salary for the mayor's office. It passed 6-3, with the same six councillors voting in favor.

In addition to raising the mayor's salary to $150,000, the council's vote also means several of Koch's staffers will receive raises as well. Among those receiving raises are Chief of Staff Jim Fatseas, whose salary will increase from $99,669 to $108,000; Director of Policy and Information Chris Walker, whose salary will increase from $82,967 to $87,500; and Director of Operations Al Grazioso, whose salary will also increase $82,967 to $87,500.

The councillors then considered the budget for the city council office, including their own salaries.

McNamee proposed eliminating the raises for the councillors entirely. That vote failed 3-6, with Kevin Coughlin and Gutro joining McNamee in favor of cutting the raises. Voting along the same lines, the council also rejected McNamee's proposal to cut an increase in each councillor's travel allowance – Koch's budget increases the annual travel allowance for each councillor to $6,000, up from $4,500.

Following those two votes, the council voted 6-3 in favor of passing the budget for the entire council, which also includes the city auditor and other staffers. Coughlin, Gutro, and McNamee voted against the council office's budget.

In addition to raises for the members of the council, the council office's budget includes a raise for city Auditor Susan O'Connor, whose salary will jump from $74,964 to $108,000.

The raises for both the mayor and council and other staffers were among 67 recommended by a five-person panel Koch assembled last summer to review salaries of Quincy's elected officials, department heads, and other non-union appointees. Several members of salary commission have donated to the mayor's campaigns in the past.

During the discussion of the mayor's salary, Gutro said he had no problem with many of the raises recommended by the salary commission, most of which fell in the two or three percent range. But he noted an outside firm should have been used to review the salaries for Koch and the council, among others.

"There are certain raises I think we need to put out to a consultant that has a depth of experience with salary issues that can more accurately assess the compensation," Gutro said.

Coughlin also said a review of salaries by such a group should take. He noted UMass Boston's Collins Center conducted a salary survey for Somerville in 2012. That city's board of alderman voted in favor of giving the mayor a 16 percent raise following the recommendations laid out by the Collins Center.

McNamee, who has voted against each departmental budget that included raises recommended by the commission, said he didn't have confidence in the panel's recommendations.

"I don't think we can put ourselves in a place where we, and the public also, can have confidence that there has been an independent and professionally performed review of salaries for the executive position as well as every position that was included in that survey," McNamee said.

In a statement to The Sun following the council's vote, Koch defended the salary commission's work.

"I have no issue with the vote of the council – the salary commission submitted its report, that report was included as part of the budget, the council deliberated, and voted what it felt was appropriate," Koch said.

"What I would take issue is the criticism of the salary commission itself. These were five eminently qualified people from different walks of life and frankly some of the most well respected people in the community. They did a tremendous amount of work using real data and presented their findings in a fully public process, only to be criticized in a very unfair way.

"It's a shame," Koch continued. "Any firm that we would've paid to do the same work, university or any other entity, would have used the exact same comparative data.

"Councillor McNamee talks about protecting the public trust while at the time being insolated from it in his own public sector position. Where is the public process when he gets his raise for his new job at the county? Where is the public process when Councillor Coughlin gets his raise from the state government? Where is the public process when Councillor Gutro gets a raise from the federal government for his job at [the] EPA?"

McNamee is employed by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department and Coughlin is chief probation officer at the Plymouth County Probate and Family Court.

Croall Seeks Housing Authority Emergency Fund

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall introduced a resolution asking the city to consider establishing an emergency fund to be used in case of emergencies at Quincy Housing Authority buildings.

Croall, chairman of the council's senior citizens committee, introduced his resolution because one elevator at Pagnano Towers on Curtis Avenue in Quincy Point has remained out of service since January after a sprinkler pipe burst and caused extensive water damage throughout the 14-story, 156-unit building. The Housing Authority is awaiting a payment from an insurance company before fixing the elevator, leaving just one elevator to service the building's residents.

"Being in limbo, for lack of a better word, waiting for an insurance claim to payout really doesn't do anything in terms of promoting public safety in a building with 150 units filled with my constituents," Croall said.

"Instead of sitting here and being critical at this point, which I have done, I think it's more important we put ourselves in the best place possible to potentially head this issue should it arise in one of the other six buildings operated by the Housing Authority."

The resolution was referred to the council's senior citizens, housing, and oversight committee for further review. City Solicitor Jim Timmins said his office would also look into the matter over the next several weeks to identify possible ways the city could provide relief to the Housing Authority, which is independently run and funded through various federal and state sources in future situations.

The possibility of using money from Quincy's Affordable Housing Trust Fund was raised. But Planning Director Dennis Harrington, who chairs the committee overseeing the trust fund, said that money is generally reserved for private affordable housing projects and not public projects, such as use in Housing Authority buildings.

Fire Damages Houghs Neck Home

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A two-alarm fire Monday at 15 Madeleine St. in Houghs Neck was caused by a torch being used by workers to install a central AC unit in the home and caused $250,000 in damage, according to Quincy Fire Chief Joseph Barron.

The call went in at 5:20 p.m. and 18 firemen, including Fire Deputy Gary Smyth, arrived on the scene minutes later with three engines and two ladders. After the homeowner and tradesmen, who were the only people in the home at the time, safely escaped, crews began with an interior attack of the fire which began in a small, isolated void similar to an attic in the upper level of the Cape Style home, making the blaze harder to fight according to Barron. "It was very difficult to get to," he said.

Smyth realized the stability of the roof was compromised and quickly pulled everyone out. An exterior attack on the fire was then executed however the fire spread through the home's first floor, escalating the situation from one to two alarms. "Once Deputy Gary Smyth saw the stability of the roof was compromised he pulled the crew out and began executing an exterior attack," said Barron.

The cost of the damage, which remained isolated to the first floor and second floor void and was extensive, may increase and is only a preliminary estimate he said. The fire has been ruled accidental and there were no reported injuries.

Band Performs Tonight At MWNA Meeting

The combined student band of the Montclair and Wollaston Schools will perform at the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association meeeting tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. in the Church of the Good Shepherd, corner of West Squantum and Harvard Streets.

The students will perform under the direction of Caitlyn Schmidt, music instrument instructor for the two schools.

The program has received funding from the City of Quincy Community Development Block Grant through the MWNA.

An ice cream social will follow the 7:30 p.m. performance, in the lower community room.

There will be a short business meeting to address the problems at the President's Golf Course tennis court and parking lot.

The MWNA will not meet in July or August unless a special meeting if required. The next meeting will be Sept. 4th.

Gutro, Koch Clash Over New FEMA Flood Maps

zone; 2,700 in a higher risk zone. Neighboring communities and national news organizations are finding fault in the maps but Mayor Koch has asked us to accept them," Gutro said.

"Not only is he asking us to accept them, he deprived the City Council and the flood-prone property owners the right to fight for an appeal before the deadline lapsed – I said that before, I'll say it again. The mayor acknowledged if he had to do it again he might have done it differently. While that honesty is refreshing the decision cost Quincy property owners – more than 4,100 of us – hundreds to thousands of dollars.

"The bottom line: These are Mayor Koch's maps and it's a failure of leadership which prompted the necessity for this body to adopt it."

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Koch, fired back at Gutro in a statement to The Sun Tuesday. He said the mayor chose the correct path in retaining Woodard & Curran to file a comprehensive appeal based on data gathered throughout the city in recent months. He also accused Gutro of grandstanding on the issue.

"We're on the right path with what is likely to be the most substantive and scientifically grounded appeal of the FEMA maps conducted by any community in the Commonwealth. We're using hundreds of separate data points in specific neighborhoods to provide precise data to make the most compelling case possible, neighborhood-by-neighborhood," Walker stated.

"We're also individually assisting more than 1,000 homeowners to provide with them the data and the technical assistance necessary for individual appeals. If we're going to convince FEMA to remove properties from the flood maps, then this is the way to do it. We are 100 percent confident of that, and the mayor is committed to carrying through the process to its end.

"Councillor Gutro – whose career at the federal EPA really should provide him a better understanding of the confusion FEMA has created with such as mishmash of new laws, new maps, and unfunded mandates – is more interested in pointing fingers than providing leadership. He neglects to mention that no community in Norfolk County and no community even on Cape Cod pursued the preliminary appeal, and very few, if any, communities have dedicated the resources that we have to correct the maps.

"Those communities in Plymouth County may or may not be successful, and we hope they are, but the faux outrage aimed at scoring cheap political points doesn't dismiss the fact that there are different paths to take forward and that a lot of people – the city, its residents, and our engineering team – are working incredibly hard to get it right.

"It's like déjà vu all over again on virtually every issue – whether it's Honeywell, the flood maps, or our downtown work – the councillor sticks his thumb in the air, determines its direction, and then grandstands for a half-hour at council meetings. That's not leadership."

Immediately after approving the new maps, Laforest and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci introduced a new resolution expressing concern over their accuracy and urging FEMA to delay their implementation. That resolution passed 9-0.

Gutro, Palmucci Seek Downtown Audit

the city on how to proceed with redeveloping Quincy Center.

"Before we spend another cent moving forward on downtown we need to account for what's been spent in the past. We haven't done that yet. We need an autopsy here to see why the patient died before we start another operation," Palmucci said.

"The administration has indicated they believe they do not need council approval before spending the $850,000 that sits in that escrow account. Before we spend another cent we need to see what the previous money was spent on. It's time to plug the leak on spending on downtown, figure out what went wrong, before we try to move in another direction."

Gutro and Palmucci's resolution was referred to the council's downtown, oversight, and finance committees.

In addition to calling for an audit of the city's expenditures, Gutro said he would submit another resolution in the fall seeking information on the economic impact of the stalled Merchants Row project. When StreetWorks announced plans for that development – set in the 1400 block of Hancock Street – in the fall of 2012, they planned to construct a new five-story building and a 15-story building with planned completion dates of mid-March and September of this year, respectively. That project was delayed from the start and ultimately construction on site stopped last fall. Quincy Mutual is now planning to develop the site.

"The economic consequences of the broken promises are stark. The remaining businesses there struggle, the promised tax revenue isn't coming in, and construction jobs downtown are virtually non-existent," Gutro said.

"Everyday the downtown isn't in redevelopment we lose money. So this fall I'm going to introduce a resolution to look into some of those issues."

Gutro added he was hopeful the downtown committee would receive an update on Quincy Mutual's plans for Merchants Row in the fall as well as an update on negotiations with the companies Koch has said have expressed interest in starting new projects in Quincy Center.

Man Charged With Obstructing Marathon Bombing Probe

By SCOTT JACKSON

A 23-year-old Quincy resident was due in federal court yesterday (Wednesday) on charges he obstructed the investigation into last year's bombings at the Boston Marathon.

Khairullozhon Matanov was arrested just before 6 a.m. on Friday, May 30, inside his Common Street apartment. The 23-year-old, a citizen of Kyrgyzstan who moved to Massachusetts legally in 2010 and worked as a cab driver, was indicted by a grand jury on one count of destroying, altering, and falsifying records and documents – specifically information on his computer – and three counts of making false statements in a federal terrorism investigation.

The 20-page indictment alleges that Matanov met the suspected bombers, brothers Tamerlan and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, after moving to the U.S. It says he met with Tamerlan to participate in a variety of activities, including discussions of religion and hiking in New Hampshire, purportedly to praise and train like the "mujahideen."

Approximately 40 minutes after the bombings near the marathon's finish line on April 15, 2013, which killed three and wounded more than 260, the indictment states Matanov called Tamerlan and invited the brothers to dinner that night. When Matanov returned home from the dinner, an unidentified witness told Matanov they hoped the bombers were not Muslims – to which Matanov allegedly replied the bombings could have been done for a just reason, such as in the name of Islam, that he would support them if done for a just reason or by the Taliban, and that the victims had gone to paradise. The indictment states Matanov continued to voice support for the bombings in the following days, though he later said they were possibly wrong and expressed sympathy for the victims' families.

Two days later – Wednesday, April 17, 2013 – the indictment claims Matanov made repeated attempts to call the Tsarnaevs and visited Tamerlan's apartment in Cambridge.

The following day, the FBI released photos of the then-unidentified suspects behind the bombings around 5:15 p.m. The indictment claims Matanov viewed stories about the photos, even visiting the FBI's website, and then called Dzhokhar Tsarnaev's cellphone at 8:16 p.m., though that call didn't connect.

Around 2 a.m. the following morning, after the suspects were involved in a shootout with law enforcement in Watertown, the FBI released additional photos. Matanov, the indictment claims, viewed those. It further claims he attempted to call Dzhokhar Tsarnaev at 7:17 a.m., at a time when law enforcement was attempting to find him.

Later that morning, at the urging of a regular client, the indictment alleges Matanov drove to Braintree Police Department headquarters believing authorities would wish to speak with him about his relationship with the Tsarnaev brothers.

Matanov allegedly told the Braintree detective he had not viewed the photos of the Tsarnaevs released by the FBI; that he only knew the brothers through a common place of worship and from playing soccer together; that he did not know if Tamerlan's wife and daughter lived with him; and that he had not attended worship with Tamerlan since 2011.

The indictment, however, claims Matanov had viewed the photos; had seen Tamerlan twice that week for reasons not related to worship or soccer; greeted Tamerlan's wife and played with his daughter just two days prior; and attended worship service with Tamerlan as recently as August 2012.

Before and shortly after the interview with the Braintree detective, and before being contacted by the FBI, the indictment says Matanov deleted numerous files from his computer. Included were 902 of 903 files and folders in his computer's "videos" folder and 337 of 402 files and folders in its "documents" folder. Matanov also allegedly deleted a large portion of his Google Chrome Internet cache, including references to the video of the suspects released by the FBI on April 18, two of the photographs released at the same time, and a photograph of MIT Police Officer Sean Collier, who the Tsarnaevs allegedly killed the night of April 18. The FBI has been able to restore some of the information deleted off the computer.

The charges of misleading investigators relate to claims Matanov purportedly made in several interviews with the FBI over the next few months.

The first count alleges Matanov told the FBI his dinner with the Tsarnaevs the night of the bombing was a chance encounter and that he did not give them a ride to or from the restaurant.

The second count alleges Matanov gave conflicting accounts as to when he realized the Tsarnaevs were the suspects – at first saying it was while driving his cab the morning of April 19, then later saying it happened when he overheard the phrase "Chechnyan brothers" at the Quincy Adams T station. That count also alleges Matanov told the FBI he viewed the photos of the suspects only on April 18 and did not view them again. It also claims Matanov told the unidentified first witness he knew the bombers but later told the FBI he did not do so.

The third count alleges Matanov told the FBI he did not watch certain videos on his computer; the indictment claims he had viewed those videos as recently as January 2013.

The indictment does not allege Matanov participated in the marathon bombings or knew about the plot ahead of time.

The maximum sentence for the count of destruction of records is 20 years in prison; each count of making false statements carries an eight-year maximum.

All four counts also carry maximum fines of $250,000 and three years of supervised release.

Matanov made an initial appearance in federal court Friday. In a brief hearing, he told a judge he understood the charges against him and asked a lawyer be appointed on his behalf. His attorney, Edward Hayden, said outside the courthouse that Matanov never intended to mislead investigators.

The 23-year-old is the fifth suspect charged in connection with the bombings. Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, now 20, is awaiting trial on federal terrorism charges and could face the death penalty if convicted. The trial is scheduled to begin this fall. Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, was killed in a shootout with law enforcement in Watertown.

Three of Dzhokhar's friends at the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth await trial on charges they mislead investigators following the attack.

4-8 Grade Configuration At New Sterling Draws Opposition

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A group of parents expressed concern over a proposed 4-8 grade configuration at the new Sterling Middle School at a community meeting held last Thursday evening at Quincy High School.

"I don't think it's appropriate for fifth graders to be in a middle school setting," said Alexis Veith, who has a six-year-old son in kindergarten at the Clifford Marshall Elementary School and who strongly disagrees with the idea of what Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro described as a "4-5 academy" at Sterling.

"I have concerns about the authenticity of the 4-5 academy and whether that programming will hold up over the years once the students are actually in the building since it was promised that fifth graders would be on an elementary school schedule," Veith said.

DeCristofaro has submitted two grade configurations to the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) of 4-8 and 5-8 grade spans. He used the term "elemiddle" to describe the 4-8 configuration and said grades four and five would be kept separated from more advanced grades, but that the campus feel of the site would create a gateway for transitioning kids where "everyone knows your name and everyone knows your family."

School committee member Anne Mahoney has been in vocal opposition of the proposed 4-8 configuration, going so far as to call the decision "a mistake for Quincy," stating that she has been in contact with MSBA officials who ultimately will have the final say in the matter and that parents can have a significant impact on their decision. "They really don't want to have a community that's not satisfied with what they put in," she said. "They want something that we want."

"Certainly school systems have challenges; cities have challenges but there's far more opportunity here," said DeCristofaro, who has been an ardent supporter of a 4-5 academy at the new Sterling which he hopes to turn into a magnet school for the city.

He presented enrollment figures for all Quincy Public Schools from 2006 – when the city established full-day kindergarten, causing an increase in the student population – to 2013. The increasing trend indicated to him where enrollment figures may be in the future. "The 'may be' piece really boils down to taking a look at our class size," he said. "Our class size means a lot to our facilities."

He stressed the importance of keeping class sizes low, but noted doing so would necessitate the need for more available classrooms. "When your class sizes are low you use more classrooms so that's somewhat of an indication as to where we are in certain buildings," he said.

Kindergarten classes are kept at 20 to 21 students although he admitted that sometimes that number may fluctuate mildly. "We're very judicious about placements because we don't want to have a neighborhood school with class sizes really high," said DeCristofaro who feels building a Sterling to accommodate the grade 4-5 academy would alleviate concerns regarding possible overcrowding at Ward 4 elementary schools.

MSBA members have so far taken three tours of the current Sterling school building to assess the site's needs, after which they invited the city into an eligibility period in which QPS considers their suggestions.

An enrollment questionnaire was sent to the MSBA for analysis and was completed May 9. A letter will be sent at an undetermined time indicating whether they find the 4-8 or 5-8 configuration to be more appropriate for the new school. The date of the official vote on grade configuration is not known as the process is "unpredictable" according to DeCristofaro who stressed that nothing was yet set in stone and that parents still can and will have a significant impact on school schedules and curricula which he assured will remain tailored to elementary school standards.

"When you're grade five, you get that curriculum," he said.

Only one parent at the community meeting said she felt comfortable with the idea of a 4-5 academy while roughly five others opposed the proposal, saying children as young as eight or nine mingling with teens was not acceptable due to significant differences in maturity levels and possible stress among younger kids to "fit in" with older ones.

Steve Perdios said he disagreed with the idea from the beginning. "I've known Mr. DeCristofaro for years and I have all the respect for him and I have to apologize to him because I just simply don't like this plan," he said. "There's a lot of dissatisfaction with having fifth graders treated as middle school students."

"This issue…needs to be addressed immediately, like this summer so that this September when kids are going into school they're having a better experience."

Courtney Perdios said she has been circulating a petition opposing the proposed configurations for the past four weeks and so far has gathered 500 signatures in support of her initiative. She's been following school committee and subcommittee meetings closely and said the public was misinformed when they were told when an official vote would take place.

"The 6-8 configuration, if that's a configuration we want to be out there, that [eligibility period] is going away in a few days. The vote on whether or not it's going to be 4-8 or 5-8…it was said multiple times the vote would be taken February 2015," she said. "In one place we're being told we have years and years and months and months and all this time in the world and on the other side there actually is a date where that will go away and we can never talk about it again."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci along with Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall labeled the meeting a community discussion, saying they had reached out to DeCristofaro to arrange the session with the expressed goal of opening up a dialogue and discussion with the public.

"I think that sort of ignited a conversation in the community. I know a lot of folks have been talking about it," said Palmucci. "I've heard various things from various people and unfortunately I think it's been politicized a little bit. I think there's some misinformation out there about what's happened thus far; why we're at this point; why this is being discussed."

Veith credited Courtney Perdios for contacting the councillors and DeCristofaro, urging them to hold the public meeting and called her a "driving force" behind getting other parents involved and informed.

Josiah Quincy House: A Hidden Historic Jewel

"The Quincys were very much like the Kennedys in their day in that they were linked to cultural and historic figures of tremendous note so what went on here is amazing," said Carlisle.

She made note of the connection between the Quincy and Adams families.

"The Quincys and the Adamses both felt the Quincys were more important because they were significantly richer."

The family amassed their fortune through subterfuge, she said. Colonel Josiah Quincy owned a ship in partnership with his brother-in-law who was an English merchant and the two successfully captured a Spanish ship loaded with valuables and gold.The booty was divided between them and the resulting wealth was enough to sustain the Quincy family for 150 years.

A painting of their ship currently hangs at the Quincy Historical Society. A reproduction will be made and displayed in the Quincy House in the coming year.

The wealth of the family was reflected not only in the size of their estate, but in the furnishings within their two-story home. Upon entering, visitors would step upon a floor cloth, now long gone but reproduced by an expert on historic decorative paint with the help of a portion of this year's Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds allotted for the project. The base of the floor covering is canvas covered in ten layers of gesso. The acrylic paint used to create the piece's intricate pattern is protected by multiple layers of varnish and took over three weeks to complete. "That was the big project this year," said Carlisle.

The wallpaper was reproduced and its pattern was based on the 1880s photos because no remaining samples existed in the home or in other homes of that time period.

A needlework under the stairway which leads to the home's upper level was made by Eliza's great-great aunt who was a woman John Adams had been interested in romantically before meeting Abigail. "He writes about her in lovelorn letters and calls her Orlinda," said Carlisle who noted the piece's exceptional quality for its age.

By the needlework is a small, enhanced photograph of a portrait of Josiah Quincy III who served as the president of Harvard University from 1829-1845. In 1823 he was elected the second mayor of Boston and served six, one-year terms. During his time as mayor, Boston's Quincy Market was built and a systematic reorganization of the city's police and fire departments took place.

The Quincy family entertained, for the most part, in the home's West Parlor which recently was upgraded with the help of a generous donation of time and effort from a member of Historic New England's board of trustees who happens to also be a leading expert in textile reproductions. She recreated era-appropriate curtains for the room, contributing significant savings to the overall cost of the project.

The West Parlor was more formal than the East Parlor, and as such was set up in honor of the family's ancestors. A recreation of a portrait of Colonel Josiah Quincy painted by John Singleton Copley hangs above a fireplace. The original is currently displayed at the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

A settee and mirror that were saved from fires that occurred at Colonel Josiah Quincy's two previous homes are on display. A single chair which is one of a set of eight has been placed in front of the fireplace. The other seven remain in museum collections across the country. Other chairs in the room have been acquired through private auctions as well as on eBay and make up part of Historic New England's collection of objects which have been accumulated over the past 100 years. They are consistent with the style of the era.

"We have a collection of things not related to our houses that's about 65,000 objects," said Carlisle. "A lot of the things here are pulled from that collection and then there are instances where we knew what should be here and we didn't have something in our collections so we purchased at auction or on eBay."

Another item in the West Parlor pulled from the organization's collection is a circa 1815 wooden desk made in Boston. While no photos of the original piece exist, Carlisle and her team of roughly 30 Historic New England employees were able to estimate the appearance of the desk based on the writings of Eliza Susan Quincy.

The home's more actively used East Parlor is notable for its double fireplace which is adorned with tiles which are original to the home and date back to 1770. Carlisle said the tiles, which were created using a technique invented in London in the 1750s called transfer printing, are important to the history of ceramics.

"It became hugely popular. There was a fad for these printed tiles," she said. The tiles in the Quincy House depict everyday events such as a couple enjoying a stroll or a day by the ocean. In other historic Quincy homes they depict scenes from Aesop's Fables or the Bible.

Eliza Susan Quincy at one point in the East Parlor watched John Adams and President James Madison take their leave of each other and wrote in one of her diaries that to watch such an event was "an interesting thing." John Quincy Adams was also a frequent visitor to the house, however, she was not as impressed by him due to his young age and, at the time, lack of accomplishments when compared to his father.

Silver platters and candle sticks—some solid silver and some plated—on a table in the rear portion of the room are commemorative of Josiah Quincy IV's position as a Temperance leader who brought running water to Boston. "Water was kind of symbolic of that in that people were drinking water and not wine and ale," said Carlisle. The pieces are placed as is depicted in the 1880s photographs and were not meant to be used but rather displayed as a sign of the family's affluence.

A circa 1837 piano in the room which is not original to the home or family will soon be refinished and have its ivory keys—which were luckily saved—put back in place.

Not far from the piano, several blue and white ceramic dining pieces are displayed which are original to the family and are significant to the history of direct trade between the United States and China following the Revolution. "One of the first traders was a guy named Major Shaw and he was a brother-in-law of Abigail Quincy and he brought back things from his first trip to China for her," Carlisle said.

Renovations to the upstairs bedrooms and hallway will begin next year and include replacing current textiles which are not appropriate to the home's 1880s narrative. The large linen-press in the hallway which is not an original Quincy family piece but is nearly identical to the one they owned will remain as will the two Chinese vases placed next to it which were acquired once trade opened up with the East.

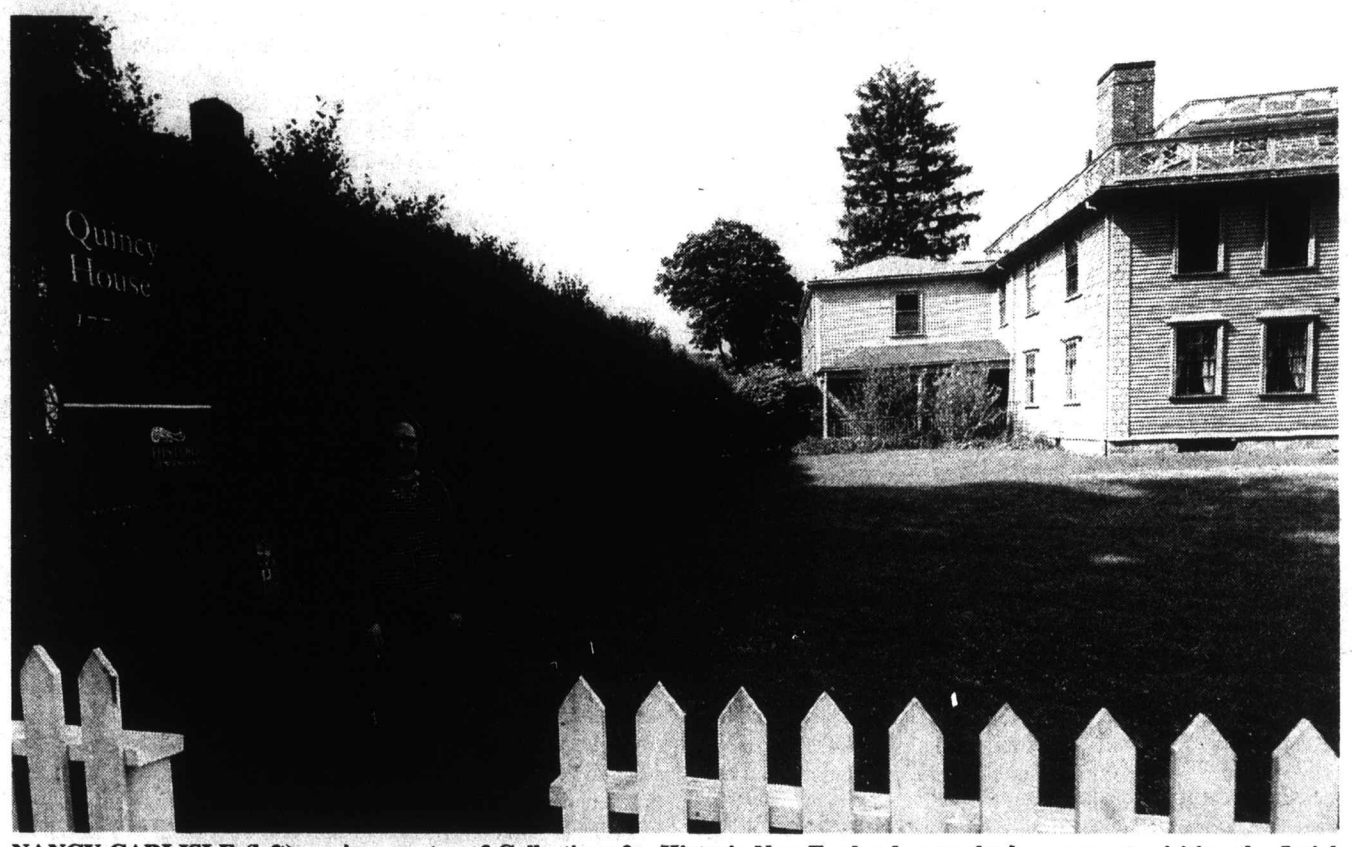
The most important and notable item in the hallway—and possibly the entire home—is a pane of glass unassumingly hanging on a wall beneath an original watercolor of the house done by Eliza Susan Quincy. Etched into it by Colonel Josiah Quincy as he watched British ships evacuate Boston on October 10, 1775 are the words "Governor Gage Sail'd for England with a fair wind." The glass was originally in a window located in the home's monitor roof—a raised structure which runs parallel to the main roof and has windows on each side.

Microscopic paint analysis done in one of the upstairs bedrooms show that the Quincy family did not line their walls with wallpaper, something Carlisle found to be strange for a family of such wealth. "A family this rich would normally have wallpaper," she said. "It was astonishing to me that in the 1880s they didn't have wallpaper. For whatever reason paint analysis shows that the room was painted [mint green]." The room's wooden paneling has also been painted to its original taupe color.

A Japanned high chest placed in the corner is considered to be one of Historic New England's top ten historically significant items. Made in 1745 in Boston, it is one of only a handful of similar items.

"There's about 50 pieces made in Boston that survived with that Japanning and it was once really popular as a way of imitating Chinese lacquer when you couldn't afford to import Chinese lacquer," Carlisle said.

The Franklin Bedroom, as the name implied, was where Franklin slept during his visits, however, it was actually the bedroom of Eliza Susan Quincy. Bedding will be replaced in the next year to more accurately portray the time period. The room's carpets and rugs, much like in the rest of the house, are not original to the home. The last occupant of the home, Abigail Phillips Quincy, died in 1893. Her nephew, Josiah Quincy IV who had already built himself a home called the Josiah Quincy Mansion—constructed in 1848 and demolished in 1969—on what is now the Eastern Nazarene College campus, sold the entire Lower Farm property, part of which was later acquired by an elderly New Hampshire couple "who were thankfully respectful of the history of the house so they didn't do a lot of work on it and they lived here part-time so they lived in it very lightly," said Carlisle. Surviving, distant Quincy family members grouped together and purchased the home following the death of the elderly couple and gifted it to Historic New England in 1937. While there are still surviving cousins, nephews, and great-nephews of the Quincy family, they are far removed and not entirely directly related to the home.



NANCY CARLISLE (left), senior curator of Collections for Historic New England, says she hopes guests visiting the Josiah Quincy House will learn about how deeply connected this family was with the history of Boston as well as the nation.

About 1,000 people tour the Josiah Quincy Home yearly, a number Carlisle, who has been the home's curator for 27 years, would like to see rise as a result of the renovations. "We're hoping to grow that. We've partnered with Discover Quincy and so now we're part of a service that drives around from house to house on Discover Quincy Days and we also sell tickets that are good at all of the historic houses so we're hoping to grow all the time," she said. "This reinstallation project is creating a lot of interest and enthusiasm so we've got tours that are taking place separately from the open days that people will be able to come through."

The tour season spans from the first Saturday in June to the first Saturday in October.

In total, at least $80,000 in renovations have taken place over the past two years. "It was a house that just didn't have the funding to do what we wanted to do so 27 years later we're very lucky."

In the coming year, the garage which is significant in early 20th century history, will be restored using CPA funds, creating more room for program space for school children who tour the home to learn the history of the Quincy family. She anticipates upgrades will be made to the exterior of the home, including the garden, in the future.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, May 25, 2014, at approximately 1:05 a.m., Officer Joseph Cox was on patrol on Sumner Street when he observed a male stumble off the sidewalk and into the street.

Concerned for the safety of the male, the Officer got out of his cruiser and approached the male, who had a strong odor of alcoholic beverage emitting from him. As Officer Cox initiated conversation with the male, Officer Goldman arrived on scene to assist. The Officers noted that the male was unsteady on his feet and had slurred speech. He also had minor lacerations on his face and was visibly upset. When asked how he sustained his injuries, the male angrily responded that he didn't want any help and "only wanted to go home."

Since the male was too intoxicated to continue walking, Officer Cox told the male he would fulfill his request and give him a ride home to Lebanon Street in Quincy. The male agreed to be taken home and was then advised by Officer Cox that he would have to stay home and not go back out. The male said he understood this and would comply with the Officer's request. Officer Goldman followed Officer Cox in his cruiser to the male's address.

During the short ride, the male became increasingly upset, stating that he did not do anything wrong. The Officer assured the male that he was not in any trouble, was not under arrest and was just being transported home.

Upon arrival at the male's home, the Officers attempted to make contact with a family member, but no one was home. The male opened the door and started to go inside. The Officers again advised the male to stay home and not venture outside due to his intoxication. The male agreed to this and shut the door. Before the Officers could drive off, the male exited his home and stumbled across his lawn. He told the Officers that he had to go to the store.

Officer Cox strongly advised the male to go back inside or he would be placed into protective custody for his own safety. The male reluctantly went back inside. Moments later, the male again exited his home and stepped out onto the sidewalk, where he became verbally abusive towards the Officers. After being given the opportunity to avoid time in a jail cell, the male was placed into protective custody for his safety and the safety of the public.

Once at the Quincy Police Station booking area, the male became uncooperative and insulting. As Booking Officer Michael O'Brien attempted to fingerprint him, the male lunged at Officer O'Brien's face and head and was quickly subdued and placed in a cell. The Officer was o.k. For the male, instead of being at home in the comfort of his own bed, he was going to be held at the station for a minimum of 4 hours and a maximum of 12 hours to sober up. There would not be any criminal record, however, once the 18 year old male assaulted the Officer, he was criminally charged with "Assault and Battery on a Police Officer."

Alcohol impairment often leads to poor decision making! Nice Work!

THE MOST COMMON AND RECENT SCAMS:

1. A Microsoft representative calls to warn you that you have a computer virus: Ask yourself, how did they know this? Is this person really from Microsoft? This scammer will tell you to go to your computer and then instruct you to hit certain keys, which will give them access to your computer. The scammer will be able to access your files and possibly your passwords and in the end, install a virus for a follow up call for service.

2. You won a lottery and there is a check for a partial payment. Ask yourself, did I even enter this lottery? If you didn't, then how could you win?

Most of these scams come in the mail. Look at the letter and see numerous grammatical errors, which indicate that the scam is from a foreign source. The letter will come with a check for a partial payment of your winnings, with instructions to cash the check and then wire-transfer a payment for foreign taxes, etc. Most bank Tellers advise customers that the check will take five days to clear, but often times people are so excited about winning that they just send the money. There is no chance of getting the money back!

3. A family member is in trouble: this call usually starts out with an anxious caller stating, "This is your grandson and I am in trouble." It may be either an arrest situation or ransom. The instructions are to make a wire transfer payment to get the "grandson" out of the dire situation. Listen to the caller. Do you have a grandson? Are you called "Grammy" or go by another name? Ask lots of questions, especially ones that your grandson should be able to answer, like the last time you saw each other. As a follow-up, if you believe there is a possibility that it could be true, contact your grandson or other family members to let them know about the telephone call.

4. A caller tells you that your automobile warranty is expiring: This call comes from usually from a recorded message, stating that your automobile warranty is about to expire, followed by instructions to hit "1" for more information and "2" to be placed on the "Do not call" list. These scammers do not even know what kind of car you have – they just want to sell you an extended warranty that is worthless. If you hit "2", this tells the scammers that this is a valid number and this will lead to them selling your number to other scammers, which will increase your likelihood of more scam calls. Just hang up!

5. A caller tells states that you can improve your credit and pay less: This is usually a recorded message (see #4). How do they know what your credit rating is and how much you owe or what your interest rate is? They don't – they just want to gather your personal info and then scam you into higher overall rates that in the long run will cost you much more.

6. You have been offered a job guaranteeing good pay but you need to provide any of the following: bank name, the account number, passwords, date of birth, social security number. There are many scams built into this "job offer." In most cases, you will have to pay for materials and/or training. Much of the work is based on commission.

Some offers involve moving money through your bank account. If the job was good, there would be no need to advertise because word of mouth and friends telling friends would fill all the openings. As always, do not give out personal information that may lead to identity fraud or access to financial accounts.

7. The IRS or another federal agency is calling: This person may adamant that you owe money to the federal government and demand that you wire transfer money to their agency in order to prevent a wide range of consequences, such as having your utilities shut off, forfeiture of property or even be arrested! As long as you keep this in mind, you will not be affected by this scam – federal and state government agencies will not contact you by telephone regarding payment due by you. The initial contact is by mail, with a number listed on the letter for you to call if you have questions. After you make the initial call, there may be follow up telephone correspondence by the agency.

8. You get solicitations to donate to charity, but you are unsure: Is this a charity that provides services to the people or does most of the money go to salaries? Go to www.charitynavigator.org to check a charity rating. For example, for the past ten years the "National Veteran's Service Fund" and "Children's Charity Fund" have earned the most consecutive "0 star, extremely poor" ratings – meaning that they consistently perform far below industry standards and below nearly all similar charities. Remember, by giving locally, based on a good rating, your donation may go directly to locals in need.

Presidents Play Great But Eliminated By Taunton

By BILL GRIFFIN

They had worked for this night for three years, and when it arrived, Quincy played a great baseball game.

Junior righty Greg Paulo pitched beautifully in the Presidents' first tourney game since 2011. Quincy hit the ball hard and played clean and, at times, exceptional defense. There was a large, loud crowd at Adams Field who were jumping and shaking the grandstands when Quincy loaded the bases and rallied to the threshold of victory in the final inning.

The Presidents did everything they wanted except one thing: Win the game.

Luke Figueira and Jared Jorge combined for a six-hit shutout and Taunton's speedy outfield ran down a fistful of line drives to lift the Tigers to a 2-0 win over Quincy in the first round of the South Sectional Division 1 Tournament at Adams Field Saturday night.

"We started building for this when we went with the young kids two and three years ago," said coach Pat Bryan whose team finished the season at 12-9. "We wanted to build for a night like this when we could bring some excitement about baseball back to Quincy. It was a great game. It came down to a matter of timely hitting."

Paulo was superb. He gave just four singles, struck out five and walked two. He threw hard, he kept his fastball down and mixed in a wicked, dipping curveball at just the right moments. He did more than throw. He worked the corners, controlled the counts, changed speeds and let his defense help him. He pitched.

Taunton scored twice on ground-ball singles in the second which were not exactly smoked, but found open spots through the infield. After that, Paulo gave nothing. He pitched no-hit ball over the final five innings and retired 16 of the last 18 batters he faced. He looked like he could pitch until July 4.

"Greg was outstanding. He proved he could step onto the big stage in the tournament and throw well against a good team," said Bryan. "I think he and Johnny (Marsinellli) got into a good rhythm as the game went on. He got stronger and stronger."

In many shutouts, the bats are quiet. Not true here. Quincy drilled the ball. Tyler Beach and Padraig Geaney rocked doubles. Geaney, Bobby Salvucci, and David Cooper had deep outfield drives which Taunton ran down in Adams' spacious outfield. Salvucci lined out on a smash to short. Matt Davis hit the hardest ball of the night, a moonshot to center in the third which D.J. Kullas caught at full speed with his back to the plate. If it lands, it's still rolling.

"Matty just crushed that ball. We hit some balls hard, but give Taunton credit.

Raiders Make Tourney For 7th Straight Year

Success, Satisfaction Mark North Quincy Boys Volleyball Season

By BILL GRIFFIN

There have been North Quincy volleyball teams which enjoyed deeper runs in the state tourney, but this was a season of success, satisfaction, and fine stories.

There were two terrific senior players and leaders. There was an influx of young players who provided depth and a glimpse of a bright future. There were two memorable victories. And there was the great basketball experiment, two standouts from North's hoop team who played varsity volleyball for their first time in the spring of the senior year.

"We only had two players with significant varsity experience coming back at the beginning of the season," said coach Jason Cai. "I thought it would be a rebuilding year, but we were able to work more players in as the season went on. The seniors played well. It was a successful season."

North ended the season at 13-5. The Red Raiders finished second in the Southern Alliance with a 6-2 league record and made the tournament for the seventh straight year under Cai. Braintree eliminated North in the first round of the Division 1 South sectionals last week.

"For a lot of the year, we only played six or seven players," said Cai. "The younger players improved as the season went on, but I think they may have been a little nervous in the tournament."

Senior setter Oresti Bega and senior hitter Efthim Butka formed the core of the club. Bega was one of the finest setters in North's proud volleyball history, compiling a 45-9 varsity record as a starter. He ran the team. He distributed the ball at the net at the right height and pace. Like a good point guard in basketball, he put the ball where and when the hitters wanted it.

Few did it better. He finished his varsity career with 1,088 assists.

"He was the quarterback," said Cai. "You must have a good setter in volleyball. He has to know who should get the ball, and also where they are strong and where they are weak as hitters. The impressive thing was he worked with multiple hitters. He adjusted to their strengths and made them better players."

Butka was North's most consistent, powerful presence at the net. At 6'5" he had height and power to put away smashes. He also had the touch to place soft, accurate placements in open patches of floor when the defense committed to the block. He hustled and kept points alive with quick reactions at the net.

"Efthim had a good career. He played with passion. He was an emotional player, into every match he played," said Cai.

Seniors Kyle Richardson, Anthony Green, Nathan Gonzales, and Vincent Wong contributed as players and leaders. This team enjoyed its season. They were a a close club who played hard, improved, and surpassed its coach's expectations. The seniors were a big reason for all of this.

"It was a happy team. They had fun playing together and they wanted to get better all season. They were a good team to coach," said Cai.

Sophomore Shiggy Zhang was the most impressive of the younger players. He played the difficult libero position in his first year on varsity. He never stopped running, he had dig after dig, kept points alive, and moved passes to the front line for Bega to set and Butka to put away for winners.

"He was probably the most pleasant surprise of the year," said Cai. "There's a lot of responsibility with the libero position, but he stepped up and took it on. He was always moving to the ball all over the court. As the season went on, he improved and made good decisions."

Freshman Eric Huang, sophomore Angelo Taho and juniors Jackie Chen and Calvin Ma all made contributions. Chen was a big-time hitter at the net, Ma showed a good all-around game, and Taho made progress as a hitter.

Richardson and Green were two hoop stars who made their varsity volleyball debut as seniors. Richardson supplied depth and key points. Green, at 6'9", developed into North's second best hitter in a short time. He is a remarkable athlete for an athlete his size, and when he took the full swing that Cai loved, Green hit rockets.

"He not only gave us a second hitter, he was also an excellent blocker. That was something we needed at net," said Cai. "Kyle played well off the bench. If he had played volleyball for four years, he would have been unbelievable."

There were two high points to the season. The first was rallying from down 2-0 to win three straight games and defeat a strong Barnstable team on the road. The second was capturing the Silver Division title of the Cambridge Rindge and Latin Invitational Tournament with victories over Boston Latin, Lowell Catholic, and St. John's Prep.

"The tournament was rewarding because I think it was the first time they had played all-day volleyball," said Cai.

The key to the 3-0 defeat to the Braintree match in the sectionals was the second game. Braintree jumped to a six-point lead, but North rallied to to tie at 23-23. The Red Raiders forced six more ties before falling 31-29 in the marathon game. Braintree won by scores of 25-16, 31-29, and 25-21.

"I think whoever won that second game was going to win the match," said Cai. "We do have some good young players coming back for next year, but we lost our setter. That's a tough position to replace. Oresti was one of the best. Someone will have to step in, pass the ball and set up the offense. That will be our biggest challenge."

Quincy Boys Lacrosse Win Five Straight Before Bowing At Falmouth

Presidents Push Clippers To Limit In Tourney

By JOE REARDON

Quincy's Div. 2 South tournament game against Falmouth was over for less than 10 minutes last Thursday and head coach Martin Bowes was already looking ahead to the Presidents' 2015 campaign between the lines. Bowes has good reason to believe Quincy will be right back in the tourney and be even better next spring.

The No. 6 seeded Presidents had just pushed the No. 3 Clippers to the limit on Falmouth's home field in first-round play, in what was arguably Quincy's best game of the season, and Bowes was confident at the prospect of another banner campaign come next spring.

"Absolutely. I can't wait," said Bowes. "You get progression from the guys who play, but as a team, as a group these guys started to look at it as a family and as a brotherhood. We had a five-game winning streak to finish off our season. We went from 5-8 to 10-8. Momentum plays a factor for sure, but everything changes in the tournament. Everyone's 0-0."

What the Presidents (10-9) accomplished against the 14-5 Clippers on their home field was more than a brief cup of tournament coffee. The Presidents may have gone out one-and-done, but they didn't roll over for Falmouth - far from it. Quincy peppered Falmouth's freshman goalie George Armstrong with 22 shots and continued to will their way back into the contest when it appeared the Clippers were on the verge of breaking the game open.Trailing 7-3 less than two minutes into the fourth quarter, the Presidents fired home three goals in 3:30 to move within one at 7-6. Quincy had Falmouth's full attention at that point.

Falmouth coach Rory Morse was very much aware that the Presidents played in the rock-solid Patriot League and had seen two of the best teams in the state in Duxbury and Hingham. "I didn't know much about them," said Morse. "I was trying to get film any way I could. I knew we weren't going to show these guys anything they haven't seen - better, faster and the way I would like to see things in the future."

Mitchell McGowan and Steve Ross both put shots past Armstrong for goals and Brian O'Callaghan and Sean Brennick had solo tallies to pace the Presidents' offense. If not for Armstrong, the Presidents would have been well into double digits in tallies.

Falmouth got on the board almost immediately with a tally 31 seconds into the first quarter for the 1-0 lead, but that would be all the Clippers would get as both teams were trying to find some continuity in their offensive 'attacks. O'Callaghan tied it at 1 with 2:47 gone in the second, taking a quick pass from Tom Pugsley and slamming it home from 15-yards out. Falmouth added two goals in the second quarter to take a 3-1 lead into the half, but it could have been a bigger deficit if not for Quincy goaltender Andy Johnson. The talented goalie came up with two huge saves in the final four minutes and frustrated the Clippers for the better part of three quarters.

"He's had a phenomenal year," said Bowes. "He's been our all-star back there."

Quincy did have to get used to the thick, natural grass after playing the majority if its games on grass turf fields this season. "I thought we played very, very well for the most part," said Bowes. "It was one of our better games for sure. I think playing on this grass makes the field seem a little big. Our middies were definitely feeling heavy legs in the first half.

"I had a little bit of a scouting report. I knew they were a defensive team and it was going to be kind of a slower game. That played into our hands because we didn't want to get into a run and gun game. We wanted to play a little bit slower and possess the ball. Credit them - they did a great job."

McGowan wasted no time in scoring the all-important first tally of the third quarter to cut the lead to 3-2, 37 seconds in. The Presidents' most consistent scoring threat during the regular season, McGowan swooped around from the side of the net to plant his shot past Armstrong.

Johnson had his best run of the game in the third, turning away Alex Manos on three occasions and netting a close shot by Robbie Souza. Falmouth scored again with 3:12 left in the third to make it a 4-2 game, but the Presidents came right back, this time with McGowan converting Max Hurley's pass from the left wing to cut it to 4-3 with 1:53 left until the third quarter break.

The Clippers looked to clinch the game as they put in the next three goals, the third coming from Griffin Morse to put Falmouth up 7-3 with 1:53 gone in the fourth. This time, though, it was Quincy who went on a scoring binge as Bennick found the back of the net and Ross scored twice to put the game at 7-5. Johnson made the save of the game with 7:56 left, robbing Souza once again on a hard, low shot.

The Presidents slowly saw their season slip away as the Clippers continued to attack the Quincy net, which resulted in three goals in a 2:13 span. Morse was impressed by Johnson's poise between the posts for the Presidents. "Their goalie played great. It took us until the fourth quarter to solve him," Morse said.

The maturation and improvement of the Quincy players since the first game of the season was very apparent to Bowes and it bodes well for the future. "We have a lot to hang our hat on for sure," he said. "They worked hard and the progression they've made is unbelievable. They kept fighting and they didn't stop. There's a lot of heart on this team. It was one of our goals to win this game, but getting here was a huge milestone. The seniors who have been playing for the past three years, this was their first tournament game. It was a different type of season that they're used to. I'm so proud of the guys."

Final Year For Program

Hershey Track, Field Registration June 10, June 11

This will be the final year that the City of Quincy Recreation Department will host the Hershey National Track and Field qualifier and will mark the end of a 36-year run for the exceptional free program that has inspired youth and brought many children from Quincy to the national stage.

Recreation Departments across the nation and in Canada were notified this spring by the games sponsor, The Hershey Company, that this would be the last year the program would be conducted. Hershey announced a new program called "Run, Jump, and Throw" will be introduced as a replacement.

"Quincy Recreation was in a unique situation having been part of this outstanding program since its inception," said Quincy Recreation Director Barry Welch. "Thousands of youngsters from our city have shared in the Hershey experience by participating in our local meet, thousands have gone on to the state championships and hundreds have represented our community at the North American Championship which culminated an all-expense trip to Hershey Park, PA each August.

"Most notable of all our participants is our own Olympic Bronze Medalist Karen (Cashman) Lehmann who advanced from the local Quincy meets to the National Finals five years in a row," Welch said. "While we are grateful for the opportunity that Hershey provided to each youngster in a free program that only required the participant show up in sneakers, we are saddened to know this is our last year."

Welch also praised Geoff Hennessey of the Quincy Track Club who brought the program to the Department's attention and has also been associated at all levels for the entire life of the program.

"We both will have nothing but fond memories and stories of great achievements by the youth of our community who had the opportunity to take to the track in the spirit of friendly competition," Welch said.

This year's meet will be held at the Faxon Field Track. The community meet is free and open to boys and girls age 9 - 14. The local meet is the first step in a competition that could result in a local athlete advancing to the National Championship in Hershey Park, PA. New England champions are awarded an all-expense paid trip by Hershey Chocolate, the national sponsor.

Participants are not required to have previous track experience or be a member of a community track program. This meet is also open to participants from surrounding communities. Participants must provide the sponsoring agency with proof of age before they will be allowed to compete. There are no entry fees. Spikes and starting blocks are prohibited.

Registration for the Quincy meets will be held at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 10 for boys and Wednesday, June 11 for girls.

The age of the participant will be his/her age as of Dec. 31, 2014. Both boys and girls will compete in three age categories: 9 - 10, 11 - 12, and 13 - 14. Those youngsters currently 8 years old, but who will turn 9 before Dec. 31, 2014 may compete in the 9 - 10 age group. Youngsters currently 14 years old, who will turn 15 years old before Dec. 31 are not eligible to compete.

The events are as follows:

Age 9-10 Boys and Girls: 50 Yard Dash, 100 Yard Dash, 200 Yard Dash, 400 Yard Dash, 4 x 100 Yard Relay, Standing Long Jump, and Softball Throw.

Age 11-12 Boys and Girls: 100 Yard Dash, 200 Yard Dash, 400 Yard Dash, 800 Yard Run, 4 x 100 Yard Relay, Standing Long Jump, and Softball Throw.

Age 13-14 Boys and Girls: 100 Yard Dash, 200 Yard Dash, 800 Yard Run, 1600 Yard Run, 4 x 100 Yard Relay, Standing Long Jump, and Softball Throw.

Each participant may compete in up to three events. If three events are chosen, one event is required to be a field event.

Welch noted Quincy meet has always had great competition and countless residents have advanced through the state to take part at the National Championship while running on the ¼ mile track at Faxon Field with the state-of-the-art surface and longer straight away.

HOW NECESSARY ARE SCANS?

While "magnetic resonance imaging" (MRI) is considered by many medical doctors to offer the best imaging study of the spine, patients may wonder how necessary these expensive scans are in terms of making a diagnosis. According to a recent study published in JAMA Internal Medicine, researchers found that only 44% of the scans of the lumbar spine (lower back) were appropriate. Of the remaining scans, 56% were deemed to either be inappropriate or of "uncertain value." While most people experience back pain at some point in their lives, this study suggests that an MRI scan is not always needed to diagnose the cause. An MRI's primary value to medical doctors rests with its usefulness as a pre-surgical planning tool.

Instead of covering up your symptoms with drugs, at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we look to correct the underlying problem. Doctors of Chiropractic are qualified to order and interpret MRI examinations. For unrivaled chiropractic care, please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we're currently accepting new patients. Don't suffer with pain - let chiropractic help you. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. In many cases, an MRI reveals a suspicious-looking feature that leads to follow-up testing, more medical visits, and patient anxiety, but turns out to be nothing.

Presidents Play Great But Eliminated By Taunton

They played good defense," said Bryan.

However, the line-drive out which the Presidents will long remember came from Beach in the middle of the seventh-inning rally. Cody Desmond started it by beating out an infield hit. After one out, Beach sent a rocket into the gap in left center. Kullas seemed to lose it for a second, recovered quickly, and went to one knee for a waist-high, one-handed catch. If. If. If.

"That was a good catch. I think what helped him was initially, he got a good jump on the ball," said Bryan.

Marsinelli followed with a single and Davis walked to load the bases. Five times Quincy was down to its final strike, but the Presidents fought off each of them. The crowd was alive, but Jorge finally ended it with a strikeout.

"We pitched well. They pitched well. We played good defense. They played good defense. It was decided by who got the timely hit," said Bryan whose team had baserunners on in six of seven innings and stranded 10 for the game.

Quincy was clean and sharp on defense, especially in the first two innings. In the first, Beach nailed a runner trying to advance from second to third on a ground ball. Marsinelli caught a base-stealer at second with a low, perfect throw. In the second, Geaney threw out a runner at the plate from left field. Marsinelli grabbed the throw off a tough hop and blocked the plate to finish the play.

"Our defense was very good. Tyler made a heads-up play to get that runner in the first," said Bryan.

Marsinelli had a pair of hits for the Presidents while Robbie Munroe and Desmond added singles.

It was a fine season. There was a memorable rally and an extra-inning win over Boston Latin and a thriller at home against Hingham. There were big-time wins against Silver Lake and Middleboro. There was a strong finish with blue-chip victories over Hanover and Archbishop Williams behind Kenny Sorensen and Paulo in the final week of the season.

Sorensen is one of eight seniors the Presidents will lose. He was 5-1 with an ERA of under 1.00, and he walked just two hitters in 49 innings. His change of speeds and arm angles were a pleasure to watch. He was one of the best pitchers on the South Shore.

"What more can yousay about Kenny? He was great all year for us," said Bryan.

Davis and Munroe gave the Presidents thump in the middle of the order for three years. Marsinelli was a remarkable contact hitter and used his speed well on the bases. Mike Pugsley was a solid second baseman who tossed in the big hit when Quincy needed it.

"Mike Saccoach became a dependable reliever for us and Padraig Gainey developed into a solid all-around outfielder," said Bryan, "Shamus Hill did an excellent job at the plate. They were a good group of seniors."

Next season looks good. Paulo established himself late in the season and in the tourney. Desmond throws very hard. Cooper and Beach will form a strong left side of the infield. Salvucci batted cleanup as a junior and will supply power. There is talent on the way from the freshman and sophomore classes.

"I had Johnny (Marsinelli) talk to them after the game," said Bryan. "He told them not to sit back in the summer and fall. He said to keep playing baseball. He told the juniors they could be better than we (the seniors) were this year. I think the potential is there."

JOHN MARSINELLI (above) strokes one his two hits for the Presidents. Robbie Munroe (below) also added a hit for the Presidents who outhit Taunton but the Tigers eliminated the Presidents 2-0 in the first round of the Div. 1 South Sectional baseball tournament.

Quincy Youth Softball Highlights

Mary Pratt Division

As the teams head for the playoffs in the Mary Pratt Division, the following is a brief summary of some recent game results:

Quincy Credit Union defeats Wilson Demarini 22-13. In a game where Quincy Credit Union had only 8 players due to injuries and sickness, the team led by a truly great pitching performance by Brielle O'Malley rallied for 10 runs in the 7th inning to hold off Wilson Demarini 22-13. O'Malley despite being injured early in the game by a batted ball pitched a complete game and added 2 hits. Carrie Hannon made a great play with a solo double play when she caught a line drive and tagged third to end the game. Jesse Caldwell had four hits, and played great behind the plate for QCU, while Hannah Bell, Carly McCarron, and Shauna Grehan played steady defense. Kathleen Saverse had three hits and along with Journey Strouble covered the entire outfield despite being down two players. Shannon Foley and Shannon O'Brien pitched well for Wilson and led the hit attack with three hits each. Nicole Page, Meghan Davis, Riley Driscoll and Ashley Murphy chipped in with timely hits and played good defense. Shauna McGolgan made several nice plays behind the plate and between her and Nicole Page combined, tagged out several runners at home to keep the game close.

Senator John Keenan defeats Graeber, Davis, & Cantwell in a well played game 15-11.

Senator John Keenan beat Graeber, Davis, & Cantwell 15 to 11 in a rain shortened game. For Keenan, pitchers Joanna Douglas and Kristen Thornton combined for the win. Sarah Ainsley led the team with timely hitting. Cather Julia Geary threw out a runner attempting to steal second. Other Keenan players contributing to the win were Samantha Striffler, Taylor Darcy, Rosheline Molina, Riley Pascarelli, and Colleen McDonough. In making her Mary Pratt debut Melissa Ainsley fielded a ball hit to right field and threw out the batter at first base."

Quincy Credit Union Defeats Senator John Keenan 22-6.

Quincy Credit played well in beating a roster shortened Senator John Keenan team 22-6. Due to other commitments the Keenan squad was missing both its starting pitchers and some other players, but played on. Taylor Darcy pitched well along with Rosheline Molina and Samantha Striffler. Sarah Ainsley and Roe Molina played great on defense and had 5 hits between them. Riley Pascarelli also contributed with a big triple. For QCU, Mia Sapienza came back from a recent injury and pitched a complete game with 8 strikeouts; she also had 4 hits to lead the hit parade. Meghan Greene, Riley McCarron, Kathleen Saverse, Brielle O'Malley, Jesse Caldwell, Journey Strouble, and Shauna Grehan all had multiple hit games. On defense Carly McMorrow, Caa Schaff, and Hannah Bell played good defense to help in the win.

Quincy Bows To Powerhouse But Future Still Bright

Presidents Fall To Hopkinton After First Round Win Over Plymouth North In Softball Tournament

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a tale of two impressive tourney performances for Quincy's softball team.

First, the opening-round hex is broken. Gone. Over. Forgotten. Second, the Presidents proved they could play evenly with a traditional tourney power and with only five players graduating, there is sound hope for a bright future.

No. 5 seeded Hopkinton broke a tie game in the bottom of their third inning and went on to eliminate the No. 12 seeded Presidents, 5-1 in the second round of the South Sectional Division 1 Tournament Saturday afternoon.

"Hopkinton is always one of the powers in the tournament and I thought we played very well with them," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers whose team finished the season 15-7. "We made a couple of misplays that let them take the lead, but I thought it was an evenly-played game."

In the opening round, Quincy scored a memorable win when sophomore Nicole Jorgensen drilled a ringing single to center with two out in the bottom of the seventh to score freshman Madison Synan for a 1-0 decision over Plymouth North at McCoy-Mitchell Field last week.

The late-game drama made a most deserving winner out of junior Saxon Bresnahan who threw a one-hit, 10-strikeout, one-walk gem to best the Eagles' Mallory Fey in a terrific pitching duel.

Synan led the winning rally with a pinch-hit double in her first varsity at-bat. It was a fitting ending full of sweet irony for the Presidents. Quincy had lost in the opening round the past four years. Three of the scores were 1-0. What goes around does come around.

"It feels great to get the monkey off our backs," said Sommers. "Saxon pitched great. She deserved the win. We hit the ball hard despite the low score and the defense was excellent. Everyone contributed."

Hopkinton scored twice in the bottom of the inning to take the lead for good. The Presidents threatened again in the fourth when they loaded the bases with two out. Jorgensen and Kate McGahey walked. Dana Varmahmoodi beat out an infield single. However, Hopkinton relief pitcher Juliet Hulme came in to get the final out.

"I thought Saxon pitched well again. She was in control of the game. She only gave up one hit into the air in the outfield," said Sommers. "Emma made a great effort in center on a line drive and Bethany Walker played a strong game behind the plate."

There were three fine stories in the win over Plymouth North. Begin with Bresnahan. Begin everything with pitching. She ended the season by firing a no-hitter and striking out 16 against Hanover. Against Plymouth North, she gave just one bloop hit which traveled about 60 feet and allowed only three baserunners. In back-to-back games against quality teams, she allowed one hit and struck out 26.

"Her stuff has always been good, but what you see now is her maturity. She has grown so much," said Som-

Scott Knight Completes WPI Research Project

Scott Knight of Quincy, a junior majoring in mechanical engineering at Worcester Polytechnic Institute (WPI), recently completed a hands-on research project in Melbourne.

The project was titled An Analysis of Hoarding and Squalor Related Incidents and Responses by the Metropolitan Fire and Emergency Services Board.

At WPI, all undergraduates are required to complete a research-driven, professional-level project that applies science and technology to addresses an important societal need or issue. About two-thirds of students complete a project at one of the university's 35 off-campus project centers, which are located around the world.

The project-based curriculum offers students the opportunity to apply their scientific and technical knowledge to develop thoughtful solutions to real problems that affect the quality of people's lives.

Our congratulations to Quincy and North Quincy graduating Seniors.

UCC Pilgrim Pedal Fundraiser

Pastor Jack Swanson of Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd. in Wollaston, announces that a 50-mile bike ride is being planned for November. Called the Pilgrim Pedal, the ride will originate at the church, proceed through Wollaston and North Quincy to Quincy Shore Drive and to southern Artery. Entering North Weymouth, the ride will travel through Hingham to Nantasket Beach and Hull Gut. The route will then be through Cohasset and Scituate, finishing in Hingham.

The ride will be under the direction of Rev. Swanson who is an avid cyclist. The month of November was selected for Pilgrim Pedal as it traditionally closes the cycling season and fits the New England Thanksgiving Pilgrim heritage.

Cyclists and sponsors are sought for this event and more information will be released soon. All participants will receive a long-sleeved T-shirt and will be treated to a wonderful dinner at the conclusion of the event. Rev. Swanson can be reached at 617-479-6661.

Home, Business Owners Urged To Prepare For Hurricane Season

The Insurance Institute for Business & Home Safety (IBHS) is urging residents and business owners to get ready for hurricane season, which began Sunday.

"While the season is just starting and the height of hurricane activity doesn't typically occur until September, residents need to remember that storms can arrive much earlier. Last year the first tropical storm made landfall in Florida on June 5," said Julie Rochman, president and CEO of IBHS.

"Now is the time for property owners to review their personal and business emergency plans, stock up on needed supplies, and prepare their homes and businesses for a potential storm," Rochman continued.

IBHS recommends that property owners strengthen their buildings against the high winds, flooding and wind-driven rains of hurricane season by doing the following:

1. Survey your property and secure loose objects before a storm to reduce potential flying debris.

2. Trim trees and shrubbery away from structures and remove any weakened sections of trees.

3. Protect all openings from high wind or flying debris damage by installing shutters or roll-downs, or installing permanent fasteners (keep pre-cut shutter panels on hand for quick installation when a hurricane threatens).

4. If your garage door isn't pressure-rated, have a bracing system installed to prevent wind from blowing in the door.

5. During renovation or construction, have your house tied together with metal connectors, such as hurricane straps, to make your home stronger against high winds. Learn more about creating a continuous load path by watching this animation video.

6. Double the strength of your roof by using ring-shank nails during re-roofing to attach the roof decking.

7. Seal your roof deck using roofing tape or a self-adhering membrane to minimize wind-driven getting into your attic if the roof cover is blown off.

8. Re-adhere loose shingles with roofing cement to prevent them from blowing off and exposing your roof decking.

9. Ensure all vents and soffits are made of sturdy material and securely attached. Learn more about the importance of getting the roof right to protect you from hurricanes by watching this animation video.

10. If a storm is approaching, reduce water damage from storm surge or flooding by placing all appliances on masonry blocks or concrete and moving furniture and electronics off of the floor, particularly in basements and first floor levels.

Hurricane Business Preparedness Recommendations:

While business continuity planning typically takes 12 months, the start of the hurricane season is a good time to refocus your efforts. Now is the time to:

1. Designate an employee to monitor weather reports and alert your team to the potential of severe weather.

City Receives Five Bids For Old Central School Site

Bids To Develop Site Range From $3 Million To $1.1 Million

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city has received five bids from developers looking to by the former Central Middle School.

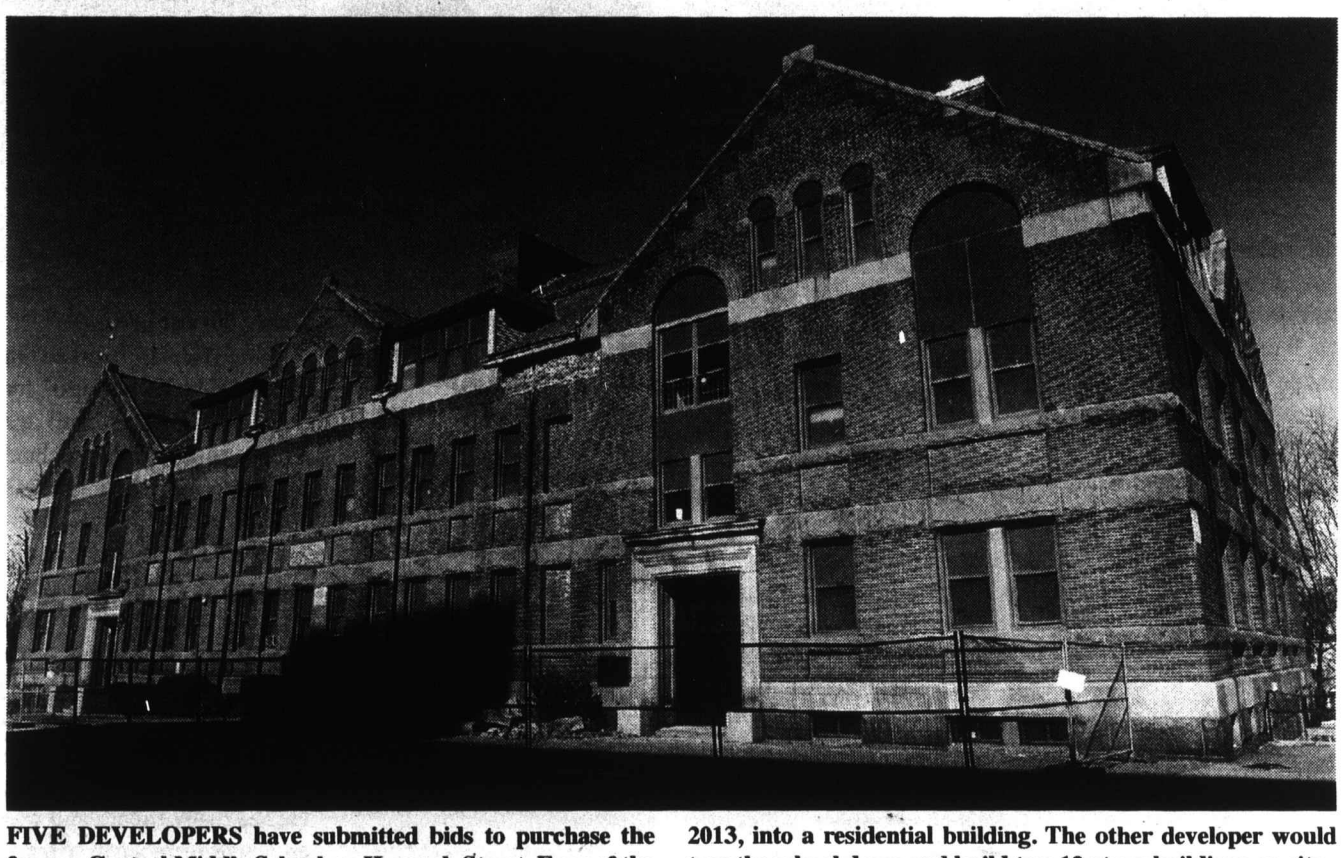
The highest bidder was Edgewood Development of Plainville. The company proposed to purchase the school for $3 million. They would maintain the building's exterior while creating a new interior space with 39 residential units, which would be sold as condominiums.

The Urban Edge Housing Corporation of West Roxbury and South Shore Stars of Weymouth submitted the second highest bid, offering to purchase the site for $2.4 million. Under their proposal, they would maintain the building's exterior while creating a new interior with living space – in this case 38 units of affordable housing. Space on the lower floors would be used for South Shore Stars, a non-profit early education group.

Boston Property Development of Greenleaf Street in Quincy bid $1.86 million for the site, and would use the existing building to house 54 residential units.

A limited liability company known 1022 Hancock Street, LLC, bid $1.5 million for the property. They would also maintain the existing structure and to renovate it into 45 residential units. The LLC is a partnership between Quincy developer Jay Cashman and Stoughton-based Conroy Development.

The lowest bid, $1.109 million came from Hal Marsh Associates/Edmund Quincy Towers Team, LLC.



FIVE DEVELOPERS have submitted bids to purchase the former Central Middle School on Hancock Street. Four of the developers would convert the school, which closed in October 2013, into a residential building. The other developer would tear the school down and build two 13-story buildings on site.
Quincy Sun File Photo/Robert Bosworth

Unlike the other bidders, they would tear down the school and develop the site into two 13-story residential towers. The new buildings would include 400 combined residential units and retail and restaurant space on the ground floor.

A special committee will review the bids and make a recommendation to Mayor Thomas Koch on which bid he should select; the mayor would make the final call.

Mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said a decision is expected 'relatively soon.' The mayor will consider all aspects of the proposal, not just the price.

"The value and the overall plan – it's those two things combined," Walker explained. "It's not necessarily just the money."

The mayor has previously said he would use any revenue from the sale of the site to fund the purchase of nine homes near North Quincy High School. Those homes need to be torn down to make way for Koch's proposal to expand North's campus and renovate Teel Field. An appropriation to fund that work is currently pending in the City Council's finance committee.

The site of the former Central Middle School, located at 1022 Hancock St., includes 85,378 square feet of land. The building includes a gross area of 84,617 square feet and a livable area of 59,490 square feet. The school currently sits in a Residential B zoning district.

The building originally opened in 1894 as Quincy High School before being turned into a junior high then a middle school. It closed last October following the opening of the new, $50 million Central Middle School one block north on Hancock Street.

The city did have the property appraised in October of last year. In that appraisal, RSD Realty Advisors valued the site at $4.6 million, under the assumption the former school would be rezoned out of a Residence B zoning district and into something more lucrative financially.

According to city assessor's website, the property has an assessed value of $6.047 million – $5.098 million for the building, $886,700 for the land, and $62,500 for outbuildings (pavement and an underground tank).

Prepare For Hurricane Season

2. Review your business continuity plan and update as needed, including employee contact information. If you do not have a business continuity plan, consider IBHS' free, easy-to-use toolkit for small businesses, OFB-EZ (Open for Business-EZ).

3. Remind employees of key elements of the plan, including post-event communications procedures and work/payroll procedures. Make sure all employees have a paper copy of the plan. Review emergency shutdown and start-up procedures, such as electrical systems, with appropriate personnel, including alternates.

4. If back-up power such as a diesel generator is to be used, test your system and establish proper contracts with fuel suppliers for emergency fuel deliveries.

5. Re-inspect and replenish emergency supplies inventory, since emergency supplies are often used during the offseason for non-emergency situations.

6. Test all life safety equipment.

7. Conduct training/simulation exercises for both your business continuity and emergency preparedness/response plans.

OBITUARIES

Anne T. Cannon, 84

A funeral Mass for Anne T. (Fitzgerald) Cannon, 84, of West Quincy was celebrated May 30 at St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Cannon died May 25.

A lifelong resident of Quincy, she was a retired secretary for the Quincy school system, a longtime communicant of St. Mary's Church, a member of St. Mary's and St. John's Senior Groups and enjoyed traveling, playing cards and was an avid walker.

Her favorite times were going out to dinner with her family and cooking them full course Sunday dinners.

Beloved wife of the late Robert T. Cannon, Sr. Loving mother of Robert T. Cannon, Jr. of Kingston, Kathleen A. Cannon of Marshfield and Patricia M. Cannon of Braintree. Dear grandmother of Dianne Marie Cannon Hallock of Walpole and Michael Robert Cannon of Tewksbury. Beloved sister of John J. Fitzgerald, Jr. of Dedham.

ANNE T. CANNON

Funeral arrangements were made by Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Interment was at St. Mary's Cemetery, Randolph.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Mary's Building Fund, 115 Crescent St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Sten R. Runius, 90

A funeral service for Sten Robert Runius, 90, of Rockland, ME and formerly Quincy was held May 28 at Burpee, Carpenter & Hutchins Funeral Home, Rockland, ME.

Mr. Runius died May 18 at Pen Bay Medical Center in Rockport, ME following a brief illness.

He was always proud of, and willing to converse about, his Swedish heritage. Born, raised and educated in Quincy he lived in the city until moving to Arlington, VA. Mr. Runius was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II, who fought in five campaigns including the Battle of the Bulge, the Normandy Invasion, Northern France, the Rhineland and the Ardennes.

After graduating high school in 1942, he worked as a graduate draftsman apprentice with Bethlehem Steel Fore River Shipyard in Quincy. In April 1967, he began working in Washington, D.C., as a naval architect technician, with the Bureau of Ships/U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Mr. Runius moved to Maine following his retirement in 1985. He was an active member of Rockland Congregational Church, where he served as a past deacon and usher. He served more than 7,500 hours as a Volunteer at Pen Bay Medical Center. His love of Cadillac automobiles caused him to be a regular visitor at the Owls Head Transportation Museum.

STEN R. RUNIUS

Mr. Runius is survived by one son, Mark R. Runius and his wife Lauri of ME; two grandchildren, Benjamin Mark Runius and his wife Samantha and Meghan Cherie Runius and her companion Jarrod Bergeron.

The Rev. Dr. Linwood Welch officiated the service.

Interment at a later date in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Carl O. Widman, 86

A funeral for Carl O. Widman, 86, of Quincy was held May 30 at Faith Lutheran Church, Quincy.

Mr. Widman died peacefully May 23 at the Blue Hills Alzheimer's facility in Stoughton, where he was lovingly cared for during the past two and a half years.

A son of the late Leonard and Naomi (Kaskinen) Widman, he was born in Brooklyn and grew up in Aland, Finland, until age 18. When he returned to the U.S., he served for two years as a medic in the U.S. Army, 45th Division, during the war in Korea.

Mr. Widman worked in the auto body business for more than 60 years, until age 81. He co-founded Copeland St. Auto Body shop with his brother-in-law Bertil Jansson and later opened Carl O. Widman & Sons Auto Body where he worked with his two sons, Richard (until his passing) and Roy for 30 years.

He was very proud of his Swedish heritage, his Masonic affiliation and his church. He had many friends and was an active member in a number of organizations including Faith Lutheran Church, Past Master of Rural Lodge Quincy, Past High Priest of St. Stephen's Royal Arch Chapter, Past Commander of Quincy Commandary, Past Master of Lodge of Instruction, Past District Deputy Grand Marshall, Past President of the Swedish Square and Compass Club, Friendship Council Royal and Select Masons, Shriners, Scottish Rite, 3-5-7 Club, Stenkil Lodge #92 IOV, Viking Club of Braintree and many others.

He enjoyed playing the accordion, dancing with his wife and daughter Ruth, and spending time with his family and friends, both here and abroad. He spent many hours in his backyard gardening with his dear wife Nancy, and enjoyed many summers at Camp Calumet. Mr. Widman also coached Quincy Farm League Baseball for 15 years, and assisted with the Wollaston Legion Baseball. He was a longtime member of Faith Lutheran Church, Quincy, where he served on the Church Council, Property Committee, and as an usher for many years.

CARL O. WIDMAN

Beloved husband of 52 years to the late Nancy (Johnson) Widman. Devoted Father of the late Richard C. Widman, Roy O. Widman and his wife Denise of Weymouth, and Ruth (Widman) McAllister and her husband Mark of Arlington. Cherished 'Morfar' of Linnea and Richard McAllister. He was also the sister of the late Dagny (Widman) Jansson and her husband, the late Bertil Jansson. Uncle to George and Peter Jansson, Cynthia Grossi, and the late Paul Jansson.

The Rev. Heidi Johnston officiated the service.

Funeral arrangements were made by Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Interment was at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

'Hidden In Plain Sight' Interactive Education Program June 17

Quincy Public Schools, in collaboration with Impact Quincy, South Shore Hospital, and the Caron Foundation, will be host a program called Hidden in Plain Sight Tuesday, June 17 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at Central Middle School, 857 Hancock St., Quincy.

Hidden in Plain Sight is an interactive education program for parents/guardians featuring an exhibit where adults are encouraged to explore and interact with a display designed to resemble a teenager's bedroom. Throughout the exhibit are items that may indicate that a teenager may be involved in some high-risk behavior such as substance abuse, underage drinking, eating disorders, sexual activity, and other risky behavior.

Following exploration of the mock bedroom exhibit, there will be an informative presentation by guest speakers Kimberly Noble and Traci Wojciechowski.

Noble is the Youth Health Connection Coordinator at South Shore Hospital. She received her B.A. in Nursing from Boston University and MBA in Health Care Administration from Western New England College. The Youth Health Connection Program collaborates with community schools to educate children and families on how to reduce risk and build resiliency.

Wojciechowski is the Regional Director at the Caron Foundation Student Assistance Program. Traci earned her B.S. degree in Psychology from Bridgewater State University. She is responsible for ensuring that quality education, prevention and intervention services are provided to school systems and youth agencies throughout the Northeast. Her areas of expertise include adolescent tobacco use trends, drug and alcohol trends, tobacco cessation, psychoeducational support groups, curriculum development, implementation fidelity, leadership trainings, prevention programs and adult educational programs.

This presentation will be followed by a personal story by Nancy Holler, who is also a parent in Quincy.

Other speakers include Quincy Public Schools staff members, Jane Kisielius, RN MS NCSN and Kristin Houlihan, RN, who authored an informational booklet that will be given to all parents/guardians.

There is no charge to attend this program. Refreshments will be served and various door prizes will be awarded.

No youth will be admitted to this event.

Beloved wife of the late Herbert D. Hoxie. Loving mother of Robert B. Hoxie of Quincy. Also survived by dear friends Mark and Diane Iverson.

The Rev. Cliff Brown officiated the service.

Interment was at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Houghs Neck 120th Birthday

The Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy, is planning a 120th Birthday Celebration on July 19th and 20th.

A Family Dinner and Entertainment with music and fun historical facts will be held Saturday evening.

A special church service and picnic will take place on Sunday.

As plans are completed more information will be available.

Community United Methodist Church Yard Sale June 7

Quincy Community United Methodist Church will hold its annual Spring Yard Sale Saturday, June 7 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the church lawn, 40 Beale St., Quincy.

The sale will be held rain or shine. If skies are gray, the sale will be held indoors in the church Fellowship Hall.

Besides the yard sale, Sigma Phi, one of Quincy Community's women's groups, will hold a Bake Book Boutique featuring sale items, home-baked goodies and books.

Hot dogs fresh off the grille and beverages will also be available.

Donations of clean, working items that are in good condition are appreciated. The church will not accept old computers, TVs, or clothing. Call ahead at 617-773-3319 so that someone will be at the church to receive donations.

Gutro Joining Delegation To Pakistan

Councillor Doug Gutro will be part of a delegation of eight Massachusetts public administrators and elected officials who will travel to Pakistan from June 6-16 to participate in a professional conference and exchange.

The conference is the culmination of a four-year project in which a total of 75 Pakistani professionals came to the United States and meet and work with Massachusetts public administrators. The entire program was funded by the U.S. State Department.

The purpose of the partnership program is to deepen the Pakistani and American participants' understanding of each other's local government systems, culture, and civil society. The conference will allow the participants to review the outcomes of the program and discuss strategies for countering corruption and minimizing bureaucratic entanglements. During their 10-day visit to Pakistan, the Bay State delegation will visit government offices and other work places of their counterparts, in addition to participating in the conference.

"I'm honored to be part of such a select group of officials representing Massachusetts cities and towns in Pakistan," Gutro said in a statement. "Through this partnership we will share ideas on issues that matter to local governments in every corner of our world – corruption, ethics, transparency, effective decision making, and service delivery. This is one of those rare opportunities that you can't learn in a classroom or from a book.

Joining Gutro will be officials from Boston, Brewster, Easton, Grafton, Springfield, and Westwood. Forty communities hosted visiting officials during the course of this program; some hosted multiple times.

The U.S./Pakistan Professional Partnership Program for Public Administrators is being administered by the Institute for Training and Development (ITD), a non-profit organization based in Amherst. ITD partnered with the Mass. Municipal Association (MMA) for the project. The MMA is the non-profit, non-partisan statewide association of cities and towns in Massachusetts that provides professional development and advocates for the interests of its members.

All expenses for the American and Pakistani participants are covered by the grant, including travel, accommodations, meals, and materials. The project is funded by the U.S. State Department's Bureau for Educational Affairs and is supported by the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad.

Council Appropriates $127K To DPW

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council appropriated $127,312 to the Department of Public Works in a unanimous vote Monday night.

The lion's share of the money, according to council finance chairman Michael McFarland, will go towards paying the electric bills for streetlights in the city. The streetlight budget for the current fiscal year, FY14, was reduced from previous because the city anticipated taking ownership of all streetlights in the city from National Grid.

In addition to paying the electric bills for the streetlights, $10,000 of the appropriated money will pay for an audit.

The money was appropriated from the city's free cash account.

COA Atlantic City Trip

The Quincy Council on Aging anncounces a trip to Atlantic City from Aug. 12-14.

Docket No. NO14P1230GD
In the matter of:
John Donnelly
aka William Slater
Of: Quincy, MA
RESPONDENT
Alleged Incapacitated Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by Quincy Medical Center of Quincy, MA in the above captioned matter alleging that John Donnelly is in need of a Guardian and requesting that David J Zwicker of Bridgewater, MA (or some other suitable person) be appointed as Guardian to serve Without Surety on the bond.

The petition asks the court to determine that the Respondent is incapacitated, that the appointment of a Guardian is necessary, and that the proposed Guardian is appropriate. The petition is on file with this court and may contain a request for certain specific authority.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 06/18/2014. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

WITNESS, Hon. John D Casey, First Justice of this Court.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Things that usually come easily and quickly for the Aries Lamb might need more of your time and attention during the next several days. Try to be patient as you work things out.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A changing situation can create some complications. But if you apply that sensible Bovine mind to what seems to be a hopeless tangle of confusion, you'll soon sort things out.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Creating a new look for your surroundings is fun. Expect to hear mostly positive comments on your efforts, as well as some well-intended suggestions you might want to note.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Maybe you'd rather do anything else than what you're "stuck with" right now. But if you stop complaining, you might see how this could lead to something with real potential.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Even a proud Leo ultimately recovers from hurt feelings. However, a damaged relationship might never heal unless you're willing to spend more time and effort trying to work things out.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) There are lots of changes on the horizon, so be prepared to make some adjustments in your usually fine-tuned life. One change might even impact a personal decision you've been putting off.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Being the dependable person you are could work in your favor for a project that requires both skill and accountability. But check this out carefully. There could be a hidden downside.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A temperamental outburst about a mishandled project causes some fallout. Be sure to couple an apology with an explanation. A new opportunity beckons by week's end.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Changing horses midstream is usually unwise but sometimes necessary. Examine your options carefully before making a decision. A trusted colleague offers good advice.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While much of your time is involved with business matters, fun-time opportunities open up by week's end. Enjoy yourself, but be careful that you don't overspend.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A "revelation" opens your eyes to what is really going on in the workplace. What you learn could make a difference in your career path. Continue to be alert for more news.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Not wanting to make waves might be the safest way to deal with a difficult situation. But no substantive changes can be made unless you share your assessments with others.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of talking to people that makes them want to listen. You could find a successful career in politics.

Quincy's Future Bright

mers.

She pitched in the tournament last spring against Oliver Ames and a year's seasoning helped her make adjustments and deal with injury late in the season. She missed three starts with a sore forearm. She also lost her starting catcher Angelina Avitabile to a back injury. The two have a close connection unique to pitchers and catchers which was formed in youth leagues and goes back to grade school.

Bresnahan handled the challenges well. Walker stepped in and did an excellent job behind the plate. Bresnahan took advantage of the rest and was strong for the tourney opener.

"I think the rest did help. I felt strong out there," said Bresnahan. "The experience in the tourney definitely helped. I didn't feel any jitters. Throwing to Bethany has been great. She commits to any pitch I want to throw. I don't hold anything back."

There was Jorgensen. She is only a sophomore, but she has played six seasons of varsity sports. She has seen big moments in volleyball, basketball and softball. She very much likes being part of it in the moment of truth when the game is decided.

"I enjoy the pressure. I like being someone who can finish things," said Jorgensen. "In that situation with a runner on third, I'm just looking to make contact. I just want to hit the ball hard somewhere."

Jorgensen had a double against Fey earlier in the game. Fey featured a change of speeds against the Presidents. Jorgensen had earlier hit a changeup. She was ready for another.

"You don't want to guess because she throws different sets of pitches, but I'm pretty sure I hit an inside changeup at the end," said Jorgensen.

"We bat Nicole in the No. 9 spot and I love having her there because she sees a lot of pitches," said Sommers.

And there was Synan. She was on the tournament roster largely because Quincy needed a backup catcher when Avitabile was injured. She made a varsity debut she will long remember. Not only did she smack a double, she had a great at-bat which would have made a senior veteran proud. She worked the count to 3-2. She fouled off a couple of pitches. She got her pitch and put it on a rope to the left-center gap for a double.

She moved to third with two out and scored when Jorgensen ended it.

"Madison hit the ball well on JV's I thought she could give us an offensive lift," said Sommers.

Quincy played a clean, crisp game. The Presidents made one harmless error. Varmahmoodi made the defensive play of the game in left when she ranged back to make a running grab for the final out of the seventh. Kelly had two bunt hits (one with two strikes) and stole two bases. Bresnahan added a double and Parry had a single.

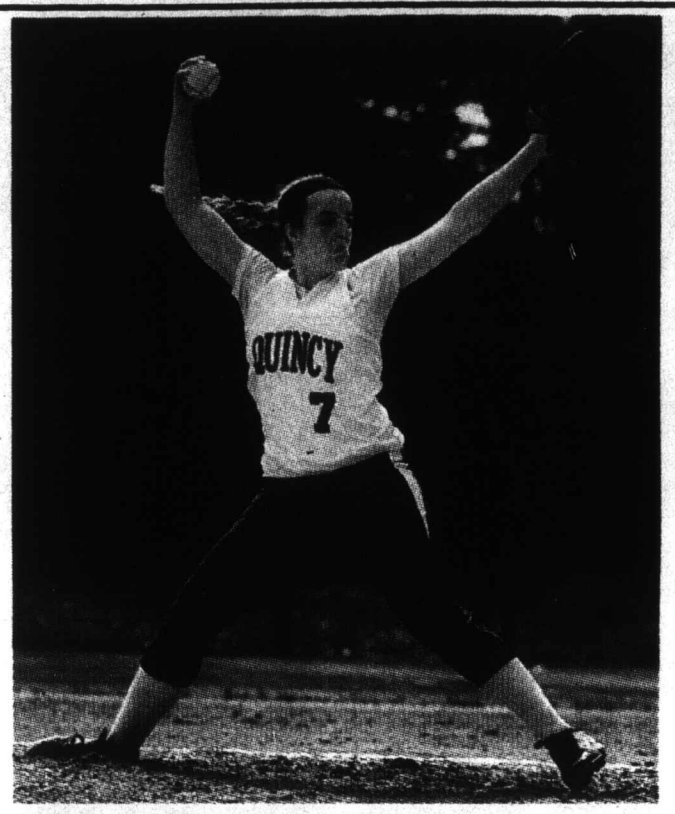
If softball awarded runs for hard-hit balls, Quincy would have scored 10 times. Quincy hit shots all day. McColgan lined out twice. Angela McDonald, Parry, Varmahmoodi and Jorgensen ripped hard smashes for outs Plymouth's shortstop Emily Freeman was excellent. Her best was off Parry in the fifth when she went deep in the hole to get on a grounder with runners on second and third and two outs.

"When I came up at the end, I did want to avoid her," said Jorgensen.

However, pitching forgives everything. Bresnahan was so good only one one run was needed. Synan and Jorgensen produced it and, at last, Quincy came up a winner of a 1-0 final in a tournament thriller.

"What I liked was the way we kept battling. We could have been discouraged by a lot of the hard-hit balls which went for outs, but we kept taking good swings," said Sommers.

Parry, Papile, Walker, McColgan and Kelsey Tucker (the winning pitchers against North) graduate.



QUINCY FIREBALLER Saxon Bresnahan was dominating against Plymouth North, striking out 10 and giving up just one hit in the Presidents' 1-0 win over the Blue Eagles.

Quincy Sun Photos/Larry Carchedi

QUINCY LEFT FIELDER Dana Varmahmoodi comes up with the defensive play of the game against Plymouth North, stretching out to snag a long fly to end the seventh inning.

This was a team who richly enjoyed playing softball and playing together as teammates. The seniors had a lot to do with the good feeling that surrounded the ball club.

"They loved playing softball. They had fun with the game. It was one of the best groups I've worked with," said Sommers.

Bresnahan is back for what should be a four-star senior year. Avitabile returns behind the plate. Kelly, Varmahmoodi and McGahey return in the outfield. Jorgensen is back at first and McDonald is a proven defensive ace at third. There is talent arriving from the freshman and sophomore classes.

"I can't wait to get started," said Sommers.

Consultant To Review Housing Authority's Maintenance Dept.

By SCOTT JACKSON

The head of the Quincy Housing Authority plans to hire a consultant to review the agency's maintenance department, which would be the first step in a complete re-organization of QHA's maintence programs.

A recent report by the state's Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) found numerous problems at state-aided public housing units and commons areas managed by the Quincy Housing Authority. Problems identified in the report, dated April 30, include a leaking sprinkler system at Tobin Towers, mold/mildew growth in certain in-

Gen. Joseph Dunford Nominated By President Obama

Quincy Marine Next Corps Commandant

By SCOTT JACKSON

President Barack Obama has nominated Quincy native Gen. Joseph F. Dunford, Jr., to serve as the next commandant of the United States Marine Corps.

Dunford, a four-star general, has served as the commander of all American and allied forces in Afghanistan since February of last year. He would succeed Gen. James F. Amos in the top Marine Corps post if confirmed by the Senate.

GEN. JOSEPH F. DUNFORD, JR.

Dunford moved to Quincy when he was 12 and graduated from the former St. Ann's School and Boston College High School. Before enlisting in the Marine Corps, he graduated from St. Michael's College in Vermont.

Dunford's parents, Joseph Sr. and Katherine, reside in Merrymount. Reached by phone the day after their son's nomination, his father said they're proud of their son.

"Obviously as parents we're proud of his accomplishments and in Houghs Neck and across the city. Since the league's inception, more than 2,000 children have participated in the organization which emphasizes team, sportsmanship, and "a little bit about baseball." Children ages 3-7 participate with games held on Saturday mornings at LaBrecque Field.

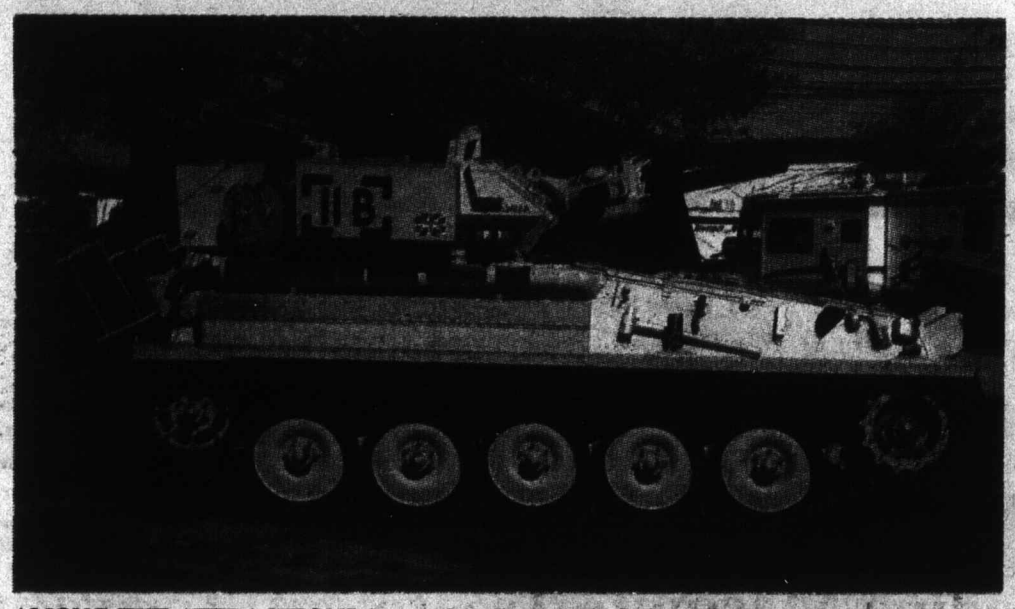
"The Batsons took it upon themselves to create an opportunity for young people to play," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. Thousands of children have benefitted because Cris and Wayne so willingly gave of themselves purely for the enjoyment and participation of Quincy's youth."

The proud parents of two sons, Liam (18) and Griffin (13), Cris and Wayne continue to do much of the behind-the-scenes work while endlessly crediting all of the volunteers, past and present, as the key to the success of the league.



AMONG THE ATTRACTIONS featured in Saturday's Quincy Flag Day Parade is this 1974 Alvis FV101 (Scorpion) British tank. The vehicle was in service with the British Army from 1974 to 1996 and was deployed in the United Kingdom and Germany.

The award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club and originator of the Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

Quincy resident and Fox 25 news anchor Sorboni Banerjee will serve as Grand Marshal of the parade which steps off at 7 p.m. from Coddington Street before making its way to Hancock Street, turning right onto Merrymount Parkway, and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field.

A number of bands will join in the procession, including the Boston Crusaders, Waltham Legion Band, Boston Crusaders Senior Corps, and the combined Quincy/North Quincy High School band.

In addition to the bands, honor guards representing the Massachusetts State Police, Quincy Police Department and Quincy Fire Department, two antique fire engines from the Bare Cove Fire Museum, a host of specialty units including a British Tank, National Guard Armored Vehicles, stilt-walker Rick Cobban, various floats and, the parade highlight, nearly 2,000 flag-waving youngsters from youth organizations citywide will participate in the 1.5 mile march.

The parade will culminate into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of a 30' x 60'-version of Old Glory, patriotic performance by Sgt. Dan Clark "The Singing Trooper," and presentation of the Grand Marshal award and Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award.

The evening is capped off by a dazzling fireworks display over Black's Creek that will be shot off at approximately 9:15 p.m. There is no rain date for the parade, but if conditions are unfavorable the fireworks display will be rescheduled for a date to be announced.

For information on the Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration, contact the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1251.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY will culminate the city's 63rd annual Quincy Flag Day Celebration Saturday at Pageant Field. The fireworks will be shot off over Black's Creek at approximately 9:15 p.m. The evening will also feature the raising of a 30-foot by 60-foot American flag. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

City Appeals Flood Maps

Challenges Science FEMA Used To Create Them

The City on Tuesday submitted a broad-ranging appeal of the flood maps dictated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, challenging the science behind the maps on a neighborhood-by-neighborhood basis.

The City filed what is a called a Letter of Map Revision, seeking to alter the newly drawn flood maps, which added 1,400 new properties to the flood zone and elevated the risk level for 2,700 properties already in the flood zone. All properties in the entire City affected by the new maps are part of the appeal.

"This is a methodical, rational and substantive response to the flood maps issued by the federal government, and it's the approach our team believes has the greatest chance of success on a neighborhood and even home-by-home basis," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

The appeal includes a 60-page narrative and extensive modeling data submitted to FEMA on a computer disk. In addition to the data points used in the citywide appeal, the City is taking the extra step of providing individual elevation certificates and technical assistance for residents to file their own personal appeals, called a Letter of Map Amendment.

The City's engineering team, led by the firm of Woodard and Curran, submitted an appeal that challenges FEMA on a number of different scientific fronts, including storm surge projections, wave characteristics, property elevations where flooding is possible, and erosion estimates. In addition, the appeal provides detailed information on flood prevention efforts made by the City that were not taken into account by the new FEMA maps. That includes sea wall repairs, tide gate operations, pumping stations and drainage projects.

The appeal process is expected to take between 6 months to 1 year, and the City's engineering team will be meeting with FEMA officials in the near future to lay out the path forward.

Survey work for individual elevation certificates is ongoing and does not have a deadline. Residents, more than 1,000 of whom have signed up for assistance from the City, are expected to receive the certificate several weeks after survey work is completed in specific neighborhoods.

City Expanding Mosquito Treatment, Targets Catch Basins

Mayor Thomas Koch announces plans for an expanded mosquito control program in the City by targeting a prime breeding ground for the potentially dangerous pests – standing water in the more than 9,000 catch basins and storm drains citywide.

Beginning this month, the Department of Public Works will begin dropping non-toxic mosquito treatment into catch basins across the City, with the program largely running in conjunction with the expanded catch basin cleaning program that began last year.

"Mosquito control is a major quality-of-life issue in our neighborhoods during the summer months, but it is also a public health concern because of the prevalence of West Nile Virus and EEE," said Mayor Koch. "We wanted to find a way to do more – to complement the spraying by Norfolk County Mosquito Control in a way that safely targets some of the most prevalent breeding areas, and this plan does that."

The Mayor tasked the Health Department and DPW to come up with the plan, and it will be carried out by a licensed pesticide applicator already working for the DPW. Until several years ago, municipalities were allowed to drop treatments into catch basins without a pesticide license, and a new bill on Beacon Hill is revisiting license regulations in response to cities and towns that want to treat catch basins.

"This plan works well together with our drain cleaning program, and we have a licensed pesticide applicator on our crew, so I think we're a step or two ahead of other communities when it comes to ramping up mosquito-control efforts," said Raymondi.

The City will use non-toxic briquettes of a pesticide called Altosid, which prevents mosquitos from growing into full-sized biting adults but it is not harmful to the fish population or any other animals who may come into contact with it.

The expanded program will cost about $15,000.

In addition, the Norfolk County Mosquito Control District has announced that spraying in Quincy this year will take place on Thursday evenings.

For further information about the County spraying program, call 781-762-3681 or visit the program's website at www.norfolkcounty-mosquito.org.

Keenan Office Hours Monday

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

Approximately a dozen years ago, women began to come to the realization that they did not have to wait for someone to give them a diamond ring. Instead of relying on men to place a diamond engagement ring on the ring fingers of their left hands, many women decided instead to purchase diamond rings for themselves. Women need no additional reason to do so other than that they want to and can. Diamond "right hand rings" are worn on the ring finger of the right hand to symbolize the strength and independence that define today's powerful and passionate women. Right hand rings not only directly reflect women's personal taste and style, they also declare their independence.

Diamond Right Hand Rings are a great way for a woman to assert her individuality. They have been worn for years as a fashion symbol. The right-hand diamond ring represents a symbol of your success and should fit your personality. New trends in diamond rings allow you to carefully select your perfect ring. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find an amazing selection of unique rings, watches and earrings. Contact us at 617-773-3636 and get ready for some shopping!

Sister Surprise

Quincy High School's graduation June 2 was already shaping up to be an emotional night for senior Kayla McArdle.

The class president had a heavy heart as she prepared to address her fellow graduates, family, friends and other guests assembled at Veterans' Memorial Stadium on a perfect picture-postcard evening. Very much on her mind was one of her best friends – Lamar Thompson – a classmate who tragically drowned two years ago this summer.

Noticeably absent for Kayla, too, was her older sister, Samantha. Sam, a 2013 graduate of QHS, enlisted in the Navy last July and had been home only once (in February) since being stationed at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

"I was upset Sam wasn't going to be there at my graduation," Kayla thought moments before the ceremony.

Or so she thought.

After Kayla received her diploma, she descended the platform and received well wishes from a host of school and elected officials. Among those in the line was her dean, Ellen Sullivan, who had helped her get through the tragic loss of Lamar.

"She hugged and kissed me on the cheek and told me she loved me," Kayla recalled.

But there was one more person in line.

Who could this be?

"I didn't even look up at the person," Kayla said. "I had hugged everyone in line and I put my arms out to hug this person and I only saw the uniform."

It was a Navy work uniform.

"I looked up and I saw Sam. I thought 'no, that's not actually Sam.'"

It took a few milliseconds to process but there in the flesh was her best friend, her sister Sam.

"I just lost it," Kayla said, smiling at her sister.

That would be the first frame of some wonderful Kodak moments that followed.

As the two sisters embraced, they heard their mom, Dawn, scream from the bleachers, "Oh my God, that's Sam!" She ran down to join her daughters.

The two sisters then shared this humorous exchange.

"I asked how did she get here and Sam answered 'by plane.'

"I just hugged her I was so happy," Kayla said.

Big sister Sam had pulled off the surprise of the year in the McArdle clan.

But it took another surprise to set up the graduation shock.

Although she had thought about coming back for the graduation, Sam – an information technician assigned to shore duty – didn't think it was going to happen.

"I was talking to Kayla and she said she was nervous about writing her speech (as the class president). I was thinking I couldn't help her prepare the speech and it made me sad. I asked my chief 'do you think it's possible that I could take leave and go home?'

"He said, 'No, you have to stay. You're the only one who does your job here.'"

Sam knew what she was signing up for after enlisting in the Navy. A five-year commitment to Uncle Sam where duty comes first, family second. There would be times that she wanted to be home but she just couldn't.

But then, about a week before the graduation, came the unexpected.

"My chief says, 'So, McArdle, you got everything done?' and I said 'Yes, Chief.

"He then says, 'Go buy your plane ticket.'"

Sam was astonished. Because she would be heading home on such short notice, she decided to keep her plans to herself.

"I decided not to tell anyone. I'll just show up and surprise everyone," she recalled.

Operation Sam Surprise was in full motion.

Sam emailed QHS Dean Karen McPartlin that she was heading home to Quincy. The dean was among only a select few who knew Sam's secret plan.

After a 13 1/2 hour flight with one stop in San Francisco, Sam landed at Logan Airport at 7:30 a.m. last Monday - about 10 and a half hours before graduation. A friend's mom picked her up at the airport and Sam "hid" at the friend's house in Houghs Neck until it was time to go to Veterans' Stadium.

Sam was tempted to make her arrival known before graduation, though.

"I wanted to show up at my mom's work and just say 'Hi' but I felt it would be a better surprise if nobody knew when I got to the graduation," Sam said.

Kayla, age 18, and Sam, 19, are the daughters of Dawn and Joe McArdle. Only 18 months apart in age, they've grown up together more than just sisters. They are best friends - virtually inseparable. At Quincy High, they both played on the same basketball and lacrosse teams.

"We've always been together," Kayla says with Sam by her side at The Quincy Sun office. "Even if we got into some arguments over stupid things, 10 minutes later it would be over."

Sam adds:

"We've never been apart. We shared a room since the day she was born. I had my own room until she was born," she says, both laughing.

The only thing that separates them now is the 5,000 miles between Honolulu and Quincy. They text and call each other frequently - despite the six-hour time difference.

"Even though we are far apart distance wise, our friendship has not changed," Kayla says. "It's effortless. We can tell each other everything."

"We are very close," Sam says. "We try to talk to each other every day but it's difficult with the time difference. I work during the day and where I work is a secret space so you're not allowed to bring cell phones inside.

"When I get out of work, it's late here (in Quincy) and Kayla is sometimes asleep."

The cell phone – the great distance unifier – almost blew Sam's cover in Quincy.

"Kayla called me when I was in Quincy. It would have been 4 a.m. Hawaii time and I wasn't even thinking. I just answered the phone and she asked, 'Why are you awake?'

"I told her I couldn't sleep and I went to get a coffee. I had to think fast - I almost blew it."

When Sam picked up that phone call, it was about noon and Kayla was driving to get some gas.

"I had forgotten to call her back from the night before," Kayla explains. "So I called her because she had sent me a snapchat of her in a car. And she had her make-up done.

"I called her and asked her 'why is your makeup done

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On June 27, 1939, one of the most famous scenes in movie history is filmed -- Rhett Butler and Scarlett O'Hara parting in "Gone With the Wind." The scene also was shot using an alternate line, "Frankly, my dear, I just don't care," in case the film censors objected to the word "damn." The film was approved, but producer David O. Selznick was fined $5,000 for including the curse.

• On June 25, 1942, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower becomes commander of all U.S. troops in the European theater of World War II. He would be appointed Supreme Allied Commander of all forces in Europe in 1943. "Ike" later would become America's 34th president.

• On June 26, 1959, the St. Lawrence Seaway is officially opened, creating a navigational channel from the Atlantic Ocean to all the Great Lakes. The seaway -- made up of a system of canals, locks and dredged waterways -- extends a distance of nearly 2,500 miles, from the Atlantic Ocean to Duluth, Minn.

• On June 24, 1966, the United States Senate passes what will become the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act. Among the first safety standards adopted were seat belts, impact-absorbing steering columns and standardized bumper heights.

• On June 29, 1970, U.S. ground troops end two months of combat operations in Cambodia and return to South Vietnam. News of the crossing into Cambodia set off a wave of antiwar demonstrations, including one at Kent State University in Ohio that resulted in the killing of four students by Army National Guard troops.

• On June 23, 1989, the film version of the DC Comics hero Batman is released in theaters. Warner Brothers hyped "Batman" as a major summer "event" long before its release. The results were stunning, as the film grossed some $100 million in its first 10 days.

• On June 28, 1997, Mike Tyson bites a chunk out of Evander Holyfield's ear in the third round of their heavyweight rematch. After the fight resumed, Tyson bit Holyfield's other ear. With 10 seconds left in the third round, Tyson was disqualified from the match and suspended from boxing.

McIntyre Praises Graduates' Ideals

By SCOTT JACKSON

In his speech to the 1,103 combined graduates of Quincy High, North Quincy, and the Vocational-Technical School, Mayor James R. McIntyre praised the students for their values, particularly the willingness to question traditional policies and values.

Reflecting on the Vietnam War and other issues facing the nation, McIntyre said the graduates' accomplishments and ideals reflected those of two prominent Quincy natives – Presidents John and John Quincy Adams.

"You Quincy students reflect the accomplishments and ideals of these two men. We parents, administrators, teachers, and friends can recall when the aims of sons and daughters was to grow into a society of elders," the mayor stated during his speech at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

"But you – inexperienced and untouched by the depressions, dictators, tyranny, world wars, and times when communism meant Stalin's death camps and Hungary – bring us to an unrelenting questioning of traditional values and policies of the elders."

"You see the inconsistencies between rhetoric and reality. You see poverty in Appalachia and here in Quincy, and the very wealthy paying no taxes at all.

"You see the hunger and malnutrition in all areas of our nation, and the government subsidies to farmers who do not grow crops.

"And you young men and women sitting before me question a war which siphons funds from education, medicine, transportation, space exploration – all areas of American society – to support a struggle which seems to be widening, not ending."

"You question the rationale behind this misuse of our young high school and college graduates. As a father I welcome this questioning. And I think this dissent of youth reflects the questions we adults are asking ourselves."

The graduating class's chosen theme was 'Listen!' Students Beth Gabel and David Fingers of North Quincy High and Carla Errichiello and David Goroff of Quincy High all reflected on the theme in their speeches.

Christine Wahlberg, president of the QHS graduating class, gave the welcome. North class president Michael Martin introduced the mayor.

3,000 YOUNGSTERS IN FLAG DAY PARADE

Stars and stripes by the thousands were expected in Quincy as nearly 3,000 boys and girls planned to march in the annual Koch Club Flag Day Parade.

"It should be one of the most colorful Flag Day parades ever seen in the city," said Richard J. Koch, executive director.

In addition to the 1,500 members of the Koch Club's baseball and softball teams – all in new hats and uniforms – Quincy's Little League baseball players, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Camp Fire Girls were provided with flags to carry in the parade and take home after.

Nine drum and bugle corps were to provide music during the parade and the city's veteran, civic, and fraternal organizations had been invited to march from the Vo-Tech to Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

A flag raising ceremony and brief program were planned at the stadium.

SIDEWALK BAZAAR PLANNED

An old fashioned bazaar – the city's first – was planned for July.

Burton Cook of Tags Sleep and Lounge Shop was named chairman of the special event, formerly dubbed the 'Shopperstown Sidewalk Bazaar.' Cook wanted the bazaar to be more than just sales gimmick.

"We would like this to be more than just a merchants sale promotion," he explained. "We want it to be a friendly community-type event that many groups and organizations can participate in."

Walk Raises More Than $30,000 For JDRF

On Saturday, May 31, the Quincy public schools, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) and with families, friends, and teachers, participated in the fourth annual "The JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes."

Under gloriously sunny skies, several hundred walkers turned out this year to walk for a cure. This capped off six weeks of collecting pledges and donations by the students from Beechwood Knoll, Bernazanni, Merrymount, Montclair, Lincoln Hancock, Clifford Marshall, Squantum, Parker Elementary Schools, and Atlantic, Central and Sterling Middle Schools. Many of the students used very innovative fundraising techniques such as yard sales, lemonade stands, videos and student presentations to their schools, as well as Type 1 Diabetic (T1D) children and their families sharing their personal experiences.

While pledges and donations continue to be collected and counted, thus far this event has raised more than $30,000 this year. It also gives the children in our community an opportunity to learn about healthy eating and living.

This year the walk was fortunate enough to partner with and wanted to acknowledge our wonderful sponsors and supporters, including Mayor Tom Koch, Supt. Rick DeCristofaro, state Rep. Bruce Ayers, and City Councillors Doug Gutro and Kirsten Hughes. We were also incredibly fortunate enough to have Quincy's finest police officers volunteer their time and talents. SOU Lt. Tom Corliss, Sgt. Patrick Buonaugurio, Sgt. Mark Kennedy, Sgt. Dan Flaherty, Community Police officers Sean Glennon, Greg Mar, Bill Mitchell, Tim Simmons, SOU Officers (motorcycles) Pat Calabro, MJ O'Brien, EJ Hartnet, Jay Borden, and Sean Kelley, in addition to the Quincy Fire Department for kicking off the walk with a truck leading the way. All worked incredibly hard to provide and ensure a safe walking route and showed their support for this important cause while doing so.

A very special shout-out to the North Quincy ROTC members who showed such dedication and hard work in assisting with water stations and food preparation and serving. We also wanted to thank the City of Quincy Food Services, Quincy Public Schools, Beechwood Knoll Elementary for hosting, CeQur Corporation, Papa Ginos, Buccini's Mr. Subs, Edible Arrangements, Hannafords, Roche Bros, Coffee Break Café, Stop and Shop, Star/Shaws, Panera, Patriot Cinemas, Sparkles The Clown, and DJ Neil McCole. The support of the principals at each participating school, as well as the school nurses who care for many of these children on a daily basis are also honored.

The JDRF is the largest organization that funds type 1 diabetes (T1D) research in the world. Their goal is to lesson or remove the impact of T1D from people's lives until we achieve a world without T1D. More than 80 percent of JDRF's expenditures directly support research and research-related education. There was a great community turnout and participation in this year's walk, with this year only being only the fourth year -- and our goal is for that to continue to grow.

There promises to be more fun and excitement for the fifth annual in May 2015!

Some Fine V.A. Hospitals Here

Please do not think all V.A. hospitals are the same.

We are blessed with three great V.A. hospitals in the Boston area. Brockton, West Roxbury and Jamaica Plain for over 30 years I have been a patient at all three. My primary hospital is Brockton. I go to West Roxbury for my lungs and Jamaica Plain for scans and MRI's. You cannot ask for better care than you get at all three hospitals.

Due to the amount of fellow veterans coming home from war and needing care, my appointments are every year instead of every six months.

I am glad they are doing this so they can treat more.

Not to worry. They all have some emergency service so you are safe 24-7.

John Isaac

Duty, Honor, Sacrifice

Recently, there have been many news stories, commentaries and editorials on bad things happening in the V.A. system with many veterans dying while waiting for needed appointments. The new V.A. secretary just announced another new 18 veterans added to the list of those dying out in Phoenix.

The news also of a trade to get back an alleged deserter by handing back five top Taliban operatives has outraged many Americans. The president has stated he won't apologize for anything. I guess that probably means there's apparently nothing to apologize for those veterans left out in the cold from V.A. medical centers across America, too?

This coming weekend, we will celebrating both Flag Day in Quincy and Bunker Hill Day in Charlestown where duty, honor and sacrifice still mean something for Americans.

Inside North Quincy High School is a quote that says it all, "It is foolish and wrong to mourn the men who died. Rather we should thank God that such mean lived." That was said by General George S. Patton, Jr.. Enough said!

DOROTHY QUINCY HOMESTEAD will be open for public tours on Saturday, June 14 between 1 and 4 p.m. The National Historic Landmark is located at Butler Road and Hancock Street. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open For Public Tours Saturday

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for public tours on Saturday, June 14 between 1 and 4 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

The Homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy.

Dating from 1686, the house is 328 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the pre-Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

Quincy Homestead is operated by the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Besides June 14, the Homestead will also be open to the public on July 12 from 1 to 4 p.m. and on Aug. 2, Sept. 6 and Oct. 4 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the Discover Quincy Days.

Groups may request a private tour on a date of their choice by phoning 617-742-3190 or emailing nscda-ma@verizon.net. For more information, visit the Homestead's website: http://www.nscda.org/ma/quincy_homestead.php.

Father's Day Programs Sunday At Adams National Historical Site

Free Admission For Fathers, Sons, Brothers

The Adams National Historical Park will present several programs in honor of Father's Day Sunday, June 15.

On Sunday, June 15, between 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., meet "John Adams" at his farm at the foot of Penn's Hill (133-141 Franklin St., Quincy) as he discusses the perils and pitfalls of raising and educating his "little flock" in the tumultuous times in which he lived.

"The Education of our Children is never out of my Mind," John Adams declared.

In 1774, he entreated Abigail to "Fire them with Ambition to be usefull" and "Fix their Ambition upon great and solid Objects." John lamented his absence from home, "With my Family of Children ought I not to have staid at home, minded their Education and sought their Advancement in Life!"

Join historical reenactor Michael Lepage and get an intimate look at the now-famous correspondence between John Adams and his "dearest friend" Abigail as they discuss the education of their children in an age of revolution.

Also on Sunday, June 15, from 1 to 1:30, 2 to 2:30 and 3 to 3:30 p.m., join Park Ranger Joseph McLaughlin at the 1873 Carriage House (135 Adams St., Quincy) and discover the compelling tale of Dr. Joseph Warren, a remarkable man whose life and legacy "is all but forgotten, buried beneath the dust of time."

On hearing of the fall of Dr. Joseph Warren at the battle of Bunker's Hill on June 17, 1775, Abigail Adams picked up her pen and wrote that she wished she "could contradict the report of the Doctors Death, but tis a lamentable Truth, and the tears of multitudes pay tribute to this memory." Examine images, maps, and documents that illuminate the battle, and view a "study portrait" of Dr. Joseph Warren by famous American painter of Revolutionary figures, John Singleton Copley.

Fathers, sons, and brothers enjoy free admission to tours of the historic homes on Father's Day. The Fathers' Day programs are free and open to the public.

Reservations are not required.

For more information about tours, programs, special events, and family activities at Adams National Historical Park, call the Visitor Center at 617.770.1175 or visit www.nps.gov/adam.

Catherine Lynde Honored For Distinguished Service

Quincy resident Catherine Lynde, an associate professor of economics at the University of Massachusetts Boston, was presented with the Chancellor's Award for Distinguished Service at the university's 46th commencement ceremony on May 30.

Professor Lynde is an accomplished scholar of macroeconomics, productivity growth, health care, and public policy, but she has also made an enormous impact outside the classroom. During her 29 years at UMass Boston, Lynde has built an admirable record of service to the campus and the community at large, holding a variety of leadership positions at critical junctures in the university's history. She has served as associate provost, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts, chair of the Economics Department, and co-director of the Center for Women in Politics and Public Policy.

Off campus, Lynde was a longtime member of the Board of Directors for the Quincy nonprofit DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended). She currently sits on the Health Care Working Group of the Governor's Council to Address Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence.

"She has helped to make her community safer, her department more effective, her college better, her union stronger and more responsible, and her university improved in many ways," the Chancellor's Award review committee wrote.

Lynde retired from UMass Boston this spring.

Kathleen Flaherty Graduates Sarah Lawrence College

Kathleen R. Flaherty, daughter of Celeste and Edward Flaherty of Quincy, recently earned a Bachelor of Arts in the Liberal Arts from Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, NY.

Flaherty is a 2010 graduate of North Quincy High School.

While at Sarah Lawrence College, Flaherty concentrated in psychology. She was a research intern at NYU Langone Medical Center, a research assistant at the Sarah Lawrence Cognition and Emotion Lab, a teaching intern at the Sarah Lawrence Early Childhood Center, a theatre outreach teacher at Graham School, and senior class president.

Flaherty plans to pursue a PhD in clinical psychology.

Armando Peduzzi Celebrates 90th Birthday

Longtime Quincy resident Armando Peduzzi recently celebrated his 90th birthday with family and friends at a party held at Alba in Quincy.

Born June 4, 1924 in Schignano, Italy (Lake Como), Mr. Peduzzi has lived in Quincy for 66 years. After World War II, at the age of 22 years, he learned that he was eligible for U.S. citizenship since his parents were U.S. citizens prior to Armando's birth in Italy. He traveled to the U.S. on a naturalization U.S. passport in 1947.

Armando married Celia Paoletti at St. John's Church in Quincy on July 4, 1952. Celia was also from Italy (Ascoli Piceno) and immigrated to the U.S. in 1948. They both met in Quincy and were married for 60 years. (Celia passed away last year.)

Mr. Peduzzi is the father of five daughters: Mary, Anita, Nancy, Giselle and Amanda. Anita passed away in 2001. He also has seven grandchildren: Charles, Joseph, Ann Marie, Nick, James, Brian and Christopher.

Armando worked at Boston Gear Works (union) for 15 years before becoming laid off from work. Immediately after getting laid off, he work at Milton's clothing store. He worked in shipping and receiving, and was the "father of the bride" for all modeling shows. He was also a hairdresser and an artist.

Armando has painted numerous beautiful oil paintings mostly by memory of his hometown. He has donated a beautiful portrait painting of President John F. Kennedy to the Kennedy Senior Center in North Quincy.

Armando was born and raised in a family of culinary arts and food, and was a chef most of his early life. Today, he is most famous for his Italian cooking and his art work. In addition, Armando is an ardent soccer fan, and "International" (Italian team) is his number one favorite. He thoroughly enjoys doing Italian crossword puzzles, is an avid reader, loves his iPad and continues to paint. He hopes to sell his paintings someday.

"I am proud to say that my father at the age of 90 years is most vibrant, carefree lovable most intelligentman I know. Everyone loves Armando and feels honored to know him," his daughter, Nancy, says.

WHAT'S COOKING
with
Marie & Suzie
By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Stuffed Mussels

One of our family's favorite appetizers is stuffed clams – especially in the summer.

Last week I found a great recipe for stuffed mussels which was a surprise because I've made mussels a couple of ways, but never stuffed. I liked the results and so did everyone else.

Stuffed Mussels

1 pound mussels
2 garlic cloves (chopped)
3 tablespoons olive oil

In a skillet, heat the oil and the garlic and place the mussels, cover and steam until they are opened. (Discard the ones that are closed.) While they are cooking, prepare the stuffing.

Stuffing for Mussels
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
2 tablespoon of olive oil
1 tablespoon fresh parsley (chopped)
juice of one lemon

Mix all ingredients together and add a smidgen of water if too dry.

When the mussels are done, remove the shells from the top and place each mussel on a cookie sheet. Place the stuffing on the top of each one and broil until done (it only takes a couple of minutes so you have to watch until they are bubbly.) Serve with extra lemon juice.

Greek Layer Dip

Everyone loves to dip! Especially during spring and summer parties and potlucks. I have learned over the years to substitute full fat Greek yogurt instead of sour cream for my dips.

Full fat yogurt is far healthier than it's non-fat varieties. It helps you to feel more full, assists in the absorption of calcium, and as you will learn from my recipes, good fats do not make you fat.

Current scientific studies are showing that these fats are not the culprits, but rather the fillers that take their place when they turn "fat free" indeed, are.

This is colorful, delicious and fun to prepare. Get the family involved and serve with organic pita chips or rice chips. You will be the hit of the party.

- ½ cup roasted (jarred) red peppers DRAINED WELL (I put mine in a strainer and get all the water out)
- 1 ¾ cup full fat Greek yogurt (I use FAGE) or 2% if you can not find full fat
- 1 clove minced garlic
- 1 tsp dried oregano
- sea salt and pepper
- 1 container of hummus of your choice (I enjoy garlic lovers or lemon for this recipe)
- 1 cup chopped baby spinach
- 1 cup chopped and well washed cucumber (I like keeping the skin on for important nutrients, as long as it is an organic cucumber so you don't have to worry about pesticide residue)
- 2/3 cup pitted chopped kalamata olives
- 1 cup goat milk feta cheese (this is easier to digest than cows milk cheese and available pretty much everywhere now)
- 1 cup chopped cherry or grape tomatoes placed in a bowl and tossed with olive oil, sea salt, and pepper.
- About ½ cup red onions chopped fine
- 1 cup of green peppers, chopped fine
- Simply mix red peppers, yogurt, garlic, oregano, sea salt and pepper in a food processor or blender until smooth but do NOT over mix or it will turn into liquid. Go very gently just to mix peppers and ingredients. It should be still creamy and not watery.

Spoon into 9-inch pie plate. Next spread hummus over as carefully as you are able to. Sprinkle with spinach.

Layer your dip with cucumbers (evenly) followed by olives, cheese, seasoned tomatoes, red onions, and green peppers,

Chill at least an hour before serving. Serve with pita or rice chips! Enjoy!!!

Quincycles 17-Mile Coastal Ride Saturday

Quincycles welcomes bicyclists to join its "Second Saturday Ride" this Saturday, June 14.

The 17-mile "coastal tour ride" will begin at 7:30 a.m. at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St. and will ride along Wollaston Beach to Squantum, Marina Bay, and on to UMass and JFK Library, taking advantage of the brand-new sidewalk path alongside Dorchester Bay on Morrissey Boulevard in Boston.

The ride is mostly flat and will be about 17 miles.

Those with questions, or seeking additional information can email info@quincycles.org or call 617-471-0258.

The full 2014 Ride Schedule is posted on the website at www.Quincycles.org.

Quincycles is a group of Quincy residents advocating for bicycle infrastructure on Quincy's city streets and promoting responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise.

Quincy Choral Society To Perform At Music Fest, Fireworks June 21

The Quincy Choral Society will sing at the 2nd annual Milton Music Fest and Fireworks on Saturday, June 21 at 8:55 pm.

The chorus will present a 25-minute program of patriotic music prior to the fireworks display. Music will include "Let Freedom Ring" by Roy Harris and Irving Berlin's "God Bless America" with chorus and soloist Judy Stafford.

The event will be held at The Trustees of Reservations' Governor Hutchinson's Field, just off Adams Street in Milton, overlooking the Neponset River.

The Music Fest is sponsored by WeAreMilton 2014 and runs all day. For a preview, go to wearemilton.org for a video of last year's festival.

On July 11 at 12 noon, the chorus will participate in the celebration of John Quincy Adams' birthday at the Church of the Presidents (the United First Parish Church), 1306 Hancock St., Quincy. In a tradition started by Lyndon B. Johnson, the sitting President of the United States authorizes a commemorative wreath be laid on the tomb of a former president on his birthday.

The wreath laying ceremony will be held at the United First Parish Church, commemorating the anniversary of John Quincy Adams' birth in 1767. The ceremony includes remarks about the life and legacy of the sixth president and music performed by the Quincy Choral Society including "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men" by Ralph Vaughn Williams and "America."

Germantown Center/South Shore YMCA Recognize Community Partners, Volunteers

Tuesday After School Programs A Success

With a half day every Tuesday, students from Quincy's Snug Harbor Elementary School in grades 1 through 5 had the opportunity to enjoy enrichment programs tailored to their age level at The Germantown Neighborhood Center.

First and second graders participated in Reading Round-Up & Swim while third through fifth graders had HangTime Tuesday.

These programs would not be possible without the generosity of not only resources, but spirit of our many community partners and volunteers.

Staff of the Germantown Neighborhood Center, assisted by the Quincy YMCA Aquatics Program, student volunteers of Eastern Nazarene College, Thomas Crane Public Library, Sullivan Tire as well as community volunteers supplemented the children's education with a five-pronged approach that included reading, swimming, music, homework time and arts and crafts.

At the Quincy YMCA, the children loved receiving swimming instruction from beginner through advanced levels, led by SSYMCA and Germantown Neighborhood Center Staff in the new state of the art facility. This warm aquatic environment was particularly appreciated during the many frigid Tuesday afternoons this winter.

As guests of Eastern Nazarene College each week, the children had the incredible opportunity to be on a beautiful campus and receive tutoring in math and reading from ENC students. ENC graciously allowed the use of their music facilities for lessons. In the future, we hope to implement a Sci-Math curriculum, which is the mathematical application of science.

A special thanks to Lori Seegraber, Branch Librarian of the Adams Shore Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy. Her leadership, combined with the efforts of more than 20 dynamic Reading Round-Up volunteers made learning to read a joyful experience for the first and second graders. Because of their dedication, the children not only learned to read (or read better). They developed self-confidence, increased their self-esteem and established supportive friendships with caring adults.

Through the generosity of Paul Sullivan of Sullivan Tire, every week the students in Reading Round-Up received new books as gifts to enjoy at home. This special contribution helped to increase their excitement as they looked forward to what each Tuesday would bring to their newly developing literary lives.

Many thanks also go to the Snug Harbor School for their support and to the students' parents for their cooperation and kindness during the school year.

A wonderful Volunteer Appreciation Lunch was enjoyed by over 25 guests at The Germantown Neighborhood Center on May 20th. Chef Karen Veneto-Montes prepared delicious quiche, fruit salad, a vegetable tray and served peach and blackberry pies. Each volunteer received a gift plant generously donated by Trader Joe's in Hingham.

Executive Director Kathy Quigley thanked the volunteers and let them know that, "Your time is more valuable than you realize. The time you spend helping the children is going to follow them throughout their entire lives because you've have given them so much of yourself!"

After lunch, the children regaled the Volunteers and parents with a song and dance program, led by Music Director David-Christopher James.

Everyone at The Germantown Neighborhood Center is looking forward to more rewarding experiences and successes next September.

DPW Budget, Traffic Dept. Merger Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

After being placed on hold for two weeks, the City Council approved the Department of Public Works' budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed FY15 budget sets the DPW's budget at $5.7 million, up from $4.4 million in FY14. A large portion of that increase is due to the merger of the Traffic Department into DPW.

The budget for the DPW was placed on hold by Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci two weeks ago. Palmucci was concerned the city has yet to hire a new traffic engineer to replace Jack Gillon, who retired last October. The position's budgeted salary in FY15 was reduced from the previous fiscal year, from $103,599 to $101,000. It was the only position the mayor's salary commission recommended reducing the salary for.

At Monday's meeting Jim Fatseas, the mayor's chief of staff, said the city has offered the job to two candidates in recent weeks. The first candidate, Fatseas stated, declined the position because the city was 'way off the mark' from what the candidate wanted – Fatseas suggested a salary of $130,000 would not have been enough for the candidate. The second person, who turned down the job last week, decided to remain in his private sector position because he will earn a bonus from his current company this year. That candidate, Fatseas added, said the city could contact him about the position again at a later date.

According to Fatseas, the position has gone unfilled because qualified candidates prefer to remain with private firms and serve as consultants to communities instead of working full time for any one community.

"It's been more of a dearth of candidates," he said. "Perhaps it's a specialty you should tell your children to look into because there are not a lot of folks out there that are looking to do it in a municipal placement."

As an example, Fatseas noted Gillon worked for a private firm consulting multiple communities before Koch brought him back to Quincy for his second stint as the city's traffic engineer – Gillon decided to come back at the time in part because of his prior work in the city.

A team of city staffers, including city engineer Shawn Hardy and Frank Tramontozzi, a former MassDOT official now working with the city, as well as several DPW employees, are now filling in for the traffic engineer, according to Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi.

On Tuesday, mayor spokesman Chris Walker said the traffic engineer's position would be filled in the 'near future.'

The council's finance committee voted 7-1 in favor of approving the DPW budget. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee voted against the budget, because it contains raises recommended in the salary commission report. Among those is a raise for Raymondi, whose salary will receive a bump from $113,736 to $115,000.

Councillor Doug Gutro is in Pakistan this week with a group of municipal officials from Massachusetts and was unable to attend Monday's meeting.

While the budget for the DPW was placed on hold, other budgets falling under Raymondi's purview had been approved previously on May 27. They include the Engineering Department, whose budget will increase from $644,000 in FY14 to $680,000 in FY15 and the Drain Department, whose budget will go from $1.4 million to $1.6 million. The added money in the Drain Department is for expanded catch basin cleaning and tide gate repairs.

Also approved previously were the Water and Sewer Department Budgets, which are funded through enterprise accounts and not the city's general fund. The Water Enterprise Fund budget will increase from $16.1 million in FY14 to $16.7 million in FY15. The Sewer Enterprise Fund budget will go up from $22.8 million to $23.1 million.

Those departmental budgets were all approved by 8-1 votes, with McNamee opposed.

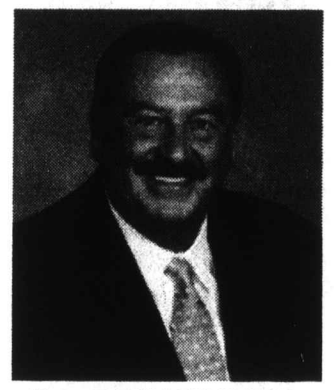
Charles Francis Adams II Award Recognizes Commitment To Preserving Parks, Open Spaces

Quincy Park Conservancy To Honor Rep. Mariano Tonight

The Quincy Park Conservancy will host the first annual Charles Francis Adams II Award reception Thursday (tonight) at Granite Links Golf Club Under the Tent from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $50 each and are available for purchase at the door.

Majority Leader and Quincy state Rep. Ron Mariano will receive the Conservancy's first annual Charles Francis Adams II award which honors an individual who has demonstrated a commitment to preserving Quincy's parks and open space areas. The award is named for Charles Francis Adams II who founded the city's first Park Commission and donated 83.5 acres of land, today known as Merrymount Park.



Rep. RON MARIANO

The Conservancy has partnered with the Quincy Park Department to create a trail system through Faxon Park as described in the Master Plan for Faxon Park. A portion of the proceeds from this event will be dedicated toward the design and construction of a ¾ mile loop trail through the park.

The Quincy Park Conservancy is a private non-profit organization dedicated to protecting and promoting parks, beaches, parkways and other open space areas in the City of Quincy for the use and enjoyment of residents, visitors and tourists.

Actor Johnny Depp Excites Fans Here

rior shots. She said Depp remained in character and in full makeup the entire time.

The film crew set up shop Monday at around 9 a.m., close to where Bulger lived with longtime girlfriend Catherine Greig between 1986 and 1995. Greig is being played by actress Sienna Miller.

Playing Lindsey Cyr—a Weymouth woman who claims to have had a child with Bulger in the 60s—is actress Dakota Johnson who was also on set.

Filming also took place on Commander Shea Blvd. where the bodies of several of Bulger's victims were dumped and subsequently discovered.

Depp celebrated his 51st birthday Monday on set.

James Stamos of Squantum said people were crowding on the sidewalk trying to catch a glimpse of Depp. "It was excitement but it also takes away a lot of the trauma of what happened," he said. Stamos, who used to deliver mail to the pair, said that when an elderly neighborhood woman fell sick, Greig brought her hot soup daily and Bulger brought her flowers on several occasions. "We never had issues with them," he said. "He was just a normal guy."

Bulger and Greig were arrested on June 22, 2011 in Santa Monica, California after being on the run since February 1995. He was sentenced to two life sentences plus five years for the murders of 11 people, drug trafficking, rackateering, money laundering, and extortion. Greig pleaded guilty in 2012 to harboring a fugitive and identity fraud. She was given an 8-year-prison sentence.

Quincy has been the backdrop to several major motion pictures including 2009's "The Box" featuring Cameron Diaz, 2012's "Here Comes the Boom" which starred Kevin James and filmed scenes in the old Quincy High School building, and 2007's "Gone Baby Gone" which featured actor Ben Affleck.

America's Roots: Ragtime Women At Library June 17

Contemporary pianist/composer Deborrah Wyndham will present "America's Roots: Ragtime Women" – an entertaining and informative account of the music of the dawn of the 20th century and the women who contributed to it – on Tuesday, June 17 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

DEBORRAH WYNDHAM

Wyndham has appeared on ABC Chicago, FOX and NBC and given over 3,000 performances nation-wide. With this history and the recent release of her first CD recording of all original instrumental piano music entitled "The Beginning", she has established herself as one of the most accomplished and inventive composers on the piano music scene today. Her original works reflect a unique, contemporary style all her own that lies in the realm somewhere between classical and jazz.

Wyndham has also performed in many large concert halls and theatres, colleges and universities, performing arts centers, museums, libraries, festivals, night clubs, private residences and more. In concert, she performs many of her original pieces as well as traditional jazz styles like ragtime, boogie woogie and her stride-inspired arrangements of up-tempo standards as well as classically-inspired, virtuosic and oftentimes polyrhythmic interpretations of jazz ballads.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Police Adding 14 Officers, Crime Predicting Software

gives the Police Department a total of $25.3 million – $822,000 more than the FY14 budget provided.

The addition of the 14 new officers will bring the Police Department's total number of patrol officers to 161. The FY14 budget had enough money for 149 patrol officers, though not all positions were ultimately filled because of the lengthy vetting process candidates undergo. The department will also have 49 superior officers – 30 sergeants, 14 lieutenants, four captains, and the chief – in FY15 as well as 44 traffic supervisors and 29 civilian employees.

The 14 new hires were sworn in earlier this year and have begun training at the MBTA's police academy in Braintree and the Plymouth police academy. Keenan said he sent the officers to training already because it isn't easy to find enough spots.

"It's very difficult in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to get a police academy," he noted. "We have a tremendous working relationship with the MBTA police and they afforded us 11 positions and we had three positions reserved at the Plymouth police academy. We wanted to make use of all those positions while we had the opportunity."

All the officers should be ready to join the force by August, Keenan noted. The 14 new hires will bring the total number of patrol officers above the 154 who were in the department when Keenan took over as chief six years ago. He noted there were 169 patrol officers on the force when he joined 31 years ago. Prior to that the city had as many as 188 patrol officers, though that was at a time when most officers walked their beats instead of using cruisers.

The chief said getting up to 161 officers would make a major impact but he would like to add more officers to that total.

"This is a step in the right direction, getting 161 patrol officers. I think it is going to make a huge impact on providing public safety and providing the necessary services for the city," Keenan said. "I'd like to see a little more hiring so I can do a little more outside the box with assignments and that type of thing. With your support, if the budget passes, we're headed in the right direction and we're in good shape."

Keenan added he would be comfortable with a total of 165 patrol officers. The department could lose one or two officers in the new fiscal year to retirement.

Also included in the budget is money to implement a new software system known as PredPol – short for predictive policing. The software can help the Police Department predict where a crime is likely to occur, based on previous incidents. The chief noted cities and towns already using PredPol have reported decreases in their crime rates.

"PredPol is new, innovative software. It doesn't just analyze crime and tell you where it happened. It actually analyzes crime, uses our data, and can predict where they think crime will happen. I think this will be invaluable. It can do it for just about any kind of crime, like pedestrian accidents, armed robberies, that type of thing," Keenan explained.

"A lot of the officers, through their intuition, know where the problems are in their areas. But looking at this software they'll be able to pop up on the screen in their cruiser and it will give them 12-hour updates... Every shift will have a new diagram and it will predict where potential problems could be so they can deploy [in] their spare time, for instance, if they predict there may be a problem.

"Communities that have implemented this, and there aren't that many, have noticed a 16 percent decrease in crime. I'm optimistic about that."

PredPol will cost the city $30,000 per year to use, according to mayoral spokesman Chris Walker.

The Police Department also added a 22-officer SWAT (special weapons and tactics) team, which began training this year. Funding for that was provided by a $125,000 grant from the Department of Homeland Security to purchase equipment and a transport vehicle for the SWAT team.

The Police Department's budget also includes funds to provide patrol officers a two percent raise, as provided for in their new contract. Keenan's base salary will increase from $122,245 to $128,000.

The finance committee approved the Police Department's budget in a 7-1 vote, with Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee voting in opposition. Councillor Doug Gutro was absent from Monday's meeting. He is part of a delegation of municipal officials on a 10-day trip to Pakistan.

Interactive Education Program Tuesday At Central

Quincy Public Schools, in collaboration with Impact Quincy, South Shore Hospital, and the Caron Foundation, will be host a program called Hidden in Plain Sight Tuesday, June 17 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at Central Middle School, 857 Hancock St., Quincy.

Hidden in Plain Sight is an interactive education program for parents/guardians featuring an exhibit where adults are encouraged to explore and interact with a display designed to resemble a teenager's bedroom. Throughout the exhibit are items that may indicate that a teenager may be involved in some high-risk behavior such as substance abuse, underage drinking, eating disorders, sexual activity, and other risky behavior.

Following exploration of the mock bedroom exhibit, there will be an informative presentation by guest speakers Kimberly Noble and Traci Wojciechowski.

Noble is the Youth Health Connection Coordinator at South Shore Hospital. The Youth Health Connection Program collaborates with community schools to educate children and families on how to reduce risk and build resiliency.

Wojciechowski is the Regional Director at the Caron Foundation Student Assistance Program. Her areas of expertise include adolescent tobacco use trends, drug and alcohol trends, tobacco cessation, psycho-educational support groups, curriculum development, implementation fidelity, leadership trainings, prevention programs and adult educational programs.

This presentation will be followed by a personal story by Nancy Holler, who is also a parent in Quincy.

Other speakers include Quincy Public Schools staff members, Jane Kisielius, RN MS NCSN and Kristin Houlihan, RN, who authored an informational booklet that will be given to all parents/guardians.

There is no charge to attend this program.

Former Drug Users Grateful For Quincy Court Program

8 Graduate At 12th Commencement Ceremony

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

When Judge Robert Ziemian initiated the first drug treatment court in New England in 1995, there was no indicator as to how large and how successful the program would grow to be.

Having eagerly maintained his efforts with the program, his ideas regarding alternative methods of dealing with drug-using criminal offenders eventually brought drug courts to Massachusetts, among them the highly successful program in the Quincy Court.

Last week the Quincy Division of the Trial Court Department of Massachusetts held its 12th commencement ceremony for graduates of the program, eight proud and grateful former drug users who otherwise would have been in jail.

Supporters of the day's events were so numerous there was a stream of standing-room-only attendees flowing into the corridors of the Francis X. Bellotti courthouse.

Among them were several elected officials from the South Shore, including Mayor Koch, who was recognized for his continued and adamant support for this program, and Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey.

In offering his congratulations to the graduates and his praises to "the many cogs that make this program possible," Morrissey said that last year there had been 61 deaths in Norfolk County related to drug abuse, "and those are the ones we know of."

Drug Court Coordinator Jo Rothman explained the program: "Drug Court is a behavior modification program for people whose drug and alcohol addictions have led them to criminal behavior or to failing traditional probation.

"There are some sitting among us for whom medication has not helped, and incarceration has not deterred. Each of these graduates has completed at least 18 months of drug court."

Attendees included Representative Tackey Chan, QPD Chief Keenan, several Massachusetts court judges, and law enforcement and representatives from surrounding towns. Former Quincy mayor William Phelan – currently Holbrook's Town Administrator – commented, as did many of the event's speakers, upon all the help and support offered in this program.

The help that Phelan referred to was a myriad of treatment professionals, service providers from several different organizations in the state, probation officers, counselors, sponsors, recovery house managers, former graduates of the program and families.

Rothman said, "One of the things that many people don't understand is that the people who come to our drug court have spent so many years and so much of their lives using drugs, looking for drugs, recuperating from drugs, buying drugs, doing things to get money to buy drugs, trying to quit, getting some more drugs, and dealing with their family issues with drugs, that when they come to our drug court, they are afraid that if they don't use drugs – because that has become their identity – that they may disappear.

"One of the things that drug courts try to do is give people an understanding that you can live a completely different life and learn to be yourself and you won't disappear."

Keynote speaker, Woburn Police Chief Robert Ferullo Jr. applauded Chief Keenan and Detective Lt. Patrick Glynn for "their nationally recognized program, right here in the city of Quincy, who received a national award last week."

Ferullo was referring to the Gary P. Hayes Memorial Award given to a police officer who shows leadership and innovation to improve U.S. policies. Glynn was behind the program which revolutionized the way police respond to opiate overdoes. The Narcan program which Glynn spearheaded has now been adopted by NYPD.

In 2013, Glynn received an Advocates for Action award from the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy because of his work with Quincy's Narcan program, to which QPD attributes the saving of more than 200 lives.

Kathy Deady, who assists in the annual Overdose Candlelight Vigil at City Hall Plaza, was offered the opportunity to speak. She said "I'm the parent of an addict in recovery: Seven sections, 105 detoxes, 10 programs, the Gavin House, Norfolk County House of Correction – my son has four and half years of sobriety and recovery, and he's getting married in August and I want to thank all of you for that!"

This year's former graduate (2003) speaker was Gretchen Picken, who is now a drug court intern and studying at U-Mass to be an addiction counselor. Picken described a drug-filled life since girlhood, and her progression from cocaine in her teens to heroin in her early twenties.

"I was unemployable, I shoplifted to support my habit...every single day of my life I shoplifted. I was committed to the getting and using of drugs. Addiction touches everyone's lives...I tore my family apart."

Picken, who attributes the turnaround in her life to Quincy's First Justice Mark Coven said, "I shared needles with people I knew were sick. I shared needles with people I didn't know were sick, and I'm not sick, and that's a miracle."

Drug Court Associate Justice Diane E. Moriarty introduced the graduates who, as they rose to accept their awards, all spoke of their own personal addiction journeys and, most particularly, of their gratitude to all the program participants for their help in changing their lives around.

One part of the counseling offered through the drug court is the Fatherhood Program, which a few of the graduates mentioned. One young father said, "My kids were afraid of the dark but they couldn't come into my bed because they were afraid of me, too. Through the Fatherhood program I was able to become responsible. Now if my kids have a bad dream, they ask for me."

Another graduate spoke of his years in prison, during several of which he was still using drugs. "I was an addict who had no desire to stop using. I knew how to do time, but I didn't know how to be clean." He, too, thanked the Fatherhood program for his current, healthy relationship with his four-month-old son.

The commencement ended with the words of Drug Court Associate Justice Diane E. Moriarty, who this year selected Hope and Addiction as the theme for her closing remarks.

"Hope is necessary for recovery for one simple reason: Because willpower, as we all know, is not enough. Without a profound underlying motivation to stay clean and sober, simple willpower cannot keep a recovering addict from relapse.

"Hope is the door to the future, to potential, to possibilities, to a better life... research has shown that connectedness to others is a deterrent for all kinds of negative behavior...individuals who feel connected to others find strength and hope in these connections."

Quincy's Drug Court participants have typically served time in jail, must have a surrender hearing before a judge, complete a standard inpatient program and a stay at a half-way, or sober house.

Among many other requirements, these candidates are subjected to frequent drug and alcohol testing—including 'hair' tests, attendance at meetings, and participation in the Relapse Prevention and Relationships in Recovery groups.

Changes Seen At Quincy Housing Authority

spected units, units with inoperable or removed smoke and carbon monoxide detectors, and numerous trip hazards and inoperable lights.

In an interview Monday, QHA Executive Director James Lydon stated the agency has held several staff meetings since receiving the state report, the most recent of which took place earlier that day. As of that meeting, Lydon said, the maintenance department has stated most of the reports identified in the DHCD report have been completed.

Additionally, Lydon said the Housing Authority will take a new look at how it maintains its buildings and residential units. The agency planned to bring on a consultant to do so before the state issued its report finding numerous maintenance issues.

"Prior to the inspections we began to work on bringing a consulting firm in to assist us in rethinking how our maintenance department works," Lydon explained. "We will be going to our next board meeting with a request to be authorized to hire a consultant. We will be moving forward with an aggressive campaign to overhaul both the modernization and the maintenance department.

"If one were to examine the DHCH report there are a lot of deficiencies in the maintenance department. I think we have to look at how we provide maintenance to the 1,500 or so units that we manage."

Lydon anticipates moving away from the current set-up, which has a centralized maintenance department. In its place, each building's property manager would take charge of maintenance in their assigned building. Each building would have workers assigned to it, while certain specialists would be shared among all properties.

"My sense is we will have a whole new project-based maintenance system in place in the future as opposed to an independent maintenance department. The maintenance department is just not working," Lydon said.

"The property managers would take over the responsibilities for the maintenance of their particular building. We would have permanent staff assigned on a building-by-building basis…With our specialized labor – like plumbers, electricians, painters – they would be in a pool with a pool manager. We would not have a department head in charge of maintenance disseminating all of our maintenance forces. [It's] a much more decentralized type of system."

The decentralized approach, he noted, is more commonly used by housing authorities in other communities. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) also favors that type of system.

"It is," Lydon replied when asked if that approach is more common. "And it's an approach that is recommended by HUD. Quincy, historically, has not seen fit to do it that way."

Lydon also noted that several employees have received reprimands following the issuance of the state report.

Concerns have also been raised because elevators at two of the Housing Authority's buildings – Pagnano Towers in Quincy Point and O'Brien Towers in Germantown – have been down an elevator since this winter.

At Pagnano Towers, a sprinkler pipe burst after a tenant left a window open during a particularly cold night. Both of the building's elevators were knocked out of service because of the flooding, but crews were able to scavenge enough parts from one elevator to get the other back up and running. At O'Brien Towers, one elevator has remained out of service after water leaked into the elevator penthouse during a severe winter storm.

The Housing Authority held off on fixing those elevators. According to Lydon, maintence staffers told him no repairs could take place until an insurance settlement came through. Last week, however, Lydon said he was informed that the repairs could be made and funded by a QHA reserve fund before the insurance settlement came through, provided HUD approved of the expenditure.

Repairs at Pagnano Towers are now expected to be finished within two or three weeks, Lydon said, and will be paid for by the insurance money. QHA has also ordered the parts needed to repair the elevator at O'Brien Towers, and those repairs could be completed within four to six weeks.

Each building currently has one elevator up and running. Lydon said Kone Elevator has promised to be on scene within one hour if either of those elevators encounters any issue before the others are brought back online.

Lydon, a former planning director for the city of Quincy, has served as the head of the Housing Authority since May 2013. Prior to that, he worked as a vice president for MassDevelopment. In Monday's interview, Lydon said he did not know about the issues facing the Housing Authority when he accepted the job.

"I had not a clue," he said. "I started last summer – this year has been one disappointment after another."

It hasn't all been negative for Lydon though. He pointed out the release of a study last fall, which outlined a new vision for the entrance to QHA properties in Germantown. The study called for planting 100 new trees, adding new landscaping and special signage, reducing the height of streetlights, and widening sidewalks, among other recommendations. Lydon has been working with Mayor Thomas Koch to create a plan to make those recommendations a reality.

"On the positive side of stuff we had an Urban Land Institute technical assistance panel, which took place last fall," Lydon explained. "We've been working closely with the mayor to develop a real wonderful beautification program for the entry to our largest housing development in town in Germantown."

Hiring a consultant, he added, will go a long way towards rectifying the problems encountered over the past year.

"My sense is we'll do some wonderful work with this new consultant and get the Housing Authority squared away," Lydon said.

Local Kids Donate To 'Scrappy Pals' To QMC Emergency Room

A TRIP TO the emergency room can be a harrowing experience for a child, but kids who go to Quincy Medical Center's emergency room now will have a soft friend to ease their nerves thanks to a group of students from the In Stitches Sewing and Design Studio in Quincy. The studio's owner, Karen Smith (left in photo) and one of her students, Rayne O'Gara Pratt of Quincy, delivered a bin full of dozens of "Scrappy Pals," made by students with leftover fabric and trimmings, hoping that the unique and adorable toys would help comfort young patients in the emergency room. The toys were gratefully accepted by emergency room director Sharon Giordani, NP, and Robert Perry, MD. Photo Courtesy Quincy Medical Center

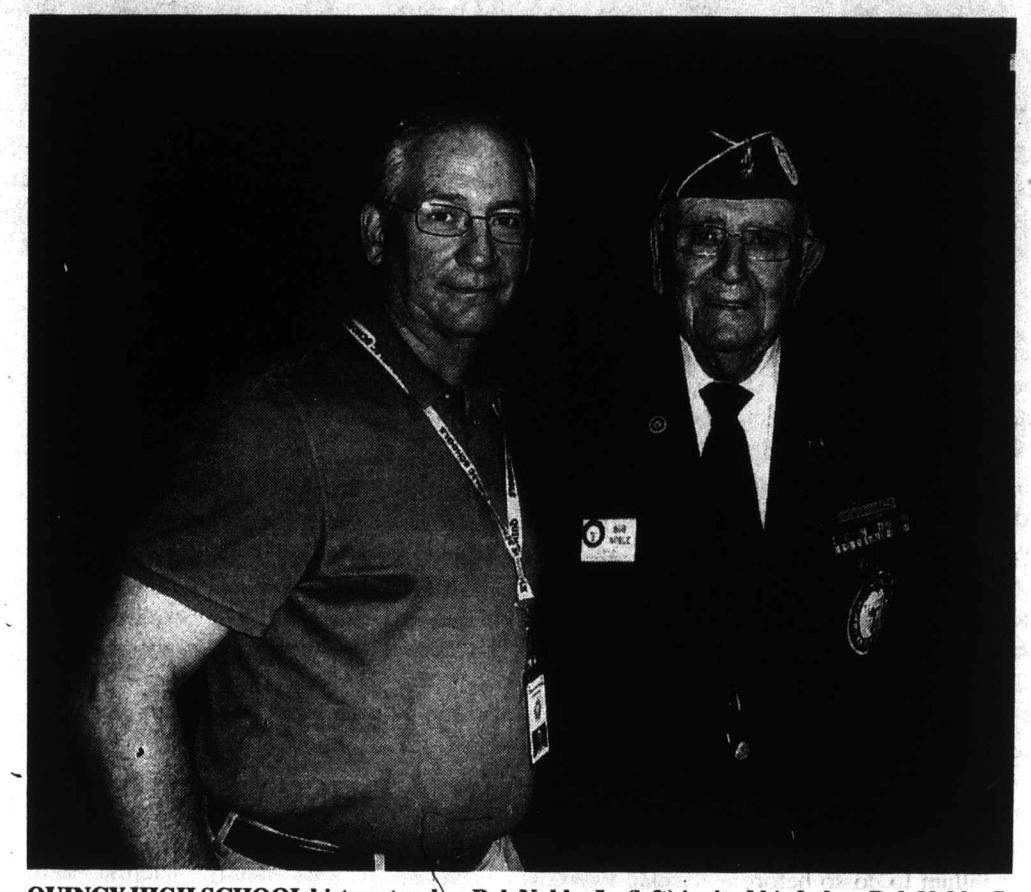
World War II Army Veteran And Ex-POW Bob Noble's Message To QHS History Students



QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL history teacher Bob Noble, Jr. (left) invited his father, Bob Noble, Sr. (right) a World War II Army veteran and ex-Prisoner of War, to speak to his students last Friday on the 70th anniversary of the Allied Forces' D-Day Invasion. Bob Sr. recounted the conditions inside the German POW camp and the day he and other American soldiers were liberated by British troops.

World War II Army veteran and Ex-Prisoner of War Robert Noble of Quincy had a message for a group of Quincy High School students he addressed at a ceremony on Friday in remembrance of D-Day: no matter how dire your circumstances, you must persevere in the face of adversity.

Last Friday, June 6, marked the 70th anniversary of the Allied Forces' D-Day invasion.

"We would be remiss if we didn't observe and remember the events of 70 years ago today," said Noble's son, Robert Noble, Jr., who teaches 9th grade World History and 11th grade U.S. History at the school and asked his father to recount his experiences as a POW.

"On this day, our forces landed on the beaches of Normandy, France in the first steps toward the liberation of Europe from Nazi oppression; 12,000 soldiers lost their lives on that day."

Noble, Sr., who was born and raised in Dorchester, enlisted in the U.S. Army Reserve in 1943, was called to active duty in January of 1944 and embarked for Europe in September of that year, cutting his college career at Harvard University short. He was assigned to serve in the 347th Regiment of the 87th Division in support of troops engaging in the Battle of the Bulge. "The general German offensive of which the Battle of the Bulge was a part of was all one entire front; not just that particular sector. He was in one of the other sectors," said Noble's son.

"I remember standing on the stern of the [Queen Elizabeth] and was watching it zigzag through the ocean," said the elder Noble of his seven-day voyage across the Atlantic Ocean. The ship reached Scotland where he boarded a train to the middle of England. From there he headed to a small village on the borders of Germany and France. On December 16, 1944, he was awoken by a disturbance. "During the night we saw the flashlights...we woke up and said 'who's speaking German?'"

"I had my automatic weapon and I was trying to decide whether or not to fire," he said. "Fortunately I didn't because a short time later I was captured and the group I would have fired on were our own troops."

Noble and his group were captured by German troops and were taken to the village of Metz, dodging American fire the entire way. They were led to a large, underground room where they spent the night. "We didn't know at the time that that morning the Germans were attacking at [the Battle of the Bulge] 80 miles north of us...we didn't know about the Bulge for two weeks."

From there he was marched for two days to a POW camp in Landstuhl, Germany where he stayed for two weeks. He recalled that during that time he had lost his heavy overcoat and rubber overshoes, subjecting him to cold temperatures. Noble, along with 120 other men, was loaded into a boxcar headed for the Stalag V-A camp located in Ludwigsburg, Germany; a trip which would last four grueling days and three nights. "What they did was jam as many people in a car. They didn't take the time to divide the number of prisoners by the number of boxcars so there would be an equal amount in each one. I was in one of the first cars and we had 120 of us in a boxcar."

He described the conditions inside. Most people remained standing because there was no room to sit. The soldiers relieved themselves in their helmets, tossing the contents out of a small hole in the side of the car. Noble couldn't stress one point enough; "It was cold," he said. "It was below zero and everything was freezing and the only good thing about the 120 people in the car is we were all together and we had some warmth."

During this time, his family received a Western Union telegram informing them that he was MIA.

They arrived at another POW camp. The bunks were missing mattresses, forcing them to sleep on the beds' wire framework. "We had to sleep two on a bunk on the wires which really was not that comfortable."

The missing mattresses were actually a blessing; by that point, Noble and his fellow POWs were infested with lice. Sleeping on straw-stuffed mattresses would have only worsened the problem.

His group was moved one last time north to the Stalag XI-B POW camp located east of the town of Fallingbostel in Lower Saxony, Germany along with 200-300 American and 30,000 Russian soldiers.

"They didn't put us to work," he said. "We were in the camp and did nothing except while away the time. We whiled away the time, number one, by picking the lice out of our clothes, and number two, talking about food."

He recalled the one shower he took while a POW. "I had a shower once and the old story that says what you don't know won't kill you, well, that's not exactly true." He was led into a large room with shower heads jutting out of the walls. He was stripped of his clothes, which were then put through a cyanide chamber to kill the lice. "What we didn't know was that it was that same type of room that they put the Jews and put gas through to kill them," he said. "We didn't know that when we were in that room and I'm glad we didn't."

Noble was detained at the camp from March until April with very little food or water. "One of the things that happened that kept us going was right outside... was a large filtration chamber in which when the water was on there was an arm that went over the filtration tank and that was important to us because when we saw that we ran with our cans to get some water," he said. "There wasn't water all the time...that's how we would get water."

The bread that was given to the prisoners had to be cut very carefully according to Noble, who was handed the important task.

"For whatever reason, I had the honor of cutting the bread and it was an honor because you had to cut it just right because if you cut one slice larger than the other one, the one who got the smallest slice would be very upset." He joked that at a job he had in his years following his return to the U.S. his coworkers would joke about how precisely he would distribute food during work parties. "They all laughed because of the way that I sliced the pie but that's one of the things that I learned when I was POW was to divide equally among everybody."

Recreation Boating, Sailing Registration

Registration for the Quincy Recreation Department's William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Program will begin Wednesday, June 25 at 9 a.m. and is ongoing throughout the summer as openings exist.

Registration will be conducted at the Pageant Field picnic pavilion located adjacent to the Ryan Boathouse.

Registration for the program will continue throughout the summer as long as openings are still available.

This nationally recognized program offers rowing, sailing, canoeing and kayaking lessons for youths age 8 – 16 in the natural salt-water lagoon at Blacks Creek. Youth lessons are offered on a Monday/Wednesday and a Tuesday/Thursday schedule during July and August.

The Ryan Boathouse also offers adult programs in sailing, kayaking, and canoeing under the supervision of the Recreation Department Staff. There are night and weekend activities for families and adults.

All new youth participants must pass a swimming proficiency test to enroll in lessons. There will be a swim test at Lincoln Hancock Pool on Friday, June 13 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The membership fees for the summer season are:

Youth $60, $25 for any additional child, and $110 for a family. Adults $35 for use of sailboats, canoes, or kayaks for the season and one free lesson, additional lessons are $5. A one-day pass for kayaks and canoes is available for $15.00.

For further information contact the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Police Lt. Patrick Glynn and Susanna Cooper, the Quincy-Area Coordinator for the Mass Opioid Abuse Prevention Collaborative, recently traveled to Atlanta as guests of Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey at the 2014 National Prescription Drug Abuse Summit.

"Prescription drugs, particularly opiates, are being diverted for non-medical use and abuse in every corner of Norfolk County," District Attorney Morrissey said. "It is fueling most of our property crimes, many violent crimes and has led to an astonishing number of fatal overdoses. The word crisis is too weak to describe what is happening in Massachusetts."

The four-day summit in Atlanta provided educators, social workers, police, government leaders and others working in substance abuse prevention with seminars defining the scope and origins of the current epidemic, interventions, policies and practices from around the country to lessen the abuse. It also fostered information sharing, support and networking among local and national leaders; as DA Morrissey said, "no one person and no one town can successfully address this alone." This third annual event is the largest of its kind in the United States.

"We are fortunate to have been awarded one of only six category two federal Harold Rogers Prescription Drug Monitoring Grants, which has enabled us to bring a large group from Norfolk County," District Attorney Morrissey said.

"With comprehensive prescription drug collection and disposal in place, including at the Quincy Police Station, Narcan overdose reversal training and kits available to every police and fire department in the county and some of our other efforts in place, we appear somewhat ahead of much of the country," Morrissey said. "But there is always more to learn, and there is still much work and struggle ahead of us."

This project was supported by Grant No. 2013-PM-BX-0009 awarded by the Bureau of Justice Assistance. Deen Haleem Award Winner At Youth Government Conference

Deen Haleem of Quincy, a high honors freshman at Boston College High School, was one of 13 B.C. High students who participated in and won the Premier Delegation award at the annual YMCA Youth in Government Conference held recently at the Massachusetts State House on Beacon Hill.

The B.C. High team won the Premier Delegation award. Haleem won the Outstanding delegate in the House of Representatives award. Two other BC High students were singled out for honors among the many participants. Jon Shea'15 of Canton was elected Attorney General and Liam Brady '14 of Bourne won the Outstanding Bill in the Senate Award .

The Youth in Government Club, moderated by faculty members Elise Wilson and Michael Chapman, is part of a Greater Boston YMCA program which allows high school students to learn about state government and participate in the process of the State House with other students from throughout Massachusetts. Students take on various roles in the state government including the legislative, executive, and judicial branches as well as lobbyists and the press corps.

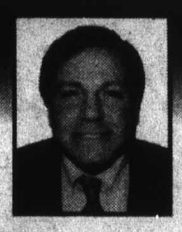
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.



WHY SO SENSITIVE?

According to recent research published in the Journal of the American Dental Association, one in eight adults suffers from a condition known as "sensitive teeth." The pain associated with this condition is often triggered by eating or drinking cold, hot, acidic, or sweet foods or beverages. While overzealous brushing or tooth-whitening products may cause sensitive teeth, the primary culprit is gum recession. As the gum tissue recedes with age, pores (or tubules) on the surface of the tooth root become increasingly exposed. Because these tubules travel to the nerve of the tooth, the nerve becomes more susceptible to painful triggers. Gentle brushing, avoidance of home tooth-whiteners, and use of toothpastes created for sensitive teeth can help alleviate pain.

Sensitive teeth rarely represent a medical emergency. Nevertheless, sensitivity can also be associated with tooth decay and can additionally be related to traumatic damage to the tooth, which can become infected if left untreated. We welcome the entire family for quality dental treatment. The comfort of our patients is very important to us, which is why we strive to offer the best in dental care. When was the last time you had a comprehensive dental examination? We make every effort to see you promptly and listen to your concerns and needs. We will let you know about new procedures and technologies, and what they can do for you. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. If you have sensitive teeth, avoid acidic drinks or rinse your mouth with water immediately after drinking them, and avoid brushing your teeth right after eating or drinking; wait 10-15 minutes.

Grow Your Own Backyard Paradise In A Pot

By MELINDA MYERS

Create a backyard escape with the help of container gardens. Whether you're looking for a visit to the desert, an English garden or tropical paradise, a few planters can help create the mood.

Reduce your workload and increase your enjoyment with a bit of planning and proper planting.

Select a container with drainage holes and one that mimics the color and feel of the location you are trying to recreate. Use troughs, stone or other containers made from neutral colors when growing succulents. The container should complement, but not overpower the simple beauty of the desert plants.

Keep things warm and natural when going for a more tropical feel. Wicker, bamboo and other natural materials work well with the lush foliage and vibrant colors of tropical plants.

Add a few terra cotta, metal and basket type containers when creating an English cottage setting. Set them on your patio, steps or in the garden to create a focal point.

Keep your plants looking good throughout the season with the proper planting mix. Look for potting mixes with good drainage and water holding abilities, like Schultz Potting Soil Plus (schultz.com). Check the label as some mixes contain enough fertilizer to last the entire season and water-retaining crystals to reduce the need to water.

Use a cactus mix that provides the perfect growing conditions for cacti and succulents. The potting mix should retain the moisture and nutrients the plants need, while providing the excellent drainage that is a must for these plants.

Plant any orchids added to your backyard tropical paradise in a potting mix designed for these plants. Use an orchid mix that has excellent drainage and aeration, yet retains the moisture and nutrients these beauties need to thrive.

Check your planters daily and water thoroughly whenever the top few inches of soil are crumbly and slightly moist. Allow cacti and succulents to go a bit drier.

Mulch the soil in tropical, herb, vegetable and annual container gardens. Spread a thin layer of shredded leaves, evergreen needles or twice shredded bark over the soil surface. Use fine pebbles for cacti and succulents that like things hot and dry.

And don't forget about garden accents. A wattle fence and arbor of twigs and branches work well for an English garden setting, while a water feature can enhance a tropical paradise themed garden, and some southwest garden art can complete the desert scene you're going for.

So start your vacation this year with a trip to the garden center. Invest in a few containers, the right potting mix and plants. Then plant your way to the retreat of your dreams.

SUCCULENTS STACKED in troughs or pots can create a desert type feel in the landscape. Melinda Myers, LLC

Quincy Players Excel In AAU Basketball Program

Five Quincy players – Frank Calabro, Johnny Cristiani, Eoin Gormley, Landon Pierron, and Frank Yhombi – all excelled in the Rise Above Basketball AAU program.

The 6th grade team finished its season by winning eight straight games. They won two titles, too – The Zero Gravity tournament held at Brandies University and the Eastern Basketball tournament held in Byfield.

The Rise Above Basketball program was founded by B.C. High and Framingham State University standout Brenden Carter. Carter is presently the Associate Head Men's Basketball Coach at Framingham State University.

"The kids practiced two times a week and played in tournaments every weekend against the best competition in the State of Massachusetts. And they won," Costa said. "These kids and this team really started to develop great chemistry together."

Costa said all five teammates were instrumental in winning the recent Zero Gravity tournament. "This is a new AAU program growing bigger everyday. What attracts talent is having players like these Quincy kids. They are all very athletic, competitive, and multiple sport athletes."

For more information about the AAU basketball program, visit www.riseabovebasketball.com. All coaches are former college/professional basketball players.

U-18 Bows To Weymouth, Edges Undefeated Braintree

Before a standing room only crowd this past Sunday at the Bog Arena, spectators were treated to an epic battle of high school hockey, which included several premier players from both the Patriot League and Catholic conferences. Tied at 5 apiece and making its first appearance in the annual South Shore Town Cup [SSTC], which includes four round-robin games of two 22' minute periods, the U-18 Quincy team opted to go for the victory outright.

With 10 seconds remaining and the face-off deep in the Wildcat's zone, the U-18 Quincy team pulled its all-scholastic goalie Nolan Greene, to facilitate a 6 on 3 power play. However, Weymouth managed to dig in iced the puck as the final seconds ticked off the game clock. A Wildcat iceman caught a good bounce off the Quincy net and scored an empty net goal with 1 second remaining in the game to steal the 6-5 victory.

Both teams refused to quit, and the game featured several lead changes and spectacular scoring plays. For Quincy, its "President's" line combined for much of the offense. Team captain Jake Hallisey led the offense with two goals and assists, while line mates Pat Freeman and Bryan O'Callaghan (QHS 2014-15 Captain) each tallied a goal. Courtesy of Catholic Memorial's Captain (2014-15) Aaron Clancy's pass, Quincy defenseman James Hussey scored on a one-timer to give Quincy its first 4-3 lead midway thru the final period.

Weymouth responded again with two goals to regain the lead at 5-4. With a 1:14 to go, Quincy's Adam McCormack was able to feed Hallisey for his second and tying goal. Though Quincy peppered the Weymouth netminder for the next minute, they could not capitalize on the two man advantage, which grew to three men in the last 10 seconds. "We certainly had our chances tonight, and our team will need to play the same brand of resilient hockey if we expect to advance to next round" said U-18 Quincy Coach Mike Hussey.

In SSTC hockey action Monday night, the undefeated and unscored upon Braintree U-18 team was stung by Quincy 3-2. Captain goalie Nolan Greene made 37 saves and was named the game's #1 star. Owen Lynch, Brian O'Callaghan, and Jake Hallisey scored for Quincy, while Pat Freeman tallied two assists and was named the game's #3 star.

Quincy faced off against Hingham Tuesday night. With a win Quincy would earn one of four top seeds for championship round Thursday and Friday night.

Morrisette Downs Cohasset, Bows To Weymouth

LEGION BASEBALL

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was a refreshing sense of good feeling which surrounded Morrisette' baseball club after its first two games.

They pitched well. They made all the plays. They had timely hitting and quality at-bats. And they showed the toughness to fight back into a game after falling into a deep hole in the first three innings.

Post 294 rallied from a five-run deficit to tie the score behind a clutch hit from Robbie Munroe and lights-out relief pitching from Greg Paulo and Dave Suslowicz before falling to Weymouth, 7-5 in eight innings in a Zone 6 East contest at Adams Field Monday night.

In Morrisette's opener against Cohasset, lefty Cody Desmond pitched five innings of shutout, two-hit, four-strikeout baseball to lead Post 294 to a 3-0 victory.

"I thought we played well in both games," said coach Steve Maze. "I told them after the Weymouth game that a team can do two things when it falls behind by five runs. They can pack it in or battle back. We battled the back and that is a great sign."

The work of Paulo and Suslowicz gave the offense a chance and made the comeback possible. Weymouth went up 5-0 after three. Paulo fired two shutout innings, giving just one hit and fanning two. Suslowicz added 2 2/3 innings of scoreless work before Eric Sachetti flipped a two-out single into left on an 0-2 count to drive home the winning runs for Weymouth in the eighth. It was a good pitch on the edge of the outside corner. Sachetti went out, got it, and looped it into a open spot in shallow left.

The most striking part of Paulo's work is how much harder he throws than he did a year ago. He always had a fine curve and good fast ball. Now he can throw the ball by people. Suslowicz mixed a fastball, and curve, changed speeds, and showed impeccable control.

"Paulo is the most improved player on the team over the past year. His velocity is up," said Maze. "Dave is only supposed to go one inning, but he did a great job. The winning hit was not a hard-hit ball. His control is excellent. You can't ask for better relief pitching"

Morrisette worked back into the game by putting up tough at-bats. Seven of nine starters hit safely. They drew six walks. They worked counts, fouled off good pitches and put themselves in position to get something good to hit. They were smart and tough at the pate.

Munroe's triple which tied the game in the sixth illustrates the point well. Morrisette was down 5-3 with two out and two on. Munroe fell behind 0-2. He fouled off a pair of pitches and took a ball just off the corner. He then saw a fastball in the middle of the plate, and drilled a rising shot into the right-center gap for a triple to tie it at 5-5 and force extra innings.

"We kept plugging away. We didn't get it all at once. We were patient at the plate and Munroe gave us a great at-bat," said Maze.

Morrisette also played errorless defense and made several plays which went beyond the routine. They picked off three runners. Catcher Nick Valencenti (terrific defense, a triple a walk, two runs scored, and an RBI) caught a runner off first in the second. Josh Helfrich and Paulo each picked off a runner.

Second baseman Eddie Riley handled a tough hop of a hard smash in the first. First baseman Bobby Salvucci made a good stop and throw for a force at second in the fifth. Andrew Currie ran down a long, twisting fly ball in center in the seventh to save a run and preserve the tie.

"Defense is what we're going to hang our hats on all year," said Maze. "It should be the strength of our team, and tonight we played good defense."

Morrisette cut the lead to 5-2 in the fourth. Salvucci singled home Josh Hayward, and Valencenti scored on a fly ball to center by Desmond. Valencenti tripled and and scored on a single by Currie to make it 5-3 in the sixth before Munroe tied it with his triple.

Tyler Beach had his second big offensive games with a single, a walk, a run scored, and two stolen bases. Currie had a single, an RBI and a run scored. Salvucci added a single and an RBI. Desmond chipped in with two walks and an RBI while Hayward had a single and a run scored.

"I think the key to the season for us will be hitting," said Maze. "Our defense should be good. We should field ground balls and catch fly balls. I don't think we'll give away many runs. Our pitching should be good. The key will be getting consistent hitting. We saw some of that tonight."

Joe Roddy and Suslowicz each had an inning of shutout relief in the win over Cohasset. Munroe went 2-3 for two RBI while Beach had two hits and an RBI. Jason Pekkinen, Riley and Hayward each had hits in the win. Catcher Joe Ferracane had three walks and scored twice for Morrisette which scored two in the third and one in the fifth.

Morrisette hosts Hyde Park Thursday night at Adams Field at 8 p.m.

NQ's Efthim Butka Named To All-State Basketball Team

Red Raiders' Co-Captain Caps Career With Recognition From High School Coaches

By BOB BARRETT

Spotting talent is a relatively easy task for a basketball coach. Kevin Barrett saw it right away in Efthim Butka, who in 2010 was a lanky, athletic freshman looking to join Barrett's North Quincy High School program. Barrett gave him a varsity uniform, if only to help himself achieve what is a decidedly more difficult task than simply recognizing talent — nurturing and developing it over time.

Four years later, Butka ended his North Quincy career with 68 wins, two Patriot League championships, four trips to the MIAA tournament, consecutive appearances in the Division I South Sectional final, and a host of individual honors that includes being named to the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association (MBCA) South Section All-State Team. He accepted the award on May 10 at the MBCA All Senior Breakfast held at The College of the Holy Cross.

"Our season was a success in many ways," says Barrett, reflecting on his team's 23-2 record. "In addition to accomplishing a number of team goals, we had several individuals, including Efthim, recognized for their play."

Stepping into the Spotlight

Looking back on Butka's career, Barrett says he knew the potential was there, but gives all the credit to the 6-4 forward, who he calls one of the hardest working players he has coached in his eight seasons on the North Quincy sideline.

Butka's development followed an advanced progression. As a freshman, he suited up for the varsity and logged some minutes backing up Tim Liuzzo. His sophomore year had him in a slightly expanded role, but still a secondary player on a talented team that finished 17-3 and won The Patriot League before a first-round tournament loss to New Bedford.

His real emergence came as a junior, says Barrett, who recalls the moment he confirmed Butka was more than a talent and in fact a special player — someone who was about to deliver on the potential he routinely displayed in practice.

"Our opening tournament game against Natick," says Barrett, recalling the 56-44 win in February 2013. On a team headlined by the Gould twins — Dan and Pat, now playing at Framingham State University — Butka led the 15-5 Red Raiders with 16 points, scoring on a variety of midrange jumpers and moves with his back to the hoop.

Butka also seemed to recognize it as a sign of his development, telling reporters after the game: "Every single night someone steps up, whether it's Aaron Anderson, Kyle Richardson, Dan Gould, Pat Gould or Marquise McClendon. Tonight it was my turn."

Butka and the #6 seed Red Raiders went on to beat two more teams from the Bay State League, Braintree and Newton North, before losing to top-seeded Mansfield in the 2013 Division I South Sectional final.

Making a Name for Himself

Disappointed the run was over but already looking ahead, Butka immediately set his sights on his senior season, with a particular focus on improving his outside game and developing his 6-4 frame.

"I saw how effective the 3-point shot was for Dan Gould and others, so I worked on that a lot, although my main focus was on getting bigger," says Butka, who was a summertime regular at the YMCA. "There were days I shot for three hours straight."

Barrett routinely cites Butka when he is explaining to underclassmen how important the offseason can be in terms of player development. "We probably play close to 100 games between April and Thanksgiving, most of them over the summer," Barrett says. "But that wasn't enough for Eft, who was constantly looking to improve his game."

It didn't take long for Butka to assert himself as the Raiders' #1 offensive weapon. Three games into the 2013-14 season, in the first of three matchups with cross-city rival Quincy, the Raiders' co-captain took another important step in his maturation and development. With six 3-pointers and 27 points, he led the Red Raiders to a 72-64 win over the Presidents.

The rest of the Patriot League took notice, but that didn't stop Butka and fellow seniors Kyle Richardson and Anthony Green from leading the Red Raiders to their most successful season in decades.

By the time the 13-0 Red Raiders rolled into Hingham for a late-January game against the Harbormen — where the PA announcer identified Butka as "Ethan Bukaka" — Butka was well on his way to making his name known and earning the widespread recognition he would garner after leading the Raiders to another Patriot League crown and their second consecutive trip to UMass-Boston for the Division I South Sectional final, this time as the #1 seed.

Well-Deserved Recognition

A loss to Catholic Memorial ended the Raiders' season at 23-2, and stung as much as the previous year, but Butka's disappointment was tempered somewhat as he rung up a variety of postseason accolades.

He was named to the Patriot League All-Star team, and also earned all-scholastic honors from The Boston Globe, The Boston Herald, and The Patriot Ledger. He was a member of the South Select All-Star team chosen for the 12th Annual Fitzy-Nolan Games — a team coached by Barrett that also included Green and Richardson, as they teamed up with other top juniors and seniors south of Boston to take on the Boston Amateur Basketball Club (BABC) Juniors.

Then, in April, he learned he was one of five players named to the MBCA South Section All-State Team — a fitting end to his North Quincy career. Barrett attended the event and brought along his father, Bob Barrett, the longtime boys' basketball coach at Archbishop Williams and someone who also had a hand in the development of Butka, Green and other North Quincy post players.

At the event, they were greeted by two Quincy natives who are both past presidents of the MBCA and current members of its Executive Board: Bo Ruggiero, head coach of the boys' basketball team at Cohasset High School, and Dr. John Franceschini, Quincy Public Schools.

The Red Raiders were 68-23 in Butka's four years and he finished his career with 652 points, placing him at #12 on the all-time list. Barrett also shared this stat:

EFTHIM BUTKA (center) was one of five players named to the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association (MBCA) South Section All-State Team. The 2014 graduate of North Quincy High School accepted the award at recent MBCA banquet, where he was joined by (left to right): Dr. John Franceschini, Bob Barrett, Kevin Barrett and Bo Ruggiero.

Butka appeared in 88 of a possible 91 Red Raider varsity games. "It's unofficial, but based on a review of our scorebooks," he explained.

The Future Looks Bright

With graduation behind him, Butka is already looking ahead to next year, academically and athletically. After considering an offer to join the Goulds at Framingham State, he has decided to enroll at Saint Anselm College in Manchester, N.H.

He's hopeful that his development as a basketball player will continue as a member of the Division II powerhouse Hawks — he was impressive in an April workout on the campus in front of coach Keith Dickson, according to Barrett, a 1992 graduate of Saint Anselm who played under Dickson. While his spot on the roster is not guaranteed, the prospective biology major feels good about his place as a member of the class of 2018.

"All things considered, Saint Anselm is the best choice for me," says Butka, who made multiple visits to the campus. "I can't wait for the fall, although, just like last year, I've got more work ahead of me this summer."

Bill Dunn, Jr. Road Race June 28

The Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 28 in Houghs Neck.

The event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other. This is the 8th year the Road Race is being held and each year the support and participation is remarkable.

Registration will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a 5-mile run or 2-mile walk beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for 1st Place Male/Female Runner and 1st Houghs Neck Resident Male/Female Runner. The first 300 people to register will receive a free race T-shirt.

Proceeds from the event benefit the Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Scholarship which has provided scholarships to Quincy High School students, donations to Children's Hospital, Manet Youth Football and other local organizations.

The registration fee is $25.

BETTER NET RESULTS

Many tennis players develop "tennis elbow" at some point in their time on the court. This overuse injury, known as "lateral epicondylitis," occurs at the point where the tendons of the forearm muscles attach to the bony prominence on the outside of the elbow (the lateral epicondyle). While prevention is largely associated with improved technique and revised motions, treatment for those already suffering from tennis elbow varies widely. Chiropractic treatment focuses on relieving pressure on the joint space, where tightening of the wrist extensor muscles have caused friction and pain. In addition, adjusting the wrist may also prove to be beneficial. Masking painful symptoms with pain relievers does nothing to relieve the stresses that cause pain in the first place.

Tennis Elbow, as well as Golfers Elbow, can be very painful injuries that commonly "flare up" over a period of years unless treatment is properly addressed. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we provide effective pain relief for a wide variety of conditions. Maybe it's time you called us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. Our office specializes in providing gentle, safe, and effective chiropractic care to people of all ages. Chiropractic doesn't cost - it pays! Our office is located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. "Tennis elbow" afflicts gardeners/landscapers; house/office cleaners; carpenters; mechanics; and assembly-line workers whose work activities require repetitive arm, elbow, wrist, and hand movement, especially while tightly gripping something.

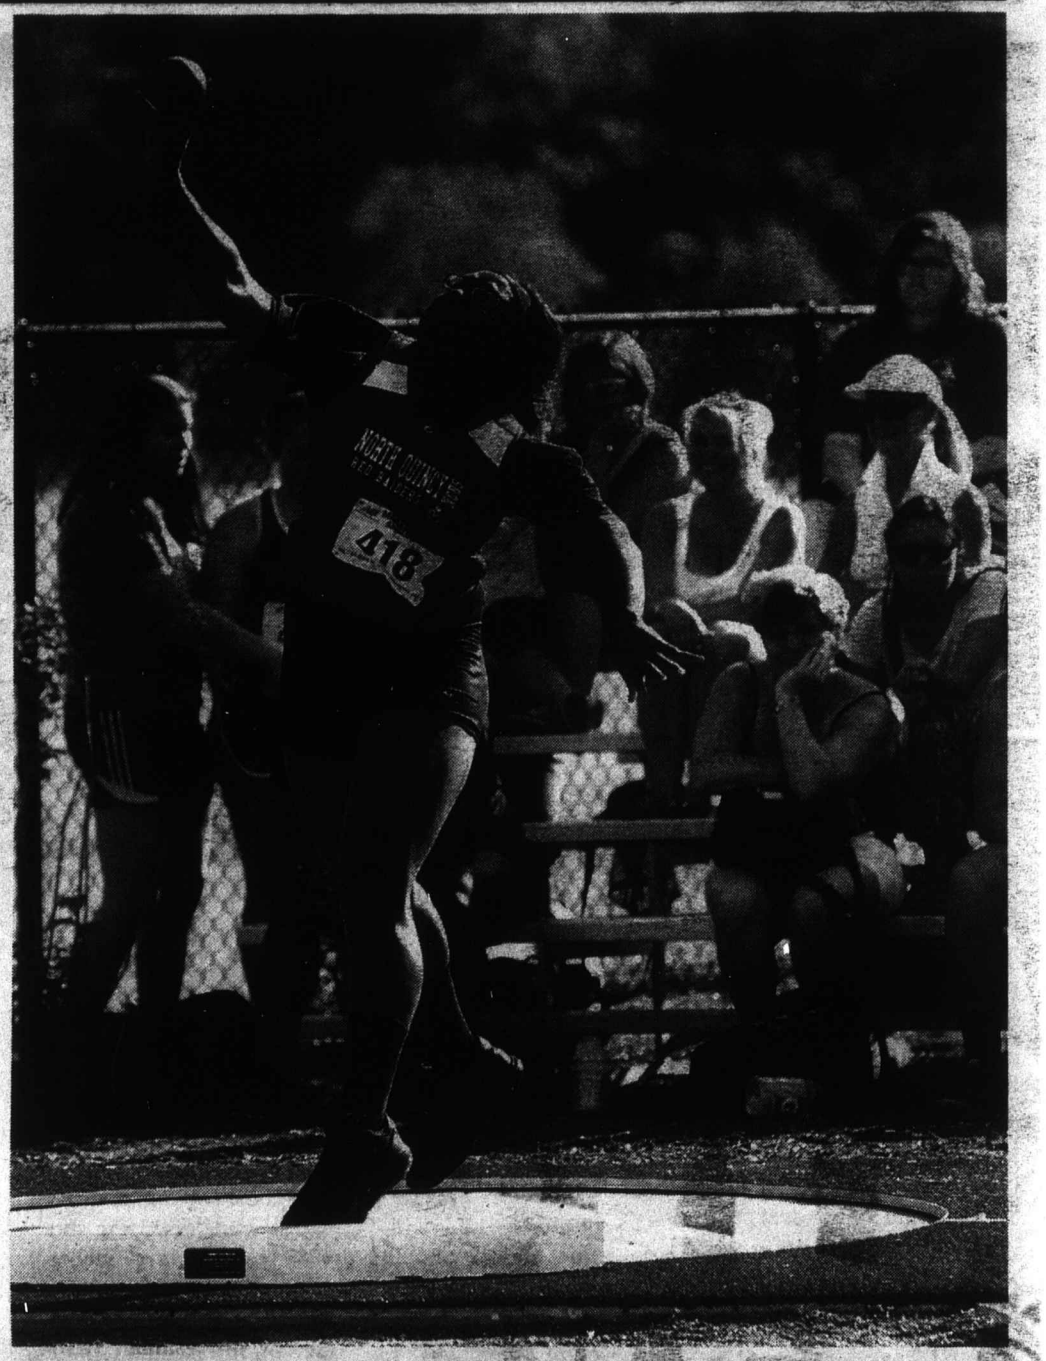
NORTH QUINCY'S Emily Bryson crosses the finish line for a silver medal in the girls 2-mile run at Saturday's All-State Track and Field Championships at Bridgewater State University. Bryson, who won the Div. 2 two-mile crown, had a time of 11 minutes, 10:93 seconds - second only to Bishop Feenan senior Abbie McNulty.



MAYA UMOREN, a 2014 graduate of North Quincy High School, took silver in the girls shot put at Saturday's All-State Track and Field Championships at Bridgewater State University. Umoren's second-place throw of 41 feet, 8 and a half inches was a personal best.

Place Second In 2-Mile Run, Shot Put

Emily Bryson, Maya Umoren Take Silver At All-State Track, Field Championships

By JOE REARDON

After winning the Div. 2 2 mile crown, North Quincy's Emily Bryson made it a point to file away the template for successsfully racing the 2 mile against state-level competition.

That kind of running is far different from competing in dual meets where she takes the pace and runs by herself to take easy, solo victories - Bryson's calling card in the Patriot League.

In fact, Bryson foreshadowed her race at Saturday's All-State championships at Bridgewater State University after her Div. 2 win. She assumed Bishop Feehan's superb distance ace, Abbie McNulty, was just too strong to challenge without wilting in the second mile. But Bryson, who was fourth in the Div. 1 All-State cross country championships way back in November, was confident she would be in the mix for second place with the talented packed in the seeded heat.

That proved a problem for the rest of the field.

Bryson couldn't have run a better strategic race. Running on the steamy BSU track where temperatures hovered in the mid 90s, Bryson tucked herself in the 10-runner pack in sixth place and concentrated on staying relaxed. She passed the mile in 5:29 and found no need to start moving up.

That's the way it stayed until the gun lap. Bryson was in fifth place heading into the final backstretch where she decided it was time to make the hard push for home. Bryson switched gears and started gaining and passing the girls in front of her. She didn't back off a bit on the final straightway and passed Needham's Margie Cullen with 40 meters left to capture the silver medal in 11 minutes, 10.93 seconds. If not for the heat, Bryson would easily have dipped under 11 minutes for the first time, but that can wait.

When asked if she now considered herself a kicker, Bryson smiled and said "Yeah I guess so."

Her Div. 2 win played a huge part in taking second on the BSU oval. "I remember from last week how I got her with 200 to go," said Bryson. "I saw her (Cullen) right there and gave everything I had."

McNulty was concerned about the blazing hot condi-

Summer Swimming Instruction At Lincoln-Hancock Pool

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct swimming lessons at the Lincoln-Hancock Community pool weekdays during July and August.

Thousands of children have benefited by these lessons. In addition to giving important life skills, learning to swim opens up a lifetime of recreational opportunities such as boating and sailing, and other aquatic sports.

Lessons are taught by Water Safety Instructors and Lifeguards trained in accordance with the standards set by the American Red Cross.

The Recreation Department will conduct an advanced testing in preparation for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have had additional instruction during the winter.

The schedule for testing is Friday, June 13 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The Boating and Sailing prerequisite swim test will also be given at this time for residents age 8 or older. The normal recreational swimming schedule will be canceled during hours of testing.

There will be two summer sessions. Session One begins Monday, June 30th and ends Tuesday, July 22nd. Session Two begins Thursday, July 24th and ends Thursday, Aug. 14th.

Because school is still in session, registration for all classes will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, One Merrymount Parkway.

The following classes are offered for both sessions and are conducted in accordance with the standards of the American Red Cross:

Level I/II Water Exploration and Primary Skills; Level III Stroke Readiness; Level IV Stroke Development; Level V/VI Stroke Refinement and Proficiency.

The department will also offer Lifeguard Training that will begin Tuesday, July 1st and will run through August. Contact the Recreation Department for details regarding this course, 617-376-1394.

Instructions are for children who are age six and over and are Quincy residents. Lifeguard Training candidates must be 15 years of age and must pass a prerequisite swim test.

Because school is still in session, registration for all classes will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, One Merrymount Parkway, according to the following schedule.

Session 1: Class dates are June 30th – July 22nd and registration will be Thursday June 19 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Session 2: Class dates are July 24th to Aug. 14th and registration will be Wednesday, June 18 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Lifeguard Training registration will be Wednesday, June 18 from 9 a.m. to noon.

The Quincy Recreation Department will not accept pre-registration or phone registrations. Assured placement in the class, day and times of choice should be done at the above dates and times. Post-registration is accepted on a space available basis.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394, or go to www.QuincyRec.com.

THREE OTHER local high school student-athletes competed in Saturday's All-State Track and Field Championships at Bridgewater State University. At left is Quincy High School sophomore Mike Munroe who tossed the shot put 50 feet and three inches, good for ninth place and a personal best. North Quincy High School freshman Melody Umoren (center) - like her sister, Maya - qualified for the girls shot put. Melody took ninth place with a throw of 37 feet, six inches. At top right is North Quincy High School junior Mike Mullaney who competed in the boys 2-mile. Mike's time was 9 minutes and 54.67 seconds.

tions, but was confident she was prepared to run well and would be very much in the mix at the bell lap. "It was definitely hot and I was worried about it," she said. "But I knew if I was feeling it so was everyone else. That was the hardest I've ever run. It was good running with the pack. I feel like I could have gone faster in the middle. I really want to break 11 (minutes) at New Englands."

North Quincy's Maya Umoren erased the disaster last spring on All-State day to get off a personal-best toss of 41-8-1/2. That throw should have been good enough to capture the win if not for Newton North's Michaela Smith, who registered a personal best of her own at 43-11 for the win.

Umoren's performance erased the memories of a year ago. The Newbury College-bound senior had to take the SATs in the morning and when she was finished drove the two hours to Westfield State University. When she arrived, Umoren found she had missed the event altogether, robbing her of a chance to compete for a medal.

Umoren knew she was in good shape as the shot put progressed at this year's meet and knew she was in the running for first place. Smith, who also captured the discus, fired off the mammoth 43-11 effort. Umoren made a run at Smith, but was ecstatic with the silver medal.

"I was aiming for first, but once she threw 43 (feet) I was trying to beat her on my last throw," said Umoren. "Once I knew I wasn't going to get it I wanted to throw far enough to get second. I felt good out there, but Michaela is just so strong."

The shot put field was a deep one this year. Maya's younger sister, Melody, was third at the Div. 2 championships and had a huge day at the All-State meet. But with such a deep field, Melody was just outside the medals, taking a strong ninth with a 37-6 throw. Quincy's Mike Munroe put up a personal best in the tough boys' shot put field at 50-3, but like Melody, was just outside the medals. Munroe still finished in the top 10 going up against a rock-solid field.

There's no telling how fast Mike Mullaney would have run in the 2 mile in cooler conditions. The talented North Quincy junior, willed himself through the deuce to finish in a still very respectable 9:54.67.

Quincy High School Class Of 2014 Valedictorian Michelle Lee's Advice To Fellow Graduates:

'The Best Thing You Can Do Is Work Relentlessly'

By JOE REARDON

We may not know what the future holds or how rough the road to success will be, but we're far happier grabbing onto our dreams and passions and pursuing them with a vengeance Quincy High valedictorian Michelle Lee told her fellow classmates at Monday evening's commencement at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Lee, who will be attending the prestigious Parson School of Design in New York City, admitted to her fellow 407 graduating classmates, the first class that attended high school in the new building for four years, that she has received curious looks from people when they learned she is attending a design school.

"Well, I'll just say that there's been a countless number of people who have looked at me funny because I mentioned he words 'fashion school," said Lee. "Usually, they block me out immediately and imagine me sewing and throwing a meat dress on Lady Gaga, then they come back from their imagination and ask me if I'm sure."

Lee believes pursuing a career you truly love is important and we shouldn't be swayed by what others think. "I am sure that I am much happier pursuing my dreams from the beginning," she said. "The real waste of resources would be if I graduated with a degree in something that I hated, had a calling back to fashion at 50 (years old) and went to school again. No matter what career we choose, the field will always be competitive, and there will always be impractical aspects about that field, so we just have to put in our utmost efforts.

"No matter what people tell us, our dreams are still our dreams. If you genuinely want to reach your highest goals, then the best thing you can do for yourself is to work relentlessly."

Lee's speech was sprinkled with insight and humor and drew laughs from the graduates,parents and invited guests when she suggested the Class of 2014 was not just graduating, but being "unleashed" on the world. "Today, we are being unleashed upon the real world to wreak havoc and create some kind of Walking Dead apocalypse with our awesome new high school diplomas."

Under a perfect clear sky and warm temperatures the graduates, donned in blue and white robes, marched onto the field in front of a cheering crowd of parents, friends and relatives. Class President Kayla McArdle pointed out just how fast four years of high school went by after opening the

NQHS Class Of 2014 Valedictorian
Celeste Dang's Advice To Fellow Graduates:

'Follow Your Hearts And Pursue Your Dreams'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Diversity is the strength that holds families together said North Quincy High School class of 2014 Valedictorian and speaker Celeste Dang at last Tuesday night's commencement ceremony at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

She interviewed third-grade students and residents at the Quincy Bauer House which provides subsidized housing to seniors to ask what advice they would give to the class of 2014.

"When you meet someone, don't immediately put them in a box," said 80-year-old Adele. "One of the best things about your generation is diversity; it's a gift." Dang credited this diversity with the exchange of ideas that lead to the birth of innovation.

ceremony welcoming all in attendance.

"Now, as we sit here, I'm sure every one of us can agree that these past four years did fly by," McArdle said. "I'm also sure we can agree there are some decisions we made that we regret and others that we wouldn't change for the world. But that could be perhaps the most valuable lesson we learned in high school; There are things we will be able to change and things we won't. We might as well make the best decisions for ourselves and have no regrets in the end."

First year Principal Lawrence Taglieri told the class it was a "terrific honor and privilege" to be part of the celebration with the senior class.

"My first year as principal of Quincy High School will always be memorable to me because of you," he said. "I was immediately struck by your leadership and with the pride and spirit you have. You set the tone of what type of school you would have and people followed. Class of 2014, you have certainly left your imprint on the history of Quincy High School. Your efforts will not be forgotten and your accomplishments not easily duplicated. You have built upon our traditions of excellence and as it is said, tradition never graduates."

Mayor Thomas Koch offered his thoughts on success through the words of Mother Teresa. "She said, 'The Lord asks us to be faithful, not successful," said Koch. "If you are faithful, you will be successful."

School Committee Vice-Chairwoman Kathryn Hubley told the graduates that each year in school shaped them and they should never forget the people who helped them along the way.

"Today is the day to congratulate these graduates on their dedication to their education, all that they have achieved and to look ahead with them to the future," said.

City Council President Joseph Finn told the graduates that the science behind the satellites for GPS's in phones were founded by Albert Einstein, a man who had his share of disappointments on his way to become one of the greatest minds of the 20th century.

"He couldn't get a job teaching because, well, he was considered a little disorganized and a little bit of a trouble maker and quite honestly, a little bit strange," said Finn. "I'm not suggesting that the next Albert Einstein is graduating here this evening, although after attending some of the science fairs held in the public schools, he or she may well be. What I am suggesting is that his story points to a larger truth for your consideration that has been proven again and again throughout history. True character is not displayed by how we handle success, but instead, how we deal with disappointment and failure."

Knoll Elementary School said "don't give up and try your best. Also, don't go too far away from your family because family comes first."

Dang said that while some of her fellow classmates had a clear vision of their future, others were still determining which path to take. "Some of us leave here with a GPS and a location already typed in. Some of us have a vague destination and a creased old map. And still others are content to set their feet on the wandering road and see where it takes them," she said. "So wherever you find yourself and whatever you're doing, follow your hearts and pursue your dreams. There's no better compass and no better destination."

She closed with the words of 72-year-old Ellie who said "be involved. We are a society of one as a whole. Embrace people."

North Quincy High School Principal Robert Shaw called the night a significant milestone for the 273 graduates and their families, noting that they would be joining the roughly 30,000 students who had graduated since the school's opening in 1926, when it was known as the North Quincy Junior and North Quincy High School.

The first graduating class of 189 students in 1934 "[spent] six years in a building less than half of the size that we occupy today," said Shaw and included current graduates' parents, grandparents, and several elected officials who were present such as 1972 NQHS graduate Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey and 1980 NQHS graduate State Rep. Bruce Ayers.

"They were a group of young men and women whose years at North Quincy were dominated by The Great Depression," said Shaw of the 1934 graduates. He went on to describe some of the more notable members of that class.

Russell Doucette, who grew up on Standish Road in Squantum, won more than 30 swimming championships in the Boston area. He went on to become a medical doctor, a professor,

Walter Bryan grew up on Arlington Street and was an outstanding male athlete participating in football, wrestling, basketball, and baseball. He went on to athletic success at Boston College. The gymnasium at NQHS is named in his honor.

William Butterworth grew up on Hollis Avenue and attended Northeastern University and the University of New Hampshire, becoming a civil engineer and designing homes.

Arthur Schuh studied science at Harvard and opened his own medical imaging company. An inventor, he patented a device on June 29, 1954 that absorbed the moisture which accumulates through evaporation on windowsills.

He told more stories of nurses and teachers who graduated in that first class and called them "people who did extraordinary things."

"You worked your way through algebra and chemistry, you sat through assemblies, you socialized in the cafeteria and lived out of lockers," said Shaw. "Outside the classroom, off the athletic field you remembered the importance of giving back to your community by logging over 15,000 hours of community service averaging 60 hours per student."

He paralleled both graduating classes—80 years apart—saying that the common denominator between the two was and is their desire to care for others in their community. "One thing that will never change is that the world will always need people who care," he said.

Class of 2014 President Hayley Forbes described her experience at North through the use of numbers. "Two-hundred and seventy-three," she said. "Two-hundred and seventy-three graduates sit before you and me today. A class made up of 273 individuals with their own experiences. Two-hundred and seventy-three different personalities who each contribute to the spirit of our class. Two-hundred and seventy-three students whose minds and hearts have been shaped by their experiences both in and outside the classroom. The class clown. The quiet kids. The athletes. The kids who were diagnosed with a case of senioritis freshman year. The artist, the scholars. We are all present here today and account for our total of two-hundred and seventy-three."

Class of 2014 students will be attending 142 colleges and universities, with seven going into the U.S. Armed Forces. Thirty-two have earned National Honors Society recognition. Twenty-eight have achieved distinction in the Air Force Junior ROTC. Ninety-seven participated in school sports and most participated in at least one community service project, according to Forbes, who noted that the relatively small number of students making up the graduating class was not reflective of their large amount of accomplishments.

"The most important things can't be so neatly measured. How can you measure the feeling you get when you open your first college acceptance letter or when your crush asks you to the prom, or when you made the winning shot in the last few seconds of the game? School assemblies, sporting events, school musicals, pep rallies, and dances were but some of the events that brought students together as one," she said. "It was in these moments that our school's true sense of community, that spirit that binds us all together, was most apparent."

"I could not be anymore proud to be a part of North Quincy's class of 2014," she said in closing.

Presented by Class of 2014 Vice-President Ivan Zeng was Mayor Thomas Koch who is a 1981 graduate of North. "Many of you started with us in the early days of kindergarten, some of you may have joined years later but here you are tonight graduating from North Quincy High School," he said."I, as a member of the school committee as well as my colleagues take great pride in your graduation tonight."

Students should not forget the incredible teachers, guidance counselors, and staff members who helped them along the way. "I'm sure if you take a minute you can think of one or two that made a major difference," Koch said.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School 2014 graduate Maya Umoren receives congratulations from School Committeeman David McCarthy's hand after receiving her diploma at graduation June 3.

He went on to describe an interaction between a journalist and Mother Teresa, in which the reporter asked the sister and missionary whether she felt as if she were making a difference in the lives of the poor and destitute when so many were clearly still suffering. Her response was "my friend, the lord doesn't ask me to be successful; he asks me to be faithful." Koch urged the graduates to remember her words and to be faithful to themselves, their families, their dreams, and their future vocation. "In the end, if you are faithful, you will be successful."

Vice-Chairman of the School Committee Kathryn Hubley, after introducing her fellow committee members who were in attendance, congratulated the graduating class for their dedication to their education and reminded them to fondly look back at their younger school years and to be proud of what may seem now like trivial accomplishments.

"Now is also a time to remember. Not just remembering the hard work on the tests and quizzes and projects and reports that got you here, but take a moment to stop and remember," she said. "Remember the day you first learned to read, write your name, figure out that really tough math problem; days your were really proud of yourself, because these are the days at school that have shaped the person you have become today."

"Look back with bright eyes toward your future."

GPS technology, while able to pinpoint your location on earth within a few kilometers, can't tell you where you should be, said City Council President Joseph Finn. "Only you can do that."

While it may be easier to quit in the face of difficulty and adversity, embracing disappointment and failure with grace makes a true difference in your character he said.

"Your Class of 2014 certainly has given our city and our school system so much to be proud of in the areas of academics, arts, technical education, athletics, and extraordinary community service," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

"I ask you to continue to live selflessly, certainly not selfishly because as graduates we all know what you know and where you have learned so much and how well you've done.

"Who you are will ultimately give you success in life," DeCristofaro added.

Began Career In Quincy Public Schools; Last Seven Years At Archbishop Williams High School

Dr. Carmen Mariano Retiring After 50 Years In Education

By SCOTT JACKSON

Fifty years after graduating from Archbishop Williams High School, Dr. Carmen Mariano, the school's principal, is calling it a career.

While Mariano has spent the last seven years at the Catholic school in Braintree, his career began in the Quincy Public School System. In January 1970, Mariano went to work as a teacher at the then Sterling Junior High School (now a middle school) working there for three years before pursuing his master's degree at Harvard. He began teaching because of advice his father gave him many years ago.

"When I was six years old, my father gave me some advice. He said 'Carmen, whatever you do, stay in school!' I listened to my dad. I did stay in school – for 61 years," Mariano recalled recently.

"Yes, I have been in school as a student, a teacher, a coach, or an administrator since I was six. I started as a teacher at the then Sterling Junior High School in Quincy in January of 1970. Three years later, I attended Harvard University where I earned my masters degree, then came back to Quincy as an assistant principal – first at Atlantic Junior High, then back to Sterling.

"After three more years as an assistant principal, I became a research assistant in the school system's personnel office. That lasted for four years."

Mariano also coached Quincy High's wrestling team for a decade early on in his career. The Presidents were a powerhouse under his leadership.

"It was a proud time for me and for my wrestlers. In 10 years, we recorded a dual meet record of 127 wins, 27 losses, and a few ties," Mariano said. "In a span of just eight of those years, we won five Suburban League Championships and four Mass. State Sectional Championships."

Mariano continued to rise through the ranks of the School Department. He was promoted to personnel director, then assistant superintendent for personnel, then deputy superintendent for personnel. He eventually would leave the Quincy Public School system but didn't go far, spending 10 years as dean at Quincy College. In 2001, Mariano returned to the School Department, working for another seven years as deputy superintendent.

In addition to his work in the School Department and at Quincy College, Mariano also worked as an adjunct instructor at Fitchburg State, Framingham State, Curry College and Massasoit. He earned his doctorate in educational leadership from Boston College.

In 2007, Mariano left the School Department to return to his high school alma mater. He had graduated from the high school in 1964 after attending elementary and junior high school in Quincy, where he was raised.

Mariano served as Archie's first president from 2007 to 2012. He spent the last two years as the school's principal. As he prepares to step away from AWHS and into retirement, Mariano said he will miss those he has come to know through the school.

"Archbishop Williams High School is more than a school. It is a family, and I will miss every aspect and every member of our family," he said. "Most of all, I will miss our students. They have been great, and they have found their greatness in their goodness. They have been good to each other, they have been good to me, and they have been good to everyone else.

"Wherever they go and whatever they do always results in compliments. They have made me very proud and very grateful."

Two years ago when he turned 65, Mariano's wife asked him to retire in a year's time. But he felt he couldn't leave that fast.

"Two years ago when I turned 65, my wife, DeeDee, made me promise to retire in one year. I did promise to do so, but then broke my promise," Mariano said.

"I just couldn't leave that quickly, so I begged her for one more year and she kindly complied. I still don't want to leave, but do not have the courage to ask DeeDee to let me break my promise again. So I will retire next month."

"Besides when my father approached retirement many years ago," Mariano added, "he gave me some more advice. He said, 'Carmen, whatever you do, don't retire before you are 62 or after you are 65. Be sure to leave the stage while they are still applauding.'

"I turned 67 last March and my dad is in heaven holding a stopwatch saying 'it is time' and 'father knows best!'

Mariano hopes to stay close to the school he attended and worked for even after he retires.

"I do have some plans for my retirement, the most important of which is staying close to Archbishop Williams High School," he explained. "I would miss our students too much if I never saw them again, so I will stay close to their games, to their meets, their matches, their plays, and their performances.

"In my spare time I would very much like to teach a course or two at the undergraduate level in either education, math, communications, or administration."

He also wants to stay active and exercise daily.

"Last but not least, I plan to work out every day without being hurried by the passage of time. I have remained very faithful to physical exercise since I was a student at Archbishop Williams, but I have never had the luxury of building my days around my workouts," Mariano said. "Instead, I was always forced to build my workouts around my days. That will change in retirement and I look forward to it."

As he readies himself to leave the Archbishop Williams, Mariano hopes the school has made an impact on the lives of its students as it did with him.

"Fifty years ago, Archbishop Williams High School changed my life. It gave me a strength of spirit and a sense of self," he said. "I hope and pray that in the past seven years, our school made a difference in the lives of our students that even approached the difference our school made in mine."

Quincy High Plumbing Students Visit Watertown Museum

For the past several years, Tom Cassidy, Plumbing Technology teacher at Quincy High School, and his Plumbing 1 students have made yearly visits to the Plumbing Museum in Watertown, which is sponsored by the J. C. Cannistraro Corporation.

Each visit has been very interesting and exciting for both teacher and students. The Museum Event Coordinator, Linda Viking, has hosted welcoming and informative tours of the Museum.

Much of the early American plumbing technology has been forgotten by most. The students were able to view the evolution of the trade technology with a detailed explanation. Viking discussed the human workforce experience and skills needed in times past to the amazement of the students.

After the Museum tour, Cassidy and his students were invited into the office work area of the J.C. Cannistraro Company. Students had an opportunity to listen to and question the Plumbing Coordinators as they worked on live assignments. This gave students additional information regarding types of career pathways available to them.

Cassidy recently received an invitation from Viking to attend the first Plumbing Museum sponsored tool fundraiser Gala to be held at the Museum. Two other school systems were also invited. Cassidy was asked for a "wish list" for the Plumbing Program.

After careful review of current technology, he asked for a "Mega-press tool system." He was pleased to hear that Jim Sullivan, president of the P.V. Sullivan Supply Company located in Quincy, would sponsor the generous donation to the Quincy High Plumbing Program. Not only the Mega-press tool, but a complete Pro-press tool kit was received by the Plumbing program, and students are now ready to construct piping systems.

Sullivan; Keith Segalla, Executive Director of Career and Technical Education and Information Technology, Quincy Public Schools; and QHS Plumbing Instructor Tom Cassidy. Photo Courtesy Regina Scanlan

Sullivan's generosity has boosted opportunities for students to learn and develop technical skills. He has made multiple donations to the Quincy Plumbing Program throughout the years; and with this support, the Plumbing program has truly benefited.

LYDON CHAPEL FOR FUNERALS
Michelle Lydon, Director
644 Hancock Street, Quincy
617-472-7423

On Saturday, May 31 at approximately 9:13 p.m. a citizen called the Quincy Police to report two suspicious males sitting in a car 'possibly doing drugs' at the intersection of Verchild Street and Federal Avenue.

Officers McCormack and Zupkofska were dispatched and then informed the license plate given by the collar indicated the vehicle was stolen. Officer Zupkofska arrived on scene first and approached the vehicle. He then ordered the driver out of the vehicle and placed him in handcuffs. A second male in the front passenger seat was ordered to keep his hands on the dashboard in from of him for officer safety reasons. The keys of the motor vehicle were still in the ignition.

Officer Zupkofska told Officer McCormack that there were several exposed hypodermic needles inside the motor vehicle along with three knives. A check of the driver's wallet revealed five two-milligram pills of Clonazepam, but there was no prescription with them.

Officer McCormack ordered the passenger out then handcuffed him. The passenger said he was diabetic and often times carried needles with him. The passenger was unsteady on his feet and had a delayed reaction when responding to questions. He claimed his blood sugar was low. (A blood check conducted later by EMTs at the Quincy Police Station showed it to be normal.)

Officer McCormack went back to the motor vehicle and found a folding knife stuck into the roof along with a hypodermic needle with a red liquid on the visor. At this time, Officers Francis and Ward arrived on scene to provide assistance. The two suspects were transported to Quincy Police Station for booking. The officers then conducted a search of the vehicle.

On the driver's side, a spoon with a cotton ball was located. This is a common instrument for heroin users when preparing for drug use. The spoon had visible white residue in it. There were numerous used hypodermic needles inside the vehicle. On the floor in the backseat area were bank cards with two different names on them. Inside the main compartment of the vehicle there was extensive damage to the dashboard and the upholstery. The front seats had extensive cut marks exposing the seats' cushioning.

Officer McCormack opened the trunk of the vehicle and found a large cardboard box containing several pairs of sunglasses, GPS systems, cellphones and hand tools. Some of the hand tools that were found – a pry bar, screwdrivers and cutting shears – are items commonly used to gain access into locked homes and motor vehicles. One of the items located was a set of throwing stars. These items were brought to the station as evidence, with the hope of connecting them to a crime.

The driver, a 26-year-old homeless male, was charged with receiving a stolen motor vehicle, receiving stolen property greater than $250, malicious damage of property greater than $250, possession of a dangerous weapon, possession of burglarious tools, possession of a class A drug, possession of class E drug, and operating a motor vehicle without a license.

The passenger, a 27-year old Quincy resident, was charged with receiving a stolen motor, receiving stolen property greater than $250, malicious destruction of property greater than $250, possession of a dangerous weapon, possession of burglarious tools, possession of a class A drug, and possession of class E drug,

The Detective Unit will follow up to match items recovered with their rightful owners. Nice Work!

NICE WORK GOES OUT TO: Lt. Kevin Tobin, who was off duty and received a telephone call from a friend who said that a suspicious man just walked down his (the caller's) driveway asking for a landscaping job. After telling the suspect he didn't need his service, the suspect walked approximately 200 yards to another house and rang the doorbell. The caller observed the suspect peer into one of the front windows then go down the driveway behind the home. The suspect then walked back out to the street.

Lt. Tobin then called the station as he headed to the location and directed officers to the area of President's Lane. Lt. Tobin spotted the suspect and approached him, identifying himself as a police officer. The suspect immediately began to run, so he gave chase but lost sight of him in the area of Burgin Parkway.

Officers Kristen Bowes, Paul Holland, and John O'Donnell arrived on scene and searched the area. Officer O'Donnell received information that a male fitting the description had entered 185 Burgin Parkway. The suspect was found inside the building and a warrant check showed there was an outstanding warrant. The suspect, originally seen with a backpack, did not have it with him. Officers later found it but there was nothing in it that connected him to a crime.

The 29-year-old Quincy resident was transported to the station for booking. This suspect was looking to break into someone's house but due to quick police work he was stopped and placed under arrest. Nice Work!

IN BOTH CASES citizen involvement was the key. Residents saw something suspicious and didn't wait for a crime to occur. As always, let us check suspicious people in your neighborhood out. If it turns out that it was nothing, at least we know who is roaming your neighborhood!

QUINCY POLICE BLOOD DRIVE: QPD and the Glennon family will be sponsoring a blood drive at the Quincy Police Station entrance today (Thursday, June 12) from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. The blood drive is being held by Brigham & Women's Hospital. Please contact Lt. Dan Minton at 617-745-5719 for an appointment. Walk-ins are welcome.

QUINCY POLICE CHILD CAR SEATS AND CHILD FINGERPRINTING: Will be held Saturday, June 14, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Quincy Walmart on Falls Boulevard. There will be child car seat inspection, installations, and re-installations. There will also be child fingerprinting. In the event of inclement weather the fair will be rescheduled. For more information contact Lt. Dan Minton at 617-745-5719.

The second annual Strawberry Festival is Saturday, June 14 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. featuring strawberry shortcake, bake table, craft booth, 20 vendors, a bouncy and crafts for kids, music, berry pie contest, barbeque lunch and much more. Rain or shine, no admission charge.

Hatha Yoga continues tonight, Thursday at 7 p.m. in Fellowship Hall.

Groundbreaking For Congregation Beth Shalom

After three years of searching for a new spiritual home, members and guests of Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills will break ground for a new synagogue on a new road, Shoolman Way, off Lodge Street in Milton, on Sunday, June 22nd at 4 p.m. The bucolic location for the new building was donated to the congregation by Marvin and Andrea Gordon, and it has a singular historical significance.

Mr. Gordon's grandparents, Bertha and Samuel Shoolman, were the first Jewish family to purchase property in the town of Milton in 1920. Mr. Shoolman farmed the 10 acres of land, producing and distributing kosher milk for 29 years. The Gordon family continues to live elsewhere on the property in a house they built in 1965.

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills brings together two venerable synagogues, Temple Shalom of Milton and Temple Beth El of Quincy. The small congregation's administration, social and cultural activities, religious services, and school have been conducted in four separate locations in and around Milton since 2011, when the congregation left its former location. Its new home on Shoolman Way will bring back together all of the congregation's activities under one new roof.

The groundbreaking ceremony, which will feature remarks from Rabbi Alfred Benjamin, congregants and officials, will symbolize a new era of hope and optimism for the local Jewish community. The public is welcome to join the Congregation in this joyous event.

There will be no parking on Lodge Street – drop-offs only. Parking will be available at St. Elizabeth's Church on the corner of Randolph Avenue and Reedsdale Road, or the Milton Cemetery on Gun Hill Street. Shoolman Way is a short walk from both parking locations. Attendees are advised to dress appropriately for a wooded setting.

Residents interested in Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills' services, events and activities are invited to call 617-698-3394 or visit BethShalomBlueHills.org for information.

OBITUARIES

Patricia Carroll, 72

A funeral service for Patricia (Barry) Carroll, 72, of Quincy and Wells, ME was held yesterday (Wednesday) at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. Carroll died June 7 at home after a long illness.

A lifelong Quincy resident, she graduated from Quincy High School, Class of 1959. She worked for Verizon Communications for 36 years. She also worked at Quincy High School as a teachers aid. Mrs. Carroll was a member of the Telephone Pioneers Club and a member of IBEW Local 2222.

She enjoyed traveling, visiting many countries such as Ireland, Bermuda, the Caribbean, Hawaii, Florida and Cape Cod. She enjoyed visiting the western part of the U.S. as well. Mrs. Carroll enjoyed spending her summers in Wells, ME. She loved animals of all kinds; she was especially fond of the pets adopted from the animal shelters in the area. Her cat, "Pedro," of 18 years will miss her.

Beloved wife of Leonard Carroll of Quincy. Devoted mother of Bryan Carroll and his wife Carolyn of Quincy and Timothy Carroll and his wife Ceara of Acton. Sister of Joseph Barry of Rockland and the late Barbara Donahue. Grandmother of Samantha Carroll and Christian Ventresca. Stepmother of John Carroll of Gardner, Robin Tyo of RI, Steven Carroll of CA and Jeff Carroll of Franklin. Sister-in-law of Uarda Barry. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Interment was at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

John H. Stewart, 59

A celebration of life service for John H. Stewart, 59, of Quincy was held June 5 at Magoun-Biggins Funeral Home, Rockland.

Mr. Stewart died May 29 at home.

He was born in Weymouth, son of the late Robert and Dorothy (Harlow) Stewart, and was raised and educated in Hanover. He was a graduate of South Shore Vocational Technical High School.

An electrician by trade, Mr. Stewart was a member of Local #103 in Boston.

Loving father of Robert and Sean Stewart of ME. Dear brother of William E. Stewart and his wife Cathy of Rockland and Robert W. Stewart and his wife Roberta of Abington. Also survived by several nieces and nephews.

A family funeral service will be held at a later date.

Richard P. Mendall, 56

A funeral Mass for Richard P. Mendall, 56, of Quincy and formerly Hull was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Mendall died peacefully June 5 at the Good Samaritan Hospital in Brockton, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born in Attleboro, raised and educated in Hull and was a graduate of Hull High School, Class of 1976. He was employed as a laborer in the construction industry for many years and previously had worked as a truck driver.

Mr. Mendall served in the U.S. Army in the 1970s.

Former husband of Donna F. (Kershaw) Mendall of Quincy. Devoted father of Melissa A. Mendall of Quincy. Dear friend of Lynne M. Cignarelli of Humarock. Cherished son of Dorothy Ann (McSharry) Gilbert of Braintree and Richard J. Mendall, retired QPD, of Chelsea. Brother of Ronald J. Mendall of Hull, Thomas W. Mendall of Quincy, Stephen M. Mendall of Weymouth and the late Kelly M. Mendall.

Lawrence P. Faherty, 61

A memorial visitation for Lawrence P. "Larry Links" Faherty, 61, of Quincy was held June 6 at Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Mr. Faherty died suddenly May 31 at Mass. General Hospital, Boston, after a brief illness.

A 1971 graduate of North Quincy High School, he maintained many friendships from childhood to adulthood. His passing has been a devastating loss for all who knew him, who will miss his sense of humor, giving nature, love for his family and friends and his many stories, all of which were true.

A man of many talents, Mr. Faherty worked for several government agencies on various projects throughout the years. He provided sound for the world during Pope John Paul II's 1979 visit to Boston, as well as for many well-known national acts, traveling around the U.S. and Canada during the 70s, 80s and 90s. He built sound systems for numerous clubs and spent many nights working as a DJ at the Beachcomber on Wollaston Beach.

When he wasn't working, Mr. Faherty enjoyed spending time with nature, whether at Nantasket Beach, Blue Hill Reservation or in his own back yard. He also enjoyed all different types of music, listening to or playing it himself.

His finest achievement, of which he was the most proud, as he stated many times, was his daughter Catherine Mary Farish, who with her husband, Sgt. Nicholas Farish USMC, lives in Richlands, NC.

Also survived by his fiancée and best friend of Nancy Hollandsworth of Norton, his godmother, Catherine Mary "Auntie Kay" Faherty; his daughter's mother Colleen O'Neil and Colleen's parents, Richard and Jacqueline O'Neil. Loving brother of Colleen Giacomozi and her husband Peter, Dennis Faherty, Brian Faherty and the late Timothy Faherty. He had a large extended family that includes many aunts, uncles, cousins, nieces and nephews. He will be greatly missed by all.

Louise A. Haddad, 84

A funeral Mass for Louise A. (Hajjar) Haddad, 84, of Weymouth and formerly Milton and Quincy was celebrated June 5 at St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Wollaston Beach Improving

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new report says Wollaston Beach has made remarkable improvement over the past seven years.

The report by the Metropolitan Beaches Commission looked at 11 beaches operated by the state's Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) in the Boston area from King's Beach in Lynn to Nantasket Beach in Hull. The results of that survey were then contrasted with a previous report issued in 2007.

According to the 2014 report, water quality has improved at Wollaston Beach since 2007. Infrastructure improvements have also made it a better place for recreation.

"Improvements to the sidewalks, streets, and seawall have made it a great place to walk or run. Water quality has improved, though more work is needed and flagging accuracy continues to be a challenge on this beach. Traffic is calmer, maintenance has improved, trash is picked up regularly and the sand and bathhouses are clean and well maintained," the report stated.

"The Friends of Wollaston Beach and Save the Harbor/Save the Bay have done an excellent job of bringing more activities for families and kids to the beach, which attracts a very diverse population."

The report also identified several concerns at the beach, including dogs and dog waste, brown algae, grass and weeds, and a need for more trash and recycling receptacles.

Capital needs, such as a new dog park and a new playground facility, as well as continued improvements to boost water quality, were also noted in the report.

Bruce Berman, a spokesman for the Save the Harbor/Save the Bay, said Wollaston Beach has made unbelievable progress since 2007 and called it one of the two most improved beaches surveyed, along with Constitution Beach in East Boston.

"I would go swimming at Wollaston Beach – unless there was a big rain storm the day before I would go swimming there every day in the summer," Berman said. "Wollaston Beach has improved greatly. Traffic is calmer, the sea wall is safer. But more work is needed."

He also noted the concerns about dogs and the waste they leave behind aren't unique to Wollaston Beach – the report cited similar concerns at more than half the beaches surveyed.

"This isn't just a Wollaston Beach concern in particular," Berman explained. "Dog poop can be fairly persistent. The solution is fairly straightforward. People should clean up after their dogs."

A new dog park, as recommended in the report, would also help mitigate the effect dogs have on the beach, Berman added.

Strawberry Festival And Craft Fair June 14

The annual Strawberry Festival and Craft Fair at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy. will be held on Saturday, June 14. Homemade strawberry shortcake, strawberry jam, strawberry-themed crafts and a table of homemade baked items will be available. Bake a berry pie to enter into our Pie Baking Contest. There will be over 20 vendors. Our grill masters will be cooking lunch items, and there will be a bouncy house and activities for the children, too. The event will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

For more information, call Jaime at 617-435-1472 or e-mail the church at hncc@comcast.net.

UCC Pilgrim Pedal Fundraiser

Pastor Jack Swanson of Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd. in Wollaston, announces that a 50-mile bike ride is being planned for November. Called the Pilgrim Pedal, the ride will originate at the church, proceed through Wollaston and North Quincy to Quincy Shore Drive and to southern Artery. Entering North Weymouth, the ride will travel through Hingham to Nantasket Beach and Hull Gut. The route will then be through Cohasset and Scituate, finishing in Hingham.

The ride will be under the direction of Rev. Swanson who is an avid cyclist. The month of November was selected for Pilgrim Pedal as it traditionally closes the cycling season and fits the New England Thanksgiving Pilgrim heritage.

Cyclists and sponsors are sought for this event and more information will be released soon. All participants will receive a long-sleeved T-shirt and will be treated to a wonderful dinner at the conclusion of the event. Rev. Swanson can be reached at 617-479-6661.

Ex-POW: 'You've Got To Keep Going'

On the morning of April 16th, Noble was liberated by British troops. "On the 14th and 15th we could hear the artillery of the approaching British Army...so we knew our liberators were coming and we had a hell of a time," he said. "We sang, we joked until the guards got pretty tired of us and shut us down."

At the time of his rescue, Noble weighed only 100 pounds. Ravenous, he roamed the countryside outside of the camp's barbed wire fences. He had hoped to shoot and kill, at most, a chicken. One man armed with a rifle however managed to shoot a deer, satiating them for the time being.

While under the care of British troops a reporter from the Chicago Tribune took his name and address and sent word that he was alive to the U.S. This information was forwarded to the Boston Post, who informed his family that he was no longer MIA, but had been a POW. "Being a prisoner is one thing; being MIA is something else," he said.

He was eventually flown to England and quarantined for two weeks. "One of the things that happened is that when they first brought us in they gave us anything that we wanted to eat – which was steaks – which they quickly realized that was the wrong thing; it was too much too soon." After his brief rehabilitation, he was sent back to the U.S. where he received a 60-day furlough, spending time with his family who he said, never gave up hope that he would come home alive. "I was very fortunate that I had a wonderful family."

He continued his education in 1951 with the help of the GI Bill at Boston College and moved to Quincy in 1952. The following years were difficult because of the stigma attached to being a POW according to Noble. "When I came home we could never talk about it, because it was something that we thought shouldn't have happened to us," he said. "This was typical of all POWs; they didn't talk."

"We were fortunate to get involved with the Veterans' Administration...they said look, you were in harm's way so there's nothing to be ashamed of. I'm glad I came home safe."

Noble's commendations include The Bronze Star Medal, The POW Medal, The Good Conduct Medal, The American Campaign Medal, The European, African, and Middle East Campaign Medal, The Bronze Star Medal, The WWII Victory Medal, The Combat, Infantry Badge First Award, The Honorable Service Lapel Button WWII, and the Expert Badge in Automatic Rifle.

Through tears, he told the students—who had been listening intently the entire time—that despite his experiences as a POW, he was lucky.

"I was fortunate in the type of camp I was in. I never ran into the guards that were taking advantage of their situation," he said. "I'm just very glad to be here today and I hope that some of the things I said are helpful to you and just know that no matter what happens to you, you've got to keep going and things will turn out all right as long as you don't give up."

"I think they listened and I hope I had something to say that was helpful," said the 88-year-old. "I hope I made an impact."

Germantown Center Hosts Memorial Day Breakfast

The Germantown Neighborhood Center recently hosted its annual Memorial Day Breakfast after an observance at the Snug Harbor Community School located next door.

Students helped conduct the program to the delight of honored dignitaries and guests which included distinguished Veterans, Gold Star families from the Germantown neighborhood of Quincy, state Rep. Tackey Chan and other elected officials, Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Quincy firefighters, Quincy Community Police Officer Bill Mitchell, community members and Germantown Neighborhood Center Staff.

The students lead the crowd in the Pledge of Allegiance, performed "The Star Spangled Banner" and explained the history of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Longtime Germantown residents Walter and Nancy Rice also joined the conversation during the reception. For many years, Mr. Rice has maintained the public space on the waterfront walkway on Palmer Street, adjacent to their home and a few hundred feet from the Center.

"We love hosting these types of events," said Kathy Quigley. "It's such a wonderful opportunity to honor our veterans."

The event was sponsored by the Snug Harbor PTO, the Student Council and the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

Fathers, Men's Health And Social Security

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

This year, we observe National Men's Health Week from June 9 to 15. Each year we observe Men's Health Week the week prior to Father's Day, focusing on awareness, prevention, education and family.

Social Security encourages you to support fathers and friends everywhere in their efforts to stay healthy. The right balance of diet, exercise, regular visits to doctors and health care providers, and overall healthy living can go a long way to help everyone remain a part of your daily life for years to come.

Avoiding stress helps folks stay healthy. That's why we'd like to suggest that you advise the men in your life (and everyone for that matter) to avoid scams and phishers. Fathers and best friends may like to go fishing, but make sure they aren't the catch of the day when a criminal offers alluring bait.

For example, Social Security will not call or email you for your personal information such as your Social Security number or banking information. If someone claiming to be from Social Security contacts you and asks for this information, do not give out your personal information without calling us to verify the validity of the request. The caller may be an identity thief phishing for your personal information. Just call the local Social Security office or Social Security's toll-free number at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778).

If you receive a suspicious call, please report it to our Fraud Hotline. You also can report such calls online at http://oig.ssa.gov/report or by telephone at 1-800-269-0271 from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. If possible, please include the following details:

- The alleged suspect(s) and victim(s) names, addresses, phone numbers, dates of birth, and Social Security numbers, if known;
- Description of the fraud and the location where the fraud took place;
- When and how the fraud was committed;
- Why the person committed the fraud (if known); and
- Who else has knowledge of the potential violation.

Identity theft is one of the fastest-growing crimes in America. If you or anyone you know has been the victim of an identity thief, the place to contact is the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) at www.idtheft.gov. Or, call 1-877-IDTHEFT (1-877-438-4338); TTY 1-866-653-4261.

Sister Surprise

at 6 o'clock in the morning? What are you doing?' And she said 'I couldn't sleep so I went to get coffee.'

"I thought that was weird."

Kayla said Sam then told her she was back on the base and that she had to hang up.

"I said, 'You talk to me every night on base. Why do you have to hang up?' But she hung up anyway and I said, 'whatever.'"

For Sam it was a narrow escape.

Now it was time to execute the surprise.

Kayla and her classmates arrived at the stadium at 5 p.m. - one hour before graduation began. Sam texted her sister at 4:45 p.m.

"She asked me if I was nervous and I said extremely," Kayla said. " I just wanted to get through my speech without any problems.

"She told me 'don't be nervous. You'll do great.'"

The Class of 2014 was called to line up and the graduates were instructed to put their cell phones away.

Kayla was soon on the stage, offering remarks as the senior class president. It was a moment she had been working towards for the last month. In her speech, she mentioned some of the students who had passed away during their high school years, including Lamar.

It was a bittersweet moment - addressing your graduation class is something few do. But knowing some of the friends that you shared classes and other high school moments with are not there to hear your words can be terribly sad.

It was soon time to receive diplomas and Kayla was third in a class of 407 - following the valedictorian and salutatorian.

Operation Sam Surprise now kicked into overdrive.

Sam had arrived at the stadium a few hours before graduation and remained secluded in the women's locker room in the tunnel under the stands. One dean - Mrs. Sullivan - was standing at the bottom. A security guard was at the fence. Another Dean - Ms. McPartlin – was right behind the fence.

"It was a domino effect," Sam says. "Okay, get her. Ok, get her."

Mrs. Sullivan waved Sam down and she stood in front of her. When they called Kayla's name and she crossed the platform, Ms. McPartlin waved Sam on.

"There were other times when I thought Sam would show up and surprise me," Kayla said. "I didn't even have that thought for graduation. I thought 'she's not coming. That stinks.'"

Sam then took her position at the end of the line. What followed was surreal. Sam could have worn civilian clothes to the graduation but thought dressed in her Navy uniform would make the moment even more special.

"This was a Kodak moment," Kayla beamed. "It's something you see in movies and you hear about things like this on the news. I didn't think it would happen to me. It was crazy. I was not expecting it . . . at all."

Sam's appearance was an exclamation mark on a perfect evening for Kayla and the family.

"The whole night was perfect," Kayla said. "I was able to read and get through my speech. I was the one who said 'graduates, 1-2-3 toss your hats.' It would have been a great night already just because I was so involved with it.

"It was something I had been working towards for the last month to perfect. When everything went smoothly, I was so happy.

"Then, seeing Samantha there, it was just the perfect ending to a perfect night."

Being there for Kayla was also special for Sam.

"I'm just so proud of Kayla. That's the thing. I wanted to be there because she's accomplished so much and overcame so much. I couldn't be happier for her and I'm so proud of her. I was glad I could be here to experience the excitement and happiness with her."

Kayla then adds: "I think for me graduation symbolized the closing of a chapter in my life. The fact that she was here to experience that with me was perfect."

Both sisters are ambitious with specific career paths.

In the fall, Kayla will enroll at Salve Regina University and study political science. She hopes to be an attorney some day.

After fulfilling her Navy commitment, Sam wants to become a criminologist with the FBI.

Sam boarded a plane and headed back to Hawaii Saturday. The McArdle family knows this visit may be the last one for some time.

But returning for Kayla's graduation was worth it.

"I didn't want to miss this," Sam said. "I know I won't be home for Christmas so this is probably the last time I'll be home for a while."

For the Kayla, Sam and the rest of the McArdle family, Christmas came early this year.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us, St. Jude worker of miracles, pray for us, St. Jude helper of the hopeless, pray for me. Say this prayer nine times a day. By the eighth day our prayer will be answered. Say it for nine days it has never been known to fail. Publication must be promised. My prayers have been answered. Thank you St. Jude. PCB 6/12

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A change of season reinvigorates the Lamb, helping to overcome the effects of a recent slower-paced period. This is a good time to restate your feelings for that certain someone.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might not like using your authority to correct a workplace situation, but that's what being placed in charge is all about. Besides, you have people ready to lend support if need be.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your creativity continues to run high and helps guide you to make some fine choices in the work you're doing. Keep the weekend free for those special people in your life.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't be surprised if you experience a sudden spurt of energy strong enough to pull you out of that recent period of indecision and put you back in charge of your own goals.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time for Leos and Leonas to set new goals regarding health, educational choices and possible career moves. The plans you make now could be a blueprint for your future.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might have much to offer a potential employer, but it can all be overwhelmed by too many details. Let the facts about you speak for themselves without any embellishments.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a good week to balance your responsibilities to your work-a-day world with your obligations to the people in your private life. Expect news that could lead to a change in plans.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A changing attitude on the part of a once determined adversary could cause changes down the line. Be prepared to take advantage of an unexpected new opportunity.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You'd be a truly wise Sagittarius to be skeptical about an offer that doesn't answer all your questions. Even a colleague's testimonial doesn't replace facts that aren't there.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a good idea to avoid spending on unnecessary purchases this week in order to keep a money reserve against a possible upcoming (but, fortunately, temporary) shortfall.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) More information is what you should demand regarding that workplace situation that recently came to light. Don't be surprised at who might turn up as one of your supporters.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still be in a "treading water" mode, but by midweek, a shift in your aspect favors taking a more active role in pushing for the changes you feel are necessary. Good luck.
BORN THIS WEEK: You exude a warm, caring attitude that comforts everyone who comes into your life.

Quincy Marine General Next Corps Commandant

proud of him being named commandant," Joseph Sr. said.

Joseph Sr. served in the Marine Corps before and during the Korean War, rising to the rank of sergeant. Gen. Dunford is one of four children – his brother Mike also served in the Marines, retiring with the rank of lieutenant colonel. Their father said the two brothers made the decision to enlist in the Marines on their own.

"I never steered them in this direction – it's something they did on their own," he noted.

Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel announced Obama's selection. In a statement, Hagel praised Dunford's service record and said he was delighted by the commander-in-chief's selection.

"I am delighted that President Obama accepted my recommendation to nominate Gen. Joe Dunford to serve as the 36th commandant of the Marine Corps. Joe is an extraordinary leader who has always been faithful to his country and his Marines during more than 35 years in uniform," Hagel stated.

"The president and I have greatly relied on Joe's steady leadership as the commander of the International Security Assistance Force in Afghanistan. Thanks to his exceptional abilities, and his commitment to the men and women under his command, we have made progress in Afghanistan and remain on track to responsibly bring America's longest war to an end later this year.

U.S. MARINE CORPS Gen. Joseph F. Dunford, Jr. (left) has been nominated as the next Marine Corps commandant. Dunford moved to Quincy with his parents Katherine and Joseph Sr. at age 12. In this September 2012 photo, Gen. Dunford and his parents attended a ceremony at the South Boston Vietnam Memorial, where he was the guest of honor. "No one is better suited to write the next chapter in Marine Corps history than Joe Dunford, and I look forward to working with him in his new role upon his confirmation by the U.S. Senate."

Prior to his post in Afghanistan, Dunford served two years as the Marine Corps' assistant commandant. He has served as an infantry officer at all levels. He commanded the 2nd Battalion, 6th Marines, and during Operation Iraqi Freedom, he commanded the 5th Marine Regiment.

His joint assignments include service as the executive assistant to the vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and chief of the Joint Staff's Global and Multilateral Affairs Division.

He also has served as the assistant division commander of 1st Marine Division, as the Marine Corps director of operations, as the Joint Staff's vice director for operations and as Marine Corps deputy commandant for plans, policies and operations. He also commanded the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force and Marine Forces U.S. Central Command.

In addition to his undergraduate degree from St. Michael's, Dunford holds a master's degree in government from Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., and a master's in international relations from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University in Medford. He is a graduate of the U. S. Army Ranger School, Marine Corps Amphibious Warfare School, and the Army War College.

Pentagon spokesman Army Col. Steve Warren said there isn't a timeline for Dunford's transition out of Afghanistan, and did not say who will replace him there.

These kids understand fair play.
Why doesn't Quincy District Court?

In courts across Massachusetts, some powerful people used to abuse the process of choosing candidates for the best jobs. Now courts are striving to make sure hiring procedures are transparent and fair for everyone.

Except in Quincy District Court.

The court posted an opening for the chief probation officer job. But none of the qualified candidates made the grade. The court posted the job again: same result. Now the job is open again, for the THIRD TIME. No other court has had this problem. Were all of the candidates unqualified – or is someone playing favorites?

Probation officers are good, dedicated people doing dangerous, challenging jobs, keeping our neighborhoods safer. This isn't about any individual probation officer.

It's about powerful people playing games in secret.

Kids understand fair play.

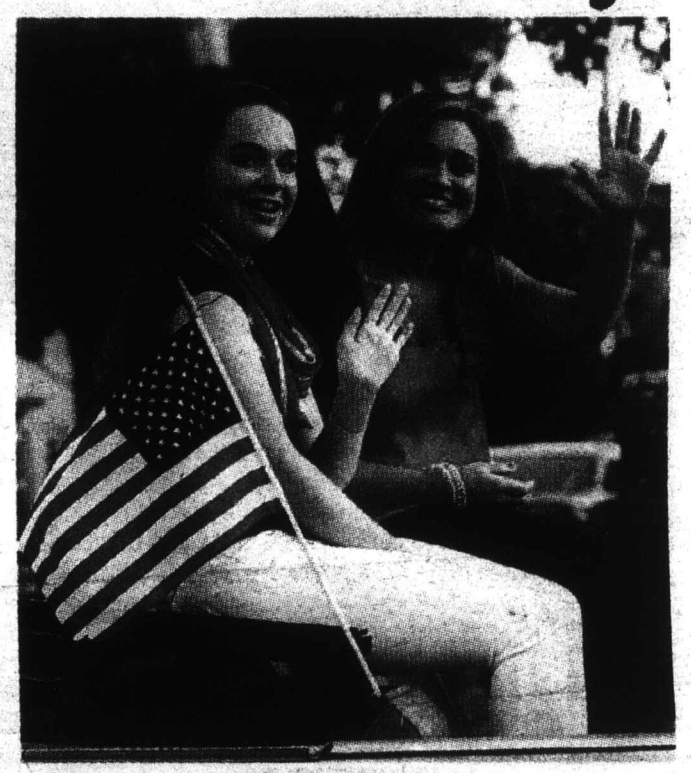
Flags, Fireworks Celebrate Old Glory



QUINCY'S 63RD ANNUAL Flag Day Celebration was a Star-Spangled sensation as an estimated 10,000 spectators lined the route of the Flag Day Parade and then were entertained by a dazzling fireworks display over Black's Creek at Pageant Field. From top left: local youngsters Mollie Glavin, Thomas Kein and Talian Bonome show their patriotism in red, white and blue attire. Samaya Rivera, also of Quincy, gets into the Flag Day spirit with a patriotic tutu. Abbie Koch and Fox TV News Anchor Sorboni Banerjee wave to spectators along the parade route. Banerjee was the parade grand marshal. Abbie's grandfather, the late Richard J. Koch, Sr., started the Flag Day celebration in Quincy in the 1950s. Her father, Mayor Thomas Koch, continues the tradition with the support of sponsors and the Quincy Flag Day Committee. Rick Cobban – a longtime participant of city parades - walks the route on his familiar stilts. Colorful fireworks over Black's Creek culminate the celebration. In the foreground is a 30-foot by 60-foot American Flag hoisted high above Pageant Field by two Quincy Fire Department aerial trucks. ADAMS GREEN UPDATE – The construction of a new gas line, near 1400 Hancock St. in Quincy Center, continues this week from 7 p.m. to 5 a.m. City officials anticipated that on two nights this week, Chestnut Street and Maple Street will be closed to traffic coming from the direction of City Hall. All businesses and restaurants will be open, and signs will be posted directing traffic to use Washington Street to Foster Street or McGrath Highway to access to the Hancock Parking lot and businesses on Chestnut Street. Construction of new drainage lines and utility work in the area of Granite, Temple and Coddington Streets, will continue next week during regular daytime work hours. No major traffic diversions are planned for this section of work, but there are anticipated to be lane restrictions depending on construction location.

$97.3 Million Budget Approved By 6-1 Vote

School Budget OK'd; Plan Includes Funding For 37 New Positions

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Public Schools' FY 2015 budget of $97,306,723—which is $3,638,558 or 3.88 percent higher than the FY 2014 budget and will create the equivalent of 37 new, full-time academic and non-academic support positions—was approved last week by the City Council and by a 6-1 vote by the School Committee.

Funds for next year's budget, which goes into effect July 1, are coming from two sources: Mayor Thomas Koch's appropriation of $94,106,723—an increase of 3.23 percent over FY 2014—and projected circuit breaker funding of $3,200,000 with an increase of $690,000 over FY 2014.

Money from Massachusetts' Special Education Circuit Breaker program reimburses school districts a significant portion of the cost of educating students considered to be severe high-needs.

The budget reflects "steady, sustained improvement within the Quincy Public Schools" according to School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, who gave kudos to Koch and fellow members of the School Committee for their dedication to district schools. "I want to thank you, Mr. Mayor, for your considerations for continuing such great progress for our school system," he said. "I want to thank the committee for being so participatory and decisive in order to further this school system."

New full and part-time hires will constitute $1,675,500 of the approved budget. Two English Language Learner (ELL) teachers will joint QPS as will one English language arts teacher.

Three part-time literacy teachers will be hired at the Bernazzani, Atherton Hough, and Beechwood Knoll elementary schools. The foreign language department will add one part-time and two full-time staff members in a bid to restore French instruction for eighth-graders. One part-time physics teacher position will be added.

The number of full-time kindergarten aides will be increased by 10 staff members, allowing for an aide to be in each classroom throughout the school day. The addition of 10 special education aides will address a FY 2014 staff deficit and will satisfy statewide requirements.

Two special education teachers will also be added in 2015. This will assist in creating a lighter workload for current staff who face upcoming kindergarten student assessments such as ELL, developmental reading, and kindergarten entry testing. A $6,000 increase will help fund stipends for six teacher professional development facilitators while professional development as a whole will see a 31.71 percent decrease in funding of $13,000.

A decrease of two academic classroom teachers at the elementary level will occur due to the anticipated reduction of two classrooms because of changes in open enrollment policies and staff shifts.

Due to 27 retirements over FY 2014, less retirements are anticipated for next year. As such, longevity funding for retired teachers and sick leave will be decreased by $73,000 or 33.64 percent. Laura Owens, assistant to the superintendent for Communications and Operations and clerk of the School Committee, said that since the retirements were anticipated, the money left over will be put into the foreign language and technology departments.

"We knew about the retirements at the time…that breakage, that's factored in," she said. The increase in positions is not related to what was described as a higher than normal amount of retirements by DeCristofaro who will see a $3,000 increase in his salary for next year.

Breakage is defined as commercial allowance as the result of a loss, in this case the loss being the 27 retirements.

Clerical support costs will increase by $89,626 or 18.62 percent.

Non-academic expenditures include an increase of $8,000 for student furniture, a $275,000 increase in special education transportation to address special student situations and state requirements, and a decrease of $85,000 in funds for the purchase of new transportation vehicles. Those funds will be allocated to meet other needs according to an itemized breakdown of funds for FY 2015.

An estimated 554 students will use school transportation with 125 paying a $200 bus fee, bringing in a projected total of $25,000 over FY 2015. Students receiving free and reduced lunch or who reach the $400 family cap will be exempted from paying for transport. One large bus and two minibuses will be purchased.

The athletic department will continue to be funded by three major sources: gate receipts, user fees, and an operating budget. FY 2015 calls for 75 percent—or $769,827—of costs to be taken from the QPS budget with an additional $250,000 coming from a revolving account. Athletic user fees will not increase in the upcoming fiscal year.

The QPS music program will see improvements with an increase of $2,500 for musical instrument repairs, an additional $5,000 for the purchase of musical instru-

$268.52 Million Budget OK'd

By SCOTT JACKSON

In a 7-1 vote Monday night, the City Council passed a $268.52 million budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

Mayor Thomas Koch proposed a $268.54 million budget for FY15, which begins July 1, in May. During a series of hearings over the past several weeks the council made two cuts to Koch's proposed budget.

The first cut reduced the mayor's FY15 salary from the proposed $141,237 to $136,708. The mayor's budget proposal would've raised his salary to $160,000 from $122,474, though under state law the raise wouldn't take effect until Jan 1, 2015. The council's cut trimmed that salary to $150,000.

The second cut made by the council reduced the non-contributory pension line item by $18,000. Non-contributory pensions go to the surviving spouses of retired city employees whose contracts included such pensions – they are no longer included in contracts with city employees. The cut, which reduced that line item to $25,978 from $44,763, was made because one of three remaining surviving spouses receiving a pension passed away recently.

The budget for FY15, is $10.7 million, or 4.1 percent, higher than the FY14 budget.

The new budget includes raises for each city councillor and the city's department heads and other non-union appointees, mostly following the recommendations made by a special panel the mayor tasked with reviewing municipal salaries. The councillors will receive new salaries of $20,033 in FY15 up from $17,500 – like the raise for the mayor, raises for the council can't take effect until Jan. 1, 2015, so each councillor will receive a $22,500 salary next calendar year. Each councillor's travel allowance will also increase in the new fiscal year by $1,500 to $6,000.

The budget also includes new money to bring the total number of patrol officers in the Police Department from 149 to 161; hire new technology teachers and French teachers for the city's middle schools as well 10 new kindergarten and 10 new special education aides; and includes added money for firefighters' overtime pay.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, who has voted against each departmental budget containing the raises recommended by the salary commission, cast the lone vote in opposition to the budget Monday night. Councillor Doug Gutro missed Monday's meeting. He is part of a delegation of municipal officials who traveled to Pakistan and is returning this week.

In addition to approving the city's general fund budget, the council passed the Water and Sewer Enterprise Funds budgets in a pair of 8-0 votes. The Water Enterprise Fund budget will increase from $16.1 million in FY14 to $16.7 million in FY15. The Sewer Enterprise Fund budget will go up from $22.8 million to $23.1 million.

Before voting on the budget, the council approved a number of other appropriations. In a pair of 8-0 votes, the council allocated $180,750 to dredging in Quincy Bay – $130,750 from free cash and $50,000 from the waterways improvement fund. According to Councillor Michael McFarland, chairman of the council's finance committee, the city will pay 25 percent of the costs for dredging, with the state paying the remaining 75 percent.

In another 8-0 vote, the council appropriated the remainder of the city's FY14 free cash, $364,804, to road and sidewalk repairs.

In addition, the council voted 8-0 to allocate more than $679,000 in surplus funds from the FY14 medical insurance and worker's compensation accounts to close out deficits in 18 other line items. The council typically approves such a transfer before approving a new budget.

The council also appropriated $180,000 from the city's hotel/motel tax receipts to the Quincy Chamber of Commerce for tourism and $40,000 from the hotel/motel tax receipts to the Quincy Historical Society. They were approved in a pair of 7-0 votes. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, the chamber's tourism director, did not vote on either appropriation.

Council Accepts $8,440 In Donations

The City Council accepted four donations totaling $8,440 during Monday night's meeting.

The Copeland Family Foundation donated $2,500 to the Friends of Wollaston Beach. Wal-Mart Corporation also donated $2,500; the company's donation was for crime prevention.

Mary and Richard Cox donated $100 to the Quincy Animal Shelter.

Various parents' fees for DARE Camp (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) totaling $3,340 went to the camp.

BY ANY OTHER NAME...

Both ruby and sapphire are varieties of corundum, the second hardest mineral known to science. While the red variety of corundum is always called "ruby," and all other colors of corundum are known as "sapphire," some would like to know where the line is drawn between a pale ruby and a pink sapphire. These days, pink is referred to as a color other than red. In fact, the term "pink sapphire" did not appear in gemological literature until the early 20th century. Prior to that, all light-red (pink) corundums were referred to as ruby. All this corundum splitting is no more than a semantic exercise to some. From other standpoints, it is the color that's important, not the name.

Demonstrate your love by giving a ruby in celebration of a July birthday. Rubies arouse the senses, stir the imagination, and are said to guarantee health, wisdom, wealth and success in love. Finally ... you get to do what you want to do

The question now – what's the best way to pay for it?
Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk to – someone you like, whose judgment you trust and respect – to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, we specialize in working with people like you. Here you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Korean War Anniversary Ceremony June 25

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Veterans Council will conduct a ceremony and wreath laying to commemorate the 64th anniversary of the Korean War on Wednesday, June 25 at 10 a.m.

The ceremony will take place at the corner of Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway (in front of Veterans' Memorial Stadium) where a memorial dedicated to the 38 young men from Quincy who gave their lives for freedom in the war stands.

Korean War veteran and president of the memorial John "Butch" Mahoney will be the guest speaker at the ceremony. He is a longtime member of both the Cyril P. Morrisette Post #294 and the William R. Caddy Detachment #124 of the Marine Corps League.

Mahoney worked as the social health coordinator for the Quincy Public Schools system. He has also served with numerous organizations over the years, including: past president and a member of the board of directors for Survival, Inc.; charter member and co-founder of the Mass. Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences; member of the Governor's Mass. Criminal Justice Training Council; past Chairman of the Quincy Junior College Criminal Justice Dept.; chairman of the Quincy Youth Commission; member of the board of directors for the South Shore Council on Alcoholism; special constable for the Quincy Police Department; and executive director of co-founder of the South Shore Boxing Club.

Mahoney is a graduate of North Quincy High School and American International College in Springfield. After graduating from AIC, he played one season with the then-Boston Patriots of the American Football League. Mahoney went on to earn his master's degree from Boston State College and did additional postgraduate study at Yale.

Mayor Thomas Koch will also speak at the ceremony, bringing the greetings of the city. Joining him will be Sen. John Keenan, Rep. Tackey Chan, and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, the chairwoman of the council's veterans services committee.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony.

Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club Benefit Saturday

Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club will hold a fundraiser to benefit the Annual Disabled Veterans Day Salt Water Fishing Trip. The fundraising event will take place at the Town River Yacht Club, 60 Mound St., Quincy on Saturday, June 21 from 7-11 p.m.

The event includes music by a live band, a hot and cold buffet, raffle prizes, and a cash bar. All proceeds will go toward hosting a benefit to support the 58th Annual Disabled Veterans Fishing Outing.

"We need your help and support to provide our disabled veterans with one day of outdoor fishing," stated former Quincy City Councillor Michael Cheney.

This year will mark the 58th year Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club has provided disabled veterans with a fishing outing.

"For some disabled veterans this is the only day trip out of the hospital," Cheney said. "They have given so much for our country, the least we can do is provide one day on the water."

Members of Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club and friends of disabled veterans have been proud to host this event for 57 years. Volunteers from all walks of life, including local lobstermen, take the day off from work to help make this a special day for our disabled veterans.

"It would be impossible to recognize everyone involved in making this event possible; however, on behalf of all the disabled veterans from areas hospitals I would like to thank everyone involved, whether you donate a dollar or assist on Vets Day," Cheney said. "I would like to thank you for your past help and support. Your involvement has made a difference. This year we need your help more than ever."

This is special, not only because it marks the 58th anniversary of this great event but because we are at war and, unfortunately, every day we add another disabled veteran to the rolls.

Tickets are available at the door at a cost of $15. All proceeds will go to offsetting the cost of running the Vets Day Event. There are sponsor forms available as well for anyone who wishes to sponsor the event.

The event's organizers have been proud to be a part of this exciting event and would like to thank everyone for keeping this tradition alive.

For more information, call Michael Cheney at 617-592-2501.

City To Receive National CD Award

The City of Quincy will be presented with the John A. Sasso National Community Development Week Award during the National Community Development Association's annual conference, which will be held in Columbus, OH, next week.

This is the fifth time the city will have received the award over the past 10 years.

The award recognizes communities that exemplify the spirit of the Community Development Block Grant program by showcasing its good works through the activities and events during National Community Development (CD) Week, which was most recently recognized across the country from April 21-25.

The city held eight CD Week events this year – two formal speaking programs; and six community center programs. The first speaking program was a check presentation at the Manet Community Health Center in North Quincy. The city is providing $235,000 in CDBG funds for the renovation of this site, which will include the addition of 27 exam rooms, a vision care center, and a discount pharmacy.

The second speaking program was held at 178-186 E. Howard St. – the future site of 12 housing units for veterans and their families, under development by NeighborWorks Southern Mass. The city is investing $750,000 in federal funds into the project, with an additional $250,000 from the Affordable Housing Trust Fund. Cong. Steven Lynch was in attendance for the groundbreaking.

Other events held during the week were "open houses" at the Kennedy Senior Center; the Houghs Neck Community Center; the North Quincy Community Center; and Germantown Neighborhood Center.

"I am very pleased with the National Community Development Association's continued recognition of our Community Development Week activities," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "I thank Planning Director Dennis Harrington and Community Development Director Sean Glennon and their staff for their tremendous efforts in administering these federal resources, and I congratulate them on achieving this national recognition once again."

Different Benefits For Different Situations

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Social Security has your entire family in mind when it comes to coverage and benefits. We're here to help everyone in the family— during every stage of life.

Most people think of retirement benefits when they think about Social Security, and that certainly is a big part of what we do. In fact, most of the benefits we pay go to retirees and their families—about 41 million people. But Social Security is more than retirement. Just read on.

Social Security Online Services
www.socialsecurity.gov

If you work and pay Social Security taxes during your lifetime, you can look forward to a strong foundation of income in retirement from Social Security. Of course, Social Security was never intended to be your sole source of retirement income. It is a foundation upon which you build with pensions, savings, and other income.

But what if you become disabled before you retire and you are unable to continue working to support your family? Social Security has you covered with disability benefits. If you have a disability that is expected to last a year or longer, or result in death, you should apply for disability benefits.

Your work and taxes cover not only you, but your entire family, too. Family benefits can include retirement, disability and, in the event of your death, survivors benefits. This coverage includes everyone in your family who depends on you for support, such as your minor children who are under age 18, or age 19 if still in secondary school, as well as your spouse. It also can include older children who have severe disabilities that began before age 22. In some cases, parents and grandchildren can qualify for family benefits if they depend on your income and you are their only means of support

If you want to learn more about how Social Security benefits the younger members of your family, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/youngpeople.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 POSTCARD shore scene along Dorchester Street when Squantum was still a summer day trip destination. On the left was the Friberg Grocery Store on the corner of Trevor Street. Alfred and Hilma Friberg operated this store for almost 40 years from 1915 into the 1950's. Beginning in 1897, electric trolleys ran along this street from the Atlantic railroad depot bringing visitors to Squantum Park for its cool breezes and panoramic views of Boston Harbor. Just out of sight on the left on Shoreham Street was the Squantum Inn that opened in 1898 and quickly became famous for its locally caught shore dinners. In the top center behind the tree can be seen the large cupola on the top of the old Pratt estate on Parke Avenue. That house became Lee's Inn, also a popular shore side restaurant. This view was from a boathouse on the end of a pier that at the time extended out into Dorchester Bay for the excursion steamboats that came over from Marine Park in South Boston. Potential Long Term Effects Of Attorney General, Partners' Agreement On Competitive Market

Partners' acquisition of South Shore Hospital would provide the region's patients with convenient access to an integrated health care system that has routinely exceeded state and national quality and care delivery performance measures.

It also aligns one of the state's most profitable community hospitals with its largest and most successful provider system, which includes two of Boston's most lucrative academic medical centers. Both providers realized robust growth operating as non-profit public charities between 2009 and 2012. South Shore Hospital's parent corporation generated total net asset growth of 32%, over $44 million, while Partners realized a total operating revenue increase of 18%, from $7.6 billion to $9 billion.

Combining resources to improve patient care and enhance financial performance are often cited as motivations for consolidation. However, reducing growth in the cost of health care and maintaining affordable insurance premiums for consumers and employers is equally critical. A recent independent state Health Policy Commission report concluded that the Partners-South Shore Hospital merger would increase total medical spending by between $23 and $26 million annually. This estimate was based on anticipated increases in physician prices and changes in referral practices for many of my constituents' commercial insurers - Blue Cross Blue Shield, Harvard Pilgrim, and Tufts Health Plan.

The Health Policy Commission is also reviewing the cost and market impact of Partners' proposed acquisition of Hallmark Health System which includes Lawrence Memorial Hospital and Melrose-Wakefield Hospital. Since this review is ongoing, I am troubled that the Attorney General and Partners privately negotiated a preliminary agreement sanctioning Partners' joint acquisition of this system and South Shore Hospital. I question how a meaningful settlement was reached absent an in-depth, data driven cost analysis similar to the Partners-South Shore Hospital review and why Emerson Hospital was specifically omitted from the deal's Eastern Massachusetts hospital growth restriction. I am further concerned it trivialized the significance of transparency as the state attempts to reign in health care spending consistent with its landmark 2012 cost containment law.

Based on media accounts, the agreement mitigates medical spending concerns by restricting Partners' negotiating power and limiting cost growth across its entire network. While it is an initial step towards addressing possible anti-competitive market implications, its long term effects are uncertain. Partners, whose hospitals are consistently paid the highest prices, will have substantially increased its market share as a result of these transactions. This is especially significant given that Partners is paid one-third of the money insurers spend on acute hospital care.

The deal also reflects a well-known understanding that expanded market share equips providers with greater bargaining leverage to extract higher prices when negotiating with insurers. Consumers and employers bear the burden of this cost as provider prices are incorporated into premiums. While the agreement's price growth cap will allow for modest increases for the initial 6.5 years, I am less optimistic that prices will remain stable once this restriction expires in 2020. I am also concerned that by tying price growth to the rate of inflation, the cap freezes current price disparities by locking in a high priced provider at higher rates. The agreement's temporary physician and hospitals restrictions may not sufficiently address market power concerns once they expire in 5-7 years either. Over time, increased leverage will allow any dominant provider to incentivize physicians to join higher priced practices, shift utilization to higher priced care settings, and negotiate higher prices.

I also worry that reduced market share may facilitate the closure of more of our state's financially distressed hospitals. The recent closure of North Adams Regional Hospital where over 530 workers lost their jobs and thousands of patients lacked access to care captures the real life consequences of when a hospital closes its doors. I urge state regulators to be mindful of workforce and patient access concerns prior to endorsing future alignments between community hospitals and larger hospital systems.

Similarly, if the pool of lower cost providers diminishes insurers will have reduced incentive and ability to develop products that offer financial incentives for consumers electing to receive services at low priced, high quality hospitals and physician practices. High deductible and tiered or limited network plans have saved my constituents hundreds of dollars through annual premium discounts of up to 14% and reductions of up to $30 for physician visit co-payments. Lower cost provider options must be maintained if insurers are to offer unique products to their subscribers.

I will continue to remain vigilant in anticipation of a final settlement agreement to ensure that health care remains affordable for my constituents and the important work of the state in controlling costs comes to fruition.

Cheney Edges Johnston For Ward 1 Seat

By SCOTT JACKSON

Michael T. Cheney, a diesel mechanic for the MBTA who had never run for public office before, amassed a massive vote total in his home precinct to win a special election to fill the vacant Ward 1 City Council Seat.

Cheney defeated Robert L. Johnston, the headmaster of the Woodward School, by a total of 79 votes in the election – 1,588 to 1,509. The margin was so close Johnston said he would seek a recount.

In Cheney's home precinct – Ward 1, Precinct 5 – he defeated Johnston 503-298. That total was more than enough to overcome sizeable margins favoring Johnston in the Quincy Center, Merrymount, and Germantown precinct of Ward 1.

Cheney said he felt the high level campaign he and Johnston waged would help bring the diverse sections of Ward 1 together.

"I would like to see this continue," he said. "Now is the time for Ward 1 to pull together to resolve the important issues – public safety, Nut Island, open space and all the residents' individual concerns."

A total of 3,102 voters cast ballots in the election, a turnout of 38.1 percent.

The special election was held to fill the seat left vacant following the resignation of Leo J. Kelly, who held the seat for 10 years. Kelly resigned to accept as position as a project manager for the Quincy Housing Authority. Five candidates ran to replace Kelly. Johnston and Kelly finished first and second, respectively, in the preliminary special election.

Kelly did not endorse a candidate in the race. He had both Cheney and Johnston he would help show them the ropes.

"There were five good looking candidates in the preliminary election and two of them went to the final," Kelly said. "The close election showed that the people weighed both candidates and found them equally qualified."

FREAK STORM STRIKES NORTH QUINCY

Workers from the Parks and Public Works Departments pitched in to clean up debris left by a freak windstorm that struck a small area of North Quincy.

No injuries were reported and there were no estimates for the damage.

The sudden storm, with winds gusted above hurricane strength, uprooted trees and knocked down utility wires during 10 minutes of intense activity just after 5 p.m. Monday.

A trailer truck at the Jordan Marsh warehouse along the Neponset River was reportedly flipped over and stones were blown off the roof of the Quincy Bay Inn, striking cars below. A tree and a telephone pole were blown over onto a Russell Street house that served as a home for six nuns.

The affected area included East Squantum, Russell, Billings, Wadsworth, and Tirrell Streets as well as Newbury Ave.

"Fortunately it was confined to a small area," said Richard J. Koch, head of the city's park and forestry operations.

QATV Director Bette Campbell Honored By Commission On The Status Of Women

Bette Campbell, executive director of Quincy Access Television, was recently honored as an "Unsung Heroine" by the Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women.

Campbell was among 82 women throughout the state recognized for their outstanding contributions to their organizations and communities at a ceremony in the Great Hall at the State House in Boston.

Quincy legislators Rep. Bruce J. Ayers and Rep. Tackey Chan presented an official Massachusetts State Citation to Campbell in recognition of her award.

Campbell was recognized for her time, talent, spirit, and enthusiasm to enrich the lives of others within the City of Quincy.

Since 1996, the Quincy Telecommunications Corporation, Inc. has served the communication needs of residents, educational institutions, governmental bodies and not-for-profit organizations in the city of Quincy. QATV has received local, state and national recognition and awards for their accomplishments.

With Campbell's support and leadership, QATV has built a great reputation in the community and produces up to 25 programs per week and also produces AM Quincy, QATV's own radio station. QATV broadcasts various shows, including Legislative Updates with local, state and federal representatives, and hosting city representatives to discuss programs and services offered within the city.

Other programs feature local news and weather which provide ongoing information for residents of all ages, especially for seniors and veterans.

Campbell also oversees QATV's mission, as a charitable organization, to provide training on, and access to, video production equipment and facilities in their studios. QATV has grown over the years with their many talented and diverse volunteers and interns.

"The Quincy delegation is proud of Bette for being awarded as an Unsung Heroine for her hard work and efforts for excellence in community media, education and outreach," Ayers and Chan said. "Bette is the backbone of her organization and has dedicated her time and talent to her career and society."

YMCA Seeking Art From Local Artists

The South Shore YMCA announces a new opportunity for local artists to exhibit their work.

The YMCA is seeking local Lending Artists to loan original works of art for display at its branches in Quincy and Hanover, visited by over 40,000 members yearly, as well as in the Y's Association Resources office in Norwell.

Loaning artwork to the South Shore YMCA supports the Y and gains exposure. Artwork for loan must be in ready-to-install condition, frame included if necessary, for a loan period of approximately six months. Only 2-D artwork can be accommodated.

Submissions are reviewed twice per month, and artists will be contacted after the YMCa processes the submission. Interested artist should submit the following (no nudity, gore, etc. please):

Submissions Guidelines (must include):

- 10–20 Jpeg images on CD (Image file names must include your last name and title of work, following this format: Lastname_Title.jpg)
- Image list (including title, media, and sizes)
- Artist statement
- Artist resume
- Short artist biography

DAVID and PATRICIA GIBBONS

David, Patricia Gibbons Celebrate 50th Anniversary

David and Patricia Gibbons of Quincy recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on the Queen Mary in Long Beach, CA.

The couple were married June 6, 1964 at Saint Catherine's Church in Norwood.

They are the parents of three children: Brian of Mansfield, Patricia (Gibbons) Joyce of Stoughton and David of Weymouth. They also have seven grandchildren.

Mrs. Gibbons retired as a registered nurse for Milton Hospital.

Mr. Gibbons retired from Boston Edison.

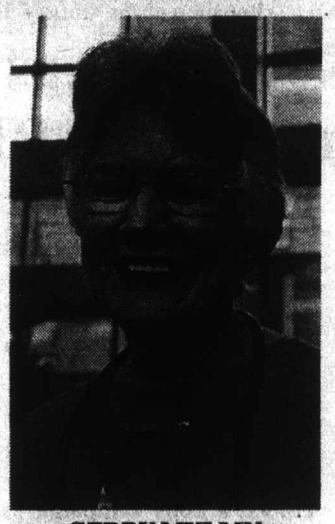
Gerry Mullin Honored For Work With Homeless Patients

Boston Health Care for the Homeless Program (BHCHP) recently honored nurse Gerry Mullin of Quincy with its Tom Bennett Award.

The award recognizes an employee who embodies great courage, intellect and compassion, working selflessly for the benefit of homeless patients.

Mullin works at BHCHP's Barbara McInnis House, a 24/7 facility for patients who are too sick for the streets or shelters but not ill enough for an inpatient stay at a hospital.

"Gerry is a nurturer, a problem solver, and a person who shows an incredible generosity of spirit to both patients and co-workers," said Sarah Ciambrone, director of the McInnis House. "She embodies love and compassion."



GERRY MULLIN

Founded in 1985, Boston Health Care for the Homeless Program provides comprehensive health care for the homeless, delivering services to more than 12,000 homeless men, women and children a year.

QHS Students Present Eco-Friendly Fashion Show

Twenty-one fashion students from Quincy High School recently presented an Eco-Friendly Fashion Show at the 2014 Green Difference Awards at the State House.

Each QHS fashion student walked the grand staircase of the State House in an original design made of recycled materials, to a packed house which included Undersecretary Maeve Vallelly Bartlett, state Sen. Jamie Eldridge, state Treasurer Steven Grossman, and Andrea Falken of the U.S. Department of Education.

Quincy High School was the only school in the state in the fashion show.

The fashions for this show were designed by the fashion students from Quincy High School under the direction of instructor, Lorraine Walsh.

Student designers are:

Amani Miller, Ammy Thach, Ashlene Wright, Brianna Cristiani, Cassy Brooks, Dajah Dupree, Eliane Cabral, Emily Barker, Emily Suslowicz, Helen Herrera, Katie Rielly, Kerry Phelan, Kim Driscoll, Luma Dos Santos, Nadia Maloof, Nyasha Rankins, Samantha Jackson, Tien Nguyen, Tina Pham, Vannessa Demore and Vicki Szeto.

QHS is a Blue Ribbon Member of Project Green Schools. The school has been participating in their event for five years.

Salute To Rich Kenneally Benefit June 29

A benefit entitled "You Don't Have To Go Home, But You Can't Stay Here; a Salute to Rich Kenneally, Volume 1" will take place Sunday, June 29 at 8:30 p.m. at Great Scott, 1222 Commonwealth Ave., Alston.

This is the first installment of a collection of benefit performances comprised of current and former students of Rich Kenneally.

Kenneally, the Band Director at Quincy Public Schools, has been an inspirational educator for over two decades, and has recently been battling cancer. While thousands of students have found a home in his band room, they are now rallying around their former teacher as if they were one large family.

Featuring performances by Jon De Lucia Group, Goodwill Tapes, Bundles, The Coalition, 4 Heads Deep, and the debut performance of Art Thieves. There will be an auction and raffle prizes, and all proceeds will go directly to Rich Kenneally and his family.

This event is age 18 and over. Minimum suggested donation is $15. Tickets can be purchased from Ticketmaster.

WHAT'S COOKING
with
Marie & Suzie
By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Jennifer's Irish Sausage Quiche

It was Mother's Day at my daughter and son-in-law Ann Marie and Davey's home -and it was a lovely brunch, and one of the most delicious seemingly endless buffets ever.

Her daughter Jennifer (my granddaughter) brought a delicious quiche with Irish breakfast sausages. It can be made with ordinary sausage also.

Irish Breakfast Sausage Quiche
8-10 large breakfast sausage
12 eggs (beaten)
2 medium potatoes (boiled and diced)
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 small onion
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
salt and pepper to taste

In the hot oil, sauté and onion and the sausages until the sausages are done. When cooled, cut the sausages in small pieces. Dice the boiled potatoes and set aside.

In a slightly greased casserole dish, place the sausages and the potatoes and half of the cheddar cheese. Add the 12 beaten eggs on top and the rest of the cheese.

Bake uncovered in a 350-degree oven for 30-35 minutes, or until the cheese is slightly browned. When cooled, cut in squares for a delicious treat.

Basil Kale Pesto

Pesto is not only delicious and easy to prepare, it has loads of health benefits!!! (The sailors from Genoa never got scurvy because of the big barrels of pesto they kept.)

Adding kale to the pesto boosts the nutrients even more and adds a nice earthy flavor as well.

My recipe is great on pasta, pizza, potatoes, eggs or spread on sandwiches. I add miso paste (which is made from fermented soy beans. I like Miso Master brand) to mine which is nice and salty /cheesy tasting and makes it unnecessary to add cheese.

If you would rather add Parmesan, just substitute ½ cup Parmesan for the miso. It's that simple.

BASIL KALE PESTO
WITH SWEET WHITE MISO

1 cup fresh basil
1 cup lacinto kale, torn into strips
1/2 cup olive oil
2-3 cloves garlic (depending on how much you like!)
1 cup walnuts
2 heaping Tablespoons of sweet white miso (I like Miso Master organic brand) about a half of lemon, squeezed
a small amount of water

Simply combine all ingredients except the water in blender or food processor. Add water if mixture is too thick. Should be the consistency of a paste, not a liquid. Normally just 1/4 cup water is sufficient.

As I said above, toss with hot pasta, toss with potatoes, use in omelets, top off some pizza, or even spread on a sandwich!

Freezes well in ice cube trays. Then you just have to pop them out as needed.

QUINCY AFTER SCHOOL Child Care Executive Director Sara Morrison with Arthur Keough, who recently stepped down as chairman of the Quincy After School Program.

Arthur Keough Steps Down As President Of QCARE Board

Arthur Keough, who recently resigned as the president of the Quincy After School Child Care Board of Directors, was feted at an event held at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

Keough had served as president since May, 2000.

He is an alumnus of Boston College and Georgetown University and holds three master's degrees in philosphy, linguistics and English.

He served on the faculty of Quincy College, where he held several positions including chairperson of the Humanities Division, Academic Dean and Dean of Faculty. He also taught at Eastern Nazarene College.

Mr. Keough worked for the City of Quincy under Mayor Francis X. McCauley and has also worked with the Quincy-based Bay State Community Services. He was part of the team that developed what is now known as the Impact Quincy Community Coalition. His work with the Coalition included a 2009 campaign to fight heroin and opiod addiction in the City through better education of Quincy families, health professionals and first responders, as well as the launch of the website www.quincyoverdosehelp.org.

Keough's other accomplishments include helping create the Quincy School - Community Partnership which still today creates partnerships between community businesses and local schools. The program encourages local businesses to become engaged in the Quincy education system, providing individual programs that enrich the learning environment for many local students.

Keough is also active through his committee for Immigrants and Refugees. He has received awards from the Quincy City Council for his work with the Asian community, has been recognized for his work with the Quincy Arts Council, and was recognized in 2011 as a Best of Bay State Award honoree for his work as a community leader.

Through his many roles as a grant writer and community leaders, Keough has enjoyed creaeting partnerships, forging relationships, and finding grant opportunities in the hopes of building a brighter future for Quincy.

Keough and his wife Janice are longtime residents of Milton. They enjoy their time with their children, Alexandra and Christopher, and their grandchildren.

Thank You And Best Wishes, Dr. Carmen Mariano

I wanted to comment on the retirement of Dr. Carmen Mariano at Archbishop Williams High School and before that, the Quincy Public Schools.

Back in 2004, I was between jobs and I asked Ken McPhee, the Security Director for the Quincy Schools how one became a teacher. He told me to go see Carmen Mariano. Carmen explained the process and in 2005, I started as a Substitute Teacher at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools.

I was working alongside teachers I had in school (won't say which one I went to) and classmates of mine who were teachers at both schools. It was an honor and a kick to teach in rooms where I had been a student years before. I got my Massachusetts Teachers License and my State License to teach Social Studies during that time.

As a substitute, I would be in the Plumbing Department one day and Science the next. I would meet with Carmen from time to time and he reported to me on the feedback he received about me and gave me encouragement and guidance to do the job. I wound up teaching for three years in the Quincy Public Schools.

Through no fault of Carmen's, I didn't get hired as a full-time teacher, so I had to leave to look for a full-time position. But working for Carmen were three of the greatest years of my professional life. It was an honor to serve such a fine person and gentleman.

I want to thank him for his efforts on my behalf and wish he and Dee Dee the best in retirement.

Council Approves Project; Nine Homes To Be Razed For New Parking Lot, Field Renovations

$12M NQHS Campus Plan Moves Forward

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council has approved Mayor Thomas Koch's plan to expand North Quincy High's campus by razing nine homes to make way for a new parking lot and renovations at Teel Field.

The council voted Monday night to authorize the city to borrow up to $12 million to finance the project. The council previously authorized a $1.56 million appropriation to fund the first part of the project, which includes renovations to O'Neil Field at Atlantic Middle School, making drainage repairs near that school, and legal and engineering work related to both phases of the project.

Before the council voted on the $12 million bond Monday, . Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh explained that the city would not need to borrow the full amount because alternate funding sources will be used to offset costs. Proceeds from the sale of the former Central Middle School, for example, will help fund the city's purchase of the nine homes. The city has received bids ranging between $1.1 and $3 million for that property. Cavanagh will also investigate if funds from the city's hotel/motel tax receipts and the water and sewer rehabilitation fund could be used for the purchase.

Koch's plan calls for creating a new, 157-vehicle parking lot on Hunt Street, which will provide a net gain of 127 spaces. At Teel Field, new grandstands with accommodations for 600 people and a new artificial turf playing surface will be installed, as well as a scoreboard, concessions, restrooms, a sound system, and lighting. Retaining ponds, to alleviate flooding in the neighborhood, are also included in the plan.

To make way for the expansion plan, the city needs to purchase and level the nine homes – eight on Hunt Street and one on Newbury Avenue. The city has received appraisals for those nine houses and they will be shared with the homeowners after the council's vote, City Solicitor Jim Timmins explained. The city will also pay for each homeowner to hire an outside consultant

THE 17TH ANNUAL Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run For ALS, better known as the Squirrel Run, raised nearly $50,000 once again at this year's event, held last Saturday. Proceeds from the Squirrel Run will benefit The Angel Fund, a nonprofit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester. Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31. New Playgrounds Planned Citywide

Mayor Thomas Koch announces a series of reconstruction projects at a number of playgrounds and schoolyards across the city this summer under a plan paid for by the Community Preservation fund and continuing through next year.

Mayor Koch joined Squantum Elementary School students and administrators Wednesday for a ground-breaking at the new school's new outdoor classroom, near the area where the Wendall Moses' Playground will also undergo a major renovation starting later this year.

New playgrounds, including state-of-the-art equipment and new rubber and wood-chip surfacing, will be built at historic Faxon Park and the Atherton Hough Elementary School this summer and improvements are targeted for a number of other playgrounds across the City, including an overhaul of the courts at Perkins Playground in Merrymount.

In total, the projects represent nearly $1 million in Community Preservation funding proposed by the Mayor with the support the Community Preservation Committee. The outdoor classroom at Squantum School was first pitched by parents groups, who worked with the Mayor's Office to secure Community Preservation funding.

"These are great projects that will provide tremendous benefit for our young people for many years to come," said Mayor Koch. "I am very grateful to the Community Preservation Committee for the incredible amount of time they spend in reviewing projects and seeing the importance of protecting our recreational areas for future generations."

Lisa Aimola, director of Community Preservation, said the recreational projects are in addition several hundred thousand dollars in historic preservation projects also recommended by the Committee and approved by the Mayor and City Council during this year's funding cycle.

"We had a great group of projects this year, and they certainly welcomed the broad plan offered by the Mayor and his team," she said. "I know the committee is proud to see their recommendations become reality as these projects move forward."

The Community Preservation Act, which Quincy voters approved in 2006, creates a special fund to pay for historical restoration projects, recreation and open space projects as well as affordable housing. The state provides a match to the revenue generated locally.

$1.58 Million In Community Preservation Funds Awarded

By SCOTT JACKSON

Twenty-three projects will receive more than $1.58 million in combined funding from the city of Quincy's community preservation accounts.

The community preservation accounts are funded through a one percent surcharge on property taxes; the state also provides funds to participating municipalities. Quincy's voters approved the surcharge in 2006. Funds from the account can be used for historic preservation, open space, and recreation projects.

Ten historic preservation projects will receive funding from the city. Included among them are $31,400 for the Colonial Dames to restore the 1750 Hancock carriage; $15,000 to the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum to restore the Inclined Plane; $20,000 to the First Baptist Church of Wollaston for a sanctuary restoration project; $25,000 to the City Clerk's Office for record preservation; $18,000 for restoration of historic lights at the Thomas Crane Public Library; $30,000 to Historic New England to restore the Quincy House garage; $10,000 for preservation work at the Souther Tide Mill by the city's Public Buildings Department; $20,000 to Bethany Congregational Church for document preservation; $80,000 to the United First Parish Church for window restoration and repair; and $16,000 to the YMCA for restoration of a mural.

Four open space projects will receive funds: $3,398 to the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission to create part of a handicapped accessible boardwalk; $5,000 to remove Phragmites (reeds) at Butler Pond;

Quincy Rotarians Serve Up Dinner To Benefit Club's Charitable Initiatives

The women of Quincy's Active Rotary Club recently prepared and served a formal Italian dinner to Rotary member, John Spillane of Norwell, and 10 of his guests, all to benefit one of the Club's charitable initiatives.

Rotary Club President Dolly Di Pesa, organized the evening, surfside, at her mother's home in Scituate. Joining Di Pesa were Rotarians Megan Ward, owner of Megan Ward Editing; Marianne Peak, superintendent at Adams National Historical Park; Wendy Simmons, president and founder of Prism Energy Services; Terry Bellotti-Palmieri, vice president and branch manager of Eastern Bank; Sarah Jacobs, director of Development at The Woodward School; and guest chef and Honorary Rotarian Josephine Shea, director of Sales and Marketing for Connors & Company and former Norfolk County Sheriff. She prepared oysters on the half shell, shrimp cocktail, short rib meatballs with fresh ricotta cheese, cauliflower patties, spaghetti with white clam sauce, and ricotta pie accompanied by fresh strawberries.

Summer Specials At Library Bookstore

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

It's time to set up a chair by the pool or the ocean or on your porch and pull out a good book, some light summer reading. And where else to find some but at Quincy's best bargain book shop, the Crane Library Bookstore.

All fiction books, including the ever-popular mysteries, are specially priced this summer at one-half their regular cost, with hardcovers selling for only $1 and paperbacks at just 50 cents. All books in the store are in gently-used condition.

Tucked into a cozy corner in the rear of the Crane Library with its own separate entrance on Spear Street, the Crane Library Bookstore offers a wide variety of reading material, DVD's, CD's, videos, audiobooks, foreign language and reference material, giftware and a large selection of children's and young adult books and videos.

With the exception of some distinctive items, like the shop's colorful assortment of coffee table books, most merchandise sells for a dollar or two, as well as some bargain-blasts at 3 or 4 books for a dollar.

The shop is open on Thursdays from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 am to 4 pm. The special half-price sale on fiction books will run through Labor Day.

Sponsored and managed by The Friends of the Crane Library, 100% of the bookstore's proceeds are used to fund the many community programs at the library, including lectures, concerts, film screenings, museum passes, and special events for children, like Storytimes and Mad Science workshops.

Crime Book Authors At Library Tuesday

The co-authors of the book "A Murder in Wellesley: The Inside Story of an Ivy-League Doctor's Double Life, His Slain Wife, and the Trial That Gripped the Nation," will be at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Tuesday, June 24 at 7 p.m.

Boston Herald reporter Tom Farmer and former Massachusetts State Police detective Marty Foley, a key investigator in the case, will discuss the horrific true crime. Copies of their book will be available for purchase and signing at the event.

Farmer is a former award-winning Boston newspaper reporter and editor. While a reporter at the Boston Herald, Farmer covered the entire Dirk Greineder murder case and was also honored for being among a team of journalists who first reported key details about the September 11 hijackers in the immediate hours following the 2001 terrorist attacks.

During his 20-year journalism career, Farmer contributed to the Boston Herald, Boston Globe, Lynn Daily Item and Gloucester Daily Times. He currently works in Boston as a corporate communications professional.

Foley spent more than 24 years with the Massachusetts State Police where he retired in 2007 with the prestigious rank of Detective Lieutenant. of their choosing to review the appraisal before negotiations begin.

"We're trying to work with all the neighbors to help them relocate," Timmins said, calling the planned purchase of the homes friendly takings, as opposed to eminent domain. "We're trying to do it in a manner that works for them in a difficult circumstance."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, whose district includes the nine properties the city will take as part of the plan, asked Timmins what the city would do to accommodate the homeowners as they are relocated. The solicitor said the city would cover up to six months of rental expenses and take care of storage needs; the homeowners will also be able to remove any fixtures from the homes they wish to keep.

In a response to a related inquiry from Council President Joseph Finn, Timmins said the city would also assist the tenants who rent three of the homes if they need help relocating.

Koch first detailed his plans to expand the North Quincy High campus during a community meeting at the school last winter. Before Monday's vote, school and city officials made a final pitch to the council.

Among them was North Quincy High Principal Robert Shaw. He noted the proposal would go a long way to address parking problems encountered at the school and provide a better access point for school buses. Renovating Teel Field, he added, would help boost North's spring and fall athletics programs and hopefully bring them to the same level as the school's winter sports programs.

"The improvements will improve the day-to-day operations at the building and give the students the best opportunity in which to thrive," Shaw said.

The council approved the project in an 8-0 vote. Councillor Doug Gutro was not present Monday night as he was returning home from a trip to Pakistan.

Palmucci Faults Contractor For Using Temporary Employees

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci faulted the city's trash contractor for using temporary employees after a level two sex offender was found to be working for the company.

According to Palmucci, the city's contract with Sunrise Scavenger requires the company to conduct CORI (criminal offender record information) checks on all full-time employees who would work in Quincy, and precludes the company from hiring such employees if they are registered sex offenders or had a felony conviction in the past five years. He noted those requirments do not apply to temporary employees, who are excluded from the background check provided they work for no more than five days for the company.

At Monday night's council meeting, Palmucci asked Joseph Lombardi, Sunshine's president, if the company used temporary employees for more than five days. Lombardi said the company did use temporary employees for more than five days, citing the obligation to keep Sunshine's vehicles fully staffed.

Palmucci's raised his concerns because a level two sex offender from Rockland had worked for Sunrise Scavenger as a temporary employee. According to a police report Palmucci read, the Rockland man matched the description of a suspect in an indecent exposure incident that occurred in March on Newbury Avenue in North Quincy. The individual was subsequently arrested by Rockland police for violating the state's sex offender registry laws and violating that town's by-laws.

"It is very important, the distinction here, I would suggest, between temporary employees that you hire and full-time employees that you hire. Temporary employees, you do not have an obligation to CORI check," Palmucci said. "It is a public safety issue that these folks are CORI checked."

In response, Lombardi said the Sunrise's agreement with the temp agency that hired the Rockland man called for the temp agency to perform CORI checks on workers they refer to Sunrise. Lombardi said he was disappointed no such check was performed, noting his company has largely stopped using the temp agency.

"My understanding and my agreement with the temp agency is that they perform a CORI check," Lombardi said. "I was very disappointed. I'm actually almost not using them at all. I take big standards in doing that."

In a statement Tuesday, mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said the city would review Palmucci's concerns.

"Councillor Palmucci's statements at the council meeting will be reviewed by appropriate entities, including the Department of Public Works and its contractor, Sunrise Scavenger," Walker said.

$1.58 Million In CP Funds Awarded

$50,000 for a new footbridge at the Broad Meadows Marsh; and $1,000 for an osprey platform in the Spring Street Marsh.

Nine recreation projects will receive funds. They include $500,000 to reconstruct five playgrounds and three basketball courts in the city; $243,000 for new bathroom facilities in the Fore River Clubhouse for those using the adjoining field; $45,000 for an outdoor classroom at the Squantum Elementary School; $90,000 for a playground for kindergartners at the Marshall School; $20,000 to beautify the Palmer Street seawall; $10,000 for an engineering study for the Willows Seascape; $250,000 for a new playground at Faxon Park; $100,000 for a new playground at the Atherton Hough School; and $170,000 for repairs at the Houghs Neck Public Landing.

The City Council approved the projects Monday night in an 8-0 vote; Councillor Doug Gutro was absent. The city's Community Preservation Committee had already vetted and approved each project.

"Each and every year, I think we validate the vote of residents to allow us to participate in the Community Preservation Act," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who is the vice chairman of the city's CPC.

"Each and every ward throughout the city has some activity as a result of this."

QHA Finance Director Fired

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy Housing Authority's finance director Bryant Carter has been fired and his computer seized by Quincy police detectives due to accessing questionable materials according to Executive Director James Lydon.

A company that manages and monitors the authority's computer usage informed Lydon last Tuesday that Carter was accessing inappropriate materials from work which were in no way related to the Housing Authority. Carter was confronted two hours later and admitted to the accusations according to Lydon. He was then put on paid administrative leave and ordered to hand over all Housing Authority access cards and keys.

Lydon said he then contacted Mayor Thomas Koch who immediately contacted Chief of Police Paul Keenan. Quincy police detectives searched Carter's office the following day for six hours and seized the computer. A letter officially terminating him with cause was delivered to his home on Friday by a police constable.

When asked as to what type of material was being accessed on the computer, Lydon said he wasn't at liberty to comment "on items which I care not to go into," but he did say that the incident was being investigated by a board comprised of the State Police and the FBI.

Lydon said it was the first time in his life he had ever encountered such an incident and he was unsure as to whether more information regarding what was found on the computer would ever be released to the public.

Dinner, Auction Raises $115,000 For Manet Health Center

Curry Family Honored With Manet Medallion

Manet Community Health Center raised nearly $115,00 at its Annual Dinner and Auction May at the Boston Quincy Marriott, exceeding dollars raised at the event in previous years.

The money will go toward increased health care access for residents of the South Shore through expanded programs, services and facility improvements. "We're thrilled at the success of our single biggest fundraiser of the year, and want to thank the community for showing its support for vital health care services," said Henry L. (Hank) Rittal, President of the Manet Board of Directors.

More than 400 attendees saw the presentation of the Manet Medallion -- Manet's highest honor, given to recognize outstanding community service -- to the Curry Family for establishing the Marie A. Curry Fund in 1998, which supported cancer screening and awareness programs at Quincy Medical Center. Bob Curry and his children, Sean Curry and Julie (Curry) Johnson, accepted the award during the heartfelt festivities, which were attended by four generations of Currys.

Other highlights included the recognition of Cynthia H. Sierra, MA, with the Barbara A. Morris Distinguished Service Award, named for Manet Board Member Barbara Morris and given to an outstanding employee. Sierra is Senior Director for Public Policy, Public Affairs and Program Development. She also is serving as Interim CEO, with the June departure of outgoing CEO Henry N. Tuttle, who will leave Manet after six years to take a position in San Diego, Calif., as CEO of the Council of Community Clinics, which includes a network of some 100 practice sites and 2 million patient encounters annually.

Toward the close of the gala, Rittal and Past Board President Joseph M. Reardon surprised Tuttle with an award of appreciation for his years of innovative and thoughtful leadership and service. Tuttle addressed event guests for one of his last appearances as Manet CEO, by offering inspirational words of praise, gratitude and pride for the achievements that have been accomplished as partners.

QFD Members To Participate In Relay For Life

By KRIS KALABOKAS

President of the Quincy firefighters union Paul Moody along with close to thirty of his colleagues will represent the Quincy Firefighters Local 792 and honor the memory of 35 Quincy firefighters who lost their lives to cancer at this year's third annual Relay For Life event.

The relay will take place Friday, June 27 through the evening and until the morning of Saturday, June 28 at Pageant Field with registration beginning at 4 p.m and a survivor and caregiver reception taking place at 5:30 p.m. The tag team walk will begin at 9 p.m. and end the following morning at 7 a.m. In total, 34 teams made up of 242 participants have joined the effort and have raised $53,435 for charity so far. Of that amount, $3,800 has been raised by members of the Quincy Firefighters Local 792 alone.

Lt. Robert "Boo Boo" McCarthy lost his battle to cancer in 2003 at the age of 57, only six months after retiring from the department. This loss spurred Moody and Lt. Ralph Blight to monitor cancer rates among local firefighters. Both started noticing a higher than normal rate of various types of cancers affecting firefighters and they deduced that exposure to burning materials such as PVC piping, plastics, benzene, and formaldehyde were possibly the culprit. Moody cited an October 14, 2013 study by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health and the U.S. Fire Administration which he said indicated that while safety apparatuses such as oxygen masks provide excellent protection from inhaling hazardous materials, they don't protect firefighters 100 percent. "Our protective equipment protects us from most of it but not all of it," he said. "It's not just house fires, but car fires that we need to protect ourselves from."

The study monitored cancer rates among roughly 30,000 U.S. firefighters employed between 1950-2009 in San Francisco, Chicago, and Philadelphia. Respiratory, digestive, and urinary disease occurred at higher rates indicating that firefighters were more susceptible to these forms of cancer. Mesothelioma was two times more likely to occur in this population than in the general U.S. population, pointing to asbestos inhalation as the culprit.

Prior to joining the relay in Quincy, Moody and Blight participated in Relay For Life events in Plymouth and Abington with McCarthy's family members as part of "Team Boo Boo."

In addition to the relay, an 80s themed prom fundraiser was recently held at the Adams Heights Men's Club. "It was a great event and we raised about $8,300," said Moody who is using facebook, Twitter, and simple word of mouth to promote the fundraising event which he hopes will raise awareness of increased cancer rates among firefighters.

T-shirts printed with the names of the 35 Quincy firefighters who lost their battle with cancer will be sold during the relay and all funds generated will go to the American Cancer Society.

Welch Group Honors Hancock Park Staff

SANDRA BENOTTI, RN, an MDS/MMQ coordinator at Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Quincy and Richard Welch, president of Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, celebrate Benotti's 40-years of service during the Welch Group's Annual Staff Appreciation Dinner.

DURING THE WELCH Group's Annual Staff Appreciation Dinner, company Vice-President Paul T. Casale Sr. presents Doreen Coggeshall, a marketing coordinator, at Village at Proprietors Green Senior Living Community in Marshfield, with the 2014 Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group Employee of the Year Award, which features a $1,500 travel voucher.

Long-time employees of Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center and Allerton House Assisted Living at Hancock Park in Quincy were among those honored at the Welch Group's Annual Employee Appreciation Dinner, held at Pembroke Country Club.

The Welch Group celebrated more than 350 employees and staff, beginning with those who have served for five years or more.

The evening featured a special tribute video to the late Mrs. Rita M. Welch, who along with her husband Thomas (Frank) Welch, began caring for frail elders in their Braintree home in 1949. Today, Welch Group is led by third and fourth-generation family members and the company's breadth of service covers the full range of senior care and housing options from independent living to short-term rehabilitation and long-term skilled nursing care.

"We invest in our employees and our employees invest in us," says Welch Group President Richard W. Welch, referring to the extraordinary length of service of so many Welch Group employees. "For more than 65 years the Welch Family has focused on providing the highest standard of care to seniors," adds Welch.

This year Welch Group employees receiving top honors for their years of service to the company include John Howe, a 41-year dietary staff worker at Colonial Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Weymouth; Sandra Benotti, RN, an MDS/MMQ coordinator at Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Quincy who has been on staff for 40 years and Donna Griffin, director of social services at John Scott House Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Braintree, who is a 39-year employee.

Several significant Welch Group milestones are being celebrated this year, including the opening of the company's first nursing centers, John Scott House in Braintree and Colonial in Weymouth. They will, respectively celebrate 65 and 50 years of nursing excellence. Additionally the company's first assisted living community Allerton House at Central Park in Weymouth, will celebrate its 15th Anniversary.

In addition to awards for distinguished length of service, the Welch Group each year honors individuals who plan to continue their education in healthcare or related services. This year there were 15 recipients of the Florence May St. John Scholarship. The scholarship was established by the Welch Family to honor St. John, who began caring for seniors in her home and would later set the model for her own daughter, Rita M. Welch who with her husband, Thomas, opened their first nursing center in Braintree - the John Scott House.

The Welch Group, with facilities, located in Braintree, Brighton, Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Quincy and Weymouth, employs over 2000 staff members.

DeCristofaro Recused From Central Principal Appointment

Vice Principal - The Superintendent's Son - Seeks Post

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro has voluntarily recused himself from the process of hiring a new Central Middle School principal because his son, Richard DeCristofaro, Jr. – the school's current vice-principal – is aiming for the position.

According to City Solicitor James Timmins, the issue was brought to his attention two weeks ago by the superintendent.

"He submitted to me a question for an ethics opinion and essentially what it was, he understood quite clearly that with his son being involved as an applicant once he applied for the position, that that was going to impact his role," Timmins told the Quincy School Committee at its June 11th meeting.

As superintendent, DeCristofaro has a non-delegable duty to appoint principals in the city. That duty is in direct conflict with his obligation to not be associated or participate in the hiring process of a family member. As such, the Massachusetts State Ethics Commission's Rule of Necessity must be implemented.

This rule states that "if an elected member of a town or city board has a conflict of interest with respect to a matter before the board that involves his own financial interest or that of a partner, an immediate family member, a business organization with which the board member has certain affiliations, or a person or organization with whom the board member is negotiating or has any arrangement concerning future employment, that member will be disqualified from participating as a board member in that matter."

Timmins contacted Assistant Attorney General Deidre Roney for clarification and other possible avenues of action. In the opinion of the Ethics Commission, the Rule of Necessity doesn't apply to appointed officials. As such, DeCristofaro—an appointed official—is not subject to the rule.

"The Rule of Necessity was not an option so we're not going down that road anymore and that really narrowed what the options were here," said Timmins. This left two alternatives: one in which DeCristofaro would submit a form to the School Committee asking them to give him an exemption which would allow him to participate in the appointment process and another in which he would absent himself from the process completely. He chose the latter alternative, leaving him unable to comment on the situation.

Timmins said he based his opinion on a Board of Ethics opinion from 1986 on nepotism which outlined the obligations of public officials.

"[Supt. DeCristofaro] didn't think it was appropriate," said Timmins. "The focus here is going to be on the appointment of a principal and the community at Central Middle [School]." DeCristofaro's decision to voluntarily recuse himself means he is not obligated to file any public disclosures.

The hiring process will be overseen by a committee assembled by Deputy Supt. Kevin Mulvey, who asked former Braintree Schools Supt. Dr. Peter Kurzberg, who worked for the Braintree school system for 22 years and has recently retired, to assist in the process of vetting applicants.

Kurzberg agreed to perform the duty of becoming an advisor and overseeing the process at no cost.

"He will assist in the vetting of the candidates and putting together the team as well for the vetting of the candidates who will ultimately go before him for the final interview process," said Mulvey who will most likely chair the committee. At no point will DeCristofaro have access to applicant resumes nor will he be permitted to sit in during the interview process.

"If in this case the relative ends up as principal, is there a reporting structure…because of the items Mr. Timmins pointed out due to nepotism?" asked School Committee member David McCarthy. According to Mulvey, if that were to happen a public disclosure would need to be filed acknowledging the relationship and any potential conflict, and direct supervision of the newly hired principal would fall to the deputy superintendent rather than the superintendent.

"At first it seems very simple but it's not simple at all," said School Committee member Anne Mahoney who noted that in her opinion the situation gave off the impression of impropriety.

She said the fact that only one candidate had applied internally was creating a "hiccup" for her. "I would imagine that a lot of people would want to be the principal of that school and to only have one internal candidate come to it, that's something that as a school committee I get concerned with because it's the exact reason we're having this discussion," she said. Mulvey assured her that DeCristofaro, Jr. had not sent in his application until two weeks after the job posting date, assuaging fears that intimidation would prevent other people from applying for the job. He offered the example of the appointment of North Quincy High School Principal Robert Shaw who was the only candidate to apply internally for his position.

"I'm certainly not suggesting that his son is not qualified because I think he is qualified. It just happens to be that he's qualified in a school system where his father happens to be the superintendent," said Mahoney. "If the superintendent's son gets hired we're right back to the same problem of a conflict of interest."

DeCristofaro, Jr. received his bachelor's degree from Salve Regina University and his master's degree from Cambridge College. He began working for Quincy schools in April 2004 as a grade 4-5 teacher at the Montclair School; a position he held until 2006. He then was a guidance counselor at North Quincy and Quincy High Schools for five years. He was made vice-principal of Central Middle School in December 2011 and is also currently a guidance counselor for the Quincy Evening High School and has held that position for five years. He has completed the Administrative Licensure Program at Eastern Nazarene College which earned him a certificate of completion.

The position was posted May 23 and remained online until June 13. Approximately 25 applicants have submitted resumes according to Mulvey. The pool of applicants will be narrowed down to possibly five candidates. Mulvey, who supervises all principals, has been put in a compromising position as his direct supervisor is DeCristofaro, said Mahoney.

She also took issue with the fact that Mulvey has never taught in a classroom. "[Mulvey] is being put in a situation where although he's licensed, he's never been in a classroom," she said. "You've never been a teacher in a classroom."

"Obviously I'm licensed by the [Department of Elementary and Secondary Education]. I'm a licensed assistant superintendent and the state says I'm qualified to obviously oversee principals…so with all due respect you may not feel that I'm qualified necessarily to supervise teachers, to supervise assistant principals or to supervise principals but over the past five years that's exactly what I've been doing," he said in his defense. "The superintendent has faith in my ability."

Timmins – who said he thinks DeCristofaro took the right avenue of action and that any conflict of interest has been adequately eliminated – said it would be unethical to impede DeCristofaro Jr.'s success because of his relationship with the superintendent. "We're trying to do this merit-based. We're eliminating the conflict by taking the superintendent out of it and that's all we can do."

"I think we've been given a roadmap here," said Mayor Thomas Koch who feels the appointment of Kurzberg was appropriate due to his experience overseeing the operations of a neighboring school district. "I respect the integrity of Mr. Mulvey. I think he's been a tremendous addition and asset to our school system, beyond reproach so I'm very comfortable in his integrity."

Jeanne Reardon Retiring As Council's Clerk Of Committees

By SCOTT JACKSON

A familiar face at City Council meetings for four decades, Jeanne Reardon is retiring from her position as the council's clerk of committees.

Reardon, 73, has served as the council's clerk of committees since 1980. In that role, she helps draft the agenda for each council meeting, assists with scheduling, and records each vote or other action taken by the council.

Before becoming clerk of committees Reardon worked for Prudential Insurance in Boston. She took off eight years to raise her children before returning to work when she was hired as clerk of committees.

Leo Kelly offered her the job, Reardon recalled, Frank McCauley formally nominated her at a council meeting, and John Gillis, the city clerk at the time, swore her in. She went to work as the clerk of committees immediately after being sworn in. Reardon felt it was a privilege to serve in that position for 34 years.

"It's really been a privilege to work in that job," she told The Sun Monday. "I enjoyed it and I'm grateful I had the opportunity."

Reardon said she plans to retire in part because of vision problems she's had recently, though she is undergoing treatment and is optimistic about making a recovery. In retirement, she plans to spend more time with family and friends, but would miss the people she has come to know through her job.

"I'm going to miss all the wonderful people – that's a given," Reardon said. "I worked with many wonderful people all through the years."

Reardon previously estimated she had served with some 30 councillors during her tenure. In addition, she has worked with five different mayoral administrations.

The clerk of committees is one of the positions appointed directly by the City Council. According to City Clerk Joseph Shea, the job has already been posted and resumes have been received. The council, he said, hopes to have a replacement hired in July.

Reardon offered some advice for whoever follows in her footsteps as the clerk of committees.

"Get as involved with the issues as you can," she said. "Gather all the information you can to help the public out. Try to anticipate the what the councillors need and help them out."

ments, and the hiring of one, full-time instrumental music teacher. "Most of our [music] teachers do multiple, various buildings and this will allow us to service more of our students in the instrumental program; a tremendously successful program," said DeCristofaro.

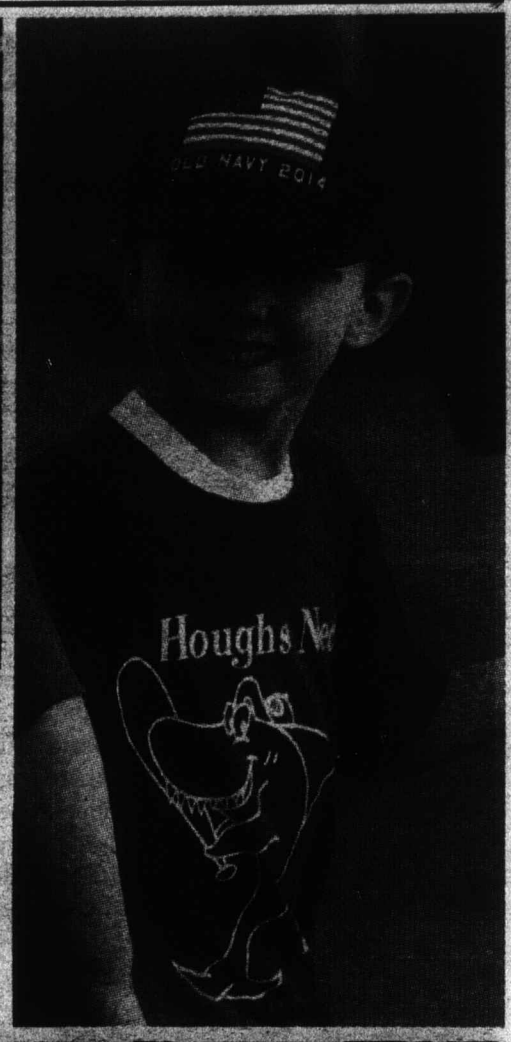
An increase in funding for testing, data collection, and reporting will see a 43.48 percent increase totaling $20,000. This increase was approved prior to the decision to opt out of Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers (PARCC) testing for the 2015 school year.

In subsidized support, one member of custodial staff will be added at a cost of $35,000.

Expenditures on natural gas will see a $100,000 increase as a way to reduce the amount subsidized through the district's rental revolving account which operates without any fiscal year limitations and is replenished with funds earned as a result of its investments. This constitutes an 8.62 percent increase over 2015's natural gas spending.

DeCristofaro said the approved budget will assist in "restoring foreign language and technology, engineering, professional development [and] increasing our literacy programs…increasing the special education program; increasing the ELL program, our kindergarten paraprofessionals, our special education paraprofessionals; increasing our information and technology staff which is tremendously appreciated and will have a direct relation to technology in our classrooms for our teachers."

School Committee member Anne Mahoney was the only person to vote no on the budget, indicating that she could not reconcile the loss of two, full-time teaching positions with close to capacity elementary school class rooms and the $3,000 increase in DeCristofaro's salary. "I voted no [because of] the salary raise because it didn't have a review," she said.



A HALLMARK of the Quincy Flag Day Parade is youngsters marching with American Flags with their youth sports teams. Others show their patriotic spirit dressed in red, white and blue. This year's parade also paid tribute to the Houghs Neck T-Ball League and the League's founders, Cris and Wayne Batson. The Batsons were presented the Richard J. Koch, Jr. Youth Service Award at a ceremony following the parade at Pageant Field by Mr. Koch's son, Mayor Thomas Koch.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On June 9, 2014, at approximately 4:15 p.m., Sergeant Patrick Buonaugurio was monitoring the intersection of Hancock and Granite Streets for crosswalk violations involving motorists, bicyclists or pedestrians as part of an education/enforcement grant for the City of Quincy. This intersection has been deemed a high risk area for this grant requiring enforcement.

Sergeant Buonaugurio was standing on the sidewalk of Granite Street in full uniform with his cruiser parked several feet ahead on the side of the road. He observed a gray Maxima northbound on Hancock Street go through a red light as the vehicle turned onto Granite Street westbound. The Sergeant immediately stepped into the street and motioned for the operator to pull over. As it appeared that the driver was not going to pull over, the Sergeant then moved toward the car yelling loudly as he motioned with his arms for the male driver to stop. The driver sped away, however, Sergeant Buonaugurio was able to get a clear look at the driver and sole occupant.

The vehicle turned left onto Burgin Parkway, going through the red light. The Sergeant ran to his cruiser, activated his blue lights and proceeded onto Burgin Parkway, where he saw that the suspect vehicle had collided with two cars and was wedged in between just before the Granite Connector light. There was no driver in the car at this time.

One of the drivers of the cars that had been struck motioned the Sergeant to the sidewalk of Burgin Parkway, where he found the suspect on the ground in medical distress. After Sergeant Buonaugurio called for an ambulance, the suspect said he took off because he got scared, adding that his driver's license was revoked and he had just finished meeting with his lawyer for a similar violation. He said that he escaped his vehicle through the sunroof because his doors were wedged shut after hitting two vehicles. He went to the side of the road and felt as though he was going to pass out from the nervousness of this incident.

LT. DAN MINTON

The suspect was handcuffed and then transported to Quincy Medical Center. Sergeant Buonaugurio then spoke to the two drivers involved in the accident. They stated that they were stopped at the red light when the suspect tried to maneuver between them and hit both cars, causing severe damage to all three vehicles. Another driver came forward to report that his vehicle was also hit as the suspect drove onto Burgin Parkway and tried to weave through the traffic.

Based on the information available, Sergeant Buonaugurio determined that the suspect had no intention of stopping after damaging the first vehicle and the second accident prevented his escape.

After being medically cleared, the suspect, a 30 year old Brockton resident was charged with "2 counts of Failure to Stop for a Red Light, Operation after License Revocation, Failure to Stop for a Police Officer, Operating to Endanger, and Leaving the Scene After Causing Property Damage." Nice Work!

HOME IMPROVEMENTS: If you are thinking about upgrading your home, whether it is a major improvement or a cosmetic change, do your homework before hiring a contractor. The improvement can range from a new driveway to interior painting. Finding a qualified and reliable contractor is vital to getting quality workmanship and if the work is done wrong, it can cost you financially or as in the case of shoddy electrical work, personal injury. An unscrupulous contractor, or someone posing as one, can lead to loss of money, delays, subpar work and lengthy legal problems.

Before hiring a contractor, there should be plenty of questions to ask such as,

How many projects like mine have you completed in the last year? Will my project require a permit? What types of insurance do you carry? Do you provide Workman's compensation? Will you provide a written contract? Do you have a builder's license? Be sure to get a written agreement prior to work commencing. It should be clear and concise and include the who, what, where, when, and cost of your project.

How can you tell if a contractor might not be reputable? You should avoid offers from someone who knocks on your door for business just happens to have materials left over from a previous job, pressures you for an immediate decision, only accepts cash, asks you to pay everything up-front, or asks you to get the required building permits.

Getting the name of a reputable contractor is fairly easy; ask around in your community of friends, neighbors, coworkers, your mechanic, your parish, etc. When the name of a contractor is recommended more than once, this would be the starting point to negotiations. Ask the contractor where he has done work locally to assess the work and possibly speak with the homeowner. If possible, get multiple estimates of work with explanations as to how the work will be done. Sometimes, a contractor cutting corners results in a lower cost but may not meet your expectations!

Helping To Rebuild Saint Yves School In Haiti

2nd Annual Fundraiser An Outstanding Success

Note: the following letter was submitted for publication:

The second annual fundraiser to help rebuild the Saint Yves School in Haiti and to celebrate the feast of Saint Yves – the patron saint of lawyers – was held on Sunday, May 5, at the Knights of Columbus in North Quincy. Once again, the Quincy community overwhelmingly responded to this special invitation.

The evening was sensational and enjoyable. It began with warm and upbeat tunes that came from the Haitian president and musician Michel "Sweet Mickey" Martelly's orchestra. The amazingly talented dancers of the Velocity Dance Company, directed by Miss Erica and Vance, offered a spectacular performance that kept the audience breathless. They were followed by a superb performance by the Atlantic Youth Orchestra, which entertained the attendees while they dined. Grace L'Or Jean, accompanied by the Atlantic Youth Orchestra, gave a superb performance on the violin of the Haitian national anthem, La Dessalinienne, while Mrs. Suzan Bill elegantly conducted the musicians. Members of the Haitian Consulate of Boston, Consul Gladys Joseph and Agent Consulaire Myrlene Myrthil, sang and held the Haitian flag as the orchestra performed.

Meanwhile, the tasty and lavish buffet offered by Gennaro's Eatery, Domino's Pizza, and Pizza Hut and their generous delivery, along with exotic Haitian dishes were once again the talk of the soiree. Not only did everyone go home full, everyone had a smile on his or her face and most of the attendees went home with prizes.

Our thanks to all those who participated and helped make this a special event. Special thanks goes to Gail MacDonald, Cindy Mullen, and Ben Howe who did a terrific job to help set up the fundraiser. With God's help and yours we will rebuild Saint Yves School.

All donations to the Saint Yves School Foundation are tax deductible and can be made at Citizens Bank to the Saint Yves Foundation, account number 1320715580. You can also visit the foundation on the web at saintyvesschool.com.

Valiant U-18 Quincy Comeback Edges Hingham 5-4

Quincy's "road to the cup" began with a last second loss to Weymouth and was followed by a stunning 3-2 upset over unscored upon Braintree, of which former NQHS goalie Nolan Greene (37 saves) and forward Pat Freeman (QHS) were named the #1 and #3 game stars respectively. To secure the 2nd West seed (Braintree 1st) and advance to the medal round of the 6th South Shore Town Cup [SSTC], the final berth came down to Weymouth and Quincy. The U-18 team needed to win both periods of its hockey game, which would give Quincy the 3 clinching points in the West standings, against Hingham.

The Harbormen jumped out to an early 3-0 lead, and Quincy's hopes of advancing immediately looked bleak. The relentless fore-checking of wingers Kevin Mock / Steve Ross coupled with clutch passing by centerman Pat Freeman sparked two Quincy goals by Bryan O'Callaghan and Jake Hallisey as the first period ended with Hingham up 3-2. To remain in medal contention, Quincy would have to win the last of two periods and await the outcome of Hingham's final round robin game with Weymouth.

Play intensified in the final period, as both goalies made several stellar saves. With six minutes remaining, Hingham scored on a power play and took what appeared to be a commanding 4-2 lead. In a testament to the heart of the U-18 team, the Quincy troops rallied, storming back to tie the game on goals by Robbie Cameron (NQHS) and Freeman. Shortly thereafter along with two Hingham players, both Freeman and Cameron were given the gate, as tempers flared in front of the Quincy net with less than a minute left in the game.

Poised for its first tournament points and with a one-man power play advantage, Hingham had Quincy pinned in its end with 49 seconds remaining, unleashing a hail of shots, which Greene turned aside. As a loose puck straddled the Quincy crease, defenseman James Hussey (BCH) kicked it to his partner, Brandon Beal in the corner. From there, the 2014-15 QHS Co-Captain {Beal} sent a "Flutie-like" pass up ice to a streaking Hallisey, who out skated two Hingham defenders at the red line. Crossing the Hingham blue line alone, he dangled the Harbormen netminder for the winning "Gino" as the final seconds ticked off the game clock. Following a jubilant celebration on ice and in the stands, Hallisey and O'Callaghan received post-game honors as #1 and #3 game stars.

In lieu of its 5-4 victory, Quincy still needed some help from the Harbormen, who were unable to deliver the following night, losing 3-2 to Weymouth. Quincy was one of three South Shore "West" division hockey teams to complete its preliminary round robin play with identical 2-1 records. However due to head-head tiebreaker rule format, only Weymouth and Braintree advanced to the medal round. Both the Wamps and Wildcats were defeated in the cross-division semi-final games by the top two "East" division seeds last Thursday night, setting up the weekend championship game, of which Duxbury handily beat the top East seed, Marshfield 8-2.

In its final consolation round game, back-up goalie Chris Connolly (QHS) got the start for Quincy against a feisty Pembroke team, who had tied Duxbury 3-3 in the preliminary East round division play. Quincy's Aiden Pugsley fed Brendan Cox for a top shelf goal and early 1-0 lead. The bigger Pembroke team battled back for 3 goals, and after Bryan O'Callaghan and Ryan Harty tallied for Quincy, both teams were tied 3-3 at the end of the first period.

During a physical and penalty filled final period, Quincy's sophomore defensive pairing of Owen Lynch (QHS) and Adam McCormack (BCH) disrupted several Pembroke threats and helped ignite an Aaron Clancy hat trick in the final period. Along with goals from Hallisey and O'Callaghan, the U-18 Quincy team finished off the Titans 8-6 for an impressive 3-1 record in its first SSTC appearance. Greene, Freeman, Hallisey, and O'Callaghan received all-tournament team honorable mention honors.

Several of the U-18 Quincy players also graduated, worked, and honored other student-athlete commitments during the week long Town Cup. Quincy's U-18 Coach Mike Hussey praised the team's dedication and resilient performance.

"It was truly a privilege to coach this group, who redefined team pride," Hussey said.

After the Quincy players, many of whom will be eligible for next year's SSTC, expressed their appreciation and asked for a call next year, the former high school football coach (BCH & Hanover HS) commended "the players' positive SSTC experience, our parents' support, and the generosity of the U-18 team sponsors, which included Wollaston Golf Course (Dan Rull), the Quincy Elks (Frank Bertoni & Tom O'Connor), QYHA (Michelle Steinberg), and Pro Edge Sports (Doug Nolan)."

SSTC U-18 champion Duxbury has expressed interest in playing the Quincy team, who finished with the best record in the West division. Tentatively, week of June 29th (TBA) and to benefit the 58th annual Disabled American Veteran's (DAV) fishing trip in July, both teams will face off in an "East-West" South Shore hockey showdown at QYHA.

The game will be announced this Saturday night 7-11 p.m. at the annual DAV fundraiser at Town River Yacht Club, facilitated by Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club (Michael Cheney 617-592-2501).

QUINCY SCHOOL - Community Partnership recently received a $10,000 grant from Eastern Bank. Quincy Public Schools will use the funds for the Classroom Technology Integration Initiative. Sixteen tablets will be purchased for use by third and fourth grade teachers in four QPS elementary schools. Therese Bellotti-Palmieri, branch manager and vice president, Eastern Bank, presents the check to John Fagerlund, partnership coordinator.

Morrisette Posts 5-1 Record, First Place

LEGION BASEBALL

By BILL GRIFFIN

This could be well be a summer when Morrisette takes a long, sweet ride of great baseball.

In one week, Post 294 swept to four straight victories. In the four games, they scored 29 runs, allowed just six and committed two errors in 28 innings. Along with the fine numbers, they did the things a good team does. They got the clutch hit, made the big pitch and turned the tough defensive play. Right now, everything feels right about this team.

Robbie Munroe drilled a two-run single with the two out in the bottom of the sixth for the game-winning RBI to support terrific pitching from Cody Desmond and Dave Suslowicz and give Morrisette a 6-4 decision over Stoughton in a battle for first place in Zone 6 East action at Adams Field Monday night.

The victory lifted Post 294 to 5-1 on the season and gave them sole possession of the of the top spot in the zone. Stoughton is 4-4.

"We're playing good baseball and we've having fun doing it. That's the best part," said coach Steve Maze. "The starting pitching has been good, we've made the plays and we've scored runs in big situations."

In other action, righty Kenny Sorensen dazzled a powerful Braintree club, which was full of players from the high school team which went to the Super Eight finals, in a 4-0 victory Sunday night. He pitched six innings, gave four hits and struck out seven. He threw at every speed from every angle and he threw strikes.

"They didn't know what to expect," said Maze.

T.J. Hobin fired a complete-game three-hitter and fanned seven in an 8-1 romp over Milton. Greg Paulo gave just four hits and fanned seven while Jason Pekkinen had three hits and four RBI as Morrisette cruised past Hyde Park, 11-1.

Munroe's decisive hit against Stoughton came on a 3-2 count with the score tied at 4-4 and illustrated well the grit Morrisette has shown in the early part of the season. Munroe entered the at-bat after going 0-3 with two strikeouts earlier in the game. They were not good at-bats for Munroe who is an excellent hitter.

It is easy to deliver the big hit in the late innings when a batter is on the ball all night. It is hard when a batter has struggled. Munroe produced when it was difficult, when it was hard. It is a mark of toughness in the player and in the team.

"Robbie was frustrated with his early at-bats," said Maze. "I called him over before he came up in the sixth. I told him the early at-bats were over and that nobody was going to remember

Three Wins For Wollaston

SENIOR BABE RUTH

By BILL GRIFFIN

Last year ended with a great stretch run which carried them to the finals of the Eastern Massachusetts Championships, and this season began with four games that offered promise of another summer of fun and good baseball.

Wollaston exploded for 10 runs in the second inning and rode the impressive pitching of Dillon Darcy and Ben Martin to an 11-4 victory over Braintree in a South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League game at Adams Field last week.

In its season opener, Matt Kerin had a single, double, triple and five RBI as Wollaston rolled past Norwood, 12-1.

"I think we have a big upside this season," said coach Steve Reardon. "We have a lot of experience back and it starts with the pitching. The pitching in the early games has been outstanding."

In other action last week, Kerin fired a no-hitter and drove in a pair of runs to lift Wollaston past Dedham, 3-0. David Cooper doubled and scored for Wollaston. Ben Martin and Matt Munroe also scored in the victory.

Milton edged Wollaston, 1-0 Sunday night despite the work of Jonathan Leveillee who threw a one-hitter and allowed only an uneanred run. Mike Pugsley had a pair of hits for Wollaston.

Darcy earned the victory in the Braintree and Norwood games and ran his two-season record to 9-0. His best pitch is a sidearm curveball which he throws to both sides of the plate. His fastball is good enough to straighten up any hitters trying to cheat on the breaking stuff. He gave two hits, one earned run and struck out four in three innings against Braintree.

Leveillee is another veteran starter who finished the last two innings against Norwood, but the surprise of the staff could well be Martin. The lefty threw the final four innings against Braintree, giving one hit and one earned run. He struck out three and he threw hard. His fastball was alive and he mixed it with a good curve and change for two of his strikeouts. The key pitch is the fastball.

"Ben has always had a good curve, but he needed to step up the fastball. He showed that tonight. He could be a big factor for us this year," said Reardon. "Darcy and Leveillee know what it's like to pitch in big games."

Wollaston played big games last year. They went 20-7 and battled into the ninth inning of the final game in a best-of-three playoff before losing the league title to Milton on an unearned run. They then went on a deep run through the tournament before falling to a powerful Cape Cod club in the EMass finals.

A deep, veteran lineup returns who can hit and make the plays. Wollaston should be good.

"What I like is our balance. We can get offense from a lot of different players," said Reardon.

Nine different players batted safely against Braintree in a 14-hit attack. Six different players drove in runs. Ten different players scored runs. In the 10-run second, the first eight batters reached safely. Seven different players had hits in the same inning. Wollaston had nine hits, drew four walks, and sent 16 batters to the plate in the explosion.

That is more offense than the Red Sox have had since Cinco de Mayo.

"We hit the ball well right through the lineup and that's what you want. You don't want to have to rely on just one or two players," said Reardon.

Cooper had two hits, scored two runs and drove in three runs in the same inning. Evan Feinberg also went 2-2, scored a run and had an RBI in the same inning. Padraig Geaney (single, double, walk for the game) had a single and scored a run in the big rally.

Pugsley (two hits, two RBI, a run scored for the game) had a single and drove in a run in the second. Darcy added a single, RBI, and a run scored in the in-

Maya Umoren New England Shot Put Champion

By JOE REARDON

North Quincy's Maya Umoren was able to turn the tables on the best shot putter in Massachusetts on the biggest stage of the spring track season.

Umoren got off a monster effort of 42 feet, 10 inches on her next-to-last attempt to capture the New England title Saturday at Bridgewater State University and defeat state champion Michaela Smith of Newton North in the process. Umoren's effort was a new personal best, improving on the 41-8-1/2 toss that earned her second place at the state meet the previous week. The throw also trumped the school's 32-year-old record. Smith earned the bronze medal with a heave of 40-7-3/4.

The Newbury College-bound senior didn't feel especially smooth when the competition got under way, but knew it was just a matter of time before she loosened up in the warm conditions. "My first couple of throws were not the best," said Umoren. "They were around 39 feet but they felt comfortable and they were my warm up throws. I honestly didn't know what I was going to throw (in the finals). I just let it go. I could see where the 42 (foot) mark was and I was trying to reach it or get a little beyond.

"The first couple of throws my arm felt a litle tight. The last throws my body was a little more loose and I could move faster. It (being tight) happens sometimes. Since I was throwing 39 I thought maybe that was as far as I was going to throw. I did a lot of stretching after that and my arm felt better."

Umoren wasn't intimidated by Smith, the state champion in both the discus and shot put, and concentrated on what she needed to do in the circle to get more distance on her throws. Beating Smith, though, wasn't lost on Umoren. "It was different from the state meet where Michaela came in first," she said. "Everything changed. At first I was just thinking about what I had to do to win. Then after the whole thing was over it kind of hit me. It felt good, but it did feel weird because I'm so used to Michaela being in front of me."

The friendly rivals chatted after the finals and Smith congratulated Umoren on her victory and said it was a fun four years. "That was like the first time we ever had a full conversation," said Umoren.

North Quincy head coach Geoff Hennessy didn't alter Umoren's training after the state meet. If anything, she went into both the state meet and New Englands undertrained.

"We didn't do anything magical I can tell you that," said Hennessy. "We probably had one or two practices each week because of (scheduling) conflicts and things like that. I don't know if her technique got better. She's watching a lot of other kids, maybe modeling her technique from what she's seen. Who knows. Sometimes kids get in a zone and good things happen."

Hennessy believed Umoren was ready to rip a big throw if she put her mind to it.

"I told her to prepare to have a great day and if someone doesn't have a great day you could be the winner," he said. "That's how things turned out. Your plan is always to have your best performance in the biggest arena. For two weeks in a row that worked for us. We'll take it."

It turns out junior Emily Bryson's sparkling second-place finish in the state meet was a precursor for an even better day at New Englands. The Red Raider junior passed two runners over the final 400 meters in the 3,200-meter run to earn a fifth-place medal. Bryson's time of 10:55.98 converts to a 10:57 2 mile, which was a new personal best and the first time she has broken the 11-minute mark after entering the season with a best of 11:24 from indoors. Bryson was also the top Massachusetts finisher.

Bryson ran much the way she did when she captured the silver medal behind Bishop Feehan's Abbie McNulty in the state meet. She ran comfortably in the pack and put herself in position for a sprint finish over the final 200 meters.

"It was a PR for me so I was really happy," she said. "I didn't know any of the girls so it was hard going into it. I knew the top seed was around 10:39 and there was going to be a fast group and was going to let them break away and run with the second group. There were all Massachusetts runners in the second group and we all ran together. With about three laps to go we started to seperate."

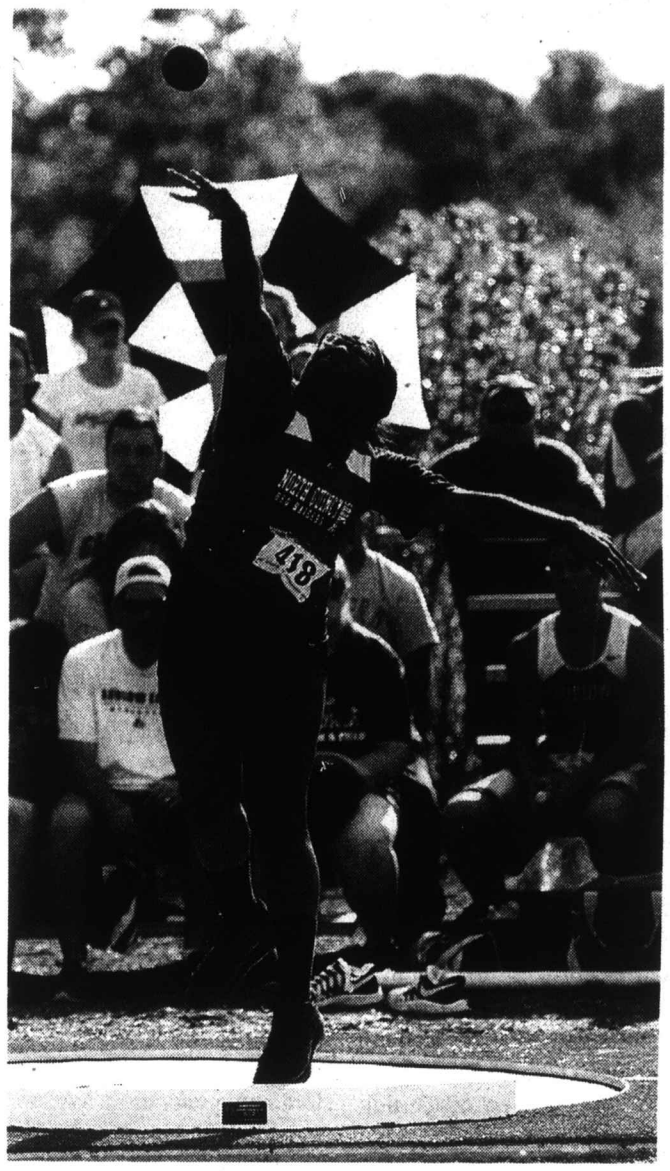
Bryson said anything she did at New Englands would be a bonus and her goal was to earn a medal. She also erased the disappointment of a tough race at the indoor state meet, which she ran with a heavy cold. "I wanted to get some redemption for that race," Bryson said. "New Englands was like the cherry on top. It was something I never expected. It was an amazing experience."

"I never thought last year I'd be under 11 so it's really great to kind of see things come this far. I was really nervous, but I felt good warming up and was really confident. The last three laps I started picking it up to see how fast I could take it. It was definitely more than I was expecting this whole season."

Hennessy said Bryson's two races on the Bridgewater State University track were an extension of what she had been doing all season in races - running strategically sound early and then kicking hard to the tape.

"She did that in every meet," said Hennessy. "She did it at the coaches meet, class meet, at the state meet and Saturday. That's her strategy. She knows what she has to do for pace. We've talked about it, but now she's got it in her mind. She understands that kids go out faster than they're capable of doing at the beginning of a race and then come back. She wants to be the fastest kid on the track at the end. We've done workouts based on that and she executed them.

"She picked her spots and really put the hammer down with 200 to go."



MAYA UMOREN's next-to-last attempt of 42 feet, 10 inches was not only a personal best but won the North Quincy graduate the New England title in the girls shot put.

Morrisette Jr. Legion Wins Three Games

By BILL GRIFFIN

Morrisette's Junior Legion team rolled to three consecutive victories to begin its season and showed the effective mix of pitching, hitting and defense which produced a Zone 6 regular-season title last summer.

Morrisette downed Cohasset, Holbrook and Needham by a combined score of 28-4 behind strong pitching efforts from Richie Ryan, Josh Helfrich and Bryan Turner. Lefty Joe Cochrane was solid in relief in all three games.

"We've played well," said coach Gerry Shepherd. "I like our pitching depth. We can hit the ball and our defense has been good. I also liked the fact we were able to play our whole roster in all three games."

Ryan is a hard-throwing righty who is one of the five returning veterans from last year's team. He was sharp in a 8-1 decision over Needham.

Helfrich, who will also see action with the senior team, has a good fastball and a curve that he controls for strikes. He pitched well for North Quincy in the spring and earned the victory in a 13-1 win over Cohasset.

Turner is coming back from a torn ACL. As a sophomore at North, he was a speedy outfielder, a quality hitter and showed great promise as a pitcher. He hurt his knee in football and he is just starting to regain his top form. He pitched well in a 7-2 decision over Holbrook.

Cochrane, who also pitched for North in the spring, was especially effective against Needham when he escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the sixth without giving up a run and then pitched a scoreless seventh to nail down the win for Morrisette.

"Richie mixes his curve and fastball well," said Shepherd. "Josh has good composure and can get his curve over the plate. Cochrane stays in control in tight spots. Bryan is coming back from the ACL. If he keeps improving, he will really help us on the mound and in the outfield."

The core of the defense and the igniters of the offense are second baseman Timmy Keohane and shortstop Troy Shepherd. Keohane bats second and hit over .400 through three games. He has good speed, gets on base, and can execute the bunt and hit-and run.

Shepherd is a veteran from last year's club and will also play for the senior team this summer. He is exceptional defensively and, like Keohane, he knows how to reach base and can disrupt a game with his speed from the leadoff spot.

"I think through the first three games they were on base about three of every four at bats," said Shepherd. "They are excellent defensively. They turned four double plays in three games and I think they made only error combined."

Ryan and Will Phelan give Morrisette strong hitting at first base. Helfrich and Owen Lynch also supply good offense at third. Joe Ferracane, who had three walks and scored twice for the senior team against Cohasset, is an anchor behind the plate. Cam White is also a good catcher.

"We have a good mix of kids who played for North, Quincy, BC High, Xaverian and St. Sebastian's," said Shepherd. "We have 10 new kids, so we're a little young, but I think we should get better and better as we get into the meat of our schedule."

Last Friday's game against Norwood was canceled because Norwood was still playing in the high school state tourney. The junior team will host Hudson at Adams Field Friday at 5:30 p.m.

Chiropractor

UNLEASHING THE BODY'S NATURAL HEALING ABILITY

The big pharmaceutical companies would have you believe that all your ills can be cured with pills. In many cases, however, we wouldn't need drugs to combat the symptoms of many chronic conditions if we simply eliminated the underlying cause(s). When functioning optimally, the body is able to resist disease, heal its wounds, and maintain health. This fundamental concept of all healing arts is held as a basic tenet of chiropractic. By restoring the spine to its proper function and thereby eliminating obstructions in the flow of nerve energy, the chiropractor endeavors to restore and maintain the body's natural ability to defend itself against disease. Chiropractic's goal is to promote and maintain health and, thereby, prevent disease.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are dedicated to helping you achieve your wellness objectives – combining skill and expertise that spans the entire chiropractic wellness spectrum. We are committed to bringing you better health and a better way of life by teaching and practicing the true principles of chiropractic wellness care. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule your appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

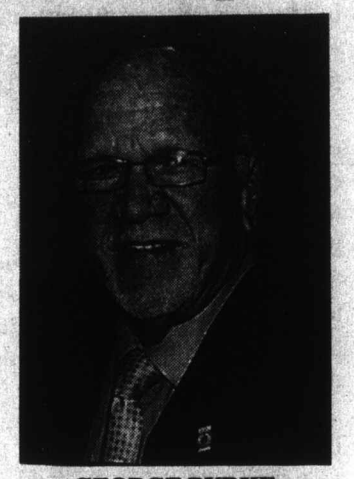
George Burke To Donate $60,000 To Quincy School Partnership



GEORGE BURKE

Quincy attorney and philanthropist George G. Burke has made a generous commitment to the Quincy School ~ Community Partnership and Quincy Public Schools.

Burke has pledged a total of $60,000 over six years to be utilized in several ways.

This year, a total of $10,000 has been presented to QSCP to be distributed to support the QPS Classroom Technology Integration Initiative and to award ten $500 Teacher Mini Grants named the "George G. Burke Team Approach Grant." These innovative grants will be applied for by groups of educators within Quincy Public Schools.

The Classroom Technology Integration Initiative provides technology equipment for classrooms such as Short Throw Projectors, tablets, document cameras, and additional hard and software to enhance the daily presentation of curriculum to the students. Attorney Burke has stipulated this portion of his donation is to be utilized at the Montclair Elementary School where two of his grandchildren currently attend.

"The Quincy School ~ Community Partnership is most fortunate to have such benevolent citizens like George Burke", said John Fagerlund, Coordinator of the Quincy School ~Community Partnership. "As a result of the direct involvement of over 100 QSCP partners it is possible to assist the schools in various ways such as technology upgrades, music programs, and the arts. We are honored to have George make such a significant contribution to the lives of Quincy Public School students and professionals."

For additional information concerning the Quincy School ~ Community Partnership and related QPS/ partner news, visit www.qscp.org.

Recreation Dept. Youth Softball Clinic July 14-18

Quincy Recreation Department is offering a youth softball clinic for players entering grades 3- 9.

Thanks to a donation from newly created Terry Greenleaf Foundation for Girls Softball, the Quincy Recreation Department Sports and More week-long Softball Clinic will be offered to the first 40 participants for $25.

The program will be conducted by Rachel Powers, the head coach of the nationally ranked Wheaton College Women's Softball Team. This is an opportunity for girls to learn softball skills from a former North Quincy High School standout, NCAA all star and highly respected coach.

"This is a fitting tribute to Terry who passed away this winter and a perfect opportunity for instilling her love of the game of softball to a new generation. We are indebted to her friends for establishing such a great tribute," said Recreation Director Barry Welch.

Terry Greenleaf, often called "TG" by her close friends, was a member of the Quincy Women's softball league for over 35 years and was the assistant director for 27 years until her retirement in 2012. Terry was inducted into the New England USSSA Hall of Fame in 2006 as a director. She was also very instrumental in the establishment of the rules in USSSA softball. "TG" was not only passionate about the game of softball but also about the people she was surrounded by; she was a loyal friend as well as a hard worker.

The cost for the Softball Clinic is $25, and includes a t-shirt for each participant. This clinic is for girls entering grades 3-9 and will take place July 14-18th from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The clinic will be held at Mitchell/ McCoy field, Merrymount Park.

Registration can be done online at www.QuincyRec.com or in person at the Quincy Recreation Department, located at One Merrymount Parkway. Registration is on a first come basis. For any questions, call 617-376-1394.

100 Student-Athletes Attend Summit At Granite Links

A collaborative initiative among numerous Quincy School ~ Community Partnership members including Quincy Medical Center Steward Health Care, South Shore YMCA, Stop and Shop, as well as the Mayor's Office and Quincy Public Schools was held recently at Granite Links Golf Course.

The Second Annual Student Athlete Summit was designed and developed to provide an opportunity for the athletic Captains of Quincy Public Schools interscholastic sports teams, as well as other school leaders to collaborate and engage in various elements that affect student athletes and how our leaders will better understand how to interact with their teammates with the subject matter presenters shared with them in four very important sessions.

SECOND ANNUAL Student Athlete Summit at Granite Links Golf Course was attended by athletic captains of the Quincy Public Schools interscholastic sports teams.

Medical professionals from QMC Steward Health Care highlighted Sports injury Prevention and Steroids and Supplements. Presenters from QMC Steward included Dr Amy Brown and Dr Michael Elman.

Quincy Public Schools Health Services Team highlighted nutrition. The discussion was led by Jane Kisielius, RN, Director of QPS Health Services and Georgiana Sullivan, RN, school nurse at Clifford Marshall Elementary School.

The South Shore YMCA conducted and interactive session regarding Team Leadership. Presenters were Eric Snyder, Executive Director, Chrissy Shah, Associate Executive Director, and Phil Gay, Community Outreach and Team Program Director.

"Sports leadership is not only about rallying the team prior to engaging in a sports event, it involves far more than that. It may include conflict resolution, discipline, psychology, and numerous aspects of leadership," said John Fagerlund, Coordinator of the Quincy School ~ Community Partnership in his opening remarks to the gathering of 100 student athlete leaders.

Fagerlund also said, "We hope that the information and resources you, our Athletes and Leaders, will receive, provide you with an important and necessary foundation to successfully undertake the leadership position that you have been selected by your peers to serve as ambassadors in high school college, and beyond."

George Burke Presents $6,000 In Scholarships

Attorney George Burke has presented six $1,000 scholarships for Quincy students to attend the University of Massachusetts.

Three of the students are 2014 graduates of Quincy High School: James Brenick, University of MA-Lowell; Stacy Gallagher, University of MA-Amherst; and Christopher Bock, University of MA-Amherst.

Three students are 2014 graduates of North Quincy High School: Jacqueline Doody, University of MA-Boston; Andrew Keezer, University of MA-Amherst; and Brenda Huynh, University of MA-Boston.

Burke has now given 150 $1,000 scholarships totaling $150,000 to Quincy High School and North Quincy High School students.

Burke also gave $100,000 for the George G. Burke Fitness Center at Quincy High School to be built.

Burke graduated from the University of Massachusetts-Amherst in 1956 and is a generous supporter of the University of Massachusetts. His number 32 is retired in basketball at UMass and the Hall of Fame is named after him - the "George Trigger Burke UMass Hall of Fame."

27 Quincy Residents Riding In Pan-Mass Challenge

On Aug. 2 and 3, 27 residents from Quincy will participate in the 35th annual Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC), the largest single athletic fundraising event in the country.

They will be among 5,800 cyclists who will ride with the collective goal of raising $40 million to support adult and pediatric patient care and cancer research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through the Jimmy Fund.

Taking part in this year's ride from Quincy include:

Interior Decorating Tips

With Barbara Graceffa - 'Secretary Of The Interior

Dear Secretary of the Interior:

I always admire the décor in fancy hotels. What can I do to get that look without spending a fortune on expensive furniture? Gloria

Dear Gloria:

Design is often found in the details … and the architectural moldings, lighting, mirrors, and artwork in a well-designed hotel lobby or lounge are often more striking (or at least more memorable) than the furniture, fabrics, and color selections. For example, paint your ceiling something other than white or paint swirls or stencil it, and add chunky crown molding. Incorporate large pieces of artwork or mirrors or an oversized wall clock. Add sparkle with metalics, statement lamps, and wall sconces. Finally, splurge on a large silk floral arrangement and place it in a position where it will receive the most attention.

I'd like to add a rug to my master bedroom but I don't know what size to buy. I'd appreciate suggestions where to shop as well. Carolyn

Dear Carolyn:

Too often area rugs are like floating islands (i.e. not touching the furniture) and/or too small for the room.

For a master bedroom, the area rug should be wide enough to extend far enough beyond the sides of the bed so that your feet land on it when you get up. At least the foot of the bed should also land on the rug with sufficient extra rug to cover the floor. However, when budget is a concern, I recommend two matching runners or two smaller rugs (like 3x4 feet) placed on the sides of the bed since a larger rug can be very expensive – especially when the majority of it is located under the bed.

You can't beat the selection at a furniture or rug store but don't overlook J.C. Penney or Macy's. If you admire colorful patterned rugs, don't miss my favorite—Company C at Derby Street in Hingham. You might also try the HomeGoods, Christmas Tree Shop, and Target; although their choices are limited, their rugs are stylish and prices quite reasonable.

Most importantly, choose a rug that is comfortable under your bare feet.

City Seeking Responses To Online Solar Panel Survey

The City is encouraging residential and commercial property owners to complete a brief five question survey available at www.quincyma.gov and www.surveymonkey.com/s/MF2GCF7.

The survey is intended to gauge community interest in participating in the State's Solarize Mass program, an initiative that seeks to increase the adoption of small-scale solar electricity by offering below market pricing on solar photovoltaic (PV) panels.

The program is now in its fourth year and to date has led to more than 900 Massachusetts residents and business owners signing contracts for small-scale solar electricity systems. Some local community participants include Andover, Brookline, Medford, Needham, Newton, and Watertown.

Quincy's probability of being selected to participate in the program increases significantly the more survey responses it receives.

The survey will be available online through the end of June. For more information visit http://www.masscec.com/solarizemass.

Fix Busted Gutter Now

Question: Last winter, under the weight of all the snow and ice we had, one part of my roof gutter busted wide open. We actually heard it: The snow inside it had solidified to ice, and the entire block of ice fell out of the now-open side of the gutter in the middle of the night with a loud crash. It looks like just a hinge on the end of the gutter run busted, though. Do you think I can just fix that hinge portion rather than replace the whole section? -- Larry in Melrose, Mass.

Answer: You'll need to take a closer look at the gutter section before making that call, so grab a helper and a sturdy ladder, and climb up there -- being careful not to set your ladder next to any power lines or other hazards.

Gutters will give way or even tear away under extreme stress, like an ice dam forming in or around them. In a way, it's better for them to give way than cause severe damage to your roof eaves. But the damage usually requires the entire section to be replaced.

You can patch the gutter temporarily if the end can be repaired (using a bit of wire or a screw to reattach the point that gave way) and the rest of the run is not seriously warped or torn. Make sure there are no leaf- or debris dams in the gutter run, so that it can drain freely during rainstorms.

Once the patch is made, you need to plan on replacing it before this coming winter. The gutter section was weakened by the ice dam, and it likely won't drain as well, will collect debris, and won't hold up to another load of snow and ice.

You also need to check the roof eaves and soffits near the damaged section. Any damage to these critical roof components needs to be addressed so that water and pests don't get into the house through tears or holes, and so that the area can continue to support your gutter system.

You also should consider installing gutter covers along the entire run, and look into the feasibility of installing ice and snow guards along the edge of the roof to reduce the chance of ice dams forming in the first place. Do an energy audit of your home (many utility companies offer a low-cost audit or audit kit) to find out where heat may be escaping -- warm spots near the gutters or roof eaves can cause snow to melt and then refreeze, leading to ice buildup.

HOME TIP: A dab of roofing cement can quickly patch small holes in gutter runs, keeping water flowing away from your house until a permanent repair can be made.

Groundbreaking For Congregation Beth Shalom

After three years of searching for a new spiritual home, members and guests of Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills will break ground for a new synagogue on a new road, Shoolman Way, off Lodge Street in Milton, on Sunday, June 22nd at 4 p.m. The bucolic location for the new building was donated to the congregation by Marvin and Andrea Gordon, and it has a singular historical significance.

Mr. Gordon's grandparents, Bertha and Samuel Shoolman, were the first Jewish family to purchase property in the town of Milton in 1920. Mr. Shoolman farmed the 10 acres of land, producing and distributing kosher milk for 29 years. The Gordon family continues to live elsewhere on the property in a house they built in 1965.

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills brings together two venerable synagogues, Temple Shalom of Milton and Temple Beth El of Quincy. The small congregation's administration, social and cultural activities, religious services, and school have been conducted in four separate locations in and around Milton since 2011, when the congregation left its former location. Its new home on Shoolman Way will bring back together all of the congregation's activities under one new roof.

The groundbreaking ceremony, which will feature remarks from Rabbi Alfred Benjamin, congregants and officials, will symbolize a new era of hope and optimism for the local Jewish community. The public is welcome to join the Congregation in this joyous event.

There will be no parking on Lodge Street – drop-offs only. Parking will be available at St. Elizabeth's Church on the corner of Randolph Avenue and Reedsdale Road, or the Milton Cemetery on Gun Hill Street. Shoolman Way is a short walk from both parking locations. Attendees are advised to dress appropriately for a wooded setting.

Residents interested in Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills' services, events and activities are invited to call 617-698-3394 or visit BethShalomBlueHills.org for information.

OBITUARIES

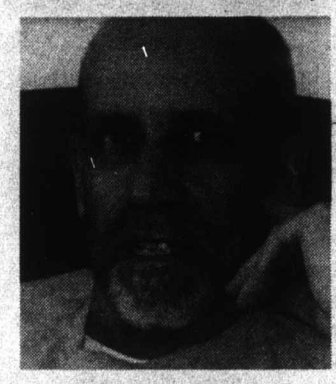
Kirk E. DeMole, 56

A funeral service for Kirk E. DeMole, 56, of Randolph will be held today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mr. DeMole died June 12 surrounded by his loving family after battling cholangiocarcinoma for four years.

He graduated from Norfolk Aggie and was involved with the Koch Club with bowling, basketball, and baseball. He was a well-respected maintenance mechanic at First Realty Management for 35 years and was everyone's 'go-to guy.'

He enjoyed watching NASCAR racing, traveling to New Hampshire to relax and watch the boats, and traveling to Disney World with his wife. What he will be remembered most by was his kindness and humor. Every person and animal Mr. DeMole met was instantly drawn to him. He was a practical joker and could always make people laugh. His family was the light of his life, especially his grandchildren.



KIRK E. DeMOLE

Beloved husband of Lucy (Dutra) DeMole of Randolph. Loving son of Gary and Joan (Maynard) DeMole of Weymouth. Devoted father to Albert Stowe of East Boston and Michelle Stowe of Oregon. Loving "Grandpa" to Marissa, Aaliyah, Josh, Kenny, Basima and LaToya. Cherished brother of Kreg DeMole and his wife Lisa of Plymouth. Loving uncle of Michael and Kevin DeMole of Plymouth.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at the funeral home.

Ellen M. Gamache, 88

A funeral Mass for Ellen M. "Oni" (Walsh) Gamache, 88, of Houghs Neck will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 9 a.m. in Holy Trinity Parish, Most Blessed Sacrament Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Gamache died Sunday at Royal Rehab in Braintree.

Born in Cambridge where she was raised and educated, she worked at Pewter Pot for a time and at Jordan Marsh for 19 years before retiring. A member of the Lady's Sodality at Most Blessed Sacrament Church, she was also a founding member of her sewing circle.

Beloved wife of the late Robert H. Gamache. Loving mother of Gabrunde Monfield of Quincy, Elizabeth "Beth" Felipe and her husband Chagas of NH, Monica Dougenik of Quincy and the late Raymond Gamache. Dear grandmother of Sarah and Jackie of Quincy. Beloved sister of Katherine C. Walsh of Quincy and the late Thomas C. Walsh and William Walsh. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were 4-7 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy. Gathering at the funeral home at 8 a.m. today, prior to the Mass.

Interment at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne, at 1 p.m. today.

Memorial donations may be made to Royal Rehab & Nursing Center, 95 Commercial St., Braintree, MA 02184.

Morrisette Legion (5-1) In First Place them. This was the one that counted."

Desmond, who threw hard from the left side, went the first 5 1/3 for his second strong effort in two starts. He also showed a sharp curve, and gave six hits, two earned runs and fanned seven. Suslowicz picked up his first win to go along with three saves. He entered the game with the bases loaded and one out in the top of the sixth. Two unearned runs scored on an infield error, but Suslowicz showed his usual radar-like control to retire four of the last five batters.

"Cody just finished his sophomore year in high school, but he impresses me each time I see him," said maze. "Suslowicz is my man at the end of games. He's the one I'm going to in the late innings of close games."

Bobby Salvucci walked, singled, was on base three times and scored two runs. He was also outstanding defensively at first base. In the first, he made a catch in foul territory going a full gallop with his back to the plate. In the fourth, he dove headlong into the fence to catch a popup. He made a great pick of a low throw for the first out in the seventh to keep the tying run from coming to the plate with Morrisette up by two runs.

Nick Valencenti hit the ball hard. He had a single, walk, scored and drove in a run. Andrew Currie had two hits, a run scored, an RBI and made two fine catches in the gaps in the center field. Pekkinen had a triple and a run scored. Joe Ferracane played a sold defensive game behind the plate.

"Salvucci is a good ball player because he's worked at it. Currie gets a great jump on the ball in center, and Valencenti is just an excellent player," said Maze.

After Stoughton went up, 2-0 in the third, Morrisette drew within a run in the bottom of the inning when Salvucci walked and scored on a throwing error. Morrisette went ahead 4-2 with three in the fourth. Pekkinen, Valencenti, Currie and Josh Hayward had key hits in the rally.

After Stoughton tied it 4-4 in the top of the sixth, Salvucci and Currie singled to set it up for Munroe who won it with a shot into right center for two RBI and the 6-4 final.

In the Milton win, Pekkinen had three hits and three runs scored. Riley and Valencenti each had a pair of RBI while Hayward had two hits.

Against Hyde Park, Eddie Riley had three hits and two RBI. Munroe and Tyler Beach each drove in a pair of runs.

Beach, Munroe, and Pekkinen each had a hit and scored in a three-run third which gave Sorensen all he needed in the win over Braintree.

"A few nights ago, someone asked me who was our best player," said Maze. "I said we didn't have one. We have a lot of good players who are playing great baseball. That has made for an excellent start for us."

Quincy hosted Canton Wednesday night at 8 p.m.

Three Wins For Wollaston Sr. Babe Ruth

ning. Nick Kelly chipped in with a double and two RBI while Bill Campbell walked twice and scored a run. One inning, many runs, many hits, many players involved. Just right.

"Feinberg is an excellent hitter when he keeps a nice, level swing. Cooper has been pounding the ball since the second half of the Quincy High season," said Reardon. "Pugsley is a good hitter, and I think he's the best defensive shortstop in the league. Campbell hit over .370 for us last year. Geaney and Kerin (two walks, a run scored) are excellent in the outfield."

Catcher Johnny Marsinelli had two hits, a stolen base, a run scored and an RBI for the game. He also handled two tough popups into the dark skies in the seventh. He combines with Pugsley (shortstop), Cooper (second) and Geaney (center) to give Wollaston strong defense up the middle.

"Johnny always gets a couple of hits and catches a good game," said Reardon. "Our defense up the middle is very good."

The big lead gave Reardon a chance to use his younger players. Ben Regan, Alex Linskey, Phil Czajkowski, Anthony Gustin, Joe Dwyer, and Sammy Keane all saw action. In the Wollaston sixth, Czajkowski beat out an infield hit, took third on a Geaney double and scored on a ground ball by Dwyer.

"It was good to get a lot of players involved. That's what the whole game is about," said Reardon.

Wollaston (3-1) hosts Tri-Town Thursday at Adams Field at 5:30 p.m.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Get your facts together and become familiar with them before you have to face up to that interview. The better prepared you are, the easier it will be to make that important impression.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) New information might warrant changing your mind about a recently made decision. Never mind the temporary confusion it might cause. Acting on the truth is always preferable.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Creating a loving atmosphere for those you care for could pay off in many ways. Expect to hear some unexpected but very welcome news that can make a big difference in your life.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Stepping away from an old and seemingly insoluble problem might be helpful. Use the time to take a new look at the situation and perhaps work out a new method of dealing with it.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're still in a favorable goal-setting mode. However, you might need to be a little more realistic about some of your aims. Best to reach for what is currently doable. The rest will follow.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A setback is never easy to deal with. But it could be a boon in disguise. Recheck your proposal, and strengthen the weak spots. Seek advice from someone who has "been there and done that."
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Coming up with a new way of handling a tedious job-regulated chore could lead to more than just a congratulatory memo once the word reaches the "right people." Good luck.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) What you might call determination someone else might regard as stubbornness. Look for ways to reach a compromise that won't require a major shift of views on your part.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You're still in a vulnerable mode vis-a-vis "offers" that sound too good to be true. So continue to be skeptical about anything that can't be backed up with provable facts.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Thrift is still dominant this week. What you don't spend on what you don't need will be available for you to draw on should a possible (albeit temporary) money crunch hit.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Staying close to home early in the week allows for some introspection about your social life. Sort out your feelings before rejoining your fun-time fellows on the weekend.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It can be a bit daunting as well as exciting to find yourself finally taking action on a long-delayed move for a change. It helps to stay with it when others rally to support you.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of home and family provide you with the emotional support you need to find success in the outside world.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Quincy Catholic Academy Dedicates 'Fr. John O'Brien Playground'

QUINCY CATHOLIC ACADEMY recently dedicated its new playground in honor of Fr. John O'Brien (right). With Fr. O'Brien is QCA Principal Cathy Cameron.

Quincy Catholic Academy recently dedicated its new school playgound in honor of Father John O'Brien in recognition of his tremendous support to the Roman Catholic School based in Quincy.

"The influence you have had on all of us at QCA over the past four years cannot be measured," said Principal Cathy Cameron at the "Father John O'Brien Playground" ceremonial unveiling. "I know that personally to me you have been kind, supportive, and inspirational.

"Your joy knows no bounds. You are truly doing the work of God on Earth, and all of us feel we have met Jesus," Cameron said. "We wanted to be sure that your joyful, positive spirit will remain at QCA forever. We wanted to be sure that every student who goes through QCA knows the name Father O'Brien and knows how special he was to us.

"You will be forever in our hearts," she added.

Students helped to uncover the new sign and brought hand-hand cards showing what Father O'Brien means to them.

Along with the mant cards was a poem written by Grade 3:

"He says 'Hi' in the school yard, he visits QCA.

"He goes to concerts, field days, and even all the plays!

"Although he is so busy, he comes to graduations.

"Because he is so happy, he says, 'Congratulations!'

"He is always in a good mood, he's always feeling 'Terrific!' 'Awesome!' 'Outstanding.'

"He says, 'God is good.'

"But the most important thing about Father O'Brien is he made QCA a better school.'

New Safety Plans For HN Bonfire

Crackdown On Underage Drinking, Use Of Fireworks July 3rd

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's Police and Fire Departments are stepping up their efforts to ensure public safety at this year's Third of July bonfire in Houghs Neck.

Police Chief Paul Keenan and Fire Chief Joseph Barron spoke about the new safety plans for the Edgewood Drive bonfire at a recent community meeting organized by Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest.

Keenan said July 3 is one of the three nights he is most concerned about each year, along with the day before Thanksgiving and New Year's Eve. The bonfire, he said, has grown in recent years. So has the number of people in attendance, particularly those from

Even in his youth, Patrick P. Glynn knew he wanted to go into a profession where he could help people. And he has done just that.

Since 2010, Detective Lieutenant Glynn of the Quincy Police Dept. has been instrumental in saving the lives of 269 people who would otherwise have been victims of fatal substance-abuse overdoses.

As Commander of the Special Investigations & Narcotics Unit, Glynn passionately pursued a program which would allow a drug called Naloxone to be administered by the first responders of the QPD.

More commonly known as Narcan and administered nasally, this drug can reverse the effects

Housing Authority Inspections Seen Into December

Some Units Unsafe, Unsanitary

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) officials will be inspecting Quincy Housing Authority units well into December following an initial inspection that revealed unsafe and unsanitary living conditions according to testimony at last Wednesday's meeting of the Quincy Housing Authority.

"The things that I have seen are extremely concerning and the physical conditions are very bad," said Director of Facilities Management for the DHCD James Marathas.

Inspections of 10 percent of Quincy's state-aided public housing units and common areas conducted on March 31, April 1, and April 3 this year revealed subpar living conditions in need of immediate repair according to Marathas.

"As a result of those inspections DHCD issued a report and a request for a direct action plan for the Quincy Housing Author-

New Grass Turf At O'Neil Field

The reconstruction of O'Neil Field, one in a series of park improvements planned by Mayor Tom Koch's administration, is reaching its final phases with the installation of new grass turf at the Atlantic Middle School site of the field.

The Park Department has completed demolition of the existing back stop and fencing around the north end of the field. The sub-grade work and irrigation has been finished, and installation of sod will give the field an approximate three month window to grow in before the beginning of the fall athletic season.

The field will be outfitted with bleachers, a score board, new landscaping improvements along the north side of the field, and netting to protect the school building.

As part of the project major drainage improvements have been made that will benefit residents in the neighborhood. The entrance to the school will also be reconfigured, allowing for an easier and safer flow of traffic in and out of the school.

Landscaping improvements will be made to the front of the building as well. Construction on the entryway to the school is slated to begin after school ends, and the project will be completed in time for the beginning of school in September.

City Shares Appraisals With 9 NQ Homeowners

Accessed Value Of Properties: $3.1 Million

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city is moving ahead with its plans to take nine homes to make way for a new parking lot and renovated athletics facilities for North Quincy High School.

City Solicitor Jim Timmins said Tuesday his office shared the appraisals with the owners of the nine homes on Hunt Street and Newbury Avenue after the City Council voted to approve the $12 million project. The city will also pay residents to have a professional review each appraisal.

"We have provided each resident with a copy," Timmins said. "They can have the appraisal looked at then we will talk about the prices."

Timmins said he has met with four or five of the homeowners in the week since the council authorized the project, adding several of the homeowners have already begun to look for new homes. Last week, Timmins told the council the city would provide up to six months worth of rent for the displaced residents – including homeowners and tenants – if they cannot find new places to live before that.

The solicitor on Tuesday declined to reveal how much the properties were appraised for, but the nine properties have combined

HOW DOES YOUR JEWELRY STACK UP?

While there is certainly something to be said for looking demure and elegant in a black dress topped with a diamond pendant necklace held in place just above the collarbone by a shimmering gold chain, there are times when more is called for. With this in mind, women continue to display a preference for stacked rings and bracelets as well as layers of chains about their necks. After all, why wear only one ring, bracelet, or necklace when several will do even better? This "more-is-more" approach is reflective of the freedom that women enjoy to express themselves to the fullest extent possible. Compiling a jewelry wardrobe is now as much about accumulating collections as it is about having individual pieces.

When you mix high contrast styles such as earthy beads, mother-of-pearl bangles, and a rhinestone wrap bracelet, bracelets of similar sizes work in perfect harmony. Delicate chains go with chunky beads. When you break all the old fashion rules layering different styles for brand-new looks, just be sure they are different lengths so each one stands out. Select the perfect silver and gold jewelry to fit your taste for necklaces, bracelets, earrings, or pendants at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636.

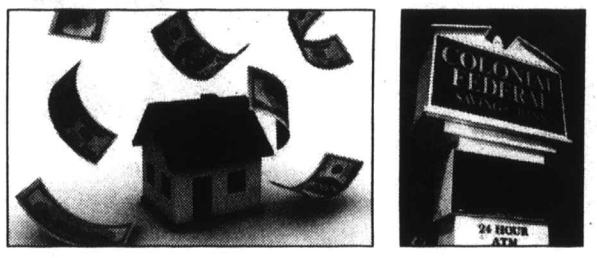
A better way to get money from your house



A good idea ... from Colonial Federal Savings Bank
You have a house with lots of equity. Good cash flow. Investments you don't want to touch right now. And you have something you want money for. What's the best way to get it? How about a 15-Year refinance from Colonial Federal? With fixed monthlypayments, it's more predictable than an adjustable-rate home equity line. Way less expensive than credit cards. And you'll have it all paid off in 15 short years... quicker if you make extra payments along the way. Would a 15-Year refinance be good for you? Call Angela Blanchard, VP/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

Battleship Cove's Quincy Connections

If you're a U.S. Navy history buff and appreciate the significant role that shipbuilding in Quincy played during World War II, you'll enjoy a new book written by a local author.

"Images of America – Battleship Cove" by Quincy's James Gay highlights the non-profit maritime museum and war memorial in Fall River. The 127-page book is also sure to rekindle fond memories of the Quincy Fore River Shipyard. During its hey-days in World War II, Fore River was one of the most prolific shipyards in the country. The yard built more than 200 ships during the World War II years and at the height of its production in 1943, Fore River employed 32,000 workers – including 1,200 women.

Quincy's connections to Battleship Cove run deep. Two of the museum's main attractions – the battleship Massachusetts and destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. – were built at the former Fore River Shipyard. Today, they are among the few surviving Quincy-built ships from the World War II era.

Gay says he wrote "Battleship Cove" because he has a deep appreciation for those who have served our country and those who built some of the mightiest vessels in U.S. history.

"The Massachusetts and Kennedy both represent the hard work that went into building them. They were built to withstand war and they are still afloat. They are symbols of fighting for our country and our freedom," Gay said in a recent interview.

Battleship Cove is the Commonwealth's official War Memorial to citizens of Massachusetts killed in World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. It opened in August 1965 with the USS Massachusetts and will mark its 50th anniversary next year.

The book is a pictorial history that features some never-before-published images, including personal photographs from former crew members. Gay did extensive research for the book that took about a year and half to complete.

Research included going through the archives on the Massachusetts. "They have albums of ship photographs and I literally scanned the photos and wrote the captions," he said. Some of those images and Gay's descriptions appear on Pages 28 and 29.

"I loved doing the research and I learned so much. I met former crew members of the Kennedy – they invited me to their reunions.

"This book was a labor of love. If it were up to me, every ship would have a book about its history and the people who were on it including crew members," he adds.

The USS Massachusetts and Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. are floating museums of a bygone era. Both ships represent the proud and storied history of shipbuilding right here in Quincy.

Launched Sept. 23, 1941, the Massachusetts or "Big Mamie" was sponsored by Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of a former secretary of the Navy. The Massachusetts was still being outfitted at Fore River Shipyard when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941. She was commissioned in Boston on May 12, 1942, joined the Atlantic fleet and then was reassigned to the Pacific fleet in 1943.

She was used for anti-aircraft fire against Japanese planes, escorted aircraft carriers and assisted shore bombardment in destroying enemy troop concentrations.

"She was off Okinawa and Iwo Jima – she was part of some major battles," Gay says, noting she is the only battleship from the South Dakota class that remains.

The Massachusetts's armament includes nine 16-inch guns. The ship has the distinction of being the first and last ship to fire 16-inch guns in World War II. Classes of earlier battleships featured smaller armaments such as 14-inch guns.

The Kennedy also has a storied past.

The Gearing-class destroyer was named for Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. – the oldest child of Rose and Joseph Kennedy, Sr. The father was an assistant manager of the Quincy Shipyard during World War I.

The eldest of nine children, Joe Kennedy, Jr., was a lieutenant and naval aviator. He was killed Aug. 12, 1944 on a flying mission over the United Kingdom.

The brother of future President John F. Kennedy did a month of training out at the former Squantum Naval Air Station in 1942. After he was killed, the destroyer was named for him. Members of the Kennedy family attended the ship's christening at the shipyard.

The Kennedy was launched at the Fore River Shipyard near the end of World War II on July 26, 1945. The sister of Lt. Kennedy – Miss Jean Kennedy – was the ship sponsor.

The Kennedy was launched Dec. 15, 1945 after World War II was over but she played an integral role during the Korean War, helping to screen aircraft carriers as they attacked positions in North Korea.

Gay also notes the Kennedy was part of the Sixth Fleet that patrolled the Mediterranean Sea. She helped stabilize the region and keep the peace during the Cold War.

She also has this distinction: the Kennedy was the only Navy ship to stop and board a Russian chartered merchant ship during the blockade of Cuba in the Cuban Missile Crisis in October, 1962.

Gay is not only an author but he belongs to the Joseph P. Kennedy Volunteers – a group that is trying to save the Kennedy. He said the ship could require emergency dry-docking and undergo a $14 million project to refurbish her hull.

"These ships are enormously expensive to maintain," Gay points out. "Their upkeep includes painting and removing rust. You have to stay ahead of that rust because once that happens, it just eats away at it."

Battleship Cove is a non-profit museum and receives no state or federal funding.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 9, 1777, New York elects Brig. Gen. George Clinton as the first governor of the independent state of New York. Clinton's career was marked by his hatred of British loyalists, called Tories. He kept the public's tax burden low by confiscating and selling land belonging to Tories to maintain state coffers.

• On July 7, 1865, Mary Surratt is executed for her role as a conspirator in Abraham Lincoln's assassination. Surratt's boardinghouse, a few blocks from Ford's Theatre, where Lincoln was murdered, served as the place where a group of Confederate supporters conspired to assassinate the president.

• On July 8, 1898, notorious con man "Soapy" Smith is murdered in Skagway, Alaska. Smith earned his nickname "Soapy" selling bars of soap wrapped in blue tissue paper. He promised crowds that a few lucky purchasers would find a $100 bill wrapped inside the $5 bars of soap.

• On July 13, 1951, rivers across eastern Kansas crest well above flood stage, and 500,000 people are left homeless. Two million acres of farmlands were lost. In addition, the flooding caused fires and explosions in refinery oil tanks on the banks of the Kansas River.

• On July 11, 1960, novelty song "Alley Oop" tops the Billboard pop chart. Alley Oop was the name of a time-traveling caveman in a comic strip of the same name created in 1932 by cartoonist V.T. Hamlin.

• On July 12, 1984, Walter Mondale, Democratic presidential candidate, announces that he has chosen Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate, the first woman nominated by a major party for the vice presidency.

• On July 10, 1992, the Alaska court of appeals overturns the conviction of Joseph Hazelwood, the former captain of the oil tanker Exxon Valdez. Hazelwood, who was found guilty of negligence for his role in the massive oil spill in Prince William Sound in 1989, successfully argued that he was entitled to immunity from prosecution because he had reported the oil spill to authorities 20 minutes after the ship ran aground.

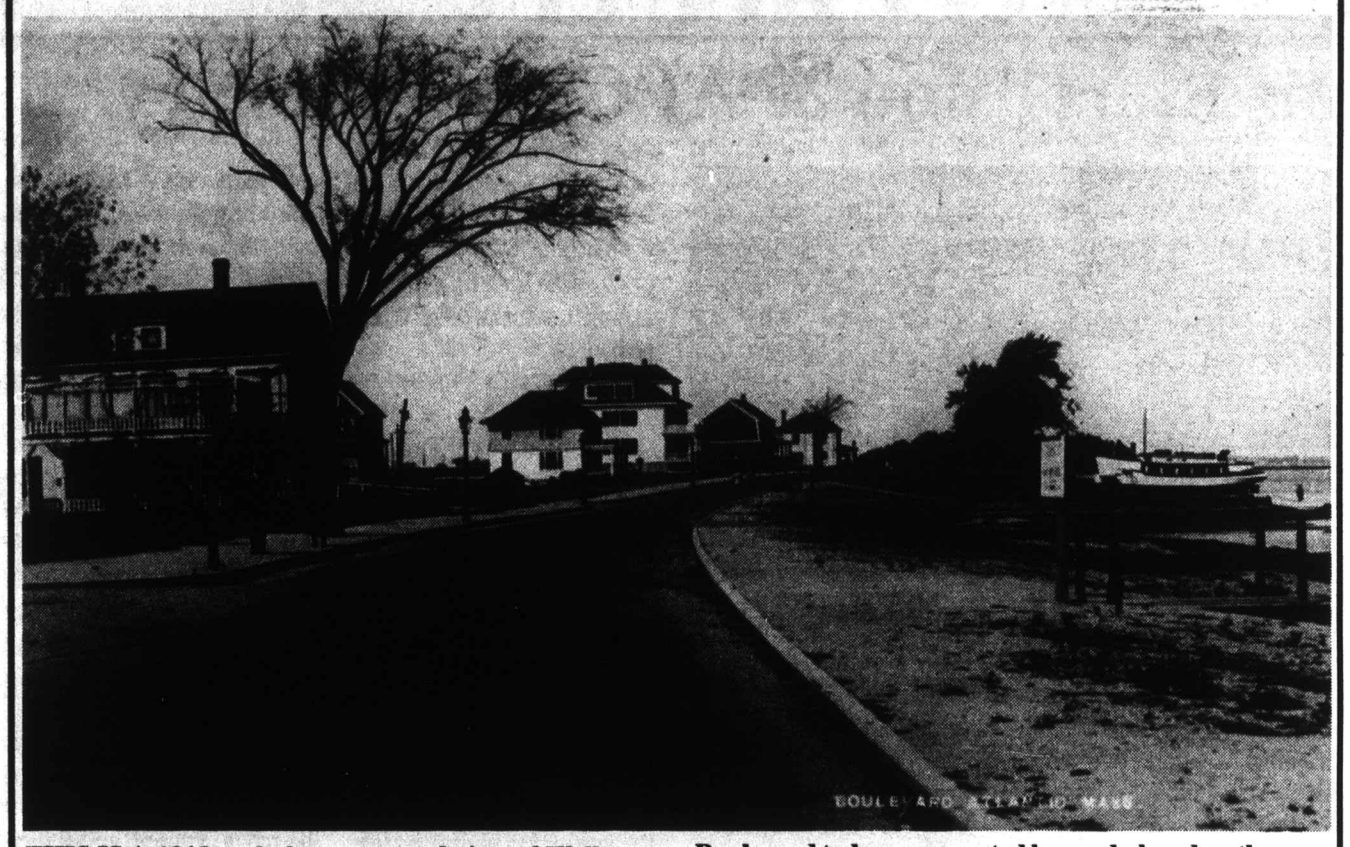
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1918 real photo postcard view of Wollaston Boulevard from the end of Atlantic Street looking north to Squantum Street. The road had been built 10 years before and was still little used by cars at the time. Today, the road is rarely seen without cars as it is an important commuter route to Boston. Before the road was built through here this was only one of three sections along the shore that could be called a beach; the rest was pretty much marshland and mudflats. The beach along the Boulevard today was created by sand placed on the water side of the roadway when it was built, essentially as a dike. On the right is a pier known then as Moswetuset Landing that reached out over the mudflats to floats for boats belonging to the neighbors. The large boats in the right distance would have seemingly required a pretty high tide to get out of there on their own. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

4 Challenge Brett For State Rep. Seat

By SCOTT JACKSON

Four candidates filed nomination papers to challenge veteran state Rep. Joseph E. Brett for the Third Norfolk District seat he held for the past 18 years.

Filing nomination papers to challenge Brett were Michael W. Morrissey of Colby Road, Alley E. McInnis of Shoreham Street, John L. McIntyre of Ocean Street, and Jens E. Thornton of Orchard Street.

Quincy's other three state representatives – Thomas Brownell, Robert Cerasoli, and James A. Sheets – had no challengers.

It appeared state Sen. Arthur H. Tobin would go unopposed as well. Attorney Joseph Killion of Quincy was reportedly gathering signatures for a run, but did not file in Quincy by the deadline. He said he was still contemplating running, and reportedly had taken out nomination papers in Braintree, collecting 2,000 signatures there.

DALY RETIRING AFTER 36 YEARS WITH QPS

Maurice J. Daly, the School Department's assistant superintendent for occupational students, said he was retiring.

Daly first joined the school system as auto mechanics teacher at the Quincy Trade School in 1940. He became assistant director of the trade school in 1954, the school's director in 1957, and assistant superintendent in 1964.

As assistant superintendent he was directly responsible for $7.5 million Quincy Vocational-Technical School, which in 1976 had an enrollment of 1,180 students and employed 72 teachers. That was vastly different from when Daly began teaching.

"We were in a wing out in the back of the high school," Daly explained. The faculty had only 12 members. There were about 200 students. People thought of it as a school for misfits who couldn't do academic work."

"It's very competitive just to get into the school now," he added. "We have long waiting lists. The whole tenor of the times has changed. Employment training is fast turning into the mainstream of education."

Daly was instrumental for developing the so-called 'cluster' concept of vocational training, which became a model for similar schools throughout the country and the world. Under the concept, a plumbing student, for example, would learn about similar trades in the piping family – HVAC, steam fitting, etc. – before specializing in plumbing.

A Vibrant Downtown Remains Achievable

I understand the concerns expressed by many citizens, business owners, and some elected officials over the recent shake-up in the Downtown Redevelopment Project.

However, in my experience of financing and coordinating projects around the world, the situation with Street-Works is not unprecedented, and certainly not a fatal blow to the long term success of the overall project.

I would agree that the best approach in moving forward is to partner with multiple developers and investor groups on an individual block basis, which will ultimately prove more doable, manageable, and provides the city with a greater level of control to complete the entire project in a more timely and cost effective manner.

Therefore, I believe a more attractive and vibrant downtown city center remains achievable.

Clean Up Job Well Done

Last weekend, I attended my 20th Flag Day parade. As has always been, the festivities and the fireworks were splendid.

But equally impressive was the clean up job done afterwards. I drove past a good part of the parade route, and was at Pageant Field on each of the two days following the parade, and there was hardly a trace of a major event having taken place.

Kudos to the DPW and the Parks Department on a job well done.

'Memories Of My Uncle'

Editor's Note:

The following poem was written by Paul Nisula in 1984 in honor of his uncle, Private Edwin Kauko Nisula, who served his country with Company I, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division, First Army.

Pvt. Nisula gave his life at St. Lo on 3 July 1944 and rests with nine thousand others at the cemetery of St. Laurent Sur Mer on the coast of Normandy.

The families are Quincy natives raised and schooled in the city.

This year, Paul's Uncle Edwin would have celebrated his 100th birthday.

I, his nephew was only three when my uncle in the Infantry at the age of thirty from the English Nation crossed the Channel for that great invasion

Omaha Beach was one fateful place some of the soldiers had to face seasick, scared and apprehensive in boats across beaches up that awful cliff friends and foes had to fall and die on roads through fields and hedgerows high my uncle died near the town St. Lo during one of many battles so long ago and now he sleeps so peacefully near the beaches and cliffs of Normandy.

Summer Programs Start June 27 At Crane Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Library

Are you looking for ways to keep busy this summer? Check out the dozens of programs available at the Thomas Crane Public Library beginning June 27th as we participate in the nationwide summer reading adventure, "Fizz, Boom, Read."

The Thomas Crane Public Library's summer library adventure is two full months of fun for children of all ages. Meet a singing scientist and giant tree frog, watch puppet shows, blow bubbles, listen to storytellers tell tales that are out of this world, show your creativity with crafts, try your hand at science experiments, participate in pajama storytimes, watch magic shows and movies all for free this summer at the library.

Each week this summer we will be featuring a different science topic on our blog Books and Beyond. Check our blog each Monday for websites to explore experiments to perform at home and books to read. This week learn about some basic science principles and get ready for a summer of science fun. Next week learn about plants.

The library offers programs for children of all ages; details are available on the library's website thomascranelibrary.org. Information about all of the summer programs will also be handed out at the kickoff event on Friday, June 27th.

Summer Reading Challenges

Summer is a great time to read together as a family. No matter what your age we have a summer reading challenge that is just right for you. Ready Readers, a read to me program for toddlers and preschoolers is designed to give parents and young children plenty of opportunities to practice the building blocks of early literacy, Rainbow Readers gives younger elementary school children plenty of practice reading on their own or listening to parents read aloud as they explore the alphabet Planetary Explorers for upper elementary and middle school students broadens reading choices by suggesting some new and untried genres.

Families can pick up reading challenge logs at the library or print them off our website.

TOE JAM Puppet Band will perform Friday, June 27 at 10 a.m. on the front lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Summer Kickoff with the Toe Jam Puppet Band

Get ready to take a rocket ship to outer space with the Toe Jam Puppet Band on Friday, June 27th at 10 a.m. on the front lawn at the main library. All aboard!... Countdown...4-3-2-1-zero... Blast off! ... into outer space with the band.

The show features a spacey dress-up puppet show and some crazy anti-gravity dancing! This high energy show will get you in the mood for a summer full of fantastic science fun.

This program is suitable for a wide age range from preschoolers to school age children accompanied by an adult.

The show will go on come rain or shine; in case of inclement weather we will move into the atrium.

This program is for children of all ages and their families and is sponsored by The Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Also on Friday, June 27th come see us at the opening day of the Quincy Farmer's Market in the Hancock Parking Lot (across from the courthouse) where we will be telling stories from 12 to 12:30 p.m., weather permitting.

Check out the shady spots for a big blue blanket and you'll be sure to find us. Stop by to say hello, pick up summer program information and hear a story or two. We'll be here every Friday, weather permitting.

Art-to-go is a 9 week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Supplies for the week's project will be available on Mondays at the Main Library; Tuesdays at Adams Shore; Wednesdays at North Quincy and on Thursdays at Wollaston so stop by anytime from 2 to 4 p.m. and make a craft.

Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane.

Project for the week of June 30 – Fireworks sculpture.

Children's Movie: LEGO Movie

Join us on Tuesday, July 1st at 10 a.m. in the Main Library Large Meeting Room to see The LEGO Movie. This original 3D computer animated story follows Emmet, an ordinary, rules-following, perfectly average LEGO minifigure who is mistakenly identified as the most extraordinary person and the key to saving the world. He is drafted into a fellowship of strangers on an epic quest to stop an evil tyrant, a journey for which Emmet is hopelessly and hilariously underprepared.

Rated: PG Run Time 101 minutes. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Registration for Summer Programs

Most summer library programs do not require registration but the following five do because of space limitations. Beginning Tuesday, July 1st, register online, in person at the library or by calling the Children's Room at 617-376-2411.

Due to space limitations, these programs are limited to Quincy residents. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Tin Can Robot Craft on Friday, July 18th at 3 p.m. at the Main Library for ages 8+.

Get your creative juices flowing and try your hand at constructing a robot out of recycled can, nuts, bolts, and magnets. We will be using hot glue guns, hammers and nails in our constructions.

Science in the Kitchen on Thursday, July 24th at 2:30 p.m. at Adams Shore for ages 8+.

Have you ever thought of your kitchen as a science laboratory? It can be. Use science to make candy, cake, ice cream and more.

Explore the Night Sky on Friday, July 25th at 11 a.m. at the Main Library for ages 6-10.

Share stories and activities about the night sky and constellations. There will be trivia, games, and a constellation nightlight craft to take home.

Sharpie Tie-Dye Craft on Thursday, Aug. 7th at 2 p.m. at Adams Shore for ages 8+.

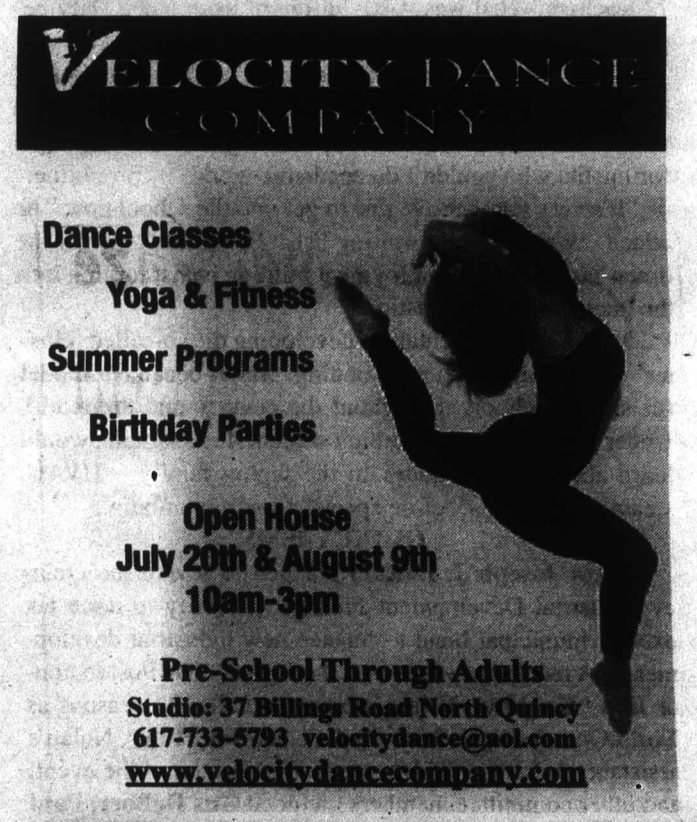
Use science to create a fireworks design on a white t-shirt. Sharpie markers and a rubbing alcohol combine to create amazing tie-dye designs. Each child is asked to bring a plain white cotton t-shirt with them to decorate. If it is a new shirt be sure to wash it first.

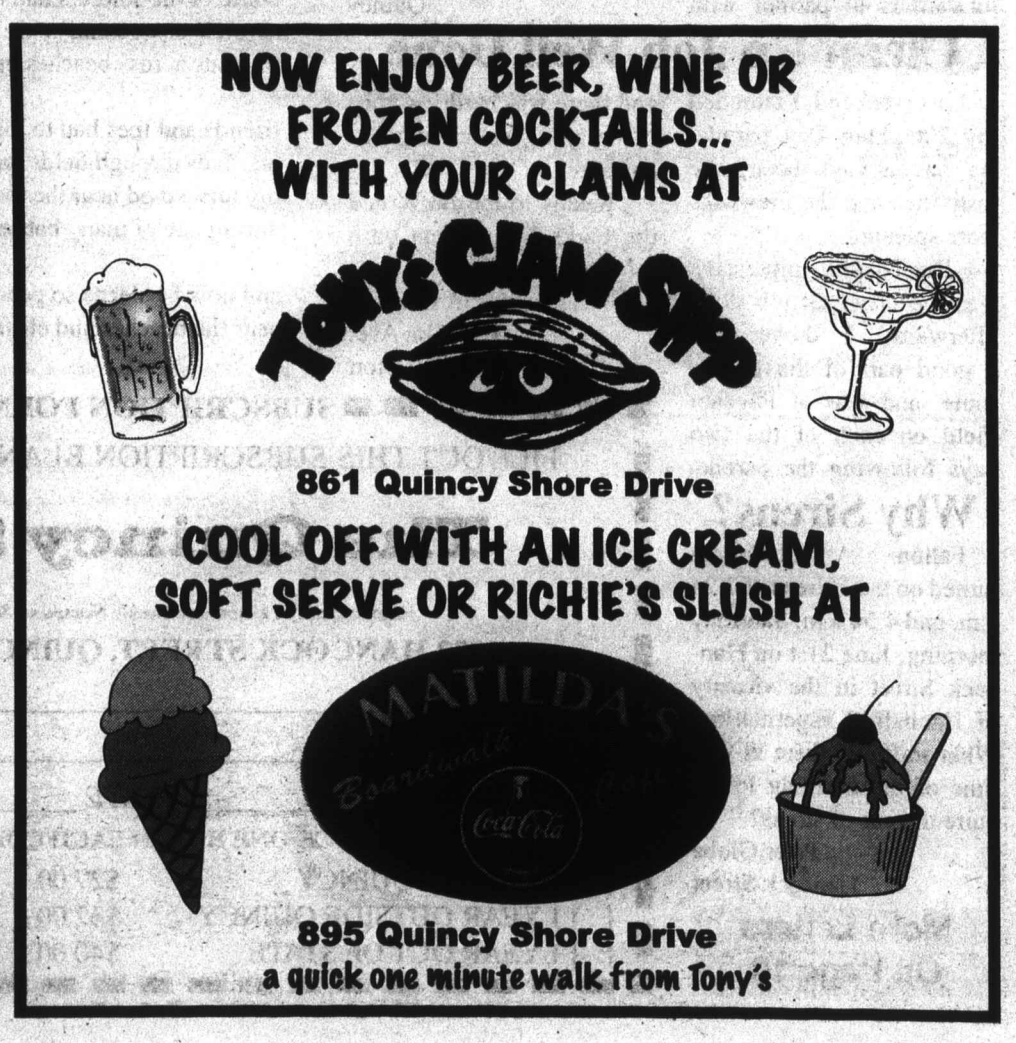
Aug. 27th at 6:30 p.m. Talent show for ages 4-13 at Main Library.

7th Annual Summer Talent Show on Wednesday, Aug. 27th at 6:30 p.m. at the Main Library - for performers ages 4-13.

Do you sing, dance, play an instrument or have another talent you would like to demonstrate?

All ages welcome to watch the show but you must be ages 4 – 13 to perform. If you would like to perform you must sign up in advance and space is limited.





Adams Park To Celebrate Independence Day

The Adams National Historical Park will host several programs and activities in celebration of Independence Day.

• "Independence Forever: The Continental Congress - Pledge your Life, Fortune, and Sacred Honor!" will take place Friday, July 4 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. at the 1870 Adams Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

Become a delegate to the Second Continental Congress and reenact the passage of the Declaration of Independence on July 4th in the Adams Carriage House. Join the "band of brothers" who changed the course of history in 1776 and sign the historic document.

This interactive and engaging event is an invitation to adults and children to take part in the momentous occasion that John Adams recalled as the "great anniversary festival" that will be celebrated by "bonfires and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other from this time forward forever more."

• "The Reading of the Declaration of Independence" will be held Friday, July 4 from 3:30 to 4 p.m.

Join the delegates to the Continental Congress, celebrate liberty, and lend your voice to the ceremonial reading of the Declaration of Independence.

• "Jefferson & Adams: A Stage Play" is also set for Friday, July 4 from 4 to 6 p.m. under the tent at the Beale House, 181 Adams St., Quincy.

Witness a compelling dramatization of the extraordinary friendship between two American Presidents, Thomas Jefferson and John Adams, and Adams' "dearest friend" Abigail.

Acclaimed Colonial Williamsburg re-enactors Bill Barker and Abigail Schumann and veteran actor Sam Goodyear return to Peace field to bring to life the fifty-year friendship - often contentious, sometimes turbulent, and ultimately enduring - of this dynamic trio who hold forth on life, love, and loss in their now-famous correspondence. This critically-acclaimed play, written by Howard Ginsberg and performed by veteran actors, illuminates the lives and times of three indomitable characters who clashed over foreign entanglements, domestic politics, and the role of government in the lives of ordinary citizens - debates that continue to this day.

There will be traditional refreshments of lemonade and sugar cookies.

Programs are free and open to the public. Reservations are not required. Street parking is available on Adams Street.

For more information about tours, programs, special events, and family activities at Adams National Historical Park, call the Visitor Center at 617.770.1175 or visit www.nps.gov/adam.

Salute To Rich Kenneally Benefit Sunday

A benefit entitled "You Don't Have To Go Home, But You Can't Stay Here; a Salute to Rich Kenneally, Volume 1" will take place Sunday, June 29 at 8:30 p.m. at Great Scott, 1222 Commonwealth Ave., Alston.

This is the first installment of a collection of benefit performances comprised of current and former students of Rich Kenneally.

Kenneally, the Band Director at Quincy Public Schools, has been an inspirational educator for over two decades, and has recently been battling cancer. While thousands of students have found a home in his band room, they are now rallying around their former teacher as if they were one large family.

Featuring performances by Jon De Lucia Group, Goodwill Tapes, Bundles, The Coalition, 4 Heads Deep, and the debut performance of Art Thieves. There will be an auction and raffle prizes, and all proceeds will go directly to Rich Kenneally and his family.

This event is age 18 and over. Minimum suggested donation is $15. Tickets can be purchased from Ticketmaster.

FATHER BILL'S FOODFEST and Auction July 29 at Granite Links Golf Club will feature more than 40 restaurants including the Greenside Grille at Raffael's at South Shore Country Club. Shown here: Frank Ricci and some of the Greenside Grille staff.

Fr. Bill's FoodFest, Auction July 29

New Venue: Granite Links

Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS) will host the 20th Annual Food Fest & Auction annual fundraiser on Tuesday, July 29, from 6 to 10 p.m. at its new outdoor location: Granite Links Golf Club, Quincy.

Proceeds of the nearly $300,000 fundraising goal will benefit up to 5,000 needy individuals, including families with children, served each year by FBMS. FoodFest is the agency's largest annual fundraiser that helps close the annual 54% funding gap experienced in its individual emergency shelter programs.

More than 42 restaurants, bakeries and beverage distributors from throughout the South Shore will offer samples. The event will also feature entertainment by the band District 21, and East Coast Acappella and appearances by Miss Massachusetts and the New England Revolution cheerleaders.

Tickets are $100 per person, and can be purchased online at www.foodfest20.org. Tickets purchased after 5 p.m. on Wednesday, July 23rd, will be available at the registration table at Granite Links.

Participating vendors from Quincy include:

Bistro Chi/Kama Lounge, The Common Market Restaurants, Father Bill's & MainSpring FoodWORKS, The Fours Restaurant Bar & Grill, Fratelli's Pastry Shop, Fuji 1546, Ginger Betty's, Montilio's Baking Co., Punjab Café, Super Chef Pizza, and River Bay Club.

Festivities will also include a live and silent auction, raffles and door prizes. Among the auction items are sports tickets to the Red Sox, Bruins, Celtics and Revolution.

This year's raffle winner can choose a trip for two to one of three US destinations: Savannah, GA; Napa, CA; or Scottsdale, AZ (air fare included). Tickets are $25 each or $50 for a book of three tickets.

For more information about sponsorships, or to purchase tickets on-line, visit: www.foodfest20.org.

WHAT'S COOKING

with

Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Zucchini, Butternut Squash Combo

It seems that I write many recipes about zucchinis, but somehow or other, there are always other ways to prepare them. Today's recipe for the zucchini is one the best and easy ways ever.

It also has butternut squash as one of the ingredients, and that is what makes it different and tasty.

ZUCCHINI, COUSCOUS AND BUTTERNUT SQUASH

2 cups butternut squash (diced)
2 zucchini (diced)
2 cloves garlic
3 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 cup dried cranberries
1/2 cup couscous
2 cups chicken stock
2 tablespoons tomato sauce

In the hot oil, saute the garlic, zucchini and butternut squash. Add the dried cranberries, tomato sauce, the couscous and the chicken stock.

Cover and cook until done.

Council On Aging Seeks Medical Equipment

The Quincy Council on Aging is in need of gently used medical equipment such as wheelchairs, walkers, shower chairs and tub transfer benches, for their loan program.

Items can be dropped at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum Street, Quincy, Monday thru Friday from 8:30 am to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Appetizer Cook Off At Kennedy Center

Marina Bay Skilled Nursing Center will hold an Appetizer Cook Off at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy on Friday, July 11th at noon.

Recipes will be prepared by Marina Bay Skilled Nursing, Bostonian Nursing Care and Rehabilitation and others.

Registration is required as space is limited. To register for this event, call (617) 376-1506.

Father Bill's Receives $35,000 Grant

Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS) recently received a $35,000 grant from the State Street Foundation.

FBMS will use the grant to fund the expansion of its WorkExpress program into Quincy. WorkExpress is a social enterprise that employs men and women in commercial cleaning, landscaping, and apartment rehab, working for a variety of business customers. Participants also receive help with housing, case management, soft skills and employment training.

"We are grateful for the continued support of the State Street Foundation," said John Yazwinski, President & CEO of FBMS. "By expanding WorkExpress into Quincy, we can work with people in the area who are experiencing homelessness to help them develop skills needed to be successfully employed and move into stable housing."

FBMS' WorkExpress, which is currently based in Brockton, has become a cornerstone program for the organization. Last year, 77 percent of WorkExpress participants were employed upon completion of the program and 100% of graduates were housed.

New Safety Plans For Houghs Neck Bonfire July 3

outside the city.

"It's getting big. The fire is getting big. The crowd is getting big, and it's a different kind of crowd. It's not the Houghs Neck crowd where everybody knows everybody," Keenan explained.

"What's happened, probably because of social media, is a lot of people are getting word out that it's a party and a free for all down there. What we're seeing is a lot of people from outside the city."

In particular, Keenan noted two concerns: underage drinking and the use of fireworks. To alleviate those concerns, the police chief said officers will be searching the backpacks and coolers of anyone appearing under the age of 21 as they enter Houghs Neck.

"We're going to be very, very strict with the alcohol with kids," Keenan said. "Our concern is the underage drinking and the fireworks. There are great fireworks over at Wessagusset Beach but people shoot fireworks off on Edgewater Drive. They shoot bottle rockets in the crowds. They shoot Roman candles in the crowds."

"It's starting to get a little bit out of control," Keenan added, "and we wanted to reel it back in. We don't want to infringe on all the good times the neighbors have down there."

For the first time this year, the Police Department will use the Norfolk County sheriff's incident command vehicle as a command post stationed at LaBrecque Field. Uniformed officers will be posted along Edgewater Drive's intersections and plainclothes officers will be dispersed throughout the crowd. The entire police force, except those on vacation, will be on duty that night throughout the city.

Laforest said the command vehicle, which Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti offered to the city, will send a message and deter the out-of-town visitors from causing problems at the bonfire.

"When you come down here and see the sheriff's command post, that sends a big message," Laforest noted. "That means business. The thing could be empty – it doesn't matter. For those teenagers, they see the sheriff is in town. Just the visibility, it's almost like deterrence beats detection every time."

Police officers from other communities, including gang units, will work that night in Houghs Neck, as they have in recent years. MBTA Police will also increase their patrols at the Quincy Center station.

Because of the concerns about out-of-towners crashing the bonfire – Keenan noted MBTA buses were needed last year to transport several hundred non-Quincy residents who were stranded at LaBrecque after the fire – bus service to Houghs Neck will be stop at 6 p.m. and restart at 10 p.m. on July 3. Service to and from Germantown will continue to operate during that four-hour window on July 3.

After the meeting, Keenan said about 5,000 people attend the Edgewater Drive bonfire annually. On average, the Police Department makes five or six arrests each year at the event, generally for underage possession of alcohol, disorderly conduct, and placing intoxicated individuals in protective custody. July 3 and 4 are busy days citywide, Keenan said, with the department receiving many fireworks complaints. Issues also arise on occasion at a smaller bonfire in Squantum.

Barron cited concerns over the bonfire itself at the meeting, and passed out a list of serious injuries incurred at bonfires throughout the U.S. in recent years.

In regards to the Edgewater Drive bonfire, the fire chief said he was concerned about the materials used in the fire. Barron noted the smoke rising from the fire has gotten considerably darker in recent years – a sign that toxic materials are being burned.

"It's getting bigger and the material that's being put in it is toxic," he said. "I've looked at it – I've looked at films of that particular fire – and I've looked at the smoke and it's dark black. It's not what you should be breathing."

Because of those concerns, the Fire Department will be placing restrictions on which materials can be placed in the bonfire. Only unpainted, untreated wood will be allowed – Barron noted pressure treated wood should not be burned because of the chemicals in the wood. No items with a diameter exceeding four inches will be allowed and tree stumps are prohibited. Flammable liquids, such as gasoline or other accelerants that could be used to start the fire, are also prohibited.

Barron suggested residents could use a road flare to start the fire instead this year.

To ensure prohibited items aren't placed in the fire, materials will only be accepted on Wednesday, July 2, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Barron said firefighters will be assigned to the beach that day to inspect all items left by residents.

After the fire is lit on July 3, a perimeter will be established to keep people from running up to the fire and getting hurt.

Nearly 40 people attended the hour-long meeting. Several in the audience suggested the city put an end to the bonfire all together, citing the nuisance created by the large crowd.

"I spend that entire night locked up in my house because I'm terrified because they all come out and stay in front of my house all night long," said one woman. "When I tell people who don't live here that this happens, they're like, 'how? How does this happen?'

"It's terrifying. It's absolutely terrifying."

Others, however, said the bonfire itself is not to blame. They suggested ending the bonfire would not be the panacea for the problems seen on the Third of July.

"Nobody has ever been hurt by the bonfire. Nobody's property has ever been damaged by the bonfire that I can find evidence of," said one man. "We're blaming the fork. It doesn't make any sense to me…these people are going to come. We just have to look out for one another and regulate it.

"It's not the fire's fault."

Keenan said Weymouth's fireworks, held annually on July 3, draw people to Edgewater Beach. As an example, he noted Weymouth's fireworks display was delayed for four days because of rain one year, but the Houghs Neck bonfire went ahead on the Third. Keenan said he deployed 60 officers to Edgewater Drive the night of the fireworks that year because of safety concerns.

A handful of those in attendance at the meeting also questioned how the Police Department disperses the crowd once the fire is extinguished, saying no warning was given before officers form into a line to break the crowd up.

The police chief, though, said officers filter through the crowd providing warning before the push occurs. Officers this year may use bullhorns to help break up the crowd.

Get A Grip And Mind Your Manners

At 8:30 a.m. on this gorgeous summer day, an Angry White Man in his Jeep convertible looked down at me in my station wagon and yelled about the President, "HE HAS DONE NOTHING FOR US!"

I concluded that my faded "Fight Back with Barack" bumper sticker from the '08 campaign sent this fellow over the edge. I'm sure it is not the Broad Meadows Student of the Month or the Quincy Youth Basketball stickers which have been up for just as long.

Most of the time, I forget that it is back there, but the Angry White Guys make sure to remind me of it. The weird thing is that there have been four incidents which have all taken place in less than a square mile of Merrymount on Furnace Brook Parkway, Southern Artery and Sea Street.

A couple incidents spread out over two administrations did not upset me. In the winter of '09, I noticed in my rear view mirror, that a guy alone in his work van was freaking out. I knew I had not cut him off in traffic; I wondered at his anger. What had I done to him? Then I saw him point to the sticker.

Okay, the Recession was really, really bad and his business was probably suffering. Fair enough. In 2013 a frantic passenger in a pick-up on my right was falling over the driver to get my attention to insult the President. Last month, a fellow leaned far out of his truck to yell up ahead at me, "NAME ONE THING THAT HE HAS DONE FOR US!!!"

Now with good weather and open windows, this aggression is getting worrisome. Will the next incident include some nut driving me off the road or pulling out a gun? I feel pretty certain that these are four individuals. If it is the same guy, life has been that tough for him that he can afford to have purchased four different vehicles.

Why is this is happening in Merrymount!?! It is bizarre to me. I have had no person of another race or gender react this way to this bumper sticker; in fact, I have had no other reactions in any other part of the entire state. What the heck is going on? What is the source of this fury? Has Merrymount become a cesspool of chronic poverty, crime, disease and despair without our knowing it? Finally, do you Angry Guys yell only at women? Or do you bully men who disagree with you as well? Is this really how you want to treat your neighbors? Get a grip and mind your manners.

Says City Bankruptcy Bound

I see the city council did it again.

They voted to remove more revenue from our tax base for a parking lot for North Quincy High. Shame on Brian McNamee for his vote to remove these homes. This area is his ward. What kind of councilor would play along with this dumb plan, against his neighbors?

I think that whoever planned to vote for McNamee for Mayor, should rethink their vote.

Bankruptcy, here we come.

QUINCY CREDIT UNION recently announced four student members have been selected as recipients of 2014 Scholarship Lottery Awards. From left are QCU employee Lauren Pedretti and scholarship recipients Liam Mansfield, Emma Murphy, Elizabeth Doyle and Lindsey Nazzaro. The recipients were each awarded a $1,000 QCU scholarship for secondary education expenses. Scholarships are available to High School seniors of the current year's graduating class and for enrolled college students for each of the years they are enrolled in a two or four year accredited college or university. Applicants must be members of QCU. Non-selected applicants are encouraged to apply each of the years they are enrolled in college. Applications are available online at www.qcu.org or at any QCU location starting in January of each year.

Focus Tours At Adams Historical Park

Several new focus tours at Adams National Historical Park provide additional opportunities to explore the Birthplaces, Old House, and historic landscape at Peace field with a Park Ranger.

Focus tours provide insight into specific members of the Adams family, their lives and accomplishments, and their homes. Focus tours are approximately two hours long, include a "focused" look at the presidential birthplaces, the Old House, and/or gardens and grounds. All focus tours begin at the Visitor Center. Space generally is limited to eight people per tour, and reservations are strongly recommended.

At Home & Abroad: Furniture, Fine Art, and Decorative Arts

Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday - 10:45 a.m. and 1:45 p.m.

Four generations of Adams family members traveled to ports far and near in service to their country. Explore the rich and varied furniture, fine art, and decorative arts from Boston and beyond brought to the Old House by these seasoned travelers who traversed the globe from West to the Far East.

"The Farm of a Patriot" Four Generations on the Landscape

Daily, Sunday through Saturday 11:45 a.m.

From the "farm at the foot of Penn's Hill" to the property at Peace field, discover Abigail's orchard, John Quincy's tree seminary, Charles Francis' formal English garden, and Brooks Adams' summer home. Explore the gardens, grounds, and outbuildings that transformed these New England homes of patriots and presidents from 1720 to 1927.

Backstairs at Birthplaces and Old House: The Servants' Tour

Monday, Wednesday, Friday – 10:45 a.m. and 1:45 p.m.

Discover the "business end" of the Birthplaces and the Old House and examine the lives of the women and men who made these old houses hum. Discover how two "Mrs. Adams" managed their farms and families at the "foot of Penn's Hill," then explore the Old House's 1869 servants' wing and learn how some lesser known occupants of the Old House spent their days in service to the Adams family.

Henry Adams

Monday, Wednesday, Friday – 9:45 a.m. and 12:45 p.m.

Explore the life and times of one of the Adams family's most esteemed members, historian and Pulitzer-prize winning author and educator, Henry Adams. Travel to the Birthplaces and hear about the "first" Henry Adams who arrived in America and settled in Braintree in 1638. Visit the Old House at Peace field and get a "behind the scenes" tour of the third floor of the Old House and peer into places where this famous American intellect slept, read, wrote, and thought.

City Shares Appraisals With 9 NQ Homeowners

assessed values totaling more than $3.1 million, according to the assessor's online database.

The nine properties the city plans to take are:

- 18-20 Hunt St., a two-family home valued with an assessed value of $484,000;
- 22 Hunt St., a one-family home assessed at $274,000;
- 24 Hunt St., a one-family home with an assessed value of $281,400;
- 26 Hunt St., a one-family home with an assessed value of $368,700;
- 30 Hunt St., a duplex with assessed for $405,000;
- 34 Hunt St., a one-family home with an assessed value of $310,300;
- 38-40 Hunt St., a two-family home with an assessed value of $357,600;
- 42-44 Hunt St., a three-family home with an assessed value of $361,500;
- 125 Newbury Ave., a one-family home with an assessed value of $285,000.

Mayor Thomas Koch has previously said the city would use proceeds from the sale of the former Central Middle School to offset the purchase price for the homes. The city received bids ranging from $1.1 to $3 million for that property, but no winning bidder has been selected as of Tuesday.

The $12 million project includes renovations to Teel Field, where new 600-seat grandstands will be installed as well as a synthetic playing surface. Other improvements include new concession stands, a new sound system, and lighting for the field.

The parking area on Hunt Street will accommodate 157 vehicles, providing a net gain of 127 spots. Additionally, the project calls for creating retaining ponds to alleviate flooding problems.

Art, Music Mark Opening Of Farmers Market Friday

TLC Arts and Sciences Foundation in association with the Quincy Farmers Market, will present visual artist Sherwin Long and band "Tina and Pit Crew" Friday, June 27 from noon to 4 p.m.

The music and art will be part of the Quincy Farmers Market that takes place in the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot, across from the Francis X. Bellotti Quincy District Courthouse, Dennis Ryan Parkway.

"Tina and Pit Crew" cover such artists as Diana Krall, Billy Joel and James Taylor.

Long is an illustrator born and raised in Boston. He graduated with a BFA in illustration from Massachusetts College of Art. His philosophies and daily personal interactions fuel the direction of his work. He was introduced to art by graffiti and murals in his community. His inspiration stems from Hip Hop music, spirituality, architecture, mythology, and poetry.

"When I paint or draw I am filled with so much emotion that I exude on the canvas with the energy of my line work and color schemes, and I gain some peace and relaxation, it allows me to free myself from the confines of reality and get lost in my own universe where I command time and space," Long said.

His favorite mediums include acrylic, charcoal, watercolor, and spray paint.

Keenan Supports Minimum Wage Hike

The Legislature has approved a minimum wage and unemployment insurance reform bill that restores the value of the minimum wage, and takes steps to alleviate other costs to businesses.

A negotiated version of proposals passed separately by the House and Senate, the bill received final approval in the Senate last week. Approval in both chambers now allows the bill to go before the Governor for his signature.

Sen. John Keenan of Quincy voted in support of the bill, saying of the living wage increase that "poverty is devastating to individuals and families, and costly to society in immeasurable ways. The Commonwealth simply cannot maintain an economy that allows full-time, adult workers to remain impoverished."

Keenan also said he believes "the Legislature has been very prudent to offset new labor costs to small businesses, through unemployment insurance reforms that lower costs and reward businesses that provide stable employment."

Earlier this year, the Legislature froze unemployment insurance (UI) tax rates to prevent increased costs to businesses. The bill now going to the Governor would modify the tables used to calculate UI rates, by lowering costs to employers that provide more stable employment and by shifting costs to high-turnover sectors whose former workers most often draw from the UI reserve fund. Exceptions are granted for certain sectors that are seasonal in nature.

The combined bill also provides for gradual increases to the minimum wage, raising the minimum wage from the current $8.00 per hour rate, to $9.00 in 2015, to $10.00 in 2016, and to $11.00 in 2017.

In pairing both reforms under a single proposal, Keenan says the Legislature has "been mindful of its responsibility, both to the businesses that are the engine of our economy, and to the working families that are the core of our communities, including the nearly half-million workers in the Commonwealth who are left near or even below the poverty line under the current wage structure."

With the House and Senate proposals now reconciled, the bill will be placed before the Governor for his approval of the new law.

Restricks Home After Decades In Mozambique

By SCOTT JACKSON

After spending the last several decades in Africa, Dr. David and Rhoda Restrick have returned home to the U.S.

The couple began serving in Africa in the 1970s: Rhoda, a native of Sheffield, England, who worked as a nurse and midwife in the UK, first went to Africa in 1973 as a volunteer nurse in Swaziland. David, who grew up in Saugus and graduated from Eastern Nazarene College in 1973, went to Africa for the first time in 1975 as a Peace Corps Volunteer. They met while serving there and were married in Swaziland in 1978.

The newly married Restricks returned to the U.S. shortly after that and David attended a Nazarene seminary in Kansas City from which he graduated in 1982. After that he pastored a church in England for three years.

The couple's first assignment after being appointed missionaries was in South Africa, serving in what was then the eastern portion of Transvaal, now known as of Mpumalanga.

After their four years in South Africa were up, the Restricks received their assignment to Mozambique, a country on the east African coast, 1989. There they would work at a bible school in Maputo, the capital city. Before heading to the country, they spent a year visiting churches in the U.S. and spent 10 months in Lisbon, Portugal, learning Portuguese.

Mozambique at the time was the poorest nation in the world, David explained. After a 16-year long civil war and decades of colonial rule before that, the country only had a handful of high schools.

"When we started there were only five high schools in the country and most people, if they were fortunate, they could go through seventh grade," David said. "That was the best they could hope for."

The Restricks spent the first several years supervising American volunteers who paid their own way to Maputo and constructed the school.

"When we got there, there was no campus. The school was meeting in classrooms of the local church. Most of the building was done by groups from the U.S. and spent two weeks and worked an contributed and then another team would come from another place," David said. "For the first few years we were there we were hosting those teams as well as trying to teach."

David served as the academic dean and a fulltime teacher at the school, which offered diploma-level education. Rhoda was the school's nurse and also ran the bookstore and daycare center. She also helped distribute funds to children sent through the Church of the Nazarene's child sponsorship program.

From the time the Restricks arrived in Mozambique to when they left two decades later, the country made great improvements.

"It was the saddest place but through the years we've seen amazing things. The economy has improved a lot. The government made a big turnaround," Rhoda explained, noting the government that once persecuted members of the church now welcomed them.

"It was just such a blessing and a great time to be there," she added.

While in Africa the couple raised their three children. The children also attended Quincy Public Schools when the family would return to the U.S. for stretches of time. The Restricks lived in Quincy because the Church of the Nazarene had a home for missionaries in Wollaston. All three children graduated from ENC, like David and his parents before him. All three children developed a love for Africa while living there. One of their daughters, Beth Restrick, is now the head of the African Studies Library at Boston University.

DR. DAVID AND RHODA RESTRICK have returned to the U.S. after spending more than 20 years as missionaries in Mozambique. The couple met and married in Swaziland and later served as missionaries in South Africa. David grew up in Saugus and graduated from Eastern Nazarene College in Quincy; Rhoda is a native of Sheffield, England.

David and Rhoda returned to the U.S. a year ago and settled in Braintree. In the year since they returned the couple has traveled to Nazarene churches throughout the U.S., visiting churches up and down the East Coast, throughout the Midwest, and as far away as Colorado and Washington state. David also spoke about his work oversees June 1 at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene and again the following week at the Church of the Nazarene's New England District Missions Convention, which was also at the church.

In addition to their travels in the U.S. over the past year, the Restricks made a return to Mozambique in November to attend a graduation ceremony at the school. They hope to return to the school again in the future.

"We'd like to go back. We went back to Mozambique once to attend the graduation service last November. We we're back for two weeks," David said. "We hope to go back, possibly as a visiting teacher. These are just dreams, but we'd like to go back from time-to-time."

DR. DAVID RESTRICK, photo above left, seen here in 2007, served as the academic dean and as a fulltime teacher at the school in the Mozambican capital of Maputo. He and his wife, Rhoda, spent their first several years in the country supervising teams of Church of the Nazarene volunteers as they built the school. David hopes to return to the school, possibly as a visiting teacher. In the photo above right, Rhoda Restrick, seen here in the north of Mozambique in 2012, served as the nurse at the school in Maputo. She also ran the school's bookstore and daycare center and helped distribute funds sent through the Church of the Nazarene's child sponsorship program.

MAKING WISE CHOICES

When it comes to deciding whether or not to have wisdom teeth extracted, there are a number of factors to consider. While some individuals have enough room in their dental arches to accommodate all their wisdom teeth, those with smaller jaws often find that their wisdom teeth erupt improperly. As a result of coming in crookedly, their third molars are difficult to brush and floss, which can lead to increased risk of gum disease and cavities. To avert these potential problems, some patients elect to have their wisdom teeth extracted. However, some people do not realize that their wisdom teeth are impacted (trapped beneath the gums) until an x-ray indicates as much. If so, a consultation with the dentist is needed.

Many times wisdom teeth — the third molars in the very back of your mouth — do not have room to grow properly, which can cause problems. Erupting wisdom teeth can grow at various angles in the jaw, sometimes even horizontally. For more information about our dental services, we invite you to call us today. We would like to increase dental awareness and stress the importance of regular dental care. It's never too late to start good oral hygiene. Remember that nothing is more economical than regular dental checkups. For gentle compassionate dental care, call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Wisdom teeth (third molars) are the last teeth to erupt, usually somewhere between the ages of 14 and 21.

City Model For Saving Victims From Opiate Overdoses

of opiate overdoses, and had previously done so, but in the hands of EMT's and emergency room personnel.

This most-successful program has put Quincy on the national map as far as life-saving is concerned, and with a nod to Glynn and his Quincy team, the largest police force in America, the NYPD, is now training more than 20,000 of its officers in preparation for the onset of this program in New York City.

The National Center for Health Statistics reports that nationwide nearly nine out of ten poisoning deaths are caused by drugs, with Opioid analgesic pain relievers involved in more poisoning deaths than other specified drugs, including heroin and cocaine.

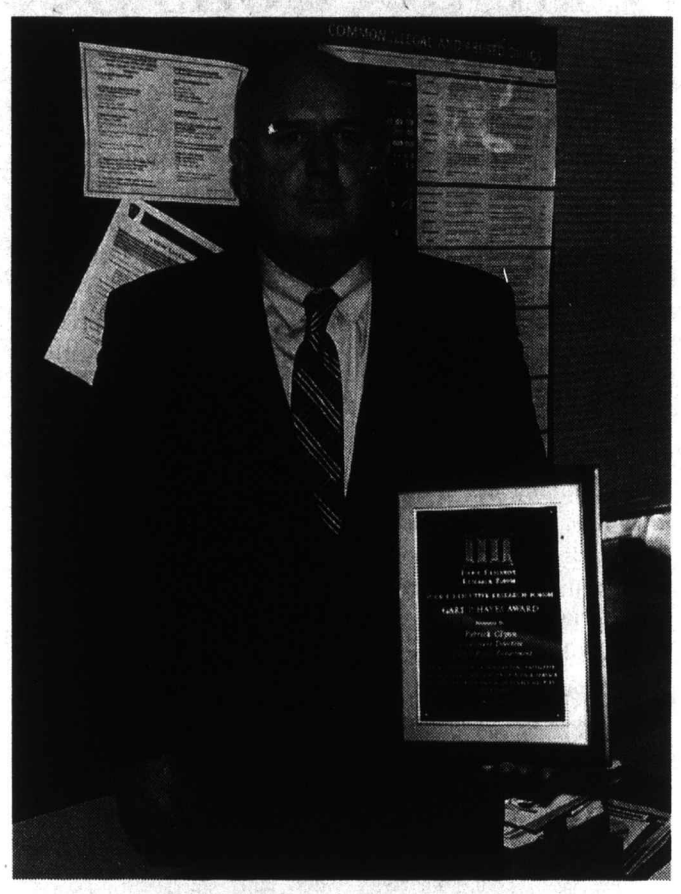
And in 2010 statistics showed that the number of opioid related deaths exceeded those of firearm and motor vehicle-related deaths. Here in Quincy, Glynn states that in the first eighteen months of the Narcan program there was a 66% reduction in the death rate when compared to the previous period.

This revolutionary program has brought Glynn much recognition, including an Advocates for Action Award, presented by the White House's Office of National Drug Control Policy and this year, the prestigious Gary P. Hayes Memorial Award, given to a police officer who shows leadership and innovation to improve U.S. policing.

National recognition considered, Lt. Glynn has been invited to address groups across the country regarding the use of Narcan, including the legislature in North Carolina, agents of the High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas (a national organization), law enforcement and community action groups, etc.

Of Glynn's White House award, he says, "That was quite an award, and for everybody here, it's not my award, it's everyone's award, I am not out on the street at 3 a.m. reversing people....I might administer the program but the program is only successful because of the men and women in the police department."

"Since we went live with the program in 2010 we have administered 281 individuals and out of that we have reversed 269 and the reason those numbers don't match



THE PRESTIGIOUS Gary P. Hayes Memorial Award, give to a police officer who shows leadership and innovation to improve U.S. policing, was presented to Quincy Police Detective Lt. Patrick Glynn. is 8 people were deceased prior to our arrival and four it had no effect on, meaning it was not an opiate overdose...Naloxone only works on opiates."

Of the eight who were deceased, Glynn states that someone had not called for help in time, which brings up the 2012 amendment to the Good Samaritan law, which, he says, "reduced or eliminated the liability of someone being arrested for having a small quantity of narcotics.

"Since that change, people calling 911 has skyrocketed, because they are no longer afraid of being arrested. Prior to the change of the Good Samaritan law, one of our reversals was a 17 year old boy who was thrown in a snow bank in front of the hospital because his friends were afraid they would get in trouble."

Glynn responds to unsympathetic critics of a program which helps recreational substance abusers: "If someone made a mistake, aren't they entitled to a second chance, or a third chance?...on almost every police car it says 'To Protect and Serve', it doesn't say we choose who we protect and serve – we protect them all.

"And not all overdose victims are substance abusers, some are suicide attempts, or incidents of accidental over-medication with prescription drugs...for example with Vicodin, frequently prescribed following oral surgery – coupled with alcohol – the potency shuts down the receptors in the brain, which also stops the breathing."

After a brief stint with the Dept. of Corrections and as an EMT, Glynn began his law-enforcement career right here in Quincy as a patrolman in 1986, and eventually became a detective in the narcotics division.

When he was promoted to lieutenant in 2005, Glynn escalated his goal of helping people by assuming command of the Special Investigations Unit which deals with sex crimes, domestic violence, elderly abuse, child abuse and juvenile issues.

Glynn credits Mayor Koch's Drug Task Force, Bay State Community Services, Impact Quincy, concerned family members and the Department of Public Health, which funds the Narcan program, with initiating the pilot program in 2010.

While still running for mayor, Koch learned of a key, drug-related incident which had occurred in Quincy which further exemplified the need for a more immediate treatment for overdose victims.

A mother expressed surprise to Mayor Koch that while paramedics had arrived in time to administer Narcan to her son, which saved his life, none of the first responders - police, fire, and basic life support ambulance professionals - was in ity indicating that many life and safety deficiencies were noted through the inspections conducted at the end of March and April," he said.

Housing Authority Inspections Seen Into December

A report issued on April 30 following a reinspection outlined operational issues as well as physical condition concerns such as exposed electrical wiring, holes in walls, improperly stored combustibles, mold and mildew, and in one case raw sewage from a unit's bathroom leaking through the floor and onto a tenant's stove in the unit below.

Conditions were deemed so bad in one unit that the tenants had to be relocated.

Most recently, a main support beam at Snug Harbor was found to be significantly damaged due to an infestation of termites, according to QHA Executive Director James Lydon who said that after performing two walkthroughs of units and common areas at the property, which provides affordable housing to families, he and his staff were "all surprised at the conditions."

DHCD issued a notice for the further inspection of all family units at Snug Harbor for the two weeks of June 16-20 and July 7-11.

"Due to the concerns that were identified earlier by DHCD we will continue to conduct inspections at Snug Harbor to ensure that all life and safety deficiencies have both been identified and addressed," said Marathas who has assisted many troubled housing authorities in the past but noted that as executive director, Lydon was responsive and open to working with the DHCD and receptive to their suggestions.

According to Marathas, full inspection was not possible within the allotted two weeks due to the amount of disrepair discovered so far.

When asked for a timeline and overall cost of repairs, Lydon said that "it would be unfair to guess" because what had been discovered was far beyond the scope of what he could have anticipated. Repairs relative to life and safety concerns will be carried out first and prioritized based on what further inspections reveal within the upcoming months he said. Lesser concerns will be addressed and dealt with on an open-ended deadline.

QHA Maintenance Director David Ferris, who was on vacation during the most recent round of DHCD inspections, will be tasked with scheduling and prioritizing all repairs.

After meeting with the QHA administration, DHCD officials advised the authority to improve inspection protocol as proper procedure had not been followed by allowing inspections to take place without a housing authority staff member present. In addition, "there has been a persistent lack of accurate and thorough documentation of life and safety deficiencies which were noted but never corrected," said Marathas.

DHCD officials also noted blocked egresses within common areas and units and suggested that more stringent monitoring take place by building managers to prevent tenants from altering their units without the expressed permission of the authority.

Marathas indicated that ineffective communication with maintenance staff due to a flawed work order system was one of the major issues plaguing the authority and that a more proactive approach to repairs could save millions in future costs, adding that physical conditions at housing authorities are reflective of the "effectiveness of the efficiency of the operations systems of the authority."

A contract with inspectional services firm McCright & Associates was not extended into next year following a unanimous vote by Housing Authority commissioners due to poor performance, a lack of proper procedural protocol, and a lack of communication with property managers according to Lydon. Rather than hiring another outside firm, teams of Housing Authority staff and members of the maintenance department will be tasked with performing further inspections.

Because conditions have been deemed to be poorest at Snug Harbor, all of the approximately 400 units will undergo a full inspection which includes top to bottom investigation of each room. So far, roughly 100 units have been inspected by DHCD officials.

"As far as the funding goes, the Housing Authority receives both operational funding and capital funding," said Marathas. "The capital funding is allocated by creating a capital improvement plan and that capital improvement plan would address the deficiencies of the Housing Authority as they see fit."

Lydon said that additional DHCD and supplemental funding would be necessary to complete the overhaul but that he was unsure as to when the money would be made available. He said he has initiated contact with DHCD officials regarding funding but has not received a formal response to his request.

When asked as to when elevators at Pagnano Towers and O'Brien Towers that have been broken since February would be repaired, Lydon said the authority was still waiting for a part from the manufacturer which opens and closes the doors and requires a long lead time between ordering and manufacturing.

"They're old elevators and it's hard to come by the parts," he said. Each building currently has only one operational elevator.

Both towers cater to elderly and disabled residents that rely on elevators to bring them to the buildings' upper floors. Authorities were aware that the elevators were not operational and claimed the delay to repair them was due to a lack of available funds.

Regina Jones-Jenkins, a resident of the Riverview family complex and previously Snug Harbor, voiced concerns over seasonal storage in basements. Housing Authority policy defines items such as holiday decorations and bicycles as seasonal items. She asked for an expansion of the definition to include winter clothing due to what she called a lack of storage space and closets in Snug Harbor.

The clarification was necessary in her opinion because clothing storage may place an unnecessary infraction against a resident. Marathas said such policies must be created and amended by housing authority officials and not the DHCD. Her request spurred Marathas to delve into further issues discovered during an inspection of cellars and basement storage areas at Snug Harbor.

"There are fire hazards everywhere," he said. "We have found gasoline; propane in multiples. Basements are made of concrete; concrete is porous. Water is within concrete so you have moisture constantly in a basement...it leads to mold." He also attributed basement mold to improperly ventilated dryers and advised against residents keeping clothing in basements unless stored in rubber containers.

An amendment to the policy will be discussed at a future meeting of the Housing Authority.

QHA officials said that padlocks placed on basement doors by tenants prohibited them from inspecting basements and cellars but that such locks will now be removed by force if necessary and any damage sustained in the process will be paid for by the responsible tenant. Housing Authority-approved padlocks will be provided to residents to avoid this issue in the future.

Mayor Thomas Koch attended the meeting last Wednesday. He said the authority suffered from a lack of resources, proper leadership, and management. He also pointed out that the authority was not a partner of the city but that the two work "hand in hand."

It was clear, said Koch, that the problems facing the QHA didn't happen overnight and had been festering for a long time.

"I congratulate the director for embracing the DHCD and not doing the standard and putting their walls up and their defenses up, allowing them to come in and assist us in creating a plan, going forward to make it right for the tenants who deserve to live in decent conditions," Koch said.

Even though his "hands are full at this point" with Snug Harbor, Lydon said that he believes he has more control of QHA-owned properties and that he welcomes DHCD intervention. With the help of the DHCD he said "he can move things forward" and correct the problems of the struggling authority.

City Model For Saving Victims From Opiate Overdoses

possession of this drug, with which she was familiar.

"At the same time the Department of Public Health was contacting us because they had noticed a spike in fatal overdoses, and at the same time we were getting other calls and seeing a huge trend in overdoses ourselves," Glynn added.

"Everyone got together and we devised strategies, and eventually a pilot program, initiated by the DPH, was begun and we were able to get the officers trained. That was the support from the mayor down to the newest officer and from the newest officer back up, because if we don't have total support the program will never survive."

Opiates attack the respiratory system and shut off the brain receptors which control breathing, "just like a light switch," says Glynn. Narcan reverses that effect and gets the person breathing again.

Glynn further explains that Naloxone is a non-addictive substance. "Narcan is administered through a nasal based delivery system and has no ill-effect and cannot hurt the officer or anyone else on the street . . . we are first on the scene anywhere between 90 to 95% of the time, prior to the ambulance and fire department."

Glynn emphasizes the cooperation of many social agencies, including the Quincy Drug Court, in their pro-active approach to addressing substance-abuse as opposed to focusing on arrests and punishment. All involved support a policy referred to as PETER – Prevention, Education, Treatment, Enforcement and Recovery.

A Quincy resident for nearly 20 years, Glynn attended the Atlantic School, moved on to B. C. High, then earned a bachelor's degree in Human Services and a masters degree in Criminal Justice.

Married and father to two grown children, when not traveling the country educating legislators and social agencies about the importance of having Narcan in the hands of first responders, he enjoys working in his yard and doing a little golfing.

Glynn expressed extreme pride that the city of Quincy and its police department had set an example for other departments across the nation, and that what is now commonly referred to as 'the Quincy Model' is in a state of national recognition all the way up to the White House.

Of his Hayes award, which was presented by the Police Executive Research Forum, based in Washington D.C., he says, "It was very impressive, very humbling to get the recognition...unfortunately only one name goes on the award, but the Quincy Police is on it and I share that award with everyone here."

Bay State Community Services Open House Today

New Headquarters At 1120 Hancock St.

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Bay State Community Services (BSCS) will mark the opening of their new facility at 1120 Hancock St. today (Thursday) from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. with a ribbon cutting ceremony and open house for the public and remarks from Mayor Thomas Koch at 4:30 p.m.

The not-for-profit organization which had a facility previously at 13 Temple St., has provided social, mental health, addiction, and correctional services to the people of the South Shore and MetroWest communities for the past 20 years. Services are offered to children, adolescents, adults, and families.

Formed in 1991 following the merger of five social service agencies, BSCS is one of only a handful of agencies funded mostly by the Department of Mental Health, the Department of Children and Families, the Department of Public Health, and the Office of Community Corrections. Support is also provided by the United Way, Medicaid, the Health Maintenance Organization, and private donation.

Program Coordinator Arlene Goldstein said relocating was necessary to accommodate the amount of people seeking their services. "We got too big for ourselves which is a good thing," she said. "It was time to move."

The new building, which serves as the organization's headquarters, is more inviting in comparison to the old location according to Human Resources Director Loni Rowell. "It's much more welcoming for people seeking services," she said. "This gives us more of a presence in Quincy."

Most services offered are based on need meaning individuals are still able to get care regardless of their ability to pay.

A total of 75 social workers, psychiatrists, psychologists, counselors, addiction specialists, and outreach workers provide outpatient services to individuals and families dealing with substance abuse and its consequences on mental health as well as support services to those suffering from mental health and behavioral issues.

Prevention and intervention services for adults include Impact Quincy's MassCALL2 Fatal and Non-Fatal Opioid Overdose Program which started in 2009 following approved funding by the Massachusetts Department of Health and the Bureau of Substance Abuse. The program increases awareness of opioid overdose through presentations given to active users and their families, community members, and law enforcement professionals. A support group for those dealing with opiate addiction and its consequences on family and personal relationships is available through a collaboration with Learn2Cope.

Additional prevention and intervention services include the Narcan Pilot Program which trains Quincy police officers on how to administer the lifesaving drug Narcan that can reverse an opioid overdose, and the Tobacco-Free Community Partnership Program. First and second offender driver alcohol education courses are offered as are programs offering counseling to victims of domestic violence as well as batterers. Anger management and violence intervention programs are also available.

Rowell said she has seen a sharp increase in the amount of people seeking help with opioid addiction in Quincy over the past several years. "It seems like a very high demand from five years ago," she said. "It was very surprising."

Children and families are provided with family stabilization through the Division of Child and Family/ Home-Based Services. An after-school and summer program for children aged 7-11 supports the development of pro-social skills, behavior management, and coping mechanisms. Children with mental health issues are also offered academic support. Older children aged 12-18 can participate the the Therapeutic Activity Program (T.A.P.) which encourages friendship building and and can help those with difficulties transitioning from the school world to the work world.

Counseling for those dealing with compulsive gambling is also available in an outpatient setting.

BSCS has additional facilities in Weymouth, Walpole, Norwood, and Plymouth.

North Quincy High School Senior Stay Out 2014!

For the past 18 years, parents, alumni, and local businesses have donated as well as volunteered their time and services to help ensure that our graduating seniors enjoyed a fun, safe, all-night, after-prom party. Once again this year's event was a huge success! The seniors and their dates enjoyed games, food, music and an incredible selection of prizes. We would like to extend our thanks to everyone who was involved with the setup, food pickup, working the overnight, or breaking down and cleanup the next morning. We couldn't have done it without all your help!

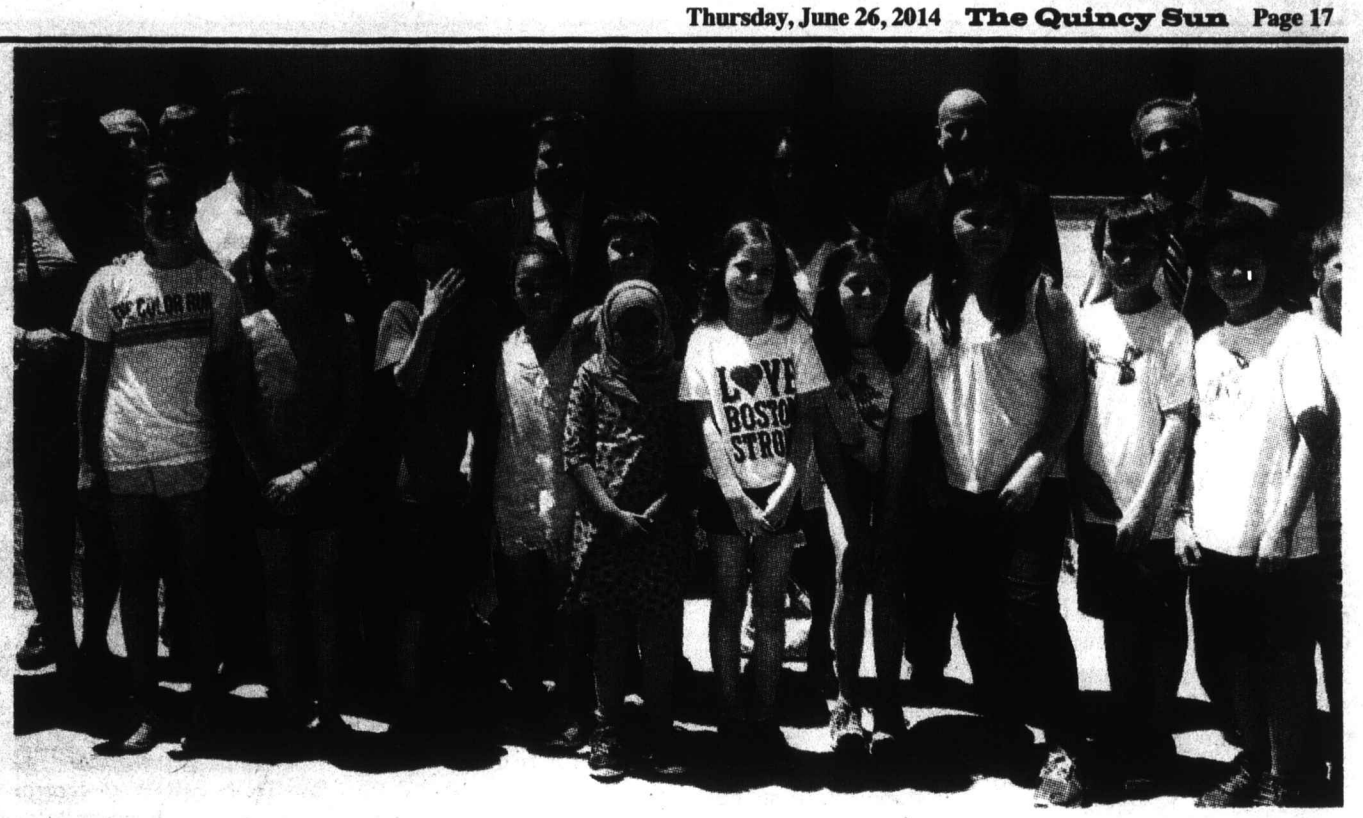
Completion Of Open Learning Facility Seen By End Of Summer

New Outdoor Classroom For Squantum School



FOURTH GRADE STUDENTS join city and school leaders at a ceremony last week marking the beginning of a new outdoor classroom at the Squantum Elementary School. Officials joining the students include (from far left) Lisa Aimola, director of the Quincy Community Preservation Commission, Park and Forestry Director Chris Cassani, School Committee Vice Chairwoman Kathryn Hubley, Mayor Thomas Koch, Economic Developer Coordinator Maureen Geary, School Principal Stephen Sylvia and Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. Quincy Sun Photo/Kris Kalabokas

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A groundbreaking ceremony was held at Squantum Elementary School last Wednesday to celebrate the building of an outdoor classroom that is anticipated to be completed by the end of this summer.

The currently underutilized 43 by 64-foot space located behind the school will be transformed into an open learning environment to be used by teachers and students as well as community groups who currently use the area for sports activities. Features will include an outdoor Wi-Fi source and raised bed garden.

Money for the project has come from Quincy Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds as well as private donations. The idea was proposed by Economic Development Coordinator for the City of Quincy Maureen Geary to the Community Preservation Commission. She is a member of the school's PTO and has a fourth grader at Squantum.

She said that over the past two years $90,000 has been awarded for the project with $45,000 awarded last April and $45,000 awarded this year. The sale of personalized bricks which will pave the walkway leading to the space and cost $100 per brick have also helped in funding the project. The sale of bricks alone has raised $5,500 so far.

Geary said she was spurred to propose the idea after visiting a school in Boston with Squantum Principal Stephen Sylvia that had an outdoor classroom. "It was just a beautiful space and when we came back... we said we should reproduce that here."

The space was designed by landscape architect and Director of Landscape Operations Andrew Magee from Skinner Overlook Landscape and Design of Braintree. The spot will be similar to an outdoor computer lab according to Sylvia who said the upgrade will create a positive climate and culture for the school. "It's a nice compliment for the community as a whole but also the school," he said. "The transformation will just be perfect."

Quincy Community Preservation Commission Director Lisa Aimola, who also has a child in the fourth grade at Squantum, was once a student there herself. "I went to school here so it's really great to see this transformation," she said. "We're going from nothing to something that's going to be quite beautiful."

While she said she wished a similar space was available to her during her years at Squantum, she was happy to see that current students will be able to utilize the space after its completion by summer's end.

Additional items for consideration if more CPA funds are made available next year include the installation of levers and pulleys to be used for physics lessons at a cost of $1,000 to $1,500, a weather station comprised of a wind vane and sundial at a cost of $2,500 to $3,000, and a masonry compass rose at a cost of $2,000 to $2,500.

Mayor Thomas Koch told members of Squantum's fourth-grade class who attended the event to be protective of their new learning space next year, making sure to pick up litter and report vandalism. "Make sure you take good care of it," he said.

Maria Droste Services Fashion Show A Success

"Bringing Hope to Life," the Maria Droste Counseling Service's annual fashion show held at the Lantana in Randolph, was a big success.

Honorary chairpersons for this year's event were Steve DesRoche and Ann Freeman. The event featured a cocktail hour followed by dinner, music, live and silent auctions and culminated with a spring fashion show.

The show is dedicated to the memory of Darlene Sheehan. Several of Sheehan's friends were among the male and female models who participated in the fashion show.

Ladies modeled spring looks from Caryn's Corner, Quincy and a collection from Denise Hajjar's Couture, Boston. Male models included Quincy police officers and Quincy firefighters. They wore clothing from Hajjar's Men's Store in Quincy.

Hair styles were under the direction of Susan Canavan, Aura of Quincy, and make up provided by Brittany Fasano.

Proceeds from the fashion show benefit Maria Droste Counseling Services. Since 1992, the agency's staff and volunteer professionals have provided critical support to individuals, couples, and family groups on an adjustable fee scale based on each client's ability to pay. The sliding fee scale is made possible by the generosity of supporting people in the community.

Clifford Marshall Elementary School Celebrates Flag Day

The Clifford Marshall Elementary School recently held its Annual Flag Day Celebration. All classes participated in the event with the school band performing and the students singing numerous patriotic songs and reciting poems about the flag, democracy, and patriotism.

Among the guests attending the celebration was Kevin Doyle, executive assistant to the president of the National Association of Government Employees. Doyle presented Principal Nicholas Ahearn with a flag to fly at the school as well as every school in the district. He also distributed small American flags to all of the children attending the ceremony.

Others on hand for the celebration included Mayor Thomas Koch, School Committee Vice Chairwoman Kathryn Hubley, and School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

Interior Decorating Tips

Ask Barbara Graceffa

I've heard that interior decor often follows fashion design. I really love all the orange clothes that are popular now. How can I incorporate orange into my home décor? Randy

Dear Randy,

Yes, this is true. Orange is not typically used in many interior designs but you can find lots of accessories these days in this hue. In your living room, add pillows, a vase, a new piece of art with orange as a prominent color. In your kitchen, add dish towels or small bowls and plates. In your bath, purchase a new shower curtain and rug.

Oranges play well with reds, yellows, and blues—colors beside it and opposite it on the color wheel. If you choose a true orange, balance it with colors of equal intensity, like raspberry or cherry red and Mediterranean blue or turquoise. Consider tints and shades, too, like peach, terra cotta, and apricot.

True of any color, you should spread a color throughout the room with at least three examples of it. Above all, have fun with this lively color!

I just returned from a cruise and admired the efficient use of space in my cabin. Any tips I can use to accomplish this efficiency in the small rooms of my home? Michaela

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Dear Michaela,

Think vertical and double-duty furniture. Use wall-to-wall built-ins and tall furniture like bookcases and armoires to store your items. Use a trunk for a coffee table or a wooden file cabinet for a night stand. Also, if the furniture and window treatments match the color of the wall, they do not take up the same "visual space" as those of different colors. Because our eyes notice where colors stop and start, a monochromatic scheme will not look as crowded as the furniture and drapes will blend into the wall color.

Do you have a question on interior decorating? Send it to barbara@sec-interior.com and it may get printed in a future issue of the Quincy Sun.

BATTLESHIP MASSACHUSETTS was among the many ships that were built at the former Fore River Shipyard for the U.S. Navy during World War II. This photo was taken on Sept. 22, 1941. Hull number 1478 would wait one more day until she officially received her name at the time honored christening ceremony. Just in front of the bow can be seen the launch platform from which Mrs. Charles Francis Adams would christen her the next day. Her husband was the former Secretary of the Navy and a member of Quincy's most famous family. Today, the Massachusetts is among the attractions at Battleship Cove in Fall River. The Cove is the subject of a new pictorial book "Battleship Cove," written by Quincy resident James Gay. Photo Courtesy James Gay

Battleship Cove Has Quincy Connections

"We're working to create a non-profit that should be up and running by the fall," Gay says. "We hope to raise money and help with her dry docking."

He said he also hopes his book will encourage others to volunteer to help preserve these great navy vessels.

Besides the Massachusetts and Kennedy, Battleship Cove is also home to the USS Lionfish, a Balao-class submarine that also served during World War II. The Lionfish was built at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard.

The history of each ship has its own chapter and there's also a narrative on how Battleship Cove was created.

"I hope the book encourages readers to not only visit the Cove but also to volunteer," Gay says. "There are a lot of volunteer opportunities at the Cove."

Gay, age 39, grew up in Millis and moved to Quincy with his wife Becky in 2004. He was about 7 years old when he first visited Battleship Cove with his brother and his father in the mid 1970s.

For Gay, seeing those great ships up close left a big impression in its wake.

"The more my parents took me there the more I felt an appreciation of the Navy. I realized there was so much history and tradition to ships and the Navy. It preached sacrifice and honor. I didn't have any connection to the Navy. I've spent my whole life reading books about the Navy and history and being able to combine the two was pretty neat."

Asked what message he hopes "Battleship Cove" conveys to readers, Gay replied:

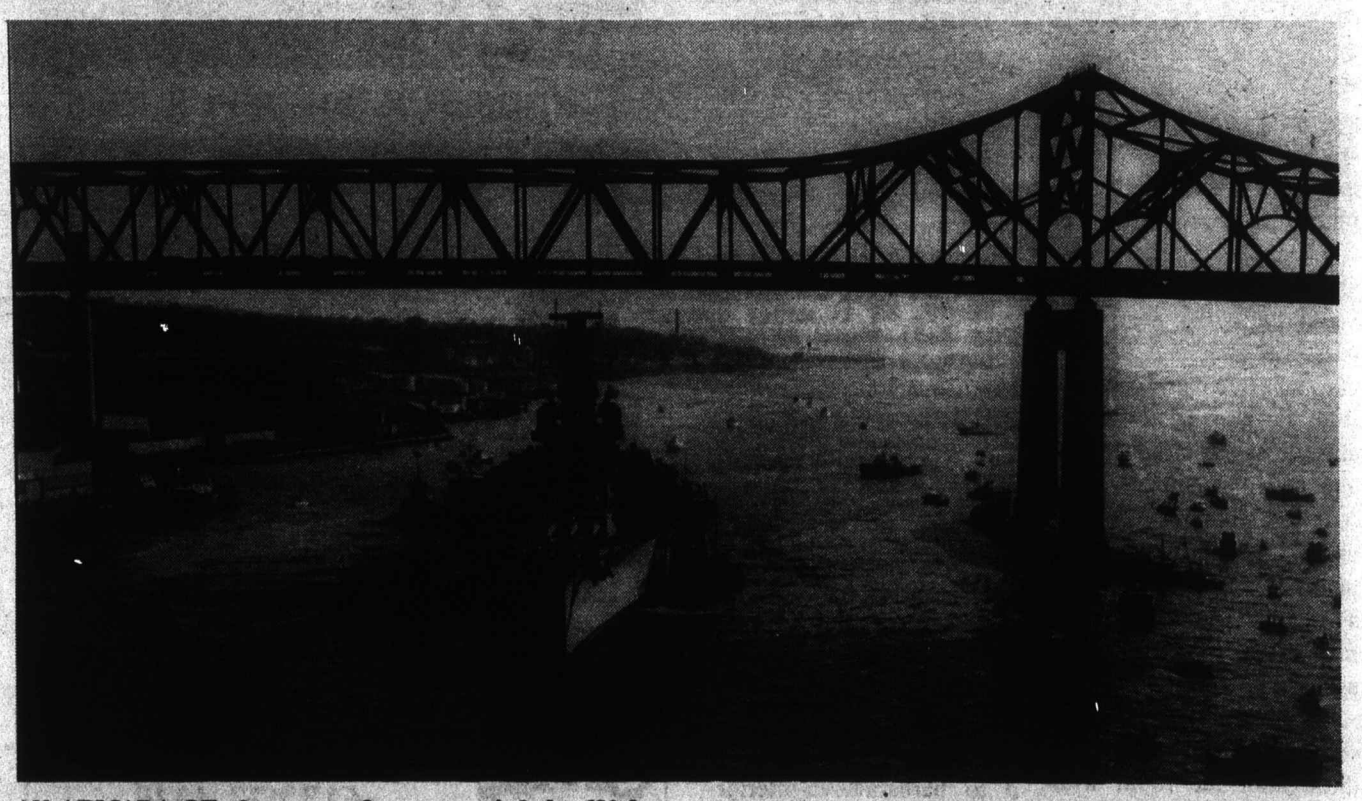
"The Massachusetts is the state's official War Memorial to citizens who were killed in World War II. The Kennedy is the official state memorial to citizens who were killed during the Korean and Vietnam Wars. There are memorials to soldiers killed in the first Gulf War.

"Before you enter Battleship Cove, there's a memorial to those killed in the Sept. 11th attacks.

"I hope readers get a sense that freedom has to be protected. It has to be fought for. I hate war and it's very depressing but unfortunately we've had to send people who have died protecting our freedom and we should be thankful and appreciative of that.

"I think we need to remember all those who have served and sacrificed to protect our freedom."

Gay has donated one copy of "Battleship Cove" to each school library in Quincy. The book, published by Arcadia Publishing, is also available the Battleship Cove museum gift shop and amazon.com.



AN ARMADA OF pleasure craft accompanied the 680-foot Massachusetts as the Quincy-built battleship arrives in Fall River on June 12, 1965. "Big Mamie" displayed a large banner that read, 'Thank you Schoolchildren of Massachusetts,' in appreciation and recognition of the thousands of children who had helped save her from destruction. The students of Quincy raised over $ 1,000. Today, the battleship is part of the Battleship Cove museum in Fall River. Photo Courtesy James Gay

ANOTHER QUINCY-BUILT, the destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., is also part of the Battleship Cove Museum in Fall River. This photo, taken July 3, 1945, shows an aerial view of the destroyer at the Fore River Shipyard. By July 3 of that year, all of her machinery, such as boilers and engines, had been installed and her hull was almost finished. The turrets of her two forward guns, Mount 51 and Mount 52, can be seen directly in the middle of the picture. Over in the left hand corner is the Fore River Draw Bridge which leads out to Boston Harbor's south channel.

ABOVE LEFT: From January to May 1952, the Kennedy was overhauled in the Boston Navy Yard. In April a party was held for disabled children on the messdeck. John F. Kennedy, who had just won his first election to the US Senate the previous November, participated in the part as well. In the background standing is Cdr. Lander. On May 28th, she steamed south for training off Guantanamo Bay.

BELOW RIGHT - On July 2, 1973, after serving her country for 28 years, the Kennedy was decommissioned. Instead of being sent to the scrap pile, she was donated by the Navy to join the Massachusetts and Lionfish at Battleship Cove. Arriving in January of 1974, she was placed outboard of the Lionfish. The Kennedy provided visitors the ability to transition from the navy of World War II to the navy of the Cold War. Photos and Descriptions Courtesy of James Gay

Successful Season For 10U Quincy Redstockings

The 10U Quincy Redstockings team recently completed a successful AAU season in which they compiled an impressive overall record of 15-3.

After going 13-2 in the regular season they were invited to the NEAAU playoffs at Mount Vernon Field in Lawrence. Quincy beat the Mass Hurricanes and the New England Firebirds by a combined score of 25-5 in their two wins.

Quincy was leading 4-3 going into the bottom of the 5th inning against the Ocean State Blue Waves (the #1 overall seed in the 10U division) before finally succumbing to one of the best teams in New England. This very talented squad expects to have even more success in the future.

Squantum's Billy Allen Captain Of U.S. Hydroplane Racing Team

The U.S. A-Team featuring Squantum's Billy Allen – the only international hydroplane racing team in the United States, will compete at the 2014 World Outboard Championships next week in Europe.

The team is based in Quincy but includes members from all across the country. The race will be on June 27-29 in the town of Chodziez, Poland. This town is in the lake and resort region of central Poland and, as in past years, huge crowds of European vacationers are expected to line the lakeshore and grandstands to witness the event.

The #11 Davids Motorsports hull will be driven by Todd Anderson from Northlake, IL. He will be attempting to improve on his top ten finish at last year's World Championship race in Italy.

The Team Captain, Billy Allen from Squantum, will drive the #16 Kamp Kurz Kruiser which he piloted to a Bronze Medal finish two years ago in Germany. The team also features driver Mike Akerstrom from Westford. At last year's race in Italy, Akerstrom acted as the crew chief and was voted MVP by his fellow team members. He will also be driving a boat built by Mark Kurz from Indian River, MI.

BILLY ALLEN of Squantum drives to a third place, bronze medal finish in the 2012 World Outboard Competition. Rachel Warnock Photo

Accompanying the team in support roles will be, from Wisconsin, Executive Administrator Rachel Warnock and Chief Video Producer Valerie Lighthart who will be filming a documentary of the trip; Jeff Main along with Racer Allen from Maine, Jimmy Cummings from Westford and Photographer David Recht from California.

Quincy Sweeps Whitman, Back In Playoff Hunt

CRANBERRY BASEBALL LEAGUE

By JOE REARDON

The Quincy Phillies are very much alive in the Cranberry League standings and manager/player Nick DeVito is confident that Sunday's doubleheader sweep of the Whitman Nationals is just a preview of things to come in the team's run to the playoffs.

The Phillies snapped out of their mild hitting slump, combining for 21 hits and 17 runs in the two games in a very productive day at Whitman-Hanson High School.

Casey Askeland clubbed a pair of home runs and drove in four runs in the opener as Quincy rolled to a 7-1 win. It was much of the same in the second game with Jim Perron slamming a two-run homer to pace a 12-hit attack and Eric Johnson tossing a three-hitter with seven strikeouts for the 8-0 win.

The two victories really were must wins and improved the Phillies' record to 6-9 on the season and into fifth place. If the season ended on Sunday, Quincy would be in the playoffs as the top five teams qualify. DeVito knows the Phillies need to put together a run to maintain a spot in the top five.

"This is our first winning streak - we have a three game winning streak right now," DeVito said. "We're starting to hit and play the way I thought we should. We had guys slumping at the same time. It takes a little time to get into a rythmn, especially for the guys who are out of college. Today we got good efficient pitching an big hits."

Askeland gave the Phillies a 1-0 lead in the the first inning of Game 1, driving the ball over the fence in dead center field, but the Nationals came back to make it 1-1 against DeVito, who picked up the win in the opener.

That was the only run Whitman would get on the afternoon as Quincy's bats came alive.

DeVito sat down the Nationals in order in the second with strikeouts and the Phillies put the game out of reach over their next two at bats. Jon Spitz and Askeland both picked up singles in the third inning and came in to score to make it 3-1 on RBI hits by Eddie Bowler and Bob Foote. The Phillies broke the game wide open in the fourth inning on Askeland's three-run shot to right center for a 6-1 advantage.

"He's a monster," DeVito said about the hard-hitting lefty Askeland. "A few guys have struggled early on but he's been pretty consistent. Him and Jon Spitz have been our rocks. I brought Casey in this year. I've played against him for years in this league and he's always hit. We're lucky to have him. He's a pure hitter."

Quincy had a four-hit inning in the sixth with Perron, Askeland, Bowler and Nick Cunningham reaching safely. Danny Rodriguez put the Phillies up 7-1 with a sacrifice fly to score Perron.

The Phillies sent eight runners to the plate in the second inning of Game 2 and came away with a 3-0 lead. Rodriguez reached on an infield hit and Bowler followed up with a single. DeVito then punched a seeing-eye single to load the bases. A wild pitch scored Rodriguez and Brett Julian's two-run single to right brought in Bowler and DeVito.

Quincy continued to feast on the Nationals' pitching in the fourth. Connor Goetz reached on an error and Spitz drilled a single to left. Perron plated Goetz with a single to right field and a throwing error brought in Spitz for the 5-0 lead. Askeland proceeded to to lace an RBI single for a 6-0 bulge. The Phillies added two more runs in the seventh on Perron's two-run dinger to close it at 8-0.

Whitman opened the seventh with a single against Johnson, but that was erased on a doube play ball and he got the the final batter with his seventh strikeout of the game.

"Our pitching has been up and down so if we can keep this up it will obviously help," DeVito said of Johnson's gem. "The bats will take the pressure off the pitchers."

The Phillies have a busy and tough week ahead. They were scheduled to play the Easton Huskies on Tuesday and a makeup game against the Braintree White Sox on Wednesday. The Brockton Dirtdogs are slated for tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. at Adams Field and the Phillies have a doubleheader set against the Dirtdogs on Sunday at Massasoit Community College.

Other players on the Phillies' roster include Tom Feltrup, Tommy Landry, Steve Oehischlaeger, Liam Richmond, Ricky Smith, Brian Walsh and Stephan White.

Wollaston Wins Three, Improves To 6-1

SENIOR BABE RUTH BASEBALL

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth team improved to 6-1 with wins over South Boston, Tritown and Norwood.

In a 10-0 road victory over South Boston June 17, Dillon Darcey pitched a one hit shutout. Wollaston had 12 hits with four players having two hits: John Marsinelli, Jonathan Leveillee, Padraig Geaney and Ben Martin. Matt Kerin hit a triple, Ben Regan and Evan Feinberg each contributed a double. Anthony Gustin added a single.

Wollaston returned home June 19 and shut down Tritown, 3-0 behind a three-hitter by Matt Kerin. Kerin also had the game's first run batted in.

Mike Pugsley led off the fourth inning with a double and he was plated by Kerin. Kerin was plated later in the inning by an Evan Feinberg single. Pugsley scored the third and final run of the game in the sixth inning. Pugsley hit an infield single and scored on a couple throwing errors.

On Sunday, Padraig Geaney knocked in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth as Wollaston edged Norwood, 5-4 in a game played at Colletta Field. Alex Linskey led off the inning with a line drive single to right field. Phil Czajkowski advanced Linskey to second base with his second sacrifice bunt of the game. Linskey advanced to third on a wild pitch.

Geaney's line drive single to center field plated Linskey.

Geaney led the offense with two hits and runs batted in. Matt Kerin knocked in a run with a double and scored two runs.

Four pitchers held Norwood to four runs, only one of which was earned. Mike Saccoach pitched the first three innings. Evan Feinberg pitched three scoreless innings. Feinberg was followed by Sammy Keane who pitched 2 and one-third of scoreless innings.

Ben Martin, who earned the win, pitched the last two-thirds of an inning. In total the four pitchers scattered six hits over nine innings.

Wollaston visited Dedham Monday, hosted Hyde Park Tuesday and travels to Braintree for a 6 p.m. game Sunday.

Devlin Lopez, Michael Galligan Top Manets Fundraisers

Manets Football Franchise holders Bill and Kerri Luggelle announces the winners of their canning fundraiser contest last week.

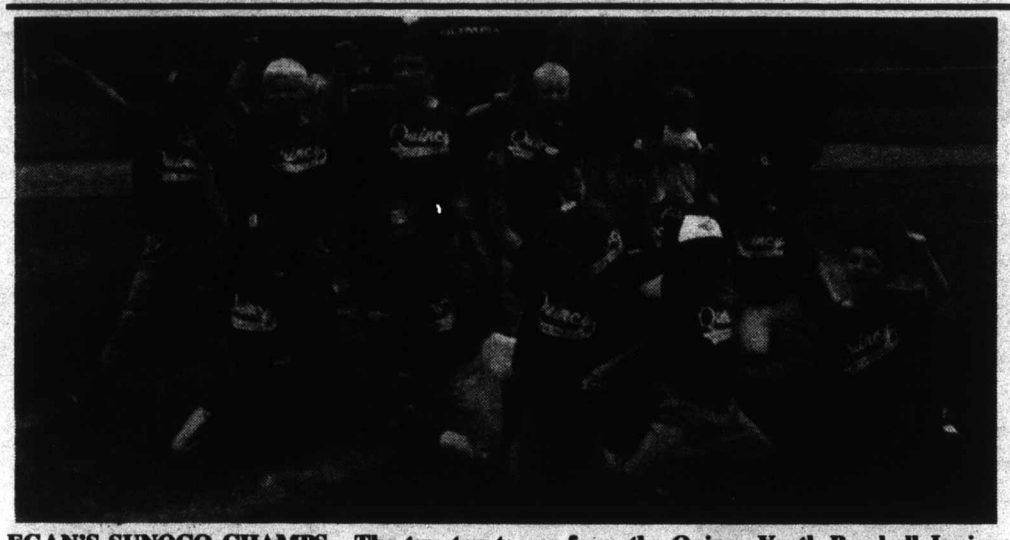
Local youngsters Devlin Lopez and Michael Galligan were the two top earners. Luggelle will award each player with two tickets to any sporting event or concert of their choice.

Luggelle went on to recognize all the kids and parents for there hard work. "The canning was a huge success and I really appreciate the city allowing us to do this," Luggelle said.

As the Manets get ready for their upcoming season, Luggelle has second year Head Coach Mike Flavin leading the way. Flavin, a Hall of Fame Football player for Quincy High and UMass, also has seven years of coaching experience at Quincy High under former head coach Jack Raymer. Rounding out Flavin's staff will be Kevin Gomez , Dana Pringle , Greg Santoro, Mike Cugini, Jose Diaz and first year coach John Fahey.

Flavin said he hopes to start some organized team practices by mid July.

Sign ups were held last month however there is still room. Those interested are asked to contact Bill Luggelle 617-835-1681.



EGAN'S SUNOCO CHAMPS - The two top teams from the Quincy Youth Baseball Junior Farm 8 Year Old Division squared off recently at Quarry Hills Baseball Complex to battle for the league championship. It was Egan's Sunoco vs. Wessling Architects, both of whom had outstanding records. The game was tied 1-1 until the 9th inning when Egan's bats busted open for seven runs. Egan's Sunoco took the game by a score of 8-3 and was crowned the Quincy Youth Baseball Junior Farm 8 yr old Champions. Celebrating their win are front row from left: Tommy Wirtz, Keira Murphy, Connor Gilmore, Luis Dean and Shamus O'Toole. Morrisette Jr. Legion Edges Canton, Remains Unbeaten

By BILL GRIFFIN

Everything was in place for an ending of high drama.

The score was tied. There were two out and two on in the bottom of the seventh inning. The batter was hitting over .400. Rarely does he go through a game without a line drive, but he was hitless for the night. He savors the big moment and he was ready for it.

Adam McCormick delivered. He sent a rocket into the gap in left center to chase home the winning run and give Morrisette's unbeaten junior legion team a 4-3 decision over Canton in a Zone 6 contest at Adams Field Monday night.

"I enjoy that kind of pressure because it brings out the best in me as a player," he said. "After my first three at-bats, something good was bound to happen. I just wanted to to hit the ball hard somewhere."

Sean Fitzgerald led the winning rally with his second hit of the night. Pinch-hitter Cam White moved him along with a single. McCormick put himself in a fastball situation by working the count to 2-0. He looked fastball. He got fastball, and he ended the game by drilling the fastball. It was the work of a good, smart hitter in an important situation.

"Adam came into the game hitting .420, so I was looking for something good from him," said coach Gerry Shepherd after his club went to 5-0 on the season. "Cam White did a great job coming in off the bench with a hit. We're starting to hit the meat of our schedule, so it was good to see us win a close one."

Earlier last week, lefty Joe Cochrane fired a two-hitter and fanned 10 to lead Morrisette past Hudson, 6-1. Owen Lynch had a two-run double in the win for Post 294.

Bryan Turner fired a complete-game six hitter and struck out four to earn the win over Canton. The righty, who is recovering from an ACL injury during football season, was tough after the first when Canton nicked him for two runs. He brought his fastball down into the strike zone, hit his spots with the curve and held Canton (6-5) to one run on four hits over the final six innings.

"The key was he started throwing his curve for strikes. When they had to think about the curve, he was able to throw the ball by them," said Shepherd. "It was an excellent effort. Canton was the best test we've had this season."

Morrisette supported Turner with errorless defense. Not only did Post 294 play make the routine plays, they made the difficult ones to shut down innings. Shortstop Troy Shepherd halted a threat in the second with a crisp 6-3 double play. Turner snared a liner back to the mound to start a DP which ended the fourth.

McCormick moved from left to second for the game and was sharp. He handled five chances cleanly, including a wind-blown pop in the second and a difficult play to his right in the third.

"The defense has been a constant for us all season," said Shepherd. "It's especially important in close game. Adam did a great job at second base."

Morrisette also played smallball, using speed and daring to score its first three runs. In the first, Shepherd, singled, stole second, moved to third on a fly ball and scored on a wild pitch thanks to speed and instinct. The ball skipped free off the short backstop at Adams Field. Shepherd never hesitated., breaking the instant the ball squirted past the catcher and scored easily to bring Morrisette within 2-1.

In the second, Brendan Collins (three walks, two stolen bases) walked, stole second, took third on a wild pitch and scored on a ground ball to tie the game. In the fifth, Fitzgerald beat an infield hit, stole second and scored on a single by Shepherd for a 3-2 Morrisette lead.

Walks, singles, infield hits, wild pitches, fly balls, ground balls, stolen bases. Run, take chances, force the action. It is go-go baseball, the kind that kids love to play and fans love to watch. It's also the kind that wins games.

"We work on base running every practice," said Shepherd. "We work at reading the cutoff man and taking the extra base. We want to be aggressive."

Troy Shepherd earned the first star of the game with three hits, three stolen bases, a run scored and an RBI. All three hits were hard line drives. There were no bloops or grounders. He was also steady and sure at shortstop.

"He played at Xaverian and that helped him improve," said Gerry Shepherd, Troy's father. "He's also one of the three players (with Josh Helfrich and catcher Joe Ferracane) who float between the senior and junior teams. He's learning a lot competing for playing time with the senior team."

Canton tied it at 3-3 in sixth before Morrisette won it on McCormick's hit in the seventh. Ferracane had a pair of hits in the win for Post 294.

Morrisette hosts Franklin Friday at 5:30 p.m.

Morrisette Wins 9th Straight

By BILL GRIFFIN

It has been a year since the passing of the great man of Morrisette baseball, and he would have loved the brilliant game his old team played at his beloved Adams Field Monday night.

In the latest chapter of its early-season march through legion baseball, Morrisette rang up its ninth straight victory behind the pitching artistry of Kenny Sorensen, clean defense and a big-play performance from catcher Nick Valencenti for a 4-1 beauty of a win over Milton on the first anniversary of the death of Ray Cattaneo.

Cattaneo was the leading man of Post 294 baseball for over 40 years.

"Mr. C. always told me the same thing win or lose: Keep plugging away," smiled coach Steve Maze. "But I think he would have enjoyed watching this one. Milton is an excellent team coming off a big win over Braintree. It was high-caliber baseball between two good legion teams. He would have liked that."

The win lifts Morrisette to 10-1 and solid possession of first place in the Zone 6 East pennant chase. Combine it with the junior team's 4-3 win over Canton in the opener of the doubleheader, and the two Morrisette clubs played an entire night, two full games, 14 innings of errorless baseball. They are both in first place and are a combined 15-1 on the season. Somewhere in a far better place, an old baseball man from Quincy must surely be smiling.

"I think seeing two teams from Morrisette playing this kind of baseball would have made him happy," said Maze.

In other action last week, Morrisette won four games, got a one-hitter from T. J. Hobin, a mammoth home run from Robbie Munroe which left Adams Field, and avenged its only defeat of the season.

Andrew Currie and Eddie Riley each drove in a pair of runs and Josh Helfrich earned the win as Morrisette edged Canton, 5-4. Greg Paulo was the winning pitcher with six innings of work in a 12-3 victory the first of back-to-back games against Cohasset. Munroe had had a single, triple, three runs scored and two RBI while Troy Shepherd had two hits and scored three runs.

In the second Cohasset game, Munroe hit a ball halfway up the trees over the 363-foot sign in left center for a two-run homer in a 7-1 decision. Josh Haywood pitched a six-hitter and struck out 13. Hobin threw a one-hitter and fanned 12 as Morrisette rolled over Weymouth who had defeated Post 294 earlier in the season. Munroe, Haywood, Riley, and Andrew Jaehnig each had three hits in the 15-1 win. Riley also had three RBI.

In its nine-game run, Morrisette has outscored its opponents, 72-16. Post 294 has not allowed more than four runs in a game. Clearly, the pitching, hitting, and defense are there, but this is more than runs, hits and errors. This is a team enjoying each other and enjoying baseball.

"If I had to point to one kid who is a good example, it would be Haywood," said Maze. "He's hitting the ball well. He'll do whatever I ask. If I need him at first, he'll play first. He'll play left field, he'll DH. I asked him to pitch, and he pitched a complete game. He's the first to arrive for batting practice and the last to leave the field. He's been great."

Sorensen upped his record to 2-0 by scattering six hits over six innings. He walked one and struck out four. He not only has his two wins against two of the toughest teams in the zone, Braintree, and Milton, he gave them one run in 13 innings of work. He has been at his best against the best, throwing strikes with the fastball, curve and change from every angle except directly from the sky.

Dave Suslowicz earned his sixth save by striking out the side in the seventh.

"Kenny knows he can throw strikes no matter what the situation," said Maze. "Suslowicz is my seventh-inning guy. If it's close and we're ahead, I'm going to him. Like Kenny, the throws three pitches for strikes with confidence."

Eight of nine players hit safely in Morrisette's stacked lineup. Munroe had a triple, single, an RBI, and scored twice. Haywood had an RBI single and Valencenti had a huge two-out, two-run double in the third to give Morrisette a cushion heading into the late innings.

There are no holes, no outs, no easy spots in this lineup. Andrew Currie and Tyler Beach set the offense going at the top of the order. Munroe, Jason Pekkinen, Haywood, and Jaehnig are proven power men in the middle. Valencenti, Bobby Salvucci (a hustle double in the sixth) and Riley are quality hitters at the bottom of the order.

"It's a hard lineup to pitch around. Eddie Riley batted ninth for us tonight. He could easily bat fifth," said Maze.

The defense was Sorensen's best friend. Pekkinen, Riley and Salvucci turned a 5-4-3 double play to end the second. Riley handled a hard shot to his right in the Milton fifth. But it was Valencenti who had the biggest defensive play of the game to go along with his two-run double which was probably the biggest hit of the game.

With the bases loaded and two out in the sixth, he fired a no-hesitation dart to pick the runner off first and end Milton's most dangerous threat. Milton can hit. They were one swing away from a tie or the lead and Valencenti never gave them the opportunity. If he makes a wild throw, it leads to a big inning. He never flinched. He threw a strike.

"I saw him play at BC High this year and he played with confidence. That's what showed on that play," said Maze.

Morrisette hosts Holbrook Thursday and Braintree Friday. Both games start at 8 p.m.

AN UNEXPECTED TWIST

The term "torticollis" (or wry neck) literally means "twisted neck" in Latin. This involuntary tilting of the head may afflict infants ("infant torticollis" or "congenital muscular torticollis") due to abnormal positioning in the womb or after a difficult birth. Fortunately, the problem is not painful and can be overcome with changes in position and stretching exercises. Adults may develop torticollis after waking up from sleeping in an awkward position. "Spasmodic torticollis" is a painful condition characterized by neck muscles that contract involuntarily, causing the head to twist or turn to one side. This condition often occurs in middle age, most often among women, and requires chiropractic treatment that focuses on relieving muscle spasms and improving mobility.

Chiropractic care for children and adults offers your family a solid foundation for wellness. Throughout pregnancy, birth, and childhood, the chiropractic lifestyle offers choices and benefits for your greater health and well-being. If you're interested in safe, conservative care for yourself and your loved ones, schedule an appointment with a doctor of chiropractic. Give FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC a call at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We have the experience and expertise to give you the care you need. Let us help you! You deserve to live life without pain. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. About 3 in every 10,000 people (approximately 90,000 people in the United States) are known to suffer from spasmodic torticollis.

TWO QUINCY YOUNGSTERS – Colin Hingston and Wil Hingston – recently took part in a Tedy Bruschi Football Clinic sponsored by SBLI at Gillette Stadium. They were among 60 boys and girls selected to attend the minicamp based on essays that they wrote. The kids received a personalized locker, an official Bruschi Patriots jersey, a proper announcement onto the field while running through the big inflatable helmet, and the chance to participate in football drills with NFL greats! Bruschi enlisted some of his football buddies to lend a hand, including Christian Fauria, Sammy Morris, Jerod Mayo, Julian Edelman, Ross Hochstein, and Steve Gostkowski. First row (from left) Christian Fauria, Paul Lynch, Sammy Morris, Tedy Bruschi, Jerod Mayo, Julian Edelman, Russ Hotchstein. Recreation Summer Playground Programs Start Monday

Supervised Activities At 14 Sites

The Quincy Recreation Department summer playground program will begin Monday, June 30 at 14 locations with supervised activities for boys and girls ages 6 – 16, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

The playgrounds are open from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, weather permitting. There will be no program on Friday, July 4th.

The free program offers supervised activities that include active games and sports; weekly sports competitions, as well as arts and crafts. There are special events and weekly field trips to local attractions.

In addition to the high school and college staff members who are assigned to each playground, a sports specialist and an arts and crafts specialist visit each location in a regular rotation.

Registration is done at the playground and continues throughout the summer to accommodate youngsters who may return from vacation or summer school programs. Participants must be residents of the City of Quincy, and may attend the program of their choice.

The locations of the supervised playgrounds are:

Faxon Park, Kincaide Park/Sterling Middle School Park, O'Rourke Playground, Forbes Hill Playground, Perkins Playground, Arthur Boyson Park/Heron Road, Snug Harbor Playground/ Palmer Park, LaBreque Field, Fore River Field, Wendall Moses Playground/ Squantum, Bishop Playground/ Montclair, Fenno Street Courts, and Beechwood Knoll Playground, Mass Field Playground.

The playgrounds will be staffed until Tuesday, Aug. 12. For more information, call the Quincy Recreation Office, 617-376-1394.

Limited Openings For Girls Basketball Clinic

The Quincy Recreation Department is offering Sports and More Clinics and Workshops this summer.

The various sports clinics and instructional workshops will run throughout the summer and offer youngsters a variety of summer activities while they enjoy summer school vacation. Enrollment is limited. Call the Recreation office at 617-376-1394 or visit the Quincy Recreation web site, www.QuincyRec.com, for further information.

Limited openings exist for the girls basketball clinic that will be conducted daily June 30th through July 3 from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Cost of the clinic is $68.

The Girls Basketball clinic will be held at North Quincy High School. This is an instructional program with an emphasis on the fundamentals: passing, shooting, rebounding, dribbling and defensive skills through a complete series of drills and scrimmages and will be run 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The cost for the clinic is $68 and includes a t-shirt for each participant. The clinic is open to participants entering grades 3– 9.

Registration can be done online at www.QuincyRec.com or in person at the Quincy Recreation Department, located at One Merrymount Parkway. For more informaiton call 617-376-1394.

Boating, Sailing Registration Underway

Rregistration for the Quincy Recreation Department's William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Program began Wednesday, June 25 and is ongoing throughout the summer as openings exist.

Registration will be conducted at the Pageant Field picnic pavilion located adjacent to the Ryan Boathouse beginning at 9 a.m.

Registration for the program will continue throughout the summer as long as openings are still available.

This nationally recognized program offers rowing, sailing, canoeing and kayaking lessons for youths age 8 – 16 in the natural salt-water lagoon at Blacks Creek. Youth lessons are offered on a Monday/Wednesday and a Tuesday/Thursday schedule during July and August.

The Ryan Boathouse also offers adult programs in sailing, kayaking, and canoeing under the supervision of the Recreation Department Staff. There are night and weekend activities for families and adults.

The membership fees for the summer season are:

Youth $60, $25 for any additional child, and $110 for a family. Adults $35 for use of sailboats, canoes, or kayaks for the season and one free lesson, additional lessons are $5. A one day pass for kayaks and canoes is available for $15.

O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tourney Set For July 12-13

The ninth annual O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament will be held on July 12-13 at the Fenno Street courts.

The event is held in memory of John O'Connell and Dennis Thomson, two standout athletes who graduated from North Quincy High in 2002 and tragically had their lives cut short in the past 10 years.

Their families have set up memorial scholarships in their names to benefit North Quincy graduates and the tournament serves to raise funds for these scholarships.

The weekend will feature a 16-team men's tournament and a four-team women's tournament, featuring a number of local college basketball players, as well as many former and current high school players from Quincy. Games begin at 10 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday and will run throughout both days.

The event has been a great success in the past thanks to the generous donations of local businesses and Quincy residents. Anyone interested in making a donation can write a check to the John "Okie" O'Connell Fund and send it to Dan Duggan, 61 Bedford St., Quincy 02169. (The donations will be split between the two funds).

OBITUARIES

Ruth A. Craig

RUTH A. CRAIG

Funeral services for Ruth A. (Moore) Craig of Quincy were privately held.

Mrs. Craig died peacefully June 15 at home surrounded by her loving family.

Born and raised in Roslindale, she lived in Quincy for the past 58 years. Like so many in her generation, her values were formed at an early age. As a young girl, she saw five of her older brothers leave home to serve in the Armed Forces during World War II, and felt very fortunate to have them all safely return home.

This appreciation of family was always present when raising her own family. She made each and every one of her own children feel special. She will be truly missed by all of them.

Beloved wife of 64 years of the late Arthur J. Craig. Devoted mother of Kathleen Soter and her husband Joseph of Dorchester, Arthur J. Craig, Jr. of Kingston and Patricia Craig, Scott Craig, Sandra Craig and Andrew Craig, all of Quincy. Also survived by her loving grandchildren: Joseph, James, Natalie, Alison, Emily and Colleen.

Funeral arrangements were made by Dolan Funeral Homes, Milton.

Private interment.

William F. Keegan, 78

A funeral service for William F. Keegan, 78, of Quincy was held Sunday at MacDonald Funeral Home, Marshfield.

Mr. Keegan died June 17.

He was an Iron Worker in the Local 7 Union. He served in the U.S. Navy during the Korean Era.

Beloved husband of the late Joyce (Burns) Keegan. Loving father of Lynda Spillane and her husband Christopher of Marshfield, William F. Keegan Jr. and his wife Jean of Braintree and Michael P. Keegan of Weymouth. Loving grandfather of Christopher and Meghan Spillane and Kathryn, Jillian, William, Kyle, Tyler and Dominic Keegan. Loving great-grandfather of five. Dear brother of Marilyn Keegan, Barbara Qualter, Carol Donovan, Paula Kearney and the late Francis Keegan, Paul Keegan and Florence Shaw. Son of the late William F. and Florence (Calapai) Keegan. Dear brother-in-law of Evelyn and Althea Keegan. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer Association, 480 Pleasant Street, Watertown, MA 02472.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, June 16, 2014, at approximately 12:40 p.m. Officer Stephen Cleary was on preventive patrol in the area of Independence Avenue due to two breaks into homes.

As the Officer was northbound on Pembroke Street he observed a male sitting in a parked car on the corner of Pembroke Street and Verchild Street.0 The male looked directly at the Officer and then ducked his head down. The Officer had knowledge that a male suspect had recently been arrested in a stolen motor (recently featured in this column) and had a lengthy criminal record.

Officer Cleary believed that this was the same man so he slowed down, which resulted in the male driver putting his car in reverse, driving across two lanes of traffic, coming to a stop at Verchild Street and Independence Avenue. The driver appeared to be in such a hurry that he did not come to a complete stop before placing the car in the park gear, which resulted in a loud grinding noise.

As the driver emerged from the car, he attempted to conceal a white bag under his arm, then looked at the Officer and fled. Officer Cleary ran after the driver, now suspect, yelling at him to stop, but the suspect refused and continued into the back yard of 109 Verchild Street.

The Officer notified Communications and additional Officers were dispatched to the area. The suspect ran around the house and then stopped in the driveway, where the Officer ordered the suspect to the ground. The suspect did not comply with the order so he was taken to the ground and handcuffed. Officer Cleary then found the white bag on top of a nearby bush. Inside the bag was a spoon, a cotton ball with residue and one "crack" pipe.

Based on the Officer's training and experience, he believed the substance to be Cocaine. Once the suspect was informed that he was under arrest, he became combative and would not enter the police cruiser. Officer William Lanergan assisted and the suspect was then transported to the station for booking. The suspect, a 27 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Possession of Class B Drug and Resisting Arrest." Nice Work!

THE NATIONAL SOCIETY OF HIGH SCHOOL SCHOLARS: is not the same as "The National Honor Society." Many juniors in High School received an impressive packet with a card of "Membership Confirmation" and a congratulatory letter addressed to the student that they have been selected for this honor. The cost is $60.00.

Go to "Google" and type in "The National Society of High School Scholars scam" to see what others think before you send money.

Trivia test

by Fifi Rodriguez

1. GEOGRAPHY: What kind of creatures were the Canary Islands named for?
2. FAMOUS QUOTATIONS: Who once said, "There's no trick to being a humorist when you have the whole government working for you"?
3. MOVIES: In which movie was the following line uttered, and by which character? "Fat, drunk and stupid is no way to go through life, son."
4. ANATOMY: What human gland produces growth hormones?
5. MUSIC: In musical notation, what does the direction "mezzo" mean?
6. GENERAL KNOWLEDGE: Of the seven deadly sins, the biggest one is missing from this list -- avarice, envy, gluttony, lust, sloth and wrath. What is it?
7. ENTERTAINERS: What was comedian Jackie Gleason's famous parting line?
8. LANGUAGE: How would you describe someone who is "garrulous"?
9. TELEVISION: The show "Twin Peaks" was set in which U.S. state?
10. TRANSPORTATION: Where might you ride a "vaporetto"?

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't be surprised if, in spite of your well-made plans, something goes awry. But don't worry. Your knowledge of the facts plus your Arian charm will help you work it out.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A personal relationship seems to be demanding more than you feel you're able to give. Best advice: Confront the issue. You could find the situation surprisingly easy to work through.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Resist being pressured into meeting your self-imposed deadline. This is important if you really feel that taking more time to finish a project could save time in the long run.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A vacation choice seems less interesting than when you first made it. Could it be a matter of the place or the people going with you? Find out before you consider a change of plans.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Someone might be overriding your Leonine logic to get you to agree to "favors" you would normally avoid. Take a new look at what you've been asked to do and see if you've been misled.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Try to keep that emerging "judgmental" aspect in check this week. Too many critiques on relatively unimportant issues could create a lot of negative bounce-back reactions.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Facing unpleasant facts about an associate isn't easy. But ignoring them isn't wise. Ask a trusted (and neutral) friend to help guide you on what to do and how you might do it.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A shift in opinion regarding a workplace situation could go a long way in vindicating the stand you've taken. But be aware that a satisfactory resolution could still be a long way off.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It's not like you to choose the easy way rather than the right way to do things. So, follow your instincts and feel assured they will lead you to the right decision. Good luck.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Hold off on making a personal commitment until you find out what it really entails and whose interests are actually involved. There could be hidden facts you need to know.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new friend offers an unexpected opportunity that could lead to a career change. Check it out carefully and consider getting an assessment from someone familiar with this field.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A surprising discovery leads to mixed reactions from those involved in the "revelation." But as you come to appreciate the truth, you'll be able to also come to terms with your feelings.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of travel helps you appreciate the wonders of the world. You would find a satisfying career in any travel-related industry.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton Opens Center For Specialty Care

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) recently opened a new Center for Specialty Care offering patients with access to specialty care physicians and services such as spine surgery and colon and rectal surgery.

The Center provides outpatient appointments, including initial evaluations and follow-up visits, with several specialist physicians. Many of the Center's physicians are surgeons on staff at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, are members of Harvard Medical Faculty Practice at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and perform surgery at BID-Milton.

Medical specialties currently offered at the Center include podiatry, spine surgery, colon and rectal surgery, and thoracic surgery.

The Center is also home to BID-Milton's Orthopaedic Center and nationally accredited Weight Loss Surgery Program.

The hospital anticipates adding more specialty healthcare services to the Center in the future, Page said.

The Center for Specialty Care is located on the ground floor of the hospital, next to the Reedsdale Road entrance. The Center's telephone number is 617-313-1445.

Joys Sports Basketball Camp

Joys Sports Programs will offer a basketball camp July 7-11, July 14-18 and July 21-25 at the Broadmeadows Middle School.

Camp time is 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and cost is $125 per week.

For more information, call Rich Hanlon at 617-827-8697.
